SAVINGS OF A MANIAO

As Joaquin Miller Now Views the Rebellion and Hawaii Nei.

It is said that Tennyson asked an American, who had begged to be presented, how the first sight of Niagara Falls had impressed him; that the American answered that it was no longer the fashion to visit Niagara, and so he had never been there.

It is further stated that this same American instantly had a chance to measure the length and latitude of Tennyson's back.

We Californians cannot afford to ignore our conservatory of flowers and our panorama of rainbows out there in the warm, sapphire waters, even if we want to, without being despised for doing it, as was that vulgar American.

And now as to the wars. Will these unwarlike natives and the belligerent sons of missionaries make another San Domingo of the far, fair islands? Let us look at their late great civil war. Two voluminous histories have already appeared, published by two little comic newspapers there—official organs, both of them. My own history is as yet unpublished; but I fought and led all through that great and gory war of glory, and so when it does appear please read it.

Captain Kidd led the infantry in the first hot day's fight. It was the hottest of all the five-days war; for the mercury rose far above par. King led the infantry. I led the horse. He was a borrowed horse and I had to lead him—in places where the mosquitoes were thickest. The dead of this day's fighting were never counted. We had no wounded. The enemy was five miles away up a mountain; but still we charged the enemy and the battle raged till we all went into the restaurant close by, where the landlord had to charge us.

The second day's fight was led by Captain Smith. This time we got much nearer to the fearful cannibal foe—three miles being my estimate. The only reason why we did not utterly destroy the enemy was, we did not have three-mile guns, for we fired at him and he at us from morn to dewy eve. No wounded on either side, the dead not estimated.

On the third day the battle was resumed as soon as we could get back to the battle-ground after a bivouac at the hotel and a breakfast on ham and eggs, at about the same range and with the same fury.

As night descended on the two contending armies at about the same hour some cattle passed within range of our park of artillery and three milch cows fell on the field. When we came back from town to resume the fight next morning we found that the enemy had descended from the lava caves and skinned and roasted and were literally devouring these cows. General Wilcox, commanding the non-office-holding forces, requested to not be disturbed at his breakfast. The President, after consulting with his Cabinet, which he always carried with him, as well as a silk parasol and a saber, said it would have a good effect abroad and so ordered that the enemy should not be disturbed at breakfast. We slept on our arms in a banana grove till it was cool enough to go back to town.

But the great fifth and final day of this fearful civil war now upon us, and a bloody day it was, as you shall see. The sharpshooters, all young men of the first office-holder families and well up in the Greek roots, had found the enemy entrenched on a mountain above the eastern gate of the city and the united forces of the Hawaiian army moved forth at dawn to dislodge or destroy him.

Residing in Honolulu

FRIDAY, SEPT. 27, 1895.

OUR FINANCES.

The Hawaiian Consul in Chicago, stated some times ago to an interviewer, that Hawaii under the present Government was out of debt. The man at the same time had a great deal to say about a filibustering conspiracy, which he had unearthed. If there is as much truth in his statement relating to the filibusterers, as to his reference to the financial status of Hawaii, the Government can rest easy, and the Consul should be decorated with the second-class liar medal of the Republic.

If the Hawaiian Government was an ordinary business house, its creditors would have good reason to feel alarmed, and the services of the sheriff would soon be called on to make an attachment. We do not see so many financial statements from the minister as we used to. He is probably tired of manufacturing them, or the job has perhaps become too difficult, and the figures too tangled.

We have, for our own pleasure, and in the interest of the community, studied these statements very thoroughly, and we have also made sufficient discreet enquiries among members of the "inner circle," who occasionally open their mouths injudiciously or otherwise.

The result is not pleasant to behold. Leaving all reference to our bonded debt alone, we have arrived at the conclusion that the treasury to-day, if it paid its obligations, the unsecured floating debt would be exactly $27,000 short. On the first of October, the minister will have to pay out about $70,000 in salaries, etc. Besides this, we are informed the treasury owes about $100,000 due as interest on the bonded debt. Not on the English loan; that is always paid promptly even if Banker Damon has to advance the money to Minister Damon, but the amount is claimed to be due on unpaid coupons which the owners, to accommodate the Government, have agreed to hold over.

These figures show that the Government, if it settled up its debts on open account would, on the first of next month, exhaust the whole treasury balance, and be about $197,000 short. A fine showing indeed for our wealthy, virtuous, and immaculate Republic.

A few weeks ago the Minister of Finance called for tenders for the further issue of Treasury notes. No response was made. But we are nevertheless informed that the Government has got all it wants, and does not desire to issue further notes at present. Mr. P. C. Jones, it is commonly reported, came to the rescue, and advanced the Government the money which it sought to obtain by the sale of notes on open account. Such an advance does not appear in the financial statements, and for that reason it is virtually impossible for the taxpayers to arrive at the exact financial standing of the treasury. That Mr. Jones should help the Government out of its pilikia, simply as a Christian act, goes without saying. Nobody would believe that the heavy weight financier would charge a little "commish" on his transaction. But is it dignified for the Government to be dependent on a private American—or ex-American—citizen?

What a howl the Reform Party used to raise when in the days of the monarchy, Claus Spreckels advanced money on open account to Mr. Gibson's and other Cabinets? Does Mr. Thurston remember when in the session of 1886, Mr. Dare, then Attorney-General, stated that he was here by the invitation of the King, that he (Thurston), in his usual polite and urbane manner, asked, "What King? Kalakaua or Spreckels?" May we now ask Mr. Thurston, if it is less humiliating and deplorable for the Hawaiian Government to be under King (or President we should say) Jones than it then was to be under the large financial thumb of Spreckels? The only difference is that then the Reform Party were the "outs," now they are the "ins;" but that is a most important difference — to them.

The finances of the Government ought at all times to be on such a basis that an important investigation by taxpayers of any nationality, and political opinions can be made without warning, and the result of such an investigation should be such as would satisfy the creditors and partners of any private business. We hope that the treasury is in such a condition, but we doubt it.

TOPICS OF THE DAY.

The "five days" theory of the Board of Health's medicine men is exploded. The people of the other islands are to be congratulated on their refusal to bow down to the dictum of Mr. Smith's medical advisers.

The docking of the Australia at San Francisco without quarantine seems to indicate that the port physician there is as amenable to influence and to make mistakes as his colleague is in Honolulu. The Mayor of San Francisco, however, severely rebuked Dr. Chalmers. We have not heard about Dr. Day being censured except by public opinion here.

We take very little stock in the quarantine regulations of the United States, or at least of California. A quarantine officer who places sailing vessels from Honolulu in quarantine after a three-weeks' voyage, and allows a steamer from Honolulu to enter the harbor without quarantine after a six-days' voyage, is competent to become a member of the Hawaiian Board of Health.

The Advertiser anticipates that it will be many days before there will be peace among the communities on the other islands, among whom ill-feeling and hostilities have been created during the cholera epidemic. Our contemporary doesn't know the communities referred to. They bark at each other, but they never bite. Why, life wouldn't be worth living if an occasion did not arise frequently for the calling of meetings, passing of resolutions, and a general indulgence in the feeling that "We, the people of——." The petty jealousy and every-day bickering among the country districts are as old as the country itself. In the old days, before the missionaries arrived, Kohala used to sail into Hilo with spears and clubs, and Kau occasionally took a trip to Iao on Maui, and even to Kauai. Civilization has abandoned the spears and clubs, and resolutions and some wild swearing take their place. The modern mode of warfare is far more harmless, except when cholera is around.

Writes the Star: "The matter of either increasing the revenue or materially reducing the expense of the Government may demand the attention of the Council of State before the Legislature convenes in February next." May we remind the Star—and others—that the powers of the Council of State are constitutionally confined to appropriating public monies between sessions of the Legislature in the emergencies of war, invasion, rebellion, or pestilence arising; to advising, in conjunction with the Cabinet, the President to grant reprieves, pardons, and commutations of sentences; and to advise the President when he calls on them in all matters for the good of the State. How either of these provisions allows the Council of State to either increase the revenue or decrease the expenditure we fail to see.

A number of people have called on us and expressed their curiosity to learn what Joaquin Miller did write in the Call to deserve the severe rebuke of the Advertiser, and to suffer a partial and "selected" publication by that paper. To satisfy our readers we have decided to publish his article in full. At the same time we wish to state that we have no sympathy for the poet of the Sierras, and that we consider his attempt at being funny as the ravings and romancings of a maniac, but as our friends want to read it they shall have their wish.

Messrs. A. Loebenstein and H. C. Austin, of Hilo, dispute the Star's report of Mr. W. C. Wilder's remarks on affairs in Hilo at the beginning of the cholera scare. They assert that they "were no pyrotechnics or bloody shirts. The community stood united. And while we would have accorded to Mr. Wilder's views and explanations the attention and deference which is due them, his absence from any of our meetings, renders that loss a matter of regret." It is now in order for the Star to correct its report, or for Mr. Wilder to show how he failed to get the views of Messrs. Loebenstein and Austin. Otherwise—

Some days ago we asked the Board of Health to resign, because they were tired, or ought to be. Later we asked them to go slow in removing restrictions and disbanding the Sanitary Committee and its corps of sub-inspectors. We also upheld the people of the other islands in their opposition to the effectiveness of a five day quarantine in destroying our dread foe. None of our suggestions were accepted probably by the direction of the "three wise men of the east" who furnish medical advice, and factious opposition to business plans gratis, to the Board of Health. Now the Advertiser comes out with a column to show how foolish the other islands were to refuse people after a five days' quarantine and how brave Honolulu ladies were to receive the "three wise men" and their consenting colleagues at their tables without any quarantine at all. It calls to its aid "sixty-five millions of keen witted people." And scarcely is the ink dry on the paper when after eight full days a fresh case breaks out. Did we not do right in advocating "making haste slowly." Let us go back to strict quarantine. Let us stamp out the disease finally. Let us take every measure necessary, or even thought to be so, to finally end the business. If the government has not enough money let it pay in promissory notes. The emergency is too serious for half measures. And let us have a new Board of Health of business men. The Attorney-General can and will help in his capacity of head of the Police Department. But let us get to business and drop fads, theories, and opinions. Practical work is what is wanted.

W. R. Castle—our only red-headed William—has not yet found time from his private business in Massachusetts to call on Secretary Olney or even go out to Gray Gables to ask President Cleveland to a fishing excursion with the usual accompaniments. So Hastings has still to talk Hawaiian Republic at the State Department. The six months' absence of William are drawing to a close but his whiskers have not yet waved in the wind of the White House. Helas!

The Bulletin now accuses the government's hired spies of fomenting the late insurrection. It says "There is not the least doubt that their machinations as described had a great deal to do with the adhesion of more than one prominent oppositionist to the mad scheme of force." No doubt the Bulletin knows all about it. But we ask the government now to forgive the remainder of those who were misled. Pardon them, even if only conditionally.

Prof. M. M. Scott doesn't want earth closets at the High School until the Board of Health has instituted a removal system. He is right. An earth closet system without removal would be worse infinitely—than our present style of cess-pools. As things are arranged at the proposed High School at present, convenience is given to the requirements of over two thousand pupils—let alone the needs of the two hundred as expected, or four hundred which may in the future be accommodated.

Locally the Bulletin prints the following:

"Frank Godfrey took the oath of allegiance to the Hawaiian Government, and under the ruling of Secretary Gresham in P. C. Jones's case, has no standing as an American citizen."

This is not true. Special letters of denization were issued to him expressly reserving his alliance to his native land. He took no "oath of allegiance" to the Hawaiian Republic. He did, no doubt, swear to uphold the constitution and laws of the Republic while residing here, and not to assist in restoring monarchical government. He has forfeited no right as an American citizen.

Minister Damon has now funds to put up a new set of wash houses for the Government. Have we come to this that any project must be approved outside of Government circles before funds can be raised for it? Is our credit so low that funds must be raised for each individual object?

The wash houses will be removed to Iwilei. The Independent's advice is usually taken. When it isn't, the results usually show disaster. But the proposed site is still too near town. Do the thing once for all. Let the site be chosen so that the overflow of drainage will at once go out to the ocean without too great a quantity of piping being necessary. The idea of having living rooms above the washrooms is, however, preposterous in a sanitary sense. Wash houses are wash houses, not boarding academies. Contagion from any living room would infect all clothing washed there.

Timely Topics.

Honolulu, Sept. 20, 1895.

All over the world at present questions of hygiene are the main issues of the day. While the learned scientists of Europe are devoting their time and skill to find remedies which can destroy the disease breeding germs, the diseases go on and cholera, diptheria and typhoid ravage cities and countries.

Whenever a disease becomes epidemic it is because the germ found conditions which suited it and in which it felt at home and ready for business. The sanitary conditions of the town and of the home becomes of vital importance. Honolulu is having a taste of a cholera epidemic and it behooves everybody to do his best in placing every home in the best sanitary condition possible.

When the general house-cleaning which will take place next Monday is over, many housekeepers will find some household furniture which needs renewal and others missing both as to utility and convenience.

We call attention to-day to our Oil Stoves. The "Dietz" Stove which we carry in stock has gained a great reputation everywhere. The one we especially recommend is the most complete oil stove ever offered in the market. It is perfectly safe for the user of it, and it will answer all purposes in a well regulated household. Five quarts of oil is sufficient to burn ten to twelve hours. In ten minutes a half gallon water can be boiled. It will fry and boil, bake or broil at the same time. You can boil potatoes and bake biscuit at the same time. In ten minutes you can broil a steak to perfection, and in an hour and a half you can roast an eight-pound turkey. Once tried the "Dietz" Oil Stove will be found the very thing for the housekeeper, and the price brings it within the reach of everybody.

The Water Coolers which we have on hand are the very things for restaurants, saloons, schools and stores. After the water is boiled fill the cooler with it, and even without ice, it will keep a pleasant temperature. Large families will find these highly ornamental coolers of great advantage and a great saving in regard to ice.

What, however, is more useful than a Monarch Bicycle. In San Francisco and other places mail and paper carriers, business men and professional men use the Monarch, and have within the diamond arranged a leather bag, very easily fixed, which will contain paper, document, lunches and clothing and do service as the saddle bags do to the horseman. The Monarch is the most solid and best appointed wheel introduced here, and can be purchased on the installment plan.

L. B. Kerr will receive a large invoice of goods in the Miowara. In the meantime the ladies will find an excellent opportunity to lay in a stock of White Cotton Ducks, New Gingham and Flannelettes at bed-rock prices.

To close them out Shirt Waists, formerly selling at $1.50 each, have been reduced to $1; and Pith Hats, which were selling at $2, from this on will be sold at $1 each. Call early before the supply is exhausted. A. Barnes, New Republic Building, King street.

The Board of Health did not sell fifteen barrels of the lime lent to it for sanitary purposes by E. B. Thomas, to the contractor for the building of the floor of the fish-market. The Board lent it to him, which according to the principles of the members is vastly different to selling it.

Secretary Scott of the Board of Education, publishes a notice in the journals connected with his political creed, to the effect that a "normal class" will be formed at the new High School next week. Does Mr. Scott think that the teaching material is confined to the readers of the "official papers"?

The reports in regard to the Hawaiian horses on the Sacramento track have not been substantiated. It was said that Autonomy won a race, and that Amario came in as the ninth in another. The truth is that the Hawaiian horses, although, entered at Sacramento, were not supposed to make any special showing. They were supposed to be acclimatized and then made fit to stretch out at the Bay District races.

In Re Godfrey

The Bulletin, in its usual slipshod manner of reporting, states last evening that Frank Godfrey was around yesterday and, with the exception of a black eye, showed no signs of the rough usage to which he recently has been subjected. Dr. McLennan, the physician of Mr. Godfrey, told us to-day that his patient has been confined to bed since the assault was committed on him, and that probably ten days yet will go by before he will be able to be around. In this connection it may be proper to state that while the Marshal, according to the "Tiser," is gathering evidence, neither he nor any of his detectives (!) have been around and investigated Mr. Godfrey. Perhaps that style is something new, and is to be inaugurated here by Mr. Brown.

False Alarm.

When the dreaded fire-bell rang this afternoon the nerves of the already over-strung community very nearly snapped. The alarm was caused by the burning of a mattress next to the cholera infected house on Maunakea street, and proved to be of no importance. The department responded promptly and the praises of the community are certainly due to the blue boys.

Too much cannot be said of these brave, brave young sharpshooters. They were nearly all white. If there was any one among them of mixed blood he was at least a prince in his own right, and all so young, so young! and all so learned, so learned! They are infantry and all spoke either Greek or Kanaka. Some of them had their nurses with them. These pretty little native nurses carried their little bottles or rolled them along in little baby carts while the pretty little sharpshooters prattled and played with their Greek roots as they strode defiantly to the deadly front. Infantry in arms!

The Portuguese troops were barefooted, but the ladies of Honolulu stood by the gate as they passed out to battle and handed each man a pair of their secondbest shoes. These brave men tied the shoes together by the strings and swung them on their guns. General Soper, commander-in-chief of all the officeholders' armies of the twelve Hawaiian Islands, drew his sword, and halting the Portuguese soldiers at the point of his sword commanded them to put on their shoes. The brave men hesitated—almost revolted, but at last they reluctantly obeyed. That sword was mightier than the men. However, they did not march as well after that. At least, when in sight of the enemy they all sat flat down in the road and began taking off their shoes. The general again drew that terrible sword, and as he did so he roared out: "What in hell are you taking off your shoes for?"

"What for in hell take off shoes? If no take off shoes how hell can run?" roared the Portuguese captain in return.

At this the President, who also marched barefooted to the scene of conflict—the better to encourage his men and not at all to imitate Washington at Valley Forge, or to be able to go to town the faster, as his enemies have said—now whispered in the ear of his Attorney-General.

"The point is well taken," answered the astute Attorney-General. "It is a legal question, and the law is with the lame soldiers."

So they all marched along barefooted till within the usual three miles of our mutual enemies. And the first and, let us thankfully say, the last blood of this fratricidal war was shed. The captain of the brave German troops was now suddenly and without warning shot low down on the bottom of his back; but whether he did it in attempting to draw his pistol or replace it in the scabbard historians differ. When we laid him on his face to dress the wound this noble soldier shed scarce a tear. Then the President came up, leaning on the arm of his favorite Cabinet Minister, both with swords in their right hands and beautiful little pink Parisian parasols in their left. When the President saw how the man was wounded he promoted him on the spot.

The enemy on the distant mountain, suspecting that some one of the brave little sharpshooters might have got lost in the brush, and that we were grouped together in a Cabinet meeting to determine what was best to do, suddenly ceased firing and hoisted the poi flag. Immediately the President called a Cabinet meeting to decide what course of action would have the best influence abroad. Of course, he didn't care about the President of the United States, but the Emperor of Germany, one of whose brave subjects lay there in his own gore, and "our cousin," to put it in diplomatic language, the Empress of India, and also the Czar of all the Russias—these must be awed! The Cabinet decided that it must stand on its dignity. It accordingly stood, the Greek root infantry formed in a hollow square around the nurse maids, bottles and baby carriages as the fearful half black and quarter-black and freckled and red-headed non-office holders approached, having left their rifles leaning against the rocks on the mountain side.
