TEMPTED.

[Andrew Hedbrook in the Atlantic for July.] Yes, I know what you say; Since it cannot be soul to soul, Be it flesh to flesh, as it may;

Shall a man betray the past For all earth gives? "But the past is dead?" At last It is all that lives.

But is earth the whole?

Which were the nobler goal-To snatch at the moment's bliss, Or to swear I will keep my soul Clean for her kiss?

Chasing the Pipe-Line Scraper. [Olean (N. Y.) Cor. New York Sun.] One of the many odd callings which the production and pipe-line transportation of petroleum have made necessary, is one known as chasing the scraper." Crude petroleum is run from the oil the refineries at the scaboard, a distance of 300 miles, in iron pipes. It is forced over the high hills that intervene by powerful pumps. Much of the way it runs by its own gravity. These pipes are constantly becoming clogged by sediment and parattine. The clean them out an iron stem, two feet and a half long, to which are attached circular steel scrapers, fitting loosely in the pipes, is placed in the pipe at regular periods. This is forced along the line by the pressure of the oil behind it. It is necessary to keep track of this scraper, in order that its exact location may be constantly known, so that if it is stopped by any obstacle it may be readily discovered and the obstacle removed. The noise made by the scraper against the iron pipes as it moves along their interior would not be heard by an untrained ear, but certain employes of the Pipe Line company are able to follow it on its journey by the noise, and never lose its situation. These men are the scraper chasers. They are stationed in relays three or four miles apart along the line. One chaser will follow up and down mountains, across ravines, and through streams and swamps until he reaches the end of his section, when another man takes up the chase and follows it until his relief is reached, and so on until the course of the scraper is run. The work is one of hardship and danger, owing to the character of the country through which miles of the pipe line is laid. If a chaser by any mishap is thrown off the track of the scraper and it becomes clogged before he can recover its position in the pipe, the cutting of the pipe for long distances is frequently made necessary, that the missing object may be found-a work that is accompanied by much expense and labor.

> The Martin Koszta Affair. Inter Ocean.1

Martin Koszta had been one of the leaders in the Hungarian revolution against Austria in 1849. After the rebellion had been suspended he fled to Turkey for refuge. The Austrian gov-ernment demanded him from the Turks, but the porte refused to give him up, though, after some correspondence on the subject, it was agreed to exile him permanently to some foreign land. He chose to be sent to the United States, and | 27 Merchant St., came to New York and took out partial papers of naturalization during his stay. In 1854 Koszta returned to Turkey, contrary to his promises to the porte. At Smyrna he received a passport from the American consul and went ashore. The Austrian consul at Smyrna, hearing of the exile's presence there, and having no power to arrest him or shore, hired some bandits to throw him into the bay, where a boat picked him up and conveyed him on board an Austrian frigate. Capt. Duncan Ingraham, United States navy, was at anchor in the bay with the American sloop St. Louis, and he forthwith ordered his guns loaded and pointed at the rendered into the charge of the French consul. The Austrian captain yielded the point and gave up the prisoner. The affair gave rise to a long discussion between Baron Hulseman, the Austrian. minister at Washington, and William L. Marcy, the American secretary of state. Secretary Marcy got the best of the argument and Koszta was restored to the United States.

> Afghanistan Salutations. (Boston Transcript.)

The Afghanistan national salutations are not Mohametan, but are quite peculiar to themselves. When they pass each other on the road or in the street the superior says to the inferior: "May you never be tired!" To which he will reply: "May you ever be prosperous!" When the host receives his visitor he says, "May you ever come!" and the stranger responds, "May you ever continue!" i. e., in the en ovment of your hom-

ROADS AND BRIDGES.

There is a great deal of justice, no doubt, in the complaints from the other islands regarding roads and bridges. The great storms and floods of last season played havoc with country roads, and destroyed a great deal of valuable public property. This emergency could not have been foreseen, and was not provided for. The Legislature had made the largest appropriation ever passed in the Kingdom, but the loan was not negotiated in full, and as the revenue fell considerably below the estimate, these appropriations could not be carried out in their entirety, and it became a serious It is not a promissory note, as it contains question for the Government to even no direct promise to pay; 4 Carr. & P., partially meet this sudden demand upon | 324; 1 Esp., 426; Pars. talk went on. He doubted whether he RODGERS, M. D." could sit fairly. He had expressed an opinion many and many a time. Excused, and R. Stirling substituted.

W. C. Wilder thought he should be excused as he had expressed a decided opinion. Evidence might remove it. If the evidence in this case was the same Royal Highness Princess Poomaikelani, as in the first trial, his mind was made Governess of Hawaii. The luau was up. It would require new evidence to principally for old Hawaiians, and they remove his opinion. Under the circum- were present in large numbers and stances the Court excused Mr. Wilder, passed a pleasant afternoon. and Mr. T. M. Starkey was substituted.

J. G. Spencer said his situation was similar to that of Mr. Wilder. Excused, Frank Brown was called, but he did not appear. The Marshal stated that Mr. Brown had telephoned in from Waikiki to say he was sick. The Court said t was not usual to excuse on telephone messages, and it would be necessary to inquire further into the matter. A. Sheppard was called.

Godfrey Brown said he had read the evidence in the former trial and had residence, Waikiki, this afternoon from 3 drawn his own conclusion. He would to 5 o'clock use his judgment on the evidence to be submitted.

Mr. Hatch challenged E. O. White and Clerk Poor called A. Young, Jr. There being no further objections, the oath was administered to the following, who comprised the jury: L. Way, T. G. Thrum, A. Young, Jr., G. West, E. C. Rowe, C. H. Pfeiffer, G. T. McLean, T M. Starkey, A. Sheppard, R. Stirling, Godfrey Brown and E. C. Hobron.

His Excellency the Attorney General and Major Rosa appeared for the Crown, and Messrs. F. M. Hatch and A, C Smith for the defendant.

The first witness examined was Oliver Swain, followed by D. Manaku, N. C. Wilfong, Deputy Marshal Dayton, Robt. More and Officer Marcos, their evidence being substantially the same as given at the first trial and which was published in full in the as were at the time. At 12 o'clock the Court took a recess until 1:30 o'eloek.

On resuming, Kawailoa was put on the stand. During his examination a plan of the interior of the Post Office was introduced. The witness was subjected to a searching cross-examination by Mr. Hatch, but nothing new was elicited. Other witnesses examined were P. O'Sullivan, W. H. Place, John DeGraves, Manuel Phillips, Leialoha and Officer Mehrtens. A recess of ten minutes was taken, after which I. B. Peterson was put upon the stand and sworn by Clerk

Mr. Hatch objected to the witness on the ground that he was under indictment for embezzlement.

The Attorney General said he had not yet presented an indictment.

Mr. Hatch quoted several authorities in support of his objection.

The Attorney General said he should rely on Section 49 of the law of evidence, 'Compiled Laws," page 375. "No person offered as a witness shall hereafter be excluded by reason of incapacity from crime (perjury or subornation of perjury only excepted) or interest, from giving tion, according to the practice of the Court, on the trial of any issue joined or evidence either in person or by deposiof any matter or question, or on any inquiry arising in any suit, action or proceeding in any Court, or before any persons having by law or by consent of parties authority to hear, receive and examine evidence. But every person so offered may and shall be admitted to give evidence, notwithstanding that such person may or shall have an interest in the matter in question, or in the event of the trial of any issue, matter, question or inquiry, or of the suit, action or proceeding in which he is offered as a witness, and notwithstanding that such person offered as a witness may have been previously convicted of any crime or offense except

The Court held that under the statute all parties to a case, plaintiff or defendant, were entitled to give evidence, and although Peterson was held under another indictment, his evidence in this case was admissible.

Mr. Hatch noted exceptions.

The examination of Peterson then begun by the Attorney General, and continued until 5 o'clock, when the Court adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

CEMETERY ART.

REQUIREMENTS OF "FASHION" IN TOMBSTONES AND MONUMENTS.

The Low, Broad, Flat Stone More Popular Than the Tall Pillar-Granite and Marble-Figures and Quaint Devices.

[New York Sun.] "There is very rarely any material change in what may be called the 'fashion' The schooner Mokuola brought 280 bags rice of tombstones and monuments," a monument cutter said. "The work becomes more artistic, but does not materially alter in design. We have still the low, broad, flat stone, lending an idea of strength and solidity rather than beauty, although many of the stones are very Captain M. Staples, who left for San Francisco by the barkentine Amelia, will bring down a new coasting schooner for Messrs. Allen & Robinson. less expensive. Still, some of the richest men in the country have placed them over their family grave plots, Jay Gould among others, although his is unusually graceful for a heavy stone. Some are simply large blocks of granite, or, it may be, marble, without anything in the shape of carving to relieve their somber appearance except the smooth place where the name is cut, or, more ordinarily, placed in raised letters. That is the old style, and it still holds its own.

"But another kind of flat stone is becoming popular. The ponderous appearance is lessened by having the upper part supported by granite pillars instead of the customary blocks of stone, and various devices in carving tend to lend grace and beauty to the monument. The flat stone is not usually of polished granite. In the very nature of the monument something rugged is supposed, and if the stone were highly polished (and granite takes a far higher polish than marble), the effect would be marred and the design inconsistent. Figures of life are very seldom carved on the flat stones, as they would have to be either very short or placed in a horizontal position. The flat stones are generally over vaults, but not uncommonly we are ordered to place one of them over a single grave.

"The pillar or obelisk style of monument ranges usually from fifteen to twenty feet in height. They are generally of cut, but not polished, granite, the only part polished being the space where the name or inscription is carved. The old style of a heavy, broad pillar with an obelisk top still prevails, but taller, more slender and more artistic columns are finding favor. They are embellished with all sorts of designs, and the art of the sculptor, as well as his ratience, is often taxed Adams & Co. sell the furniture at the resi- to the utmost to produce a statue that has ence, except in the brain of the wealthy owner of the monument. A small figure on the top, so high up that its features can hardly be distinguished, but which congregation of St. Andrew's Cathedral are supposed to bear some resemblance to those of the person whose remains are entombed below, is common weakness. "A figure of life, or even heroic size, however, is often placed upon the summit of the pillar, and this, if well executed, and in harmony with the structure it stands upon, has a fine effect, although t gives the column, perhaps, too much the appearance of a public monument. But fine statuary is usually placed nearer to the ground, and very quaint devices find expression in it. Greenwood and Woodlawn cemeteries, especially the former, are rich in curious, eccentric, and beautiful designs-for we can not dictate. All we can do is to follow the instructions given us, and if we are required to put upon the * pillar a lamb, a giant, a dwarf, or a lady in voluminous skirts, our business is to do it in the best style we can. "Square-shaped and round, three-cornered and fluted, rough cut, and, on rare occasions, even polished granite or mar-ble pillars are used. The broken column is a very popular design. It is usually about eight feet high, and round. It is often polished to give greater effect to the rugged, irregular top, where it is supposed to have been broken off. For the most part pillars of all kinds stand upon a square stone pedestal, but at times we are required to erect a slender column straight from the ground. This has a quaint and rather pleasing effect. Flat stones are often placed in position over a vault long before the death of any member of a family. Pillars are very rarely erected until somebody's remains have been deposited below. A pillar is usually intended to commemorate one person. A flat monument may cover a whole family. "We have ceased for some time to import graveyard designs from Italy or elsewhere. One reason for this is that all the finest work of Italian sculptors is in marble, and Italian marble will by no means stand the wear and tear of our varying Wing Wo Chan & Co. call attention to a climate. In a few years its creamy whitevery superior lot of Manila cigars in boxes | ness turns to an ugly grayish mud color, containing 50 to 100. It is the best cigar and dark veins appear upon it. > Don't Roll Them. [Washington Star.]

One of our exchanges takes the trouble to tell its readers how to roll magazines, pamphlets, etc., for transmission by mail or otherwise. This is one of the cases where Funch's excellent advice "Don't," comes in. Such things should not be rolled at all. They should always be sent flat. To roll them is to mar them at once and forever. When a periodical dealer Edward Moore and David Barry were offers to roll up a parcel for a customer he should be told politely but unmistak-ably that he doesn't wholly understand his business. Manuscripts, it may be added, should never be rolled under any circumstances. If necessary to reduce the proportions of a package they may be folded once or twice as required, but the less the better.

Kails on the Track.

A Tract Seventy Miles Long and Fifty Miles Wide, Fenced in by an Embankment Sixteen Feet in Height.

[Dr. H. Lasham in Sacramento Record-Union.] The imperial horse-pasturing establish-ment in Japan was founded by the continental conquerers of the island where it is situated more than a thousand years ago. The country conquered embraced the peninsula between the bay of Yeddo and the Facific ocean. The country is a table land, with an altitude above the water of 300 feet. It is seventy miles long and fifty miles wide. It is of irregular shape, with serrated borders, conforming to the irregularities of the bay and ocean. It has thousands of beautiful groves of oaks and evergreens, and the country presents much the appearance of the oak openings of Michigan and Kentucky. It is covered with clover, fescue, and rye grasses. It was determined by the government to reserve all this region as a pasture in which to breed horses for the imperial armies. It could have been easily fenced from the groves of timber, but that would have left it exposed to the attacks of the hostile Ainos, who were still only a hundred or two miles further north.

An edict was issued and thousands of villagers were transported thither from all parts of the empire. To these settlers the land along the streams, near the borders of the table-land, was given, on which to grow low-land rice. Then this vast force was put to work to construct an immense embankment around this pasture. It was sixteen feet high and sixteen feet at the base. In order to leave out the rice land along the streams, and to conform also to the serrated edges of the table-lands, it required many curves and windings. For this reason it was fully twice as long as would have been required if it could have been a perfect circle or square. As it was built it was 500 miles in length. It was constructed entirely by manual labor, without the aid of plows, scrapers or carts. The earth was shoveled into hemp sacks or mats, and was then carried swinging on a pole, by two men up on to the embankment. This was the work of years, but where labor has little value and the word of the ruler is absolute, anything can be done.

After this fortified fence was finished, commenced. The subdivision enbankments were twelve feet high and twelve feet at the base. The whole area was surveyed into circles. In the center the corral was located. From the corral triangular fields were surveyed; each corral and the surrounding fields were in the form of a wheel, the corral in the place of the hub, the fields occupying the spaces between the spokes, and the subdivision embankments representing the spokes. The corrals were formed by building embankments thirty and even forty feet high. The fields varied in area from 500 to 1,500 acres. Each corral division had its official in charge, and over all was a high imperial officer. The aggregate length of these subdivision embankments was more than 2,000 meters. The tycoon who ordered all this labor did not live to see its completion, but his son and successor did.

When this fortified pasture was ready for occupation, officers were sent to every province in the empire, and the best the work of subdividing it into fields was mares and horses were bought. Ambassadors were sent to China, Corea, and Manchuria, and the best equine blood of those countries was purchased. In thirty or forty years after the pasture was occupied there were 60,000 horses pasturing there. At a later time it is said that the number reached was 100,000. Some years since the writer was invited to vicit horse gathering. The day after our arrival was the first day of the annual gathering. Early in the morning all the roads and paths leading to the division, where the driving in was to commence, were filled with people from the surrounding country. This yearly roundup is a great occasion, and people go 100 miles to see it. Men, women and children cover the embankments in their gay holiday attire. A swarm of footmen is hired to drive the half wild horses out of the timber and brush. When that is done 100 or 200 of horsemen rush them along the ever-narrowing field into the corral. It is an exciting scene as the hundreds of horses run away in terror, followed by the crowds of mounted men. Arriving at the corral we found an army of people camped around it. There was an improvised city of bamboo houses, covered with mats. There were eatinghouses, lodging-houses, theatres, shops for the sale of every conceivable article, troupes of acrobats, jugglers, fortune-tellers, dancing and singing girls, and crowds of country people in the gayest dresses. On the corral embankments were seats for the officials under the widespreading branches of gigantic oaks that had been planted there hundreds of years

After refreshments, which consisted of wine made from rice, fish, eggs, chicken, and vegetables, the catching, classifying, and branding commenced. The horses are all caught with a lasso, which is not thrown, as with us, but is attached to the end of a long bamboo pole. It is handled very skillfully. Many were the tumbles which the horse-catchers got in their struggles with the thoroughly frightened animals. These were greeted with shouts of laughter from the crowds on the embankment. All the mares are branded and turned back into the pasture. The best horses are selected for the cavalry, and the others are sold at auction, on long time, to the farmers, who come from all parts of the country

The forenoon was devoted to driving in, catching, and branding, and the after-noons to horse-racing. These latter are kept up till night and are full of excite-The tracks are straight ones, and the distances are from 400 yards to a mile and a half. Most races are catch weights. but if not they are scale-weights, regardless of age. A fourteen-hand horse will carry about 130 pounds. Each corral division will back its favorite, and the betting is sometimes very spirited. The riding at that time was not of a high order, being more like that among our wild Indian tribes, as seen some years since by the writer.

A California Vampire Bat. The Los Angeles Herald describes a specimen of the vampire family recently caught there: "This huge specimen measured twenty inches trom tip to tip of his wings, and was pretty well armed with teeth and claws. His head was as large as the heads of four or five ordinary bat heads combined, and well hooded with two ears fully as large as a half-dollar. His majesty was as vicious and warlike as a scorpion or tarantula when confined, and his bite would probably be as dangerous.

A New Fruit Tree. [Arkanias Traveler.] Attention has been called to a hitherto unknown fruit tree which has been found in the southeastern part of the island of New Guinea. It grows to a height of sixty feet, and bears a large globule fruit, wholesome and palatable, with a flavor resembling that of the pear. Baron von

Mueller, the Australian botanist, has fruit is known to the natives as Posi-Posi.

The Treatment of Corpulence. [Therapeutic Gazette.]

As analyzed by The Birmingham Medical Review, November, 1884, Ebstein, in his work on corpulence, gives some valuable practical points for the reduction of obesity. According to him, fattening is strictly analogous to the fattening of cat-tle, and depends on overfeeding. He, however, disputes the current view that fat makes fat; on the contrary, he thinks fatty food protects the albumen and prevents its forming fat. His plan of treat-ment, therefore, consists in moderating the quantity of food, and while cutting off all vegetable carbo-hydrates, sugar, starch, etc., allowing a moderate quantity of fat, two or three ounces daily, to be taken. He also suggests that the diet should be monotonous, greasy, and suc-culent, so as to cause satiety rapidly. He disallows beer, but permits light wines.

The plan advocated appears rational, and is free from the objection to Banting's method, which is too much like starvation. The following is the diet used successfully by Ebstein in one of his cases:

Breakfast—One large cup of black tea
—about half a pint—without sugar; two ounces of white bread or brown bread, loasted, with plenty of butter.

Dinner-Soup, often with marrow; from four to six and one half ounces of roast or boiled meat, vegetable in moderation, leguminous preferably, and cab-bages. Turnips were almost and pota-toes altogether excluded. After dinner a little fresh fruit. For second course a salad or stewed fruit without sugar. Two or three glasses of light wine, and immediately after dinner a large cup of black tea, without milk or sugar. Supper.—A large cup of black tea, as before. An egg, a little fat roast meat, or both, or some ham with its fat, Bologna sausage, smoked or fried fish, about one ounce of white bread, well buttered, occasionally a small quantity of cheese, and some fresh fruit. On this diet the patient lost twenty pounds in six months. Ebstein insists on the necessity of always keeping to the restricted diet if the tendency to corpulence is to be suc-cessfully combated. Thought He Was Mortally Wounded.

[John H. Keatley's "Recollections."] Some of the scenes in the flight of Gen. Howard's men that evening were extremely ludicrous. Officers as well as men totally lost their self-control, and did as absurd things as their men. The major of a Pennsylvania regiment came through the bush with the panic-stricken fugitives. He held the rein with one hand, and, crowding to the front of the saddle, he drew his leg well up with the other hand. When he halted in a place of safety he was as pale as death, and his countenance betrayed intense agony—that of a man badly wounded. His legs were incased in leather boot tops to the hips almost, a style of dress affected by a class of officers at that period of the war, but which, as soon as Grant came in, was generally dis-

An army surgeon, an old acquaintance, first recognized the agonized officer, and several ran to help him dismount. His first exclamation through his clenched teeth was that his leg was shot off and that he would die as sure as the world. He was gently helped out of the saddle and laid on his back on the ground under the branches of a large tree. An attendant took hold of the boot-heel, and fear ing to give unnecessary pain, drew the great mass of leather and oil-cloth off the foot and leg as gently as possible. He then raised it to arm's length reversed, and out of it rolled the bullet unbroken and unbruised. The pants of the wounded officer were intact, and not a bruise even could be found on the skin anywhere.

The touch of the spent ball on his leg at the moment it passed through the leather and there stopped produced a sen-sation which, with the panic of the broken troops, excited the imagination of an otherwise brave officer, and confirmed him in the belief that he had been mortally wounded. It was many days before he heard the last of his escapade, and it did not finally pass into oblivion among his army associates until he was seriously and really injured in a subsequent battle.

Not So Much Clothing Needed. [W. M. Williams, in Clothier and Furnisher.] I lived seven years Colorado, and have herded sheep in weather so cold that the food I took out for lunch froze hard in my pockets-thermometer sometimes 15 or 20 degrees below zero-and I used to wear less clothing than I do now, although naturally sensitive to cold, owing to a weak circulation. I well remember a half-witted man, Marvin by name (who has since then committed a dreadful crime), who used to get a precarious living by hunting in the mountains, and who, in the coldest winter weather, went about in rags-practically unclothed.

Another "old-timer," who was a teamster, invariably went about in the severest weather and most biting winds, with his coat open and his chest perfectly naked and exposed. Surely the street Arabs, who are at once half-starved and half-naked, prove that the power to resist cold is merely a matter of habit, and that we might make ourselves "all face" if we liked, though doubtless a modicum of clothing is comfortable, if of doubtful sanitary value. I firmly believe that overcoats are the most fruitful cause of winter colds, and that the best and safest plan is to make little or no difference between summer and winter clothing.

Street Car Travel in Scotland.

[Chicago Journal.] In many towns in Scotland where street railroads are in operation, instead of charging a stated fare from which there no deviation on account of the distance the passenger travels, the car routes are laid off into districts. When a man gets on a car he pays 1 penny, which takes him to the end of that district; then the conductor collects another penny, and continuing at each new district until e terminus of the line is reached. By this means a passenger only pays for the distance he rides, and is thus encouraged to enter the car when he has but a short distance to go.

> Diplomacy in English. [Chicago Times.]

The English language has had a wonderiul experience lately. The negotiations between the Chinese and Japanese with regard to Corea was conducted wholly in English, because there was in English an ample vocabulary of clear and definite diplomatic terms which were possessed by neither the Chinese nor the

Under the Swiss Lakes.

[Foreign Letter.] The unusually low water in the Swiss lakes last year made it a favorable time for archæological explorations, and many valuable relics of the prehistoric "lake dwellers" were recovered. Among them were a splendidly preserved bronze sword, several dozens of bronze hatchets, etc., together with many articles of stone named the tree Bassia Erskineana, and the and charred fabrics.
