SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Jan. 15. Floods continue throughout the State. Several bridges and dams have been washed out and traffic is delayed.

DEFENSE BEGUN IN ATCHERLEY CASE

"I don't care to argue with Dr. Atcherley. I believe he is a paranoiac, and is, therefore, not amenable to reason."

This was the statement with which Dr. Sinclair, the main witness today in the Atcherley case, tried to head off a flood of questions covering board of health history, hallucinations, and argument on medical matters with which Dr. Atcherley pounced on him on cross-examination.

Sinclair testified at great length, particularly on the reasons for his conclusion that Atcherley is a paranoiac, but when Atcherley himself began to conduct the examination this drifted far afield, and when finally the famous leprosy cure chair was produced, and the witness was asked to prove that the Atcherley cure, or, rather, method of the removal of the clinical symptoms of the disease, as Atcherley prefers to call it, the Court interfered, and ordered that the questions be brought close to the issue.

During the forenoon the prosecution closed its case, and the defense began, its first witness being Sister Albertina. That the defense will be a lengthy one is shown by the statement made by Attorney Magoon that the testimony of Dr. Atcherley alone would take over a day.

Dr. Sinclair was the first witness called. He stated that he had known Dr. Atcherley since 1899, and had made an examination of him last Monday.

"What is your opinion of Dr. Atcherley as to his sanity or insanity?" asked Cathcart.

"From the examination I made last Monday I would say he was suffering from a form of disease, paranoia."

"Can you say whether public safety requires his restraint?"

"I think it does."

This ended the direct examination and Magoon began his cross-examination by asking Sinclair if he had ever known or read of a case similar to that of Dr. Atcherley?"

Leper Law may Be Amended

Governor Frear stated this morning that there would be no necessity for the Federal authorities to take charge of the quarantining of lepers on account of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Annabella Manna, which took the power of holding an alleged leper under arrest from the Territory.

The Governor has some plans for legislative enactment on this matter, and the whole thing will be taken up by him as soon as he gets settled in the routine of his office work again. The law will probably be amended, if it is found that the defects can be remedied in that manner. Attorney General Hemenway, who returned this morning, had nothing to say on the matter, as he had not seen the decision of the Supreme Court.

It has not been settled whether or not Dr. Cofer will return to the islands, according to the Governor. Dr. Cofer is at present studying questions and methods of quarantining in the Southern cities, and it may be that he will go to Panama.

APPOINTMENTS IN CONTROL OF MAYOR

Has Power in Regard to Staff of County Clerk.

The matter of the appointment of the majority of the City and County Clerk's staff seems, quite unexpectedly, likely to become an issue between the Mayor and the Republican majority of the Board of Supervisors. When the rest of the department heads sent to the Board their appointments these were approved without question, as they were, according to the law, appointable by the heads. The additional appointments made by the Clerk are, however, in a different category. The Municipal Act giving the Clerk the power only to appoint one deputy clerk, while Kalaupokalani in addition to this has appointed a clerk, a stenographer and a typewriter and messenger, sending in his appointments (Continued on Page 4)

SCIENCE LEADER LIKES HONOLULU

PRESIDENT CHAMBERLAIN OF AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF SCIENCE PASSES THROUGH ON SIBERIA—THINKS THIS WILL BE CONVENTION CITY OF 1910—IS ON EDUCATIONAL TOUR

Dr. T. C. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago, accompanied by his son, are through passengers on the Siberia.

Dr. Chamberlain is the President of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the organization which is to hold its 1910 convention in this city. He has had a busy day of it while in the city, but remained long enough to become an enthusiast over the prospect of Honolulu as a convention town.

"The present council of the Association has gone as far as it can toward assuring the convention for this city," said Dr. Chamberlain to the Bulletin man. "We have recommended Honolulu favorably to the next council and while, of course, we cannot guarantee their action for a year and a half ahead, the prospect for Honolulu is favorable."

Mr. Chamberlain is traveling around the world, and after leaving the Orient will proceed by way of Siberia to Europe, and home. He and his son are the members of a commission sent out by the University of Chicago to study educational conditions. While in the city the party were in charge of Frank Atherton, Rev. F. W. Damon, Rev. D. Scudder, and A. F. Judd. They made a hurried automobile tour of the points of interest, visiting the Bishop Museum, the Kanehahameha Schools, and Puna-hou.

PROSPECTS FOR COFFEE DUTY

Governor Says That Tax Will Probably Be Placed

"It is impossible to state accurately at this time just what tariff changes will be made by Congress," said Governor Frear this morning. "The main question that is considered in Washington is whether or not Philippine sugar will be let in free—if it is the amount will probably be limited."

"There is a fair prospect for a duty on coffee, this not so much for the purpose of protecting the coffee interests of Hawaii and Porto Rico as to raise revenue. As to a duty on pineapples it is hard to say anything on this matter yet. Dole argued with some of the people there on this matter."

NO DISCREPANCIES IN STAYTON'S ACCOUNTS

Through the most searching examination of the books of Jack Stayton, assistant postmaster, it has been found that, instead of his being short in his accounts, as was a matter of fact the balance was on the other hand, and it has been shown that the government is in debt to him. Mr. Stayton has maintained since his arrest on a charge of opening official mail that his accounts were straight, and the searching examination of Inspector Here has borne out his statements. During the Christmas rush of business, it is often the case that post-office clerks make minor mistakes, which sometimes lead to grave charges, but this is not the case with Stayton.

The fact that his accounts are perfectly straight, or are, if anything, in his favor, inasmuch as the government is shown to be in debt to him, is good news to Stayton's many friends in the city.

PEARL HARBOR WORK TO BEGIN AT ONCE

Walter Dillingham Tells Of Plans For Big Job

Work will begin under the Pearl Harbor dredging contract about the 1st of February. Walter Dillingham of the Hawaiian Dredging Company returned from Washington this morning on the Siberia, having completed all of the preliminary arrangements necessary in order to commence work.

"The contract was signed on December 24," said Dillingham this morning. "It contemplates the expenditure of between $3,000,000 and $3,500,000. Terms for a modification of the dredging specifications have been agreed upon between the Secretary of the Navy and the Hawaiian Dredging Company, so should (Continued on Page 2)

'HAWAII the OUTPOST' ---'JIM HAM' LEWIS

ONLY DEMOCRATIC CONGRESSMAN FROM WEST WHO VOTED "AYE" ON ANNEXATION OF HAWAII TELLS WHAT HE THINKS OF THIS PLACE — BOOSTER OF THE BOOSTERS

"I have advocated the abandonment of the Philippines as being outside of our sphere and likely to involve us in trouble with the Orient. I believe that the money that would thus be saved should be expended in making Hawaii into a military and naval stronghold which would be to America what Gibraltar is to Britain."

"I advocate as large a navy as is necessary and as small a standing army as practicable."

"I believe that Congress should authorize Hawaii to build a municipal line of steamers to run between the different islands, insuring bonds for the purpose."

"I believe that an income tax should be levied on great fortunes, and that the money so derived should be used to build a line of government-owned steamers which would ply between the mainland and the islands."

"I believe that Hawaii should be looked upon by the Federal government as the western outpost of the United States."

—James Hamilton Lewis to a Bulletin Reporter.

The only Democratic congressman from the Pacific Coast who voted "aye" when the question of annexing the Hawaiian Islands was brought up in the House, one of the firmest advocates of the fortification of Hawaii, and one of the firmest believers in the coming commercial and agricultural greatness of Hawaii, is Colonel James Hamilton Lewis, otherwise known as "Jim Ham" Lewis, who arrived here on the Siberia this morning.

Colonel Lewis is headed for the Philippines, but he took advantage of the opportunity to pay Honolulu a flying visit today and on his return trip he promises himself the pleasure of stopping over here for a more extended sojourn.

The first Honolulu man to greet Col. Lewis this morning was the Bulletin reporter. The soldier-lawyer statesman had not completed dressing when the reporter rang at his door.

A Gentle Personality.

The Bulletin man felt a little shy as he knocked at the stateroom door of "Jim Ham," and he would have turned and run for two cents. There was a cheery "hello" in response to his knock, however, and an instant later a jolly face with red whiskers and smiling eyes was peered through an opening between the door and the jam.

"Excuse me for bothering you at this hour, but I am a newspaper man," began the Bulletin chap by way of explanation.

"Glad to see you. Don't apologize."

To Extend Reclamation Service To Hawaii

A bill to extend the reclamation service of the United States Government to Hawaii has been introduced in the Congress, or was to have been introduced shortly after Governor Frear left Washington. This is the result of the visit of Chief of the Reclamation Service Newell to these islands.

Senator Perkins was to have introduced the bill in the Senate, while Kuhio was to bring it up before the House of Representatives. Governor Frear, who returned this morning on the Siberia, feels greatly pleased with the result of the work that has been accomplished in this respect, and he is especially gratified with the very great interest that Director Newell is taking in the islands.

MAY ASK POLICE TO ARREST ACTORS

It is reported on good authority that the police will be asked to be present, and if necessary, to interfere with the performance to be given tonight in the Japanese theatre on Maunakea street.

The performance, to be given under the auspices of the High-wage Association, is called "The High-wage Show," and on account of this name, the attendance, it is said, will be unusually large.

Some of the well known Japanese do not approve of the manner in which this high-wage proposition is being handled. They believe in going slowly and diplomatically. The theatrical performers, it is said, will go through some improper acts, in which event the police will be asked to put a stop to it, and if necessary, place them under arrest.

PEARL HARBOR WORK

Congress fail to make the necessary appropriation it will be possible to do the portion of the work for which there is money on the same basis as that agreed upon for the entire work.

"We have been instructed to commence work within the limits of a 300-foot channel. I do not believe that the channel will be as narrow as that, however, as various naval officers, called into consultation, opposed the idea of a narrow channel strongly. I believe that the channel across the bar will be at least 400 feet in width, if not wider.

"The contract obligates us to deposit 3,000,000 cubic yards of material, car measurement, at the Army reservation on the east side of the entrance to the harbor. We are also to deliver 400,000 cubic yards at the Naval Station.

"Just as soon as we can get ready we expect to locate a permanent camp at Pearl Harbor. We have not made any arrangements for skilled labor, as we desire to employ local men as far as possible. As far as possible, we shall make all purchases of local merchants, that the money appropriated may be spent here.

"We have arranged to farm out a part of the work to a San Francisco dredging firm. This will not be done until Congress has made the full appropriation, however."

ATCHERLEY DEFENSE

Sinclair answered by reciting a case given in a well-known work on insanity, which was similar in most of the prominent features.

Magoon asked on what he based his conclusion that Atcherley was insane and should be committed.

"I believe," answered Sinclair, "so because he in his examination gave a history of having been persecuted by Dr. Wayson, that this persecution had extended for many years. Furthermore, there was a distinct wandering of the ethical sense, which is a valuable symptom. I asked why he had done this act, and he said that Dr. Wayson had stolen his remedy for leprosy. I also think that the fact that he thinks he has discovered a remedy for leprosy is a symptom of paranoia, in line with that of other cases, who have imagined that they had discovered perpetual motion and the like. I asked him why he had done it, even if Dr. Wayson had stolen his remedy, and he answered that a remedy for leprosy was not discovered every day, showing again that he placed an undue weight on his discovery; more than a sane man would."

Dr. Sinclair went on to say that Dr. Atcherley was in the habit of taking cocaine and other drugs, and this was one of the things which led to paranoia. Furthermore, Atcherley's hallucinations about voices from the sewer, etc., were all in line with the conclusion the witness reached. Atcherley had been very restless during the examination but had spoken intelligently and logically, showing that his act was not one of sudden impulse.

"For how long a time has Dr. Atcherley, in your opinion, been suffering from paranoia?" asked Magoon.

"I believe about a month, since he heard these voices. Beyond that I make no statement."

Magoon asked Sinclair what were the facts which first led him to believe that Dr. Atcherley was insane.

"The idea he had of persecution, the idea he possessed that Wayson had stolen his remedy, on grounds entirely inadequate for such conclusion; on his abnormal ethical sense; on his general manner, and the fact that he was addicted to cocaine and morphine or opium," answered Sinclair.

Magoon—Had you formed this conclusion before you knew these facts?

Sinclair—I was strongly inclined to believe he was insane.

Magoon—Do you know how much cocaine Dr. Atcherley took?

Sinclair—Dr. Emerson told me two or three grains. He was not certain.

Magoon—And how much morphine?

Sinclair—Dr. Emerson said seven to ten grains. He did not know positively.

Magoon—I understand that from these indefinite statements of Dr. Emerson you formed your belief that Dr. Atcherley was a paranoiac?

Sinclair—It confirmed my belief.

Magoon—If you found out that Dr. Emerson's statement that Dr. Atcherley took two to three grains of cocaine was incorrect, and that he took only one-half grain, would you still consider Dr. Atcherley a paranoiac?

Sinclair—You may put it down that I would.

Magoon—And you would still consider him a danger to the community?

Sinclair—I would.

Magoon asked Sinclair if he knew of any cases similar to that of Dr. Atcherley in which the subject had been committed.

Sinclair referred to cases cited by Grey's work on insanity, and produced the book, quoting several cases, which, however, did not satisfy Magoon as being in point. Sinclair said that other books gave such cases, and Magoon insisted on their production. Cathcart objected, and the Court ordered the examination to go on.

Magoon—I understand that one of your reasons was that Dr. Atcherley thought Dr. Wayson was persecuting him?

Sinclair—Yes.

Magoon wanted to know what he would think in case Atcherley had good reason for this belief.

Sinclair answered that Atcherley had been unable to give any grounds. He merely said he knew it. Furthermore, his method of retaliation was irrational.

"If the facts existed, which there was no dispute of, which led Dr. Atcherley to believe that he was persecuted by Dr. Wayson, would it then have been an element of insanity?" asked Magoon.

"It might be, or it might not," said Sinclair.

Magoon asked if it were not an evidence of hostility when the Board of Health, of which Wayson was the only medical member, had required that Atcherley make known his remedy before he was allowed to treat the Kalihi station patients.

"I do not," answered Sinclair.

"Then you think Dr. Atcherley should have given away his secret?" asked Magoon.

"According to the ethics of the medical profession he should."

"Even if such a remedy was worth a great deal of money?"

"Most certainly. That is one of the misfortunes of the medical profession."

"Do you know if Dr. Wayson has disclosed his remedy?"

"I don't care about Dr. Wayson."

"Well, you know he declares he has discovered a leper cure?"

"I don't know that. I don't think that he claims that."

"But if Dr. Wayson has a cure, and does not give it out, then he violates the ethics of the profession?"

"He would."

Magoon went into various of the Atcherley kicks at great length. He wanted to know if the Board had ever placed such restrictions on any other physicians as they had on Dr. Atcherley. Sinclair said he thought it did in the case of Dr. Rice at Hilo.

Magoon asked if Dr. Wayson's cure for leprosy was not similar to that of Atcherley. Sinclair did not think so. Magoon then asked if it were not wrong for Wayson to disclose the fact that he had treated Atcherley for morphinism. Sinclair said that that was a matter of common knowledge.

Magoon—In what way do you think that Dr. Atcherley is a menace to the community and should be locked up?

Sinclair—Because he has an abnormal ethical sense. I believe that any man who will attempt to shoot and kill another without more proof than I could ascertain was possessed by Atcherley in this case against Wayson, is a menace to the community.

At this time Atcherley took charge of the cross-examination. He asked if it were not possible that he had a reason for taking drugs, as, for instance, that he might have an ailment.

"That makes no difference," answered Sinclair. "The mere fact that the drugs were taken was sufficient."

Atcherley went into a medical examination of Sinclair with special reference to the symptoms which had been discussed.

Sinclair mentioned self-exaltation as one of Atcherley's symptoms.

"How?"

"You claim that you have discovered a cure for leprosy."

"Who told you?"

"You did."

Atcherley went deeply into the subject of leprosy during which he produced his own great leprosy chart.

"I don't care to argue with Dr. Atcherley," said Sinclair, finally. "I believe he is a paranoiac and is, therefore, not amenable to reason."

The Court voiced a disinclination to pass on the question of leprosy cures. Atcherley claimed that Sinclair had claimed that his belief was one symptom of paranoia, and he therefore wanted Sinclair to show where his theories were incorrect. "I will not permit a discussion of this," said the Court, finally. "I don't know where we would land. Better submit the question to a medical congress."

Sinclair quoted as another symptom the fact that Atcherley claimed Wayson had stolen his remedy and was now using it.

"Then you consider that not true?"

"I think you suffer from a delusion."

Other symptoms, such as the phantom footsteps, sewer voices, etc., were taken up and discussed.

"I believe that if you had been charged criminally for this act," said Sinclair, finally, "you would set up a plea of insanity. The fact that you now insist that you are sane is one of the facts which contribute to my belief that you are insane."

"What do you mean by a morbid ethical sense?" asked Atcherley.

Sinclair explained that it was an important symptom of paranoia. In answer to further questions, Sinclair said that a paranoiac might take some small grievance, not based on a hallucination, and enlarge it until he believed he was persecuted, and take action on such an exaggerated belief.

"Have you no desire to prove me insane?" asked Atcherley.

"No, certainly not," answered Sinclair. "I think it would do you good to be confined where you could get medical attention and proper care."

On re-direct Cathcart asked Dr. Sinclair what he thought of the fact that Atcherley had shot, not at Wayson, but at the house in which were other people, whom he might be as likely to injure.

"It was the act of an unbalanced mind," answered Sinclair.

Wayson asked if it were not possible that Atcherley's act might be ascribed to the taking of an overdose of cocaine.

Sinclair answered that it would cause such muscular weakness that he would have been unable to walk on the street. He would get hallucinations, which might cause him to do an unnatural act, if he were able to perform it. He did not think, however, that the hallucinations of cocaine were homicidal.

Magoon wanted to know what would have been the result if Dr. Atcherley had suddenly left off taking cocaine. Sinclair answered that it would produce mental depression, but not violence, except in an effort to procure the drug, but not as the result of a fancied wrong.

"Dr. Atcherley's present condition is due to what?" asked Judge Andrade.

"I believe it is due to the continued use of cocaine," said Sinclair.

This closed the case of the prosecution and the defense began, Magoon calling Sister Albertina as the first witness.

She had known Dr. Atcherley since he came to Hawaii about sixteen or seventeen years ago, and had met him often when he stayed in Honolulu. She had called at his home often during the past year and had observed that he treated his family well, as well as strangers. The witness had never seen him exhibit anger, ill-will, or rudeness. He was a gentleman.

"There are several degrees of the term gentleman, are there not?" asked Magoon.

"I have a very high standard," answered Sister Albertina, simply. "He comes up to it."

The witness went on to say that Dr. Atcherley had always talked rationally, had never been the subject of any hallucinations, as far as she was aware. Even in his talks relating to his treatment of leprosy he had been rational. He had said that leprosy was curable under proper treatment, and had described his treatment.

On cross-examination Sister Albertina said that Dr. Atcherley had begun to talk about the leprosy cure when Wallace came. Atcherley claimed his was a certain cure. He had said that Dr. Wayson was trying to get his cure. The cure which Wayson claimed to have, he said, was very much like his own. This was at the last visit the witness had paid at the Atcherley house.

At this point a recess was taken until 1:45 p. m.

FRIDAY JANUARY 15, 1909

H. St. Gear knows what Honolulu
can do and he does not have to be asked twice if Honolulu will grow.

Atchley might call on the voices,
that constitute his informants, for a photograph of Mr. Watson hiding behind a mango tree to spy the Wallach cure.

Special Agent Trenor will prove himself all that is claimed for him if he gets the immigrants as well as the legislation during the present session of Congress.

Should the Governor feel that the Chamber of Commerce is somewhat shifty, he has to remember that the Chief Executive has at times pursued
an extraordinary policy of secrecy.

When the Japanese laborers contribute twenty-five cents a week
each for a divy among a gang of Honolulu lawyers and runners, they will have fallen into the net that has been set for them.

No one should be harmed by announcing the name of Ito's attorney
during Fleet-week. The reformers gave their Sheriff a special letter of recommendation for a financial transaction with the willed proprietor.

Why should not the small planter secure an advance on his crop just as the large planter does? Why should not surplus funds be used profitably in helping the agriculturalist
who has brains, will work hard, and is honest?

Supervisor Logan is said to have
cut two names from an advertisement to save ten cents. All of which is penny-wise if his elaborate financial scheme of city expenditure is not found to be so wide open that it will be more than "pound-foolish."

GOVERNOR FREAR AND THE PEOPLE.

Governor Frear returns today to renew his official relations with fellow-citizens whose first query is:
"What have you done, and why?"

The Governor may, on the other hand, give the Yankee answer,
"What have you done to me, and why?"

In other words, events transpiring
since the Governor left this city for Washington have indicated that the Governor and the people are very much out of touch. And it should not be.

The first instance was the working out of the Mahuka-site exchange. The second was the coastwise shipping law mix-up. The third was the discovery by the people of these islands that a bill had been introduced and argued before committee to amend the Organic law of the Territory, and this before they even knew the text of the measure, or had received an intimation of what it might be.

Governor Frear may hold the opinion that the people of this city are
not clear-minded, nor far-sighted,
and really don't know what is good for themselves. He may feel that they made a great mistake in the location of the Federal building. He may be positive that the business men made a monkey of him and injured themselves by turning tail and switching their course on the coastwise shipping bill. He may be satisfied that he had talked of the amendment of the Organic Act for many months and such a small detail as the text of the bill by which this should be brought about should not
interest the people or worry them.

If this be the case, it merely shows that the Governor's error is contained in his failure to appreciate that American government is government
By and For the people as well as Of the people. He cannot make a success of his administration if he proposes to do what he personally thinks
is best and then consult the hoploid afterwards. A Governor is not king nor should he assume the privileges of a viceroy.

The people must be taken into account, not only as the beneficiaries of legislation but as active participants
in their own business.

It is of especial importance that

the Governor should realize this fact when he is about to enter upon the first legislative period of his administration. The common people, if that be the proper term, must be considered on every occasion. If they are not, they will command attention in a very short time.

Having been long on the bench,
the Governor's habits of thought have been to draw his conclusions from books without other assistance than
the stunted lamp to furnish the light.
The people had to accept the conclusion as final.

As chief executive the situation is different. While the Governor does not have to be told this, many of our citizens are convinced that old habits
have a strong hold, and create a state of mind.

The Governor is approaching a period when he will be in immediate touch with the representatives of the people. He has the moral support of the community and will retain it as long as he keeps in touch. He has lost ground by the Mahuka deal and has not gained by the methods followed in handling the Organic Act amendments.

This lost prestige can be regained
if the Governor will accept the fact that his programs should first be placed tentatively before the people,
and the detail filled in with regard
for public sentiment developed.

The method of laying out a plan
in secret and then springing it on the public in the hope that the supporters of the administration will stand
by because an end might justify the means, will wind up in failure.

It is to be hoped that the future
will not have further instances of this character.

Let us remember that American government is representative government. The people govern. They are not to be governed by one or two or over a few men.

THE CRIMINAL AGITATION

It is very apparent that the dressed-up thugs of the Japanese colony
have taken their cue of agitation
from the criminal section of the American press in this city. They also look upon that section as a medium of free advertising and real friendship, though apparently in opposition.

That, however, is not the point at issue.

Certain residents of this city, enjoying the liberty and privileges of the easy-going American government,
have abused that privilege to the extent of arousing their ignorant fellow-citizens and urging them to physical attack for revenging fancied
wrongs.

This cannot be and must not be tolerated by the law-abiding citizens
of this city and Territory.

In putting an end to the campaign
of violence, the citizens should have the active aid and support of every respectable resident of the city, regardless of race or nationality.

But whether this aid and cooperation from the residents is forthcoming or not it may be accepted as a certainty that the men who are preaching anarchy and indulging in threats will have to quit or go to jail.

That is the long and short of it.
The sooner the police authorities
take cognizance of the dangerous element, now very much in evidence,
the better.

American citizens will not tolerate
the conditions which the dressed-up
thugs are trying their utmost to create.

Will the departments, whose duty
it is to guard the community against criminal classes, wait until blood is shed before they take steps to suppress the men and the mediums
through which appeals are made to the passions of ignorant residents?

FULL PROGRAM FOR SATURDAY NIGHT

The program in full for the benefit
Saturday night will be given tomorrow
and a glance at it will show that it is one of the most varied and attractive
that have ever been staged in Honolulu. The benefit is now assured of success, and while all who have donated their time and service deserve great credit, the one who originated the benefit and is responsible in the greatest measure for its successful management is Mrs. McLennan.

Those who have given their time and services are: The Bulletin, the Advertiser and the Star, the Mercantile Printing Company, The Chas. R.
Frazier Advertising Company, Tom
Sharp, W. D. Adams, Mrs. L. A.
Abrams, Miss Cordie Carden, Miss Alice Spaulding and the ushers. Those who have contributed stage properties,
costumes, materials, etc., are the Coyne Furniture Co., Hopp Furniture
Co., N. S. Sachs, Yat Loy Co., and Miss Sparrow.

PRETTY GAME TO MULT LABORERS

Honolulu Crowd's Profit From Earnings of Japanese

There is steadily increasing evidence that the campaign for higher plantation wages which was hatched in a little Honolulu circle is merely the beginning of a beautifully developed scheme to collect twenty-five cents a month from the laborers of the plantations and thereby feather the nest of a brass of attorneys and runners who are "friends" of the Japanese.

Twenty-five cents a month collected from each laborer would make a nice fund of seven thousand dollars a month to be divided among the Honolulu men who would be "protecting the interests of the laborers."

The whole campaign was started in Honolulu; not among the laborers, but in the offices of those who feed off the pockets of the laborers. If the latter can once be aroused to a spirit of discontent which does not now prevail the leeches of the city will have a fat income, regardless of the fate of the industry and the general
disturbing influence, and the discredit
that will be brought upon reputable
residents of the Japanese community.

HAWAII THE OUTPOST

Used to chase news for a living myself. Come in and sit down," were the sentences fired back in quick succession. If "Jim Ham" wants any support he is sure to get it from the journalistic fraternity.

"I am glad to talk about Hawaii because I believe in Hawaii," said Colonel Lewis after the first greetings
were over. "I was the only Democratic Congressman from the Pacific Coast who voted in favor of the annexation of the islands when the matter came up in Congress. At that time
I was Congressman-at-large from Washington."

Hawaii the Western Outpost.
"I have always felt that the Federal government should look upon Hawaii
as the western outpost of the United States. I have advocated the abandonment of the Philippines as being outside of our sphere and likely to involve us in trouble with the Orient. I believe that the money that would thus
be saved should be expended in making Hawaii into a military and naval stronghold which would be to America
what Gibraltar is to Britain."

"I expressed myself strongly on this matter when I was a candidate for Governor of the State of Illinois. I had occasion to take issue with my party in regard to the navy. I believe that we should maintain as large a navy as necessary and as small a standing army as practicable."

"I have urged the fortification of Hawaii. Should we get into any difficulties in the Orient, Hawaii would be the first place to be seized by the Oriental. Two reasons why this would be the case are clear to my mind.

The first reason is that it would prevent Hawaii being used as a base for the American Army and Navy in its operations. The other would be that such a seizure would force troops to be sent here to defend these islands, thus dividing the fleets, which would render the capture of the Philippines
an easy matter. This would also lay the Pacific Coast open to hostile attack."

Urges Powerful Defenses.

Hawaii therefore should be so protected and fortified by a land force
which would prevent any hostile guns
and ships passing these forts without being destroyed.

"The sugar output of Hawaii is a matter that should be given the gravest
consideration. Rates of transportation are a matter of the most vital importance.

"This sugar should find other markets than the Pacific Coast, it should be sent East and given a general market against the Cuban product.

"There are two things which would,
I believe, accomplish this.

"An income tax could be levied by the government upon those of large means. A portion of this could be taken to build lines of steamers, plying
between the mainland and the islands, thus giving cheap transportation from
the islands to the mainland.

Municipal Steamers.

"Then Congress should give Hawaii
the authority to build municipal steamboat and railway lines through the islands for inter-island commerce, the Hawaiian people issuing bonds to raise money for the purpose.

"These two things would, to my mind, result in giving to Hawaii the supremacy to which it is entitled.

Colonel Lewis was from 1897 until 1899 congressman at large from the State of Washington. During the Spanish war he served on the staff of General Frederick D. Grant. He was

to the Board, as did the rest of the Department heads.
At the meeting yesterday afternoon
Deputy County Attorney Milverton
tried to have the matter of the Clerk's appointments brought up under unfinished business, but the Mayor informed him that he had not reached a decision as yet. It now appears that the Mayor was acting under Section 145 of the Municipal Act, which provides that "When any officer, board or department shall require additional deputies, clerks or employees, application shall be made to the Mayor therefor, and upon such application the Mayor shall make investigation as to the necessity for such additional assistance; and if he find the same necessary he may recommend to the Supervisors to authorize the appointment
of such additional deputies, clerks or employees; and thereupon the Supervisors, by an affirmative vote of not less than five members, may authorize such officer, board or department to make such appointment, and provide for the compensation of such appointees."

It now appears that the Clerk has written a letter to the Mayor, under date of January 13, but this letter was received after the resolution in regard to the appointments had been passed,
and can consequently have no bearing thereon. It appears consequently that under the section quoted above the Mayor has full power to decide whether Kalaokalani shall have any assistance beyond his deputy, or to decide
just how much additional help he requires.

That the Mayor quite evidently appreciates this point is shown by a letter which he sent to the City and County Clerk today, the text of which is as follows:

"The Mayor has under consideration
your request for additional clerks and employees. In order that he may be thoroughly informed as to the need for these additional clerks and employees will you kindly furnish him in detail the services required and performed by each of the employees you mention, and such information regarding the work of your office as will enact properly in the matter."

Samuel Ylammovich of Clarksville,
Pa., was shot and killed by an unknown man who called upon him at his home. A motive for the shooting is lacking, but four suspects have been arrested.

BEARING IMAGES THROUGH RUINS AFTER AN EARTHQUAKE IN SICILY

Messina, the second commercial town in Sicily, has experienced more devastation through earthquakes, plague, and war than any other place in history. The earthquakes of 1894 and 1905 are well remembered. On those occasions priests carried images of the saints through the streets of the stricken city and among the ruins to calm the people. Messina was founded by Cumæan pirates B. C.
732. In A. D. 843 the Saracens took the city, and they in turn were dispossessed by the Normans in 1062. In 1740 a plague cost the lives of 40,000 persons in the town, and in 1783 an earthquake killed many thousands. The city was bombarded by Neapolitan troops in 1848, and in 1854 cholera killed 16,000 of the residents.

District One Continues To Lead For First Honors

Lizzie Ten Sue Kau Makes Sensational Jump

HAWAII, MAUI AND KAUAI WATCHED WITH INTEREST

All Contestants Well Bunched For First Position on Final Dash

Once more the votes in the Bulletin's Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition contest have been counted, and the results are best explained in the accompanying score.

Miss Lizzie Ten Sue Kau came to the front yesterday by casting over twenty thousand votes and leads the entire list of contestants this evening, for high honors, with over 35,000 votes to her credit against 14,861 for yesterday. She is closely followed by Miss De la Nux, Dinklage, Waters, Melan, Dias and several others and it will only require a few votes to place those in second to twelfth position today, to lead on the morrow.

Hawaii, Maui and Kauai districts are busy and will be heard from by the week's end and District No. 1, will have to look out for its laurels when the count is made from the other districts.

The work of these charming young contestants is beginning to count. Already there is an enormous vote piling up and the race is being evenly run. No contestant is gaining an irretrievable lead over the rest.

Yesterday's ballot was very heavy and a number of candidates have done remarkably well for the short time the contest has been under way. The leading candidates have changed about somewhat since the first announcement, and more changes may be expected from time to time as the contest proceeds. A few more names are to be seen in the list, and one or two of these have been entered with a large number of votes to their credit.

The five women who take the free trips will be determined by popular ballot. Five women in all will go, the fifth serving as chaperone for the Bulletin party.

Permits No Combinations

Some people fear that there will be a combination between contestants at the last moment to enable some one in the deal to win. There will be nothing of the kind done, for each vote is marked "not transferable," and is filled out in ink or else in indelible pencil. After being once handed to the contest manager or turned into the big ballot box and counted, these ballots are stamped "voted," and while they are kept and may be referred to, they cannot be juggled with.

Excitement over the contest is becoming intense. Many votes are being cast and a number of the contestants are calling on their reserves. From row on contestants and their friends will make strenuous efforts to increase their vote, as those in the lead from this time on will stand the best chance of securing the various "floating subscriptions," as they are called, which come into the office. Many people come in to subscribe and not knowing any of the young ladies in the contest, cast their votes for the ones who seem to stand the best chance of winning.

The amount of interest taken in the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific contest now being held by the Bulletin is really surprising, and while the contest is just starting, yet the voting is particularly brisk. Of course, there is every incentive to work, for the trips given by the Bulletin are prizes indeed, magnificent.

Those who have been watching the Bulletin contest for the last week cannot help but notice the keen interest that is being taken in it everywhere. Reports come from all over the city and county that the candidates are doing all in their power to elicit the aid of their friends.

The names of the candidates and the number of votes accorded each were announced last Saturday, and a great deal of enthusiasm was provoked throughout the territory in which the contest is being conducted. New names are coming in daily.

Voting is not restricted in any sense whatever. Anyone may vote as often as he pleases and for whom he pleases, i.e. matter from what district the young woman may be entered.

There are a number of bright young women in the race and it is but right that the Bulletin readers and friends of candidates should help the young women out as much as possible. If you do not want more than one Bulletin yourself, send it to an eastern friend or relative. We will appreciate it and by so doing you will establish communications which will come into their homes daily.

Contestants are not limited to the district in which they are entered, but are allowed to secure votes from any other District, County or State.

No Blank Votes.

There has been some misunderstanding as to the manner in which votes on subscriptions are issued and a number of old subscribers have asked for their votes when they pay for their subscription and requested that the ballot be left blank and they will fill in the name of the contestant that they desire, but this request will not be granted, as it is not fair for the contestant. You must always state the name of the young woman whom you are voting for and the ballots will be filled out in full and you may hold the ballot as long as you desire or give them to the contestant and she can hold them or cast them just as she sees fit, as all ballots issued on subscriptions are good until the close of the contest, but if they are left blank, they would then be transferable, and there could be a combination, at the last minute, to enable those not entered at the present time, to win, but votes are not transferable and there is absolutely no chance of a combination which makes it absolutely fair to all the contestants.

Short Contest

The contest is of short duration and will close some time about the middle of March. The exact date will be decided upon in a few days. This will be the shortest contest the Bulletin has ever conducted and is made short, in order that the work will not become tiresome to the contestants. Each contestant should commence to-day to ask their friends for support and tell them to help you now and not stand you off with promises of support, as it will be hard for you to call on them again. Each contestant is furnished with receipt books and those who have not secured a book as yet should call on the Contest Manager and secure one and have your friends pay you their subscription and you bring the money to the office and the ballots will be issued to you in person; don't depend on your friends to come to the office and pay but have them pay you on your first visit, and it will be easier for all concerned to roll up a large vote. friends may mean all right when they tell you they will vote for you later, but something may happen that they will neglect to come to the office and pay; therefore it is the surest way to secure their subscription, to call on them at once and ask them to pay you in person, and you are then sure of the votes.

How To Vote

Subscribers who depend on the mails to bring their subscriptions to the Bulletin office, must always state whom they want their votes cast for, always mention the contestant's name and whether you want the votes published at once or returned to the contestant. It is best to return all ballots to the contestant and she will then know who is voting for her and can keep track of her friends who have voted, and then will have more time to call on those who have not paid their subscription and in this way she can make a thorough canvass of all her friends, and it will make the work much easier for her. Send your subscription direct to the Contest Department and the votes will be issued for the one you state and they will be returned to the contestant with your name on it, and she can hold the ballots back until the close of the contest, but ballots will not be issued unless the contestant's name appears on same, which makes it a safe-guard against all combinations, which often arise in contests of this nature and makes it absolutely fair for the contestant, as no contestant can then withdraw from the race and transfer her votes to someone else.

Subscription Blanks

Candidates should call on the Contest Manager at once and secure subscription books, and there are a number of things he would like to tell you, in regard to the best way of securing votes. Call at once at the Bulletin office.

THE FIVE TRIPS WILL BE APPORTIONED AS FOLLOWS:

District No. 1 includes the City and County of Honolulu.
District No. 2 includes the County of Hawaii.
District No. 3 includes the County of Maui.
District No. 4 includes the County of Kauai.
The fifth trip will be for the chaperone, who will be chosen by the young woman securing the highest individual vote, irrespective of district limitation.

You may take the trip any time you choose, singly or in groups.

Four Separate Contests.

The Evening Bulletin is conducting four separate and distinct contests at the same time.

The young woman who receives the highest number of votes in District No. 1 will be given first-class transportation both ways, and hotel accommodations while in Seattle and San Francisco.

The young woman in District No. 2 will receive the same trip to Seattle and San Francisco, with the same accommodations as the one in District No. 1.

The young woman in District No. 3 receiving the highest number of votes will receive the same trip as the young women in Districts Nos. 1 and 2.

The young woman in District No. 4 receiving the highest vote will receive the same trip and accommodations as the three above mentioned districts.

PETITION SENT BY MASTERS AND PILOTS

The local harbor of the Masters' and Pilots' Association has sent twelve petitions for improvements to be asked for from Congress to the convention of Grand Harbor Officers, which meets at Washington this month. The needs are set forth as follows:

At Kahului—A fourth order fixed red light on the end of the breakwater; a gas buoy on the outer edge of the Wahee reef; a gas buoy on the outer edge of the Spartan reef; a gas buoy to replace the starboard outer buoy marking the harbor entrance; the government to take over the present range lights and move them about 450 feet to the westward.

At Keane, Maui—A suitable light. At Puniawa, Maui—A suitable light. At Napili Point, Maui—A fourth order light.

Gas buoys on the following submerged coral reefs: Kamalo reef, to replace the present bell buoy; Blonde reef, Hilo bay; Kaunakakai, to mark the outer edge of the reef; Olowalu reef, marking the turning point to enter Maalaea bay; Pele rock, off south coast of Kauai, the rock on which the steamer Pele was wrecked; Lanai reef, on north side of the island; Maalaea bay outer reef, close to Kihui; Lahaina, to mark the anchorage, to replace the present red lantern; outer edge of the Makaweli reef.

A fourth order light at Hilo harbor, in the neighborhood of Pukaia Point. A first order light at Capt. Kumu-kahi, the most easterly point of Hawaii. Two vessels have already been lost on this point, the barkentine Hilo and the whaler Tamarae.

A suitable light on the island of Mokolina.

The installation of the incandescent oil vapor system to the island beacon lights.

Dredging of the Kahului harbor and the extension of the breakwater in a northerly and northwesterly direction along the reef.

Investigation into the special hook in use in the Inter-island service for lowering and hoisting the boats and legalizing the use of the same.

Legalizing the use of lifeboats without air tanks, experience here having demonstrated that such tanks are not necessary, but an obstacle in the way of the proper handling of the boats at rough landings.

The making of a new survey of the coasts of the Islands by the Coast and Geodetic Survey Department and the preparation of new charts on a scale larger than the present ones, which are drawn one to sixty thousand.

ART THEATRE PROGRAM.

The "Legend of the Ghost" is the title of a most remarkable film that is to be put on by the Art Theatre for the remainder of this week. The program is the most elaborate ever shown in a moving picture theatre.

CHINESE BASEBALL PLAYERS TO MEET

GREAT GAME IS PROMISED FOR JANUARY TWENTY-THIRD

Students' Alliance and C. A. C. Will Try Conclusions on Diamond—Much Rivalry Between Two Organizations
and Lively Contest Sure to Result

The baseball game scheduled for Chinese New Year's Day, between the C. A. C. and the Students' Alliance will be a hummer. The boys are using every spare moment for practice at Ala Park each evening. Last night saw the veteran slab artist, John Lo, shooting them over at practice; he will twirl for the Alliance team. Likewise John Amoy, who will be in the box for the C. A. C., did some throwing. The man with the big mitt muffed them all. It will be a battle royal, as the two teams are very evenly matched. When the umpire calls "Play ball" there will be something doing.

Manager Lau Tang said last evening that he will wager his whole month's salary that the C. A. C. will make those Alliance boys sick before they are through. The Alliance is not to be bluffed.

There will be a preliminary game, before the main event, between the Palama Night School and the C. A. C. third teams. In this game will be seen some of the old war-horses and "has-beens" chasing the horse-hide and fanning the air.

The first game begins at 1 o'clock and there will be enough chairs for all who have too much "Konohi" to stand throughout the two games.

To wind up the day there will be a masque ball at the K. of P. hall. The sale of tickets indicate a successful affair.

The silver cup offered by Tong Phong will be presented to the winners of the ball game at the dance and, for the present, it is hard to foretell who is going to annex the trophy.

WELSH FIGHTER
WHO MAY MEET
ABE ATTELL

Jean Driscoll, the little Welshman who has fought several winning contests in the East in the last three months, is about the best foreign pugilist who has come to these shores in a long time. He is trying hard for a match with Champion Attell and recently saw the moving pictures of the last Attell-Moran fight. After watching the pictures critically Driscoll said he was sure he could beat Attell.

BASEBALL IN JAPAN

By B. W. FLEISHER
in Collier's Weekly

Yokohama, November 25.—When Gibbs, the local manager, with a party of friends and delegates from various Japanese baseball teams, a host of reporters from the Japanese press as well, and a brass band, all of whom he was forced to entertain for two days, went out to meet the belated steamship China, carrying on board of her the first All-American baseball team to invade Japan, the first to greet them was "Mike" Fisher, manager.

Count Okuma and "Mike" Fisher. After the usual preliminaries and a general dubbing of the China as a tub, notwithstanding her faithful services of thirty-three years, "Mike" Fisher said: "Will the Mikado be at the dock to meet us?"

Gibbs here tried to explain: "When the fleet was here—"

"Fleet!" echoed "Mike." "Fleet! Look here. Was the fleet one day behind schedule? Well, we are two. Did the fleet arrive in a fog? Well, we're here in a drizzle. Did they strike a typhoon? Well, we've had Devereaux on board. Fleet! The fleet's visit, I want you to understand, was only a dress rehearsal for our reception that's all."

"But the Emperor—" commenced Gibbs. "Now, look here," continued "Mike" Fisher. "Didn't I get a letter from President Roosevelt? Sure the Mikado should have been there. Never mind now, make some other appointment for me."

The first game was with the Waseda University. Count Okuma, the brilliant radical leader of Japan—perhaps the best known and most influential man in the country—was receiving at the time in his beautiful adjoining grounds, some five thousand guests, in celebration of the publication of the first volumes of "The Encyclopedia Japonica," of which work he is editor-in-chief, and here the Count expected and awaited the boys. Unfortunately, they were driven directly to the grounds, though they availed themselves of the kind invitation after the game, and received a royal ovation.

Count Okuma, though disappointed at the non-arrival of his expected guests at the appointed hour, immediately proceeded to the ball-grounds adjoining. It did not take "Mike" Fisher long to introduce himself, and, as a natural corollary, to stroll arm in arm with the famous veteran of three-score and ten, whom he occasionally addressed with a "Say, Count." Fortunately Count Okuma did not grasp the trans-Pacific idiom for, while he is the most progressive man in all Japan and the leader of most educational movements, he does not speak a word of English, nor has he ever set foot out of Japan.

The Lead of College Nines. Waseda University, of which he is chancellor, he created from modest beginnings, maintained ever since out of his private purse, and has seen it grow to be the largest institution of learning in the Far East, while numerically its roster can compare favorably with those of leading institutions of learning in any country. There are over 6200 students, of whom nearly 600 are Chinese. The education of the latter he refers to with pride, as also to the influence which those who have already graduated have obtained in commercial and governmental circles in China.

The best of the teams which the All-American nine met are all college nines, made up of lads averaging about nineteen years of age, with none over twenty-one. Baseball has become the national game of Japan, and the coming generation will be true ball-players. All available vacant spaces, as also the public parks, for the authorities encourage the development of all sports, are filled with junior ball teams. Some of the really young still dress in kimonos and wear clogs, but the greater portion are uniformed in club outfits. How many clubs there are in Tokyo it would be impossible to estimate, but baseball has grown to be a large affair. The professional does not exist as yet; but he will. Enthusiasm runs just as high at a baseball game in Japan as it does in America. The last contest between the two leading nines, Keio and Waseda, took place over two years ago; before the games had finished, a regular pitched battle had ensued; since then further contests between them have been prohibited by their respective faculties. At present the Keios are conceded to be the best team in Japan.

The visit of the All-American team was widely heralded as the great American professional team, and these young Japanese were awed and nervous over their approaching contest. At a dinner given some nights ago a member of the Keio team said: "We are insects compared with the giants who will soon be treading upon us, and, while we will do our best, we fear we will make a sorry showing."

The results have not been so bad. There was no international courtesy about the game. The Americans played ball for all they knew how. They were, of course, handicapped by the facts of a long sea voyage without sufficient time to get into training, but, after all, they were professionals. The first game with the Wasedas resulted in a score of 6 to 9, and the game with the Keios 3 to 9. In the latter game Keio managed to hold down the All-Americans to 1 to 0 till the eighth inning, neither side making a safe hit until the third.

Weak at the Bat.

The weak point of the Japanese team is their batting. Whether their small stature will hinder their development in this respect remains to be seen. Considering that they are novices at the game, they are simply marvelous at all the other points. They are quick, active, and heady. In any game of sport with foreigners, their national pride asserts itself, and yet it is remarkable that, no matter how unfair a decision may be rendered against them, they are never kickers. The crowd may jeer, in fact does so loudly and profusely, but the players are trained in a military fashion such as is never seen in an American team. I have seen the Y. C. and A. C. (a foreign club in Yokohama) walk off the field in a poorly umpired game as the result of an unfair decision, while the Japanese team suffered even worse treatment the inning before and without a protest.

What Army and Navy Folks Are Doing

The drydock at Pearl Harbor, H. I., is to be 1140 feet long, and will cost more than $3,000,000. It will have a middle gate so that two ships could be docked at once, either half being suitable for a battleship. The great length is to meet the steady increase in the length of ships, especially commercial liners in the service of the United States in case of war.

Admiral Evans' protest in a recent magazine article against the absence of barracks for enlisted men of the Navy and the growing sentiment in the Service in the direction of shore accommodations are bearing fruit. At a hearing before the House Committee on Naval Affairs on Dec. 9, Civil Engineer R. C. Holladay, U. S. N., Chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, explained the provision for $10,000 for plans and specifications for the barracks at Mare Island, which are to cost $600,000. It is the intention, he said, to make the Mare Island yard the principal center for the Pacific Coast from which will be supplied the enlisted men required for the fleet in the Pacific Ocean. These barracks will be substituted for the receiving ship system. In the East the Philadelphia yard will be the central station for the supply of enlisted men for the Atlantic Fleet. It is preferred to New York, because it has ample area. For Philadelphia barracks plans $10,000 also was asked. The final cost here, too, will be $600,000.

The Bureau of Yards and Docks has, this week, let the contract for the first dredging project to be started in order to make Pearl Harbor a strong naval base. The contract was

Short Stories For Evening Hours

LONGING OF MISS PAULINE

As usual, Miss Pauline coughed distastefully. And then she smiled, because a beautiful thought that was like a dream with white wings passed through her busy brain. Somehow she felt as if that great thing which she had longed for and prayed over for years was on the verge of becoming true. She could hear the rustle of Hope's garments, hour by hour, and down in the noise-ridden city, where men fight and plunge and sell their souls for bread, she heard the sound, too—always the rustle of Promise.

That longing of Miss Pauline was a secret which she had entrusted only to a few. It had come to her shortly after the serious accident and subsequent fever which laid her low in the springtime of her life and its happiness. And all through the strange years that had followed she clung to the longing with the hope that it must be fulfilled if she were patient and good enough.

At first when she came out of the haze of that numbing illness the world seemed a strange, unreal place—it was like living among shadows. But in time she grew used to it, and forgot the meaning of her friends' saddened looks and fearful shakings of the head. She was satisfied—satisfied with shadows.

Then the great longing came to dog her steps, and Love, which had once looked in on her, fled. Miss Pauline seemed to need but one thing and Love, who was young and ignorant, and who would not be second in anybody's heart, forsook her.

After all the great longing was a foolish one—the only sort that could have bothered a little body like Miss Pauline. She merely wanted to be tall. You see, she was only four-something, and she wanted to be five-something—wanted it so that the yearning became a tragedy. The fever had left her with this greatest of all foolish ambitions.

To be sure there was no hope for her—none at all. She was poor and little and old. Besides she had been taught that no one by taking thought could add one cubic to his stature. She knew that it was wicked for her to long for something that could never be—so wicked, wicked—yet she seemed to be driven on in that way like a drifting, rudderless boat in a high wind.

Always when she had thought it out to the "wicked" stage she paused to say a bit of a prayer—until the prayer became a daily habit.

"Good and Merciful," the supplication ran unvaryingly, "I want just the one thing if Thou wilt give it—the one grace. I ask not and seek not beauty of face nor of figure—but, oh, Thou Good and Merciful, I would be tall—a little taller. Yet not my will—not my will—but Thy will be done. Amen—and for Jesus' sake. But if Thou wouldest, Great and Good—Good and Merciful—"

A good many years of praying had made no difference. Each night the yardstick on the door casing marked the same old four-something—and lately it had seemed to take the least bit of tiptoeing to fetch the figure. With a sigh Miss Pauline would have to turn away to her bed and continue her supplications all unsatisfied.

And now the prim freshness of the gentle face faded, leaving only good brown eyes that looked out uncertainly through the encroaching shadows.

There came a day, however, when Miss Pauline awoke to great happiness. She had left her noisy thoroughfares behind upon the momentous occasion of her monthly shopping visit into the heart of the city, and wandering upon the less-traveled streets came upon a crowd of people gathered about a wagon. In the yellow-wheeled vehicle stood a man who promised the most lovely and impossible things to all who would pay for them.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he announced, "I have here the most powerful remedial agent known since the days of Esculapius, the father of medicine. One dose, ladies and gentlemen, will open up a new vista; one bottle will create a new life; one dozen bottles will make a poor man rich and a short man tall!"

Miss Pauline heard nothing save the last sentence as the crowd swept her on. But that one sentence was enough to set her wild with joy. People could be made to grow taller!

Back she fought her way to the wagon and reached her hand up to attract attention. When she had stated her question the crowd gave back and laughed good-humoredly. With his shining smile the fine gentleman in the wagon leaned out,

"To cure a cold in one day. Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. E. W. Grove's signature is on each box. PARIS MEDICINE CO., St. Louis, U. S. A."

winking an eye at the audience.

"Want to get tall, ma'am?" he inquired with gravity and well-simulated professional interest. "How tall?"

Miss Pauline could not answer immediately. Her heart pounded and her ears roared. Things she had not thought of since the day before her pony threw her on the Wellsfield road ran through her brain.

The gentleman who so magnanimously dispensed divine favors took up the matter in a raucous way with the crowd merely to hold it together.

"She does not know—she does not know!" he bawled hoarsely.

But she answered at last in her gentle way that from being four-something she would esteem it a great glory to become five-something. And some turned their heads away with tears in their eyes.

The fakir bowed gravely.

"It can be done, ma'am," he said, "but not by—medicine. You must go to the specialists who elongate the vertebrae. Yours is a very special and peculiar trouble. With you it will take a long course of bone and muscle training—very long—lots of money, oh, a great deal of money—more than you ever saw, ma'am!"

Things turned green and dark before Miss Pauline, exactly as they do when one goes suddenly out of strong sunlight on snow into a black closet. And she turned away hopelessly—for she was very poor.

Miss Pauline did not hear the roar of laughter, nor the thunder of wagons on the cobblestones. She only realized that she had again misused her chance—and because she was poor. So, although she was not bitter, there lay on her soul a certain languor and despondency that was like river mist on a yard of flowers. And the cough tortured her throat even more distressingly.

The day after Miss Pauline received the note from her solicitors touching the legacy was different. It was a new day. And she went tremblingly to her knees to thank her "Good and Merciful" for the bit of linen paper scrawled over with lawyers' words.

"Dear Madam," it said stiffly, "we are pleased to acquaint you of the fact that the estate of your uncle, the late John Holbert, is at last out of litigation. By a recent decision of the Supreme Court you become sole legatee of some $25,000 and real property aggregating as much more. As we were your uncle's trusted solicitors, we hope you will see your way to—"

She had read the blessed document until the purple lines were dim with her rubbing, and all the time a mad, unusual joy burned in her gentle heart.

"I have lots of money," she murmured. "I can grow as tall as I wish—and soon. I shall hunt out these scientific wonder-workers. I will be tall!"

And for a whole night she dreamed of walking through green fields where the sun always shone and a breeze always played in the clover—tall, graceful, like a lily, maybe!

It was Dr. Marchand who found Miss Pauline in his reception-room one afternoon at dusk, after the drag of a heavy day, when patients seemed to be ugly and disagreeable as the diseases that brought them to him. He had stepped out of his private consultation room, overcoat in hand, for a last look for loiterers, and had found Miss Pauline smiling her radiant smile. In her fingers, tightly crumpled, was the letter from her solicitor, in her eyes the eager, glowing light like dawn.

At her face he paused in wonder, stung by sudden memory—then came forward with the usual professional greeting upon his lips.

In a rush the story came out. Even Miss Pauline was frightened at the boldness of her tongue speaking the hope of her heart.

"I came to you," she finished softly, "I came to you because I knew that if anyone on earth could help me to my—my whim's end it would be some one who knew me when—I was young."

She coughed her little cough, apologetically, and was still.

Dr. Marchand arose from the chair into which he had dropped after the first moment of recognition. That she should have come back to him out of the abyss of years and misunderstanding like this! With his soul's ear he heard a sudden sound—like the dropping of clouds on a coffin, smothered, strangling cries. He was a bit of a sentimentalist—and couldn't help it. As he looked into the past he saw a young man, a maid, a misunderstanding—and then emptiness, punctured by a dying siver of news that spoke of a terrible accident, a long illness. After that it was like the night of ages. He never heard, he never went back. This picture in his turn was followed by one of the young man's rapidly rising in a profession that gave him no time for vain longings.

"You wanted to be tall, Pauline," the doctor said in a voice strange to his own ears. "Where have you been child? And the cough—how long have you had that—girlie?" The old diminutive slipped out, but he did not notice it, nor did Miss Pauline.

"I have a great deal of money, doctor," she began with quiet dignity. "They say that it costs one very much to be—what is it—revertebrated? Hospital bills are large—and doctor bills and nurse hire. But I am not poor any more. I have money now—see this letter! I can buy what I have always wanted."

She put her hand to her head on the ugly scar—the heavy ridge at the side of the skull. Often there was an ache there—a dull throb and a pressure that took away her thoughts.

"I have money and I cannot buy what I have always wanted, little girl—oh, little, lost sweetheart," the doctor mused. "Something my accursed pride and the illness and destiny stole from me. Oh, fever, fever—"

"It is not fever that I am speaking of, doctor," Miss Pauline reminded him mildly. "I am telling you that I have money to buy the grace I lack. Read this paper—it is a lawyer's letter."

Again the cough cut off her speech at her lips; a spot of fire glowed on her cheek—and her eyes were very bright.

"True," muttered the doctor, writhing at the cough, "and not the fever only."

He got up and walked to the window, but the past and the present followed him like restless ghosts. The bristling spires rose like needles in a gigantic cushion. The drone of the city beating up altered its key a semitone. The music of things ran minor. And a tear cut the furrows of his kind old face—a tear, and another, and another.

"As she is I love her more than I love my own soul," he whispered. "After 20 years—when I thought the thing was dead in me it comes up like hot blood in the throat. But I find her like this—like this."

She was stroking her head as he came back and the movement arrested his attention—the unconscious, habitual touching of the head.

"The case is not hopeless?" she asked brightly. "I am not too old? You know about these things?"

And still his eyes followed the movement of her hand, sharply, attentively, like the eye of the microscopist—absorbed, indifferent to all save the one thing. In a moment he was at her side and his little fingers touched the scar, the ridge, the little, uneven depression.

It was then that Dr. Marchand, gray and grave, did a startling thing—a sob rose in his throat and he could not check its outburst.

"Pauline—my poor, little girl, did they never know? The fools—the fools!"

"I am too—old?"

The lines of decision tightened to firm wrinkles about the man's mouth.

"If you will marry me now, Pauline," he said, distinctly, "I will take you where the air will cure that cough of yours—West, dear, and I will stop at a great hospital—oh, little girl, oh, little girl, I myself will give you back the years you lost. It is a chance—a great chance—and sure!"

Miss Pauline had never seen a doctor act quite as did her physician. His eyes were red and he talked very fast, as if to himself, in words that were polysyllabic and formidable. But she could see that he was glad.

And he was taking her to a hospital—all just as she herself had planned. "I want to grow tall," she repeated softly. "Yes, I will go with you."

That night Miss Pauline sat in her little room, rocking feebly. "I feel that I am growing taller," she whispered to herself. "I am really very happy." And she forgot to stand up beside the craning to take her measurement—Rem A. Johnson in the Bohemian Magazine.

INVESTIGATE

THE MAYFLOWER QUARTZ & CHANNEL MINING COMPANY proposition today. What I have been telling you is either true or it isn't. Either Facts or Fairy Tales. I say that they are FACTS, and I have the proofs in my office---Maps, U.S. Geological Reports, Ore specimens from the different veins, and Photographs of the Mine and our twenty stamp Mill. Then talk with Honolulu men who have visited the property who will tell you that all you see in the Photographs is there and more. You owe it to yourself to Investigate this proposition from top to bottom, to look it through and through.

Supposing you let this Opportunity go by. When "MAYFLOWER" goes to $1.00 bid and sellers as scarce as hen's teeth, you will advise your friends that you could have bought it at 25 Cents and made a stack on it. You've probably retailed the same yarn about "Engels Copper." You did not accumulate that when going at a quarter per. Take my advice and don't slip up on this chance. BUY "MAYFLOWER" STOCK. BUY IT NOW! It's an investment, not a speculation. Mayflower is a sure proposition. Both the little fellow and the big fellow can make money on this deal. They get proportionate profits. Hurry up and connect with a block of this stock. The "MAYFLOWER" has no gamble frills on it. It's no dream, or rainbow painting. It's no crazy prospecting scheme, where you stick your money into the ground, and get nothing but a hole to look at. It's exactly what it purports to be—a real gold mine. Investigate, look into it. BUY "MAYFLOWER" STOCK. BUY IT NOW.

No product in the world compares with gold, in steadiness of demand and evenness of price. Silver, Copper, Iron, Zinc, Lead, and other metals go up and down. The products of Factory and Farm fluctuate with the seasons. But Gold Bullion commands one price the world over. Good times, hard times, all times the world takes all that is offered, at the high market price. We've a large bullion crop awaiting further development, and the starting up of our Mill. Dividends will then be in order. Do you want any of them made out to your order? If so, favor me with an early call, or a billet-doux with check enclosed. BUY "MAYFLOWER" STOCK. BUY IT NOW!

GOVERNOR WANTED RIGHT OF ARBITRARY REMOVAL

FORAKER SUGGESTED OFFICIAL BE HEARD

INTERESTING COMMENT OF SENATORS ON PROVISION OF PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO ORGANIC ACT—FRANCHISES AND PAYMENT OF TAX TO MUNICIPALITY

Governor Frear's statement before Senate Committee on Pacific Islands. (Continued from Thursday)

Governor Frear—Yes, I might make a correction there. Of course it makes a difference whether you include simply the territorial officials or the federal officials. I suppose you mean to exclude customs and internal revenue and postoffice officials.

The Chairman—I had no very intelligent idea in asking my question. I wanted to get at how the balance stood, how much there is in your favor as affecting the question of your receipts and disbursements.

Governor Frear—If you take all the postmasters and collectors of customs and internal-revenue collectors in the service of the Federal Government proper, the amount would of course exceed $100,000, but so far as territorial officials are concerned, I think it would not amount to more than $50,000, besides which the Federal Government appropriates now $30,000 every second year toward legislative expenses.

Removals From Office

The Chairman—Are there any further remarks that you want to make, Governor?

Governor Frear—I might call attention to section 6. The main purpose of that section is to permit the governor to remove officers without requiring the consent of the Senate. At present he is required to have the consent of the Senate for removals as well as for appointments. A requirement of the consent of the Senate to remove officers was inserted in view of conditions arising out of the overthrow of the monarchy, but I think it is no longer necessary. It is objectionable in principle and, as a matter of fact, it has created a good deal of trouble.

The Chairman—Do you think the governor should be allowed to remove from office arbitrarily without cause being shown?

Governor Frear—Well, I think so; but I am not particular upon that point. So far as I am concerned, I do not expect to have any difficulty. If any head of a department under me is not satisfactory, I expect him to leave without being removed.

The Chairman—I think in most of our States where the power of removal is given to the governor it is upon cause being shown. I know that is the case in my own State.

Governor Frear—I have no objection to that at all.

The Chairman—I had to remove in one or two instances, but I had to give the parties notice and give them a chance to be heard in answer to the charges that were preferred.

Governor Frear—Yes, I would have no objection to that, but the present provision is objectionable, because there is a period of two years between sessions of the senate, and it ought to be possible to remove an officer, if necessary, during that time without having to call a special session of the senate, at an expense of several thousand dollars.

I simply want to avoid the difficulty which would arise in not being able to remove a person during vacation. Governor Dole got into great difficulty that way. He was forced to appoint a number of persons who afterwards proved to be embezzlers or otherwise objectionable, and his hands were tied.

The Chairman—I believe you have touched upon every one of the sections unless it is section 8.

Governor Frear—The main object of section 8 is to disqualify a judge who has been of counsel in a case, the supreme court of Hawaii having held that that is not a disqualification. There are other minor changes. At the same time it gives the legislature authority to add other causes, so that if any others should be required it will not be necessary to go to Congress.

With the permission of the committee, I will file a more orderly and definite statement.

Franchise Bills

The Chairman—Governor, have you looked over these franchise bills sufficiently to have an opinion as to whether or not they should be favorably reported by this committee?

Governor Frear—I have not had time to examine them very carefully in all their details. If you desire it, I will prepare a statement on the subject and send it to the committee.

The Chairman—We shall be glad to have you do so.

STATEMENT BY WALTER F. FREAR, GOVERNOR OF HAWAII

Mr. Frear—I have carefully examined the above-mentioned bills and am of the opinion that they should be enacted by Congress with the amendment that has been made or proposed in committee. These are comparatively small communities, and electric light and power service will be of great benefit to them. The franchises are of no very great value. They are neither exclusive nor perpetual, and their exercise is carefully guarded by the provisions of the bill. It is fortunate that companies are willing to take the risk of putting in the necessary plant and supplying light and power.

STATEMENT OF GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN

The Chairman—Mr. McClellan, you have before you the bill (S. 7697) to ratify an act of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii authorizing the manufacture and distribution of electric light and power in the district of Lahaina, Territory of Hawaii, and the bill (S. 7698) to ratify and confirm an act of the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii authorizing the manufacture and distribution of electric light and power in the district of Wailuku, Territory of Hawaii.

Will you kindly explain those bills, the necessity for them, and give reasons why they should be reported favorably by this committee?

Mr. McClellan—Senate bill 7697 is an act to provide a plant for supplying electric light and power in the town of Lahaina in the island of Maui. This bill was passed by the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii and under the provisions of the organic act necessarily comes here for approval. The act was approved by Governor Carter, the then governor of the Territory.

The act states in detail what the regulations shall be for the placing of the wires on the streets. It provides that all of their location and regulation shall be under the authority of the officials who have charge of the streets and roads. It gives specific authority to those officials to add to and amend these rules regulating the placing of poles, wires, insulation, and so on.

Section 4 provides that these lines shall also be operated so as not to interfere with the use of the streets. Section 5 provides that they shall likewise be subject to the inspection of the officials of the board, and then provision is made for the placing of meters for measuring the power supplied.

In section 6 there is a provision—

"That power is hereby conferred upon the courts of appropriate jurisdiction at all times and upon the petition of any consumer of the company to hear and determine from time to time whether an existing rate or rates is or are unreasonable, and if a rate be unreasonable, to order the same to be decreased, and to enforce such orders by appropriate judgment or decree."

The original thought was that it might be well to fix maximum rates for this service, but when the committee of the House attempted to go into that matter they were utterly unable to arrive at any basis which they thought would be sufficiently large to enable a company to undertake the putting in of a plant and furnishing light and power on an assured basis of profit without making it so high that it would be a presumption against the consumer and so would in the end work against the interest of the consumer.

Therefore they thought best to leave it in this form so that any consumer would have an appeal to the local court. So this clause was put in to safeguard the question of rates.

The Chairman—That clause was put in in the National House of Representatives?

Mr. McClellan—In the House of Representatives. The other provisions are of detail, giving the company the right to acquire, hold, or take over such property as may be necessary and incidental to the proper conduct of its business.

Section 9 also gives this Lahaina company the power to borrow money and to issue bonds by mortgage.

The Chairman—For what length of time is this franchise granted?

Mr. McClellan—That is covered in a later section.

The Chairman—Oh, I see.

Mr. McClellan—Section 10 provides—

"That said company, its representatives, successors, and assigns, shall be responsible for any damages, either to person or property, resulting from any act of negligence on its part, which may occur by reason of the exercise of any of the privileges herein granted."

Section 11 provides that the charter may be forfeited for noncompliance with its terms upon action of the local authorities or by the attorney general of the Territory upon showing that the company is not furnishing adequate service or not complying with the conditions of its franchise.

Senator 12 is the answer to the main objection that Senator Clay raised to this bill. Senator Clay said, "You are issuing a franchise to a particular company"—which is true—"for the exclusive use of the privilege of furnishing light to this community." Section 12 provides that—

"It is hereby expressly provided that nothing herein contained shall be so construed as to grant the company an exclusive right to furnish, sell, or supply electric light and power."

So the Senator was absolutely mistaken in his idea as to the scope of the bill.

Then the next section provides that the company shall pay 1 per cent of the gross receipts of the company annually to the local government for this franchise.

Senator Warner—If any compensation at all is to be provided, is that considered as being an adequate compensation for a franchise?

Mr. McClellan—One per cent of gross receipts is equivalent to at least 8 per cent of net receipts, and is, I think, fully adequate. So far as this franchise is concerned, I would say that it is for a community of about 2500 people. A franchise to furnish electric light for a community of 2500 people, which is scattered over a very wide area, is so small that I would say it is the judgment of people in Honolulu that nothing but local interest would lead local capital to go into it at all. I do not believe you can get a dollar of capital from Honolulu even to go into this proposition. It is simply to enable the local people to have a company there carried by local capital to supply them light. As it is, they can not get this service and they can not secure the right for any company to supply it without this privilege being granted by Congress.

The Chairman—How far is Lahaina from Honolulu?

Mr. McClellan—About 60 miles.

Governor Frear—It is 76 miles.

Mr. McClellan—It is on the island of Maui.

The Chairman—This will be an isolated plant then? It has no relation to Honolulu?

Mr. McClellan—Absolutely none. So far as I am personally concerned, I am simply speaking on behalf of the Delegate. That company have no them, because the thing is not worth attorney here at all to represent enough to them to justify them in employing an attorney here.

Senator Warner—Lahaina is a town of 2500 people?

Mr. McClellan—A little town of 2500 people. As a matter of fact, I think they should have a franchise there without paying anything in a small community like this, because it can not be a very profitable proposition, as there are not enough people there.

The Chairman—Who gets the 1 per cent, the municipality?

Mr. McClellan—The Superintendent of Public Works. It goes to the Territory.

The Chairman—It ought to be paid to the municipality, I should think, if it is paid to anybody.

Senator Warner—That is what I think.

The Chairman—All over our part of the country we impose taxes, but they go to the benefit of the locality rather than to the State.

Senator Milton—I think the governor said that all revenue went to the General Government and then it was returned in certain directions.

The Chairman—It is all right as it is, perhaps. Mr. McClellan, this bill has in this form passed the House?

Mr. McClellan—It passed the House in this form, Senator.

The Chairman—And came to the Senate?

Mr. McClellan—Yes.

The Chairman—And this committee was polled, and on a poll reported favorably on the bill?

Mr. McClellan—Yes.

The Chairman—Then when it came up in the Senate some objections were raised by Senator Clay, which you have just been pointing out were not well taken?

Mr. McClellan—Yes.

The Chairman—No one seemed to be familiar enough with the bill at the moment to explain it satisfactorily.

Mr. McClellan—Senator Clay was under the impression that this was a franchise for thirty-five years. In answer to your question, Mr. Chairman, I will state that there is no term at all provided in the bill; The last section provides—

"That Congress, or the legislature of the Territory of Hawaii with the approval of Congress, may at any time alter, amend, or repeal said act."

That is the form of all the franchises which have been given by Congress since the organic act has required an indorsement by Congress of local franchises. So there is no term, and there is absolutely no monopoly in this bill and in the Wailuku bill. They are privileges for small communities which have no means of securing electric light, and the representations made to the legislature were that the only means of getting any company to undertake the matter was to have a franchise of this sort passed. Therefore the local legislature was satisfied and passed both measures.

Now, I want to call attention, in connection with Senator Clay's objection, to the fact that one of these bills—

The Chairman—Before you leave that, we have embodied here the bill passed by the legislature of Hawaii as amended by the House. What is there here to indicate what has been added to what the legislature of Hawaii provided?

Mr. McClellan—I can briefly outline the changes which were made in the House of Representatives in the bill as it was passed by the legislature. In the first place, there were a number of pro forma amendments. The bill as it passed the legislature gave the regulation of the affairs in the streets to the superintendent of public works of the Territory. In the interim between the passage of the bill by the legislature and the action here county government had been established, and therefore it became necessary to change that phraseology in order to provide for the new officials.

Then the original act as passed by the legislature gave a term of thirty-five years. That was eliminated here in the House of Representatives and left simply with the power to repeal at any time.

Then the House of Representatives eliminated the fixed rates which had been determined by the legislature and instead inserted this provision to have the rate subject to regulation by the courts.

Senator Warner—That is, they fixed a rate and it may be changed by the court.

Mr. McClellan—No; there is no rate fixed. That was eliminated. There is a minimum rate.

Senator Warner—What section is that?

DOLLAR FOR 200 CHILDREN.

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 1.—John T. Geltmacher, a Chicago Board of Trade operator, today gave a savings bank account with one dollar credited to each of 200 poor children, in order to give them an object lesson in the value of saving. The gifts came in connection with the annual dinner provided ten years ago by the will of his deceased father.
