STREET CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIRS.

There is skill in roadmaking as in other work, and the more skill that is applied to road construction the better and cheaper it is for the community. Roads properly built cost as little as a rule, in the first instance, as those that are built without either knowledge or system; they last far longer, and cost infinitely less for repairs. The roads in and around Honolulu are badly constructed; they are seldom in decent order, and they are expensive to keep in repair. In short, judging by their condition and what they might be, it is not too much to say that they cost three times as much as they should do. This may be a severe criticism, but anyone who has had experience in these matters will recognize its justice.

It is quite true that this city has not been planned with an eye to convenience of travel or facilities for road construction, but that is no reason why a faulty plan should be followed by careless and unskilled execution. There is no good reason why the principal streets of the city and the leading drives out of it should not be as well constructed and as thoroughly drained as the best thoroughfares and drives anywhere else. There has been enough money expended upon them to secure this result, but it is entirely wanting. The streets and roads are "flat as a pancake" where there does not happen to be a hollow in the center. The roadbeds are, therefore, drainage channels in wet weather, and deep ruts are hollowed out by storm currents, to be roughly filled up with sand and boulders, it may be after breaking numberless carriage springs, and in the next rain these repairs simply divert the torrent into other parts of the road to scoop out fresh gutters for itself.

This is street and road construction and repairs in and around Honolulu. It is a very wasteful and an exceedingly unsatisfactory system. It would be just as easy, the grade being once established, to make a roadbed that would drain off the water as it falls, and from the roof catchment area as it touches the street, by side drains or gutters, leaving the crown and sides of the road clean and hard, and rather the better for a good scouring shower. But this requires skill and conscientious work. It would also save labor and expense by minimizing the cost of repairs.

As these are desirable things in themselves we fail to see why they have heretofore been dispensed with. Honolulu is more especially a place where visitors should receive a good impression at first sight. It is situated in mid-ocean, and is so isolated that it can only be compared with itself. Melbourne can be compared with Sydney and Sydney with Auckland, very much to the advantage of Auckland in the matter of streets and thoroughfares; while San Francisco can be compared with Chicago, Philadelphia or New York, greatly to its advantage also in the matter of cable roads; but Honolulu stands alone, and is without any compensating advantage for its execrable streets and dilapidated drives.

As we have said, there is no excuse for all this, because enough money has been spent to make our thoroughfares and drives as perfect as need be. Moreover, it should cost but little to keep them in good condition. The sun is a great roadmaster. It is impossible for a roadbed to rot here as in cold, moist climates. The solar heat and wind dry up the surface of our streets and drives in a short time, rendering the roadmen's work comparatively easy. The damage is done during the short wet spells, but this would not happen if the roads were properly constructed and cared for as they should be.

This question is closely allied to the sanitation of the city. Were the thoroughfares properly built and their surface drainage perfect a very long step would be taken in that direction. It is perhaps too much to expect a thorough system of street construction and repairs without local government, but certainly a great deal more might be accomplished with existing appliances and means intelligently directed.

SMALL FARM SETTLEMENTS.

The policy of cutting up large holdings into small farms with the view of promoting immigration and settlement, which the ADVERTISER and its contemporaries have advocated of late, has commended itself in many quarters. Just now there is a scarcity of available land, although the project of opening Honouliuli and Kahuka ranches to colonization purposes, with which Mr. B. F. Dillingham is identified, gives promise of a radical change in the land system of this island before long.

And now we find Mr. W. H. Cornwell of East Maui announcing his intention of dividing about 1,400 acres of the Pulehuni tract into farms of from eighty to one hundred acres and upwards. Mr. W. D. Monsarrat, the surveyor, is now preparing a map of the land showing the subdivisions. This map will be ready for inspection in about ten days at Mr. J. E. Wiseman's. The land in question is the property of Mr. Henry Cornwell. It lies at the foot of Haleakala, Maui, and runs from the Wailuku boundary to the sea at Maalaea Bay, and adjoins the cane fields of the Hawaiian Commercial Company. It is therefore one of the best locations on the island of Maui for an agricultural settlement. The soil being rich and of fine quality success is certain to men who will work. Several applications have already been made to Mr. Cornwell for farm lots on his property, and he has determined to make a trial with a desirable part of the bottom land to satisfy this demand. If the Portuguese and others who say they want land for settlement are in earnest, they will avail themselves of this opportunity.

Supreme Court.

TUESDAY, September 29th.

In the matter of proof of the will of Jean Marie Daigle, late of Honolulu, deceased. Mons. Henri Feer, Consul and Commissioner for France, appeared as petitioner for probate of the will, William A. Whiting acting as his attorney. Mrs. Jacinta M. Daigle, the widow, was present in Court, represented by Kinney & Peterson, as contestant of the will.

Proof of death of the deceased was had and the testimony of J. E. Wiseman and J. H. Reist, as attesting witnesses, taken before His Honor the Chief Justice. During the progress of the proceedings Mons. Feer, French Commissioner, renounced his appointment as executor of the will and nominated Hon. W. C. Parke to be administrator with the will annexed. As grounds for contesting, Mr. Kinney offered as follows: 1st.—That the person Panawwa (former wife) had subsequent to the will been divorced from the testator, and the intent to devise one-third of all the property to the widow during her natural life should not affect the standing of the present widow. 2d.—That contestant could offer testimony tending to show that after said divorce with Panawwa the testator during his last illness requested the custodian of the will to destroy it as being of no further use, but that the custodian declined to carry out said request.

Mons. Feer asked to be understood that he had no personal feeling in the matter one way or the other, and suggested that the laws of France would not permit of his being sworn as a witness. The Court reserved for consideration the point as to whether it is competent for a third party, under the circumstances of the case, to testify what had been the instructions given by testator regarding the revocation of the will. Hon. W. C. Parke was appointed temporary administrator of the estate under $2,000 bonds.

In the matter of the will of the late Thomas Cummins, of Waimanalo, Oahu, deceased. The argument of counsel was heard on motion filed to revoke will on the ground that the orders of Court regarding citations to the heirs had not been complied with. C. W. Ashford appeared for Thomas Cummins, Cecil Brown for A. J. Cartwright, the executor. The Chief Justice overruled the motion and suggested that no irregularity in the former proceedings had been made and there was absence of fraud.

Mrs. Charles K. Stillman vs. the Executors of the will of James Woods, deceased. A decision was filed in favor of the plaintiff for money claimed.

Police Court.

BEFORE POLICE JUSTICE BICKERTON.

TUESDAY, September 29th.

John Riley, Keohi and Umi forfeited bail of $5 each for drunkenness.

Geo. Vogt, for the same offense, was remanded until the 30th.

Kaahannui, for attempting to rescue Keoki from custody of a police officer, was found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment at hard labor for forty-eight hours, and fined $15.

Kawai, for assault and battery on Iopa, was sent over the reef for two days and ordered to pay $3 costs.

The case against R. Weissman for embezzlement was discontinued.

The Hon. C. B. Bishop will be a passenger by the Alameda to-morrow for the Coast.

Limitation of Yellow Fever.

[Medical Exchange.]

The limitation of yellow fever to restricted areas is one of the characteristics of this disease, even when epidemic, and it takes some curious phases. The specific gravity of the poison is great, and it clings to surfaces. "Frequently its rate of progress may be mathematically defined," says Dr. F. W. Kelly, "so many feet per day independent of any recognized influence, except a perpendicular obstacle." In Mobile a board fence stopped its progress, and a bluff bank held it at bay for weeks in Memphis. Hence the value of removal and the sanitary line when this disease appears.

Alarmed Hawaiians.

[Chicago Times.]

Hawaiians are becoming alarmed at the rapid change taking place in the population of the islands. During the month of June there arrived at Honolulu 144 white persons, three Hawaiians, 524 Asiatics, and there departed during the same time 402 whites and only 215 Asiatics, showing a total change in favor of the Chinese of 467 persons. By the census of 1884 there were 18,055 Chinese on the island, which is known to have since increased 11 per cent., while during the year the English-speaking race has fallen off about 8 per cent.

Pine Needles for Stuffing Cushions.

[Chicago Herald.]

A new industry in the southern forests is the utilization of the needles of the long-leaved pine—Pinus palustris. The leaves are soaked in a bath to remove the glazing, then "crinkled" for stuffing cushions and other upholstering purposes. They are especially valuable on shipboard and other places where furniture is in danger of becoming infested with insects. The turpentine which remains in the leaves makes a most inhospitable abode for these annoying insects.

GRANT IN WASHINGTON.

The Cynosure of Curious Eyes—Sauntering Down the Avenue Alone.

Gen. Grant was the most conspicuous public man who ever lived in Washington. He was known to every man, woman and child in the District before his name was before the people for the presidency. While general of the army his headquarters were at the corner of Seventeenth and F streets. He used to walk to and from morning and evening along with the procession of clerks and with nothing but his well-worn military cloak in winter and the familiar figure in summer, the cigar always to distinguish him from the crowd. He was usually absorbed in himself, and walked mechanically, though when going to work very rapidly.

While president he was the same sort of man. He loved good horses dearly, and sometimes drove a four-in-hand drag, but he usually walked or took a street car. In either case he was always the cynosure of many curious eyes. He had evidently become accustomed to this and paid no attention to it as long as people kept out of his way or did not force themselves upon his personal notice. When they did he was annoyed and would turn abruptly upon his heel to escape. He always acted on the street like any other private citizen who wanted to be let alone. This was so evident that men, big and little, respected it, and the president of the United States could be seen sauntering down the crowded avenue alone.

He was known to have walked from the capitol to the White House on a pleasant day, when the whole city was out without suffering a single interruption. Yet if he saw men raise their hats to him he never failed to return the salute. During such a walk nearly every day would stare and turn and stare again at him as he passed. He seemed to walk among crowds to be alone. Of late years he had apparently shaken off much of his taciturnity and when he visited Washington could be seen about the Willard lobby, chatting with friends and listening and laughing at their stories, and telling stories of his own in return. He mistrusted those who wanted to make a show of him, but patiently suffered the tortures of boredom at the greatest receptions ever given at the White House. When he took a notion to attend a dinner party he went, without regard to the customary etiquette of the White House, which prohibits the president from indulging in such things.

His nearest personal friends attribute all his political and financial misfortunes to his obliging disposition and his blind confidence in human nature. He was very fond of Washington, and said he always felt that he was at home when he got here. It was to his encouragement that Washington owes her new condition of things. Shepherding was but the instrument to carry out the extensive system of improvements which have made the national capital the finest city in the world.

After Landing Her Prize.

What nonsense! It is for novelists, or anybody else, to describe "the American girl" as though she were a distinct, invariable person. There were hundreds of American girls at this ball, very bright and lovely in the aggregate, but no two alike in body or mind. The similarity began and ended with their current usages of deportment. The individuality was far more notable. Frivolous? Generally. Sluggish? Frequently. Vulgar? Rarely. Beautiful? Yes, to a remarkable degree. "Comical"? Very often, indeed. For instance, the way they look in the face of one belle struck me as pitiful. She sat so pensively distraught, so sweetly weak, that I asked a mutual friend what was the matter with her. "She has just become affianced," was the reply. "And is that so exhausting," I inquired. "Yes, under some circumstances," explained my expert informant. "You see, she is not rich, and it was essential that she should get a wealthy husband. The right man fell in her way six months ago. Now you are a fisherman, I believe; you appreciate the mental and physical strain incident to landing a twenty-pound fish with twenty-ounce tackle, and if you will try to imagine the excitement—the doubts, fears, hopes and other emotions—of six minutes of fishing for a valued salmon prolonged into six months of delicate angling for a millionaire, then you can possibly appreciate the collapse of this girl after landing her prize. She has come to the branch to recuperate."

He Didn't Want 'Em.

The Springfield Republican records the following incident as happening at West field: "While the members of a professional baseball team who recently visited the town were cooling their heels in the cribstone in front of the Wilmarth hotel after supper an honest old farmer happened along, and seeing the lot of sun-burned young men, stopped and asked if any of them wanted a few days job laying out 'What do you pay?' in a field one of the amused ball tossers. 'One dollar and a half a day and board,' said the honest yoman. 'Good we get a good deal more than that playing ball an hour or two a day.' 'What air ye ball players?' 'Well, I wouldn't give a peck of nibble pariters for the whole grist of ye, was the disgusted reply of the farmer as he moved on.'

Giving the Patient a Chance.

A student, who had been studying for several years in the medical department of the University of Texas, endeavored to pass the examination requisite to his obtaining his diploma. One of the professors gave him a hypothetical case, and then asked him: "What would you do in a case of that kind if the patient got worse?" "I would not do anything," replied the student, "I would just wait until next day, and see how he was coming on then. He might improve, you know. I'd give him a chance."

Renewing His Patent.

Lucian Hopson, of Texas, when the late war began, invented and had patented by the Confederate government a projectile which was used with some success in Charleston harbor against the Union vessels. After the war the patent of course was worthless. Recently Hopson filed an application for a patent for the same projectile and a few days ago a letter was sent to him from the interior department informing him that his application had been granted.

Type-Written Love Letters.

The long-headed lover writes all his amatory epistles with a type writer now. Not only does he save time and avoid difficulties which autograph manuscript involves, but by a judicious use of carbon paper and blanks where proper names occur, he can make four or five girls happy by a single struggle with the machine.

The Coming King.

Many manufacturers declare that paper is the coming king that is destined in a great measure to drive wood and iron to a very great extent out of general use.

So large a colony of Japanese reside in Yokohama that a Buddhist temple is to be erected there. The decorations and furniture will be sent from Japan.
