THE MILLER AND THE MAID.

[F. N. Scott.] Across the heath and down the hill, A-back of patient Dobbin, The farmer's daughter rides to mill

And mocks the thrush and robin. For saddle she's a sack of grain, She sidewise sits and chirrups; A finger in old Dobbin's mane Is good as forty stirrups.

The miller comes-a merry blade!-And doffs his hat and greets her-"What wish you here, my pretty maid?"
"I've brought a sack of wheat, sir."

"And have you gold to give for grist?" "Not I, we're poor, alack! sir; But take your toll—a tenth, I wist— From what is in my sack, sir."

And laughs-a merry miller!-"I cannot take my toll in wheat, I must have gold or siller.

"But since you've brought no coin nor scrip,"
He smiles and fondly eyes her—
"I'll ask no toll but from your lip—
One kiss!—who'll be the wiser?" "

The maiden blushed and bowed her head, And with her apron fingered, And pouted out her lips of red Where countless kisses lingered.

"A single kiss?" (She smiled in glee,
As who would say "I've caught you,")
"My father said your toll would be A tenth of what I brought you."

The mill-stream shouted to the sand : "He kissed the farmer's daughter;" But the grim all wheel stretched out its

And spanked the saucy water. He Was Paralyzed.

[New York Herald.] Curiosity was on tiptoe. Three men had caused a commotion, and yet there was no need for the police. The place was Twenty-second street and Broadway: the hour half-past 11. The horse cars, packed by muscular conductors, came to a standstill, for wagons, coupes, and hansoms blocked the track, while the drivers wildly waved their hats and shouted. Men laughed, women smiled, the policeman on the corner grinned officially, and two dudes stretched their long, thin necks above their collars to see what was going

This is what occurred: A drunken man staggered through a lane left for him by the passers by, who got out of his way; a blind cripple sat on the pavement grinding out bad music with one hand, while his other arm and his leg hung helplessly; about his neck was a string and to the string was a sign, "I am paralyzed." Two well known members of a certain fashionable club saw the drunken man and the beggar. In an in stant one of the club men stepped up to the beggar, saying: "I will give you $3

"It is yours," said the blind beggar, taking it off. Before his friends knew what he was about the buyer of the sign had stepped hastily forward and had neatly thrown the string over the almost unconscious drunken man's head, attach ing the sign to him. The drunken man reeled along his way bearing on his back the unnecessary notification to the public in great white let ters, "I am paralyzed," to the intense delight of a small army of boys who hast ily congregated and saw him safely into the hands of one of "the finest."

Shakespeare's Cousin's Diary. [Chicago Herald.]

The immediate publication of the manuscript diary of Shakespeare's cousin, the town clerk of Stratford-on-Avon, is announced. The volume will consist of autotypes of the folio pages of the manuseript and a transcript by experts of the British museum. The diary extends from 1613 to 1616-the years of Shakespeare's residence at Stratford previous to his death on the 5th of May (April 28 o. s.) of the latter year. From beginning to end it is a record of the attempts made to inclose, and of the resistance offered to the inclosure, of the common fields of Stratford, in which Shakespeare was in-

-n socialistic society called the Harmonists, at Economy, Pa., near Pittsburgh, which once numbered thirteen hundred members, has dwindled to thirty. The survivors are all ages, and none of them will probably be alive ten years hence. The property of the society is estimated at fully one million dollars for each member, and what will be the final disposition of it is known only to a small circle. It is said that many of the members have never handled a penny in their lives, and would not know a piece of money if they saw it .- Pittsburgh Post.

-A few days ago a farmer living near Howe's Cave was plowing in a field about half a mile from the cave's mouth. He stopped for a few minutes to rest himself and horses under the spreading branches of a tree. Moving on a little distance he turned and looking back was dumbfounded to see that the large tree was gone. He ran back and almost fell into a large chasm which had swallowed the tree and a plot of ground. It is believed that this will lead to the discovery of an outlet from the rear of Howe's Cave, and should this theory prove correct the field will be more valuable to the farmer than before the shade tree disappeared from view .-- Albany (N. Y.) Journal.

THE SULTANATE OF BRUNEI.

Some time ago, under the heading "A Disputed Succession," we published the conflicting interests of Rajah Brooke and the Governor of the North Borneo Company in the succession of the sultanate of Brunei, Borneo, The late Sultan, Abdul Munim, died and was buried on the 29th May, aged 114 years, according to native report. Although not in the direct line of succession he was raised to the throne in 1855, in preference to the son of the previous Sultan, who now succeeds. The present Sultan is aged 60, and has 24 children. The "Straits Times" states that he was installed with becoming ceremony, the Acting British Consul General's steam yacht firing a royal salute of 21 guns. The yellow flag of Brunei was saluted with 17 flags when hoisted. Rajah Brooke was not present, and the Consul from Sarawah did not attend the ceremony of installation.

RECLAIMING TIDE MARSHES.

Their Utility for Agricultural Purposes-

The Sea-Marsh Soil of Louislana. [Chicago Tribune.] The department of agriculture at Washington has just issued a volume devoted to the reclamation of tide marshes and their utility for agricultural pur-poses. It is estimated by the department that the area of the country for such purposes could be increased at least 10,000 square miles-an area of territory as large as the state of Vermont-by taking not only the marshes on the ocean border but those farther inland, fringing bays, sounds, and rivers. It also contains reports from various parts of the country showing what has already been done in the way of reclaiming these waste lands, which were of value only for their crops of salt hay. The principal reclamations are in New Jersey along the Maurice river, in Pennsylvania on the Delaware, where one farmer has a splendid farm of 1,000 acres safe from the highest tides; in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia, where valuable lands have been diked for rice; in Louisiana and Texas, where they have been reclaimed for rice and sugar cane culture and cattle ranging, and Washington territory, where nearly one-half of the area formerly occupied by the channels of Puget sound, amounting Deaths. | 2 | 4 | 8 | 3 | 2 | 1 | 1 | 0 | 7 | 2 | 1 | 0 | 0 | to 1,050 square miles, have been converted into rich, arable lands. In California also, at the mouths of the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers, where there are nearly .000,000 acres of fresh-water marshes, 50,000 have been reclaimed, and are among the most fertile lands in the whole state, being devoted mostly to fruit-raising. In this connection The New Orleans Pieayune calls attention to the reclamaion carried on by the Louisiana Land Reclamation company, which has saved 15,000 acres in Terre Bonne and St. Mary's parishes. The soil of the seamarsh in that region is a black mass of decayed vegetable matter capable of being drained and of growing any of the products of the state, while the subsoil is a stiff, blue clay well adapted to dike-building. Speaking of the company's opera-

Rice, jute, vegetables, etc., have been cultivated in this reclaimed land successfully. The company claim a larger yield of rice than the South Carolina lands give under the most favorable circumstances. Jute grew six feet in five weeks on this new land. In St. Mary the company has also operated with much success, and land is reclaimed every year and put in cultiva-tion. No engineering difficulty is accomplished and levees need be only two or three feet high. The greatest danger is from overflow from the Mississippi, it being very easy to protect the lands from tidal overflow. The new lands are too rich in soda, potassa and ammonia to produces canes of high saccharine strength for several years, but are excellent for corn crops, and in eight years under cultivation become good sugar lands. The cost of reclamation is $3 per acre."

Operations on a still larger scale are being prosecuted in Calcasieu, Cameron, and Vermilion parishes, wherea syndicate has purchased 1,000,000 acres of marsh lands upon which it is now engaged. The Picayune says: "The average cost of reclaim ing these lands is found to be $6 per cre, the marsh when reclaimed being much richer than the adjacent uplands, L. A. A Ceylon Cofoanut Forest. [Cor. Home Journal.]

The tree which gives character to the landscape in the island of Ceylon is the cocoanut palm, whose siender grayish trunk soars up for sixty or eighty feet and then bursts into a dense crown of great feathered leaves, each from ten to twelve feet in length. These palms grow close together in vast groves, and to one walking about under their shade their appearance is very striking, and recalls the comparison which has been so often made between a forest and a cathedral; for there is a rude but evident resemblance to ar-chitecture in the lofty aisles formed by the shafts of the palms; and roofed in by the arched and densely intermingled foli-age. The sunlight filtering through the leafy canopy makes a golden-green twi-light, in which multitudes of gaudy but-terflies sport about and flit from cup to cup of the pink campanulate flowers that cover the ground. Scintillometric Forecasts.

[Arkansaw Traveler.] Some time ago the discovery was made by Mons. Ch. Montigny, by means of a beautiful instrument called the scintillometer, that blue largely predominates in the twinkling of the stars when there is much water in the atmosphere, and that the preponderance of green or of violet is indicative of great dryness. A late series of tables by this Brussels savant indicates that he has hit upon a law by which a wet or a dry season may be predicted with great certainity. Perhaps the best test of the soundness of his views is found in the fact that his scintillometric forecasts of the increasing drought in Belgium of the years 1883 and 1884 were fulfilled to the

This path to Quito passes through every variety of climate known to man; from the murky, miasmatic tropics, where the crocodile is king, and rain falls incessantly, over a rainless desert into the zone of wheat and corn. From there it rises to a region worthless except for cattle ranges, and finally ascends into the realm of the ice king, whose power even the tropical sun can not dispute, and whose only animate subject is the condor, with a hight surpassing any other bird. Here is a valley from which no water can flow, a table-land between the two gigantic Andean chains, the Thibet of the New World, with an area four times as large as the state of New York, and a history as in the world; at the other stands Cuzco, the golden capital of a strange empire, which, though crushed by Fi arro in its budding civilization, and knees. by I harro in its butting civilization, and fabulous magnificence, will rank as the most extraordinary and extensive community in the annals of history. Here were unnumbered millions of people, with a patriarchal government, having no law but the will of an Inca, and familiar with all the arts but those of war. Twenty volcanos, and more than fifty mountain peaks over 10,000 feet high compose the sublime congregation that ill strate the omnipotence of their Creator in the valley of Quito. Here all the mountain chains of South America culminate in one dizzy procession, grandest giants. One sierra bends off to the east, holds in its lap the ancient city of Bogota, rolls off 1,000 streams to form the Orinoco and terminates in the beautiful mountains of Caracas. Another clings to the Pacific, whose incessant billows wash its feet, and humbling itself when it crosses the isthmus, spreads and rises again in the Cordilleras of Mexico, and the Rocky mountain chains, forming a backbone for the hemisphere, whose head lies on a pillow of snow in Alaska, and whose feet dip into the sea at the land of fire (Terre del ruego). The third chain of sierras follow a well-defined parallel until it droops and finally exhausts itself on the pampas of Patagonia.

()ld "Chimbo," the king of the Andes, has forbidden man to study him. Three thousand feet of impassable snow, clinging to a cone of granite whose sides are too steep to be climbed even with scaling adders, prevent the summit from being reached. There is a legend that Chimbo was once half a mile higher than now. On one of his sides stands a massive rock, perhaps the largest piece of granite in the world, which is called the Inca's head. The Indian traditions say that this was once the crest of Chimborazo, and that it fell the day Atahaulpa, the last of the Incas, was strangled by Pizarro. LAYING OUT ROUTES

FOR THE VARIOUS THEATRICAL COM-BINATIONS OF THE COUNTRY.

How the Thing Is Done Systematically-The Agent's "Long Book"-Advertising the Attractions-Arrangements with the Manager.

[New York San Interview.] "Of late," one of the best-known theatrical agents in this city said recently, "actors have far less trouble in arranging for dates out of town than formerly. In fact, I may say that the system of routing and booking has undergone a complete change. No longer than seven years ago the old system prevailed. Under it hardly any so-called combinations went on the road. I can say, without being in the least immodest, that I was the first agent to adopt the present system. I based it on that pursued by a New York theatre, which sent many companies on the road. From the family which managed the establishment I got the fundamental principles of the present system. I have it down to such a fine point that if I am asked to book and route a company I can tell in a few minutes what dates and places are open for

"How do you manage that?" we "I will explain. Through my acquaint-ance with managers, I have the sole agency for about a hundred theatres. To carry out my system it was necessary that I should be sole agent for them here. Otherwise it would be impossible for me to lay out routes by a glance at my books. To begin with, I have a theatre in each of the large cities in the country. In some sections there are circuits, as for instance, the Vermont, the Texas, the California circuit, and I am in close relation with the representatives of these. I by no means, however, always include such circuits in the routes I lay out. Besides theatres in large cities, I have good show towns between them. For instance, I have on my list ten New York cities, the same number in Ohio, seven in Indiana, six in Pennsylvania , and so on. Let me give you an illustration as to how quickly I can route a combination or star. The first time I had dealings with one of my stars she came up to me and said: 'My route for next season isn't well laid out. I want you to lay out a new route for me. leave for California to morrow. What "I will lay out a route for you,' I re-died, 'if you will leave everything in my are your terms?

When you come back from California I will show you the route, and you will find my terms reasonable. "Before she left that afternoon for California I had her route laid out, and she was booked for all the theatres on the route. How do I manage it? I'll show In this book, " opening a long book, "I have on every page every date in the year, with a blank space after each date. Every page belongs to a theatre, the theatres being arranged according to states. I can tell by a glance at each page how many dates are open for the theatre represented by that page. Here is Cleveland -filled you see, from Aug. 24, 1885, to June 21, 1886. Now, suppose I want to book an attraction for some date later than June 21, 1886, in Cleveland. I telegraph to the manager the name of the attraction, the time, and terms. There is a possibility that we may differ on terms and have to adjust them by wire. But I know what ideas the different managers have in regard to terms, and usually get an affirmative answer to my first telegram. In addition to my book, in which each page is devoted to a theatre, I have tables consisting of a page like those in the book, pasted on cardboard. Each of these star actress mapped out. As a rule I start my attraction in New York and wind up in New York." "But if you have to make routes for sixteen attractions," said the reporter, "I should think the late comers would be hard to satisfy."

ables is devoted to a star or combination. I have sixteen all told. Now, look at this table. On it you will find the route of a

"There are no late comers among my regular sixteen attractions, because I book them all in December for the next year. Besides the routes differ in character. Here, for instance, is a route for a play in which a well-known actor starred up to hast season. He takes another play this season, so his old play goes on the road without him. That route doesn't take in a single large city. It is confined to towns which are one or two night stands. Of course, some managers come to me too late. They have to take what they can get, They are obliged to jump all over the country, and are put to great outlay for transportation. Then again it may happen that some combination goes to pieces. In that event these late-comers may get a good route after all. How do you manage the advertising for your attractions while en route?" "That is all provided for in the contract. I have a printed form which, when filled out, is a contract between my attractions as party of the first part and the theatre as party of the second part. The attraction agrees to furnish the acting company, advance printing, and stage performance for (usually) 70 per cent. of the gross receipts. The manager agrees to furnish the theatre, well lighted, warmed, and cleansed, with scenery and equipments according to plots furnished stage hands, ushers, property-men, and assistants, janitors, ticket-sellers, supers, ballet, calcium lights, programmes, billboards, a first-class orchestra, or, if impossible to secure an orchestra, a first-class piano and pianist; door-keepers, licenses, advertising, stage furniture, and properties."

"I suppose you consider, in making up your routes, how the attractions did the previous season?" "Yes, I have a book of the receipts of every performance.

Are not some sections of the country better to show in than others?" "Maine and New Hampshire are poor states, and in Vermont there are only three good show towns. Of course the country is thickly populated in this section, and here there are no long jumps. But the west and south are equally many cities and towns in these sections as in this they would be as good from a theatrical point of view. But let me tell you one thing. The west and south will stand only first-class attractions. You can't palm off anything second-class on them. Anybody who tries it will be truly routed."

The Secret of Long Life.

[John Swinton's Paper.] Men of brains in New York are apt to enjoy a hale old age if they do not ruin themselves by bad habits. And the idea now growing in my head is this: That thought, hard and ceaseless thought, is one of the best means of prolonging life. But you must not drudge like a galley-slave nor drink like a helot.
