MONDAY, SEPT. 20, 1886.

A SENSIBLE OPINION.

Hon. Cecil Brown said in the House, the other day, in reference to the lighting of Honolulu by electric light, that the service should be undertaken by the Government, if undertaken at all. This opinion is in the line of thought apparently gaining favor among the statesmen and political economists of the age, that all undertakings for the common good, among which are included railways, telegraphs, water supply, and street lighting, should be directly managed by government. There was a period, and that not long ago, when it was pretty generally conceded that all such public requisites could be more economically and efficiently constructed and conducted by private individuals or private companies than by governments; and that all such matters should be left to the people, with their concomitant profits and losses. Of late the current of enlightened thought appears to have been reversed, or to be reversing. In England, Germany, and some other European countries, where services of the nature indicated have been supplied by private enterprise, there is a tendency, and in some cases a movement, to take them over by the State, believing that the general good will be enhanced thereby. A portion of the press of the United States is agitating in the same direction. In some of the Australasian colonies railroads, telegraphs, water works, wharves, and all similar works of a public nature, have been, and are, constructed and managed by the State. The system has worked very satisfactorily, and with the result of supplying the demand at less cost to the people than in countries where similar services are furnished by private enterprise. We incline to the opinion that it is the proper and legitimate function of government, particularly in a new country, to undertake all such works. They are for the public benefit, and can always be provided by government at less direct cost to the public than by a private company; because the company expects a profit on its investment, whereas the government should require nothing of the kind. Viewed from this standpoint, Mr. Brown's opinion, that if Honolulu is to be lighted by electricity the Government should perform the service, is sensible, and should be carefully considered.

SPECIAL DEPOSITS.

On referring to the report of the Minister of Finance, we find that on the 31st of March, 1884, the certificates of deposit outstanding, amounted to $799,000 and that during the past fiscal period there was issued for coin deposited $340,000. During the same fiscal period there have been cancelled, certificates amounting to $762,000, leaving certificates outstanding March 31 1886 $377,000, represented by coin in the Treasury as follows:

U. S. Gold Coin	$64 000
Hawaiian Silver	313 000
	$377 000

The foregoing supplies the information of which many persons are apparently ignorant.

It is said that Bronson Alcott was one day holding forth on the advantages of a vegetable diet, and urged the argument that if a man eats pork he will grow to look like a pig; the beef-eater like a bull, and so on. Whereupon somebody rather confounded him by dryly adding: "Yes, Mr. Alcott, and he who confines himself to vegetable diet will be in great danger of finally resembling a very small potato."

The Emperor and Empress of Japan have, through His Excellency R. Kuki, their Minister at Washington, expressed their thanks to Edward Greey for his last Japanese book, "A Captive of Love." This work is being translated into German by Prof. A. Heusel of Konigsburg, Prussia.

THE LEGISLATURE.

ONE HUNDRED AND SIXTH DAY.

MONDAY, Sept. 20th.

House met at 10 A. M. Prayer by the Chaplain. Present: Minister Dole; Nobles Cleghorn, Bush, Kapena, Walker (President); Reps. Lilikalani, Baker, Kaubi, Amara, Brown, Kaulia, Pahia, Kaunamano, Wight, Nahale, Nahinu, Kalua, Aholo, Kaukau, Richardson, Castle, Dickey, Kaal, Paehole, Kaula and Palohau. Minutes read and approved.

Rep. Kaunamano read a petition from Kohala, praying that the mail bags be opened in two places in that district, Makapala and Puhuehu; a petition from the mail carrier at Hanakua, praying that he be paid $20 per week for carrying the mails between Waipio and Laupahoehoe; a petition from the district of Hanakua, with 36 signatures praying that a law be enacted requiring the Minister of Interior to keep a plan of all public lands in the kingdom, post a copy of the same on the doors of all the court houses of the kingdom, that government lands be sold at the rate of $50 for 20 acres, and that no more public lands be sold at auction.

The three petitions were referred to the committee on Public Lands and Internal Improvements.

Rep. Kaunamano reported from the special committee on the Hawaiian Board of Health bill, recommending that the bill receive the careful consideration of the house, and be placed on the order of the day. Tuesday next, after the electric lights bill. The report was signed by two members of the committee, Messrs. Kaunamano and Kalua. The honorable member said that other members of the committee approved of the recommendation to consider the bill and place it on the order of the day, but did not fully approve of the bill.

Rep. Dole said he had not signed the report. He did not approve of creating an inferior class of physicians. He would approve of applying part of the appropriation for educating Hawaiian youth abroad to their education in the practice of medicine. He had as high an opinion of the capacities of native Hawaiians as other member of the committee had. Committee's report adopted.

Rep. Aholo moved that whereas, Tuesday, 16th day of November next, will be the fiftieth anniversary of the birthday of His Majesty the King, therefore resolved that a committee of seven members of this Assembly be appointed to prepare a programme of events for the due celebration of the day.

Rep. Dole asked when is the proposed committee to report.

Minister Gibson supported the resolution of the honorable member for Lahaina, and hoped the committee would report, at an early day, not only a good programme of events but also a sum proper for this Assembly to vote, to carry out the same. The resolution was adopted.

Minister Creighton moved the committee of commerce be instructed to return the bill relating to Collisions at Sea, by Thursday next. Carried.

Noble Kapena moved the act relating to the preservation of Hawaiian Archives be taken from the file, and placed next on the order of the day. Lost.

The joint resolution of Saturday providing a further appropriation of $15,000 for expenses of the Assembly was read a third time, and passed.

Rep. Castle moved the bill to amend and consolidate the law relative to the Commissioners of Private Ways and Water Rights, he read a second time by bill. Carried.

The same member moved the bill be considered section by section. Carried.

The first section passed.

Minister Dole opposed the provisions of the second section.

Rep. Dole said the Attorney-General's opposition was, according to rumors abroad, due to instructions from Colonel Spreckels, and that his remarks on the old law were not the results of experience.

Minister Dole said his attention had been directed to the bill and to the existing law, by his predecessor, and that he took no directions from Colonel Spreckels or any other man; but he would mention another rumor which was current, which was that Messrs. Dole and Castle were acting under instructions from Mr. Bailey.

Rep. Dole said if the Minister denied the truth of the rumor, he would accept his denial. The litigation under the present law was very complex. In fact, there was no system about it, and this bill systematizes what before was loose and vague. The objection that litigants will be required to go out of their districts to have their cases tried in other districts was a very feeble one. Litigants in this country are accustomed to go to other districts as well as to other islands, to get justice. This bill was prepared by lawyers who have had much experience in water cases, and provides for the prompt hearing of cases, giving the poor man a chance as against the rich.

Rep. Thurston noticed that at last session and this, whenever an amendment is attempted to be made to the water laws, some persons are sure to think that some other people are trying to take advantage of them. In all that even he had seen and heard of proceedings in courts, a water case was the most to be dreaded, as the laws and everything in connection with water rights are mixed up so that no one can understand them. The proceedings in water cases are drawn out in a most unsatisfactory manner both to the members of the bar and their clients, and if the bill is passed, it will be hailed as a great improvement by all the bar of Honolulu. He was surprised to see the Attorney-General speak first against the bill, as he had been but a short time in the country.

Minister Dole said that in May last the bill had been handed to him by the late Attorney-General who said he was too busy to attend to it, and wished him to examine it and the old law. He had done so, and made certain marginal notes, one of which is that this bill will be most for the interest of the Hawaiian subject to be buried in the legislative grave-yard.

House took recess at 1:30 P. M.

Union Service.

AT

Fort Street Church.

SERMON BY T. G. R. PECK.

A Union service was held at Fort Street Church last evening, conducted by the Rev. E. C. Ogil, the sermon by the Rev. T. G. R. Peck, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Waterville, Utica, New York.

The reverend speaker took his text from Mark XVI 15. "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

He spoke as follows: You will at once recognize these as the parting words of Christ to his disciples. He bids them to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. That world, as we know, is made up of races of men, of classes in society, of isolated individuals of very diverse characteristics and temperaments, customs and habits of thought; and yet our Lord would have his gospel presented to each one without exception. And what does this teach us but that he realized that the gospel was designed for all—that there was that in it which each could receive and appropriate, could thus secure to himself, its inestimable gift of everlasting life.

This universality of the gospel is one of the most remarkable of all the features that it presents for our consideration. All other religions have been more or less local in their influence. They have been restricted by peculiarities of race, of climate, of custom, or modes of thought. Even the religion of the Jews, God's ancient people, was only adapted to the land of Palestine and the neighborhood of the Temple, but Christianity adapts itself to all lands and all people. It was as eminently fitted to the practical Roman, as it was to the speculative Greek. It made the Roman more practical and it drew the Greek from the smouldering embers of Greek intellectual life, while at the same time it showed itself none the less adapted to those nations that had not yet emerged into the light of civilization. Before the Goths conquered the Roman Empire Christianity had conquered them. It has never yet found a people with whom it could not assimilate. It has never yet found a people whom it could not infuse, permeate and transform with its influence.

When we come to inquire under what particular features this universality of the gospel presents itself, we are reminded first of all, that it is a religion devoid of system. Other religions have systems. They have strict creeds and set formulas of devotion; many of the sects of christianity even regard these as indispensable to their very existence, but the gospel has none such. Christ enunciated no system. In his teachings we find broad, general principles. We find noble, soul-stirring ideas. We find the spirit which the latter is absent—systematized forms of belief are absent. The creeds of theology are absent. Indeed it would be impossible intellectually to define many of the truths which Christ uttered. They are addressed not to the understanding, but to the spiritual sense of man, and the spiritual sense alone comprehends, receives and appropriates them. Besides, the expansive force of gospel truth prevents its being restricted to any definite forms. As the ages roll on and the Church becomes more gifted with intellectual and spiritual power, these truths appear under new lights, under new shades of meaning, requiring new forms and new sets of expression. Hence it is that Christ gave no definite forms to the truths which he uttered. The Church would in time out-grow them. The garment made for the boy would not do for the grown up man. Even now we find the old Athanasian creed a subject of discussion in England, and more remarkable still proposals are being made for a Congress to modify the work of the Westminster Divines. Creeds die, friends, but the spirit of the life of the gospel still lives. The intellectual restrictions by which the truth is defined pass away, but the truth itself still grows and expands with increasing ages, ever ready to evince itself under new forms and phases as the intellectual and spiritual necessities of the Church may require. And herein, I say, lies one of the reasons of its universality. It is able externally to adapt itself to all the intellectual and spiritual requirements of men, while at the same time it preserves itself pure, succinct and unchanged.

And then again this power of universality of the gospel lies in the fact that that gospel is embodied in a life—it is identified with a perfect man. Other religions propounded theories, enunciated maxims, enjoined rules, but the religion of the gospel is a life—it was reduced to a life. Jesus did not say, "I come to teach you the truth," but "I am the truth." Look at me and see what God is. Look at me and learn what religion is—learn what that is which alone can ensure you everlasting life. This religion could be brought down to the understandings of men. They had not to perplex their minds with abstruse doctrinal problems. They had not to speculate. They had not to philosophize. All that they had to do was to look at the life of Jesus—all that they had to do was to study a man like themselves. And not only to their understanding did the life of Jesus appeal, but to their sympathies. It was the life of one like themselves—one made in their own image, and how could they help but drawn out toward it through the affinity which pervades all human hearts. That beauty of character—that gentleness of disposition, that inflexibility of principle, that compassion, mercy, disinterestedness, combined with that sublimity of devotion—how could they help but admire and love. And in admiring and loving the man, they would come to admire and love the truth that was in the man and thus become his disinterested followers. All this follows the embodiment of truth in a life, and it is another feature in the universality of the gospel.

And still another I find in the peculiar method with which the gospel infuses itself into all—the various political states and relations of men—without committing itself to them or directly and immediately interfering with them; other religions, as we know, have laid down political systems, they have bound themselves to ideas of caste, to imperialism, democracy or socialism, and the consequence has been that when these political or social systems to which they are bound have perished, they have perished too.

Now the religion of the gospel never made such a mistake as this. The religion of the gospel never mixed itself up with any political system or any particular phase of society. It held itself perfectly free. It simply entered as a spirit of good into all these without directly interfering with any. It entered into monarchy, and it entered into democracy, but it entered into all these simply as heaven enters into the meal, gradually infusing itself into them, gradually exterminating this evil from them and gradually assimilating each unto itself. Hence it can flourish anywhere—under the most diverse nationalities, in the most strangely constituted societies, with the most strongly contrasted professions and pursuits.

And then again, this religion of the gospel, as we all know, claims kindred even with the lowest ranks in life. It was characteristic of the ancient religions that they sought their votaries principally from the higher classes. They were obsequious to the rich, the learned, the influential. The religion of those days was a proud ecclesiasticism, a philosophy that walked with its head amidst the clouds, an eclecticism that included only the learned, the high-born and the high-bred. But the religion of the gospel was in direct contrast with this. When Jesus came and uttered his soul-inspiring teachings, those to whom he first of all addressed himself were those of the lower class. There was not one from whom he abruptly turned away. When the Pharisees exclaimed, "See, how he eateth with Publicans and sinners," his simple, beautiful reply was: "I came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance."

And still more, to these poor, forlorn children of men it was, that almost all his truths were addressed. They were not the truths of philosophy. They were not the fine spun theories of the schools, but they were the parables of the fishing boat, of the harvest field, of the leaven in the meal, the lost sheep and the lost coin. The ideas which he gave were just those that would impress the hearts of the common people. And this impress which, in the beginning, Jesus stamped on his religion has characterized it ever since. While it is adapted to all, it is pre-eminently a religion for the common people, it finds its home amid the lonely, the humble and unknown.

Moreover, in this religion of the gospel lies the only full and real satisfaction of the wants of the human heart. Here is relief from that sense of guilt, so universal in all ages of the world. Here is the secret of that true calm and composure amid all the trials of life which so many in all ages have so earnestly sought and never fully acquired. Here is that assurance of a blessed immortality beyond the grave, so long prayed for but never truly realized!

We must be very careful not to confound the pure, simple, beautiful religion of Jesus with the simple passions and perversions of men. We must not resort to its poisoned streams, but we must ascend to the pure, sacred fountain itself. There is everything in the gospel rightfully interpreted to make it the religion of the world.

Let us all strive to fulfill the command of the text. This pure, this simple faith of the gospel—this religion devoid of system, embodied in a life, so beautifully entering into all the various relations and conditions of life without interfering with any—this religion finding its most appropriate home in the hearts of the poor, weak, helpless, suffering children of men—this religion, Christ says, we are not to keep to ourselves but we are to scatter it, disseminate it, proclaim it.

And there is more than one way of doing this. We can proclaim the truth and beauty of this gospel of Christ by the living word of mouth, in our daily intercourse with others. True religion remember will be communicative, as soon as a man is truly brought to Christ he will be anxious to bring others.

The wealth acquired by the believer in Christ is a wealth which, so to speak, is kept through being dispersed. The cure accomplished through the gospel of the Redeemer is a cure which is radical only in proportion as it seeks its own extension. Now, it is not given to us, to assume the garb of the missionary. It is not given to us, as to the Apostles, to travel from city to city, and from country to country to preach the gospel of Christ, but we may become missionaries of the Cross at home. Around our own firesides, amid the circle of our own acquaintances and friends, we may ever be ready to speak a word for the Master. It may be but a word commendatory of this religion of the gospel. It may be a word of strict encouragement based upon its promises, or that of reproof founded upon its warnings. It may be breathed by the pious mother as she bids farewell to her boy for the first time entering upon the battle of life. It may be uttered by the anxious Father in his solicitude lest the force of temptation be too much for him.

It may be the word of the pious Sunday school teacher seeking above all things to bring her children to the feet of the Saviour, or that of the bosom friend brought himself to taste of the preciousness of this religion of the gospel, and so desirous that he who is nearest to him should be brought to taste of it likewise—but whatever it is, God may, God can bless that word and make it more effective to His glory than the most eloquent discourse by the most eloquent of preachers.

And we are to proclaim this religion of the gospel especially by a life in correspondence with its pure and holy precepts. Loud as we may speak in the living word we speak still louder in the living life. Indeed the life will tell even when the lips are necessarily mute. Not ours to utter convincing arguments, it is ours to lead holy lives. Not ours to speak sweet, attractive words to draw men to Christ, it is ours to be noble, and pure and sweet ourselves. O believe me, it is not to the learning of an Augustine, it is not to the golden eloquence of a Chrysostom, it is not to the fiery zeal of a Wickliffe or an Huss, it is not to the labors of devoted missionaries in foreign lands or able and learned expositors of the truth at home that Christianity owes one half of its triumphs in the world, but to the beauty of her holiness, the gentleness and meekness of her bearing, the pure, bright consistency of her character as illustrated in the quiet, humble, unobtrusive lives of her followers. Let us all remember that Christianity is not so much a doctrine as it is a life. And that in striving to follow that life we may more effectually obey the command of our text to preach the gospel to every creature, than we can in any other way. And let us all strive to do it. Take it with you, my friends, into the dust and glare of the busy world. Amid the struggles and duties which impose themselves upon you. Amid the temptations which beset you—into the office, into the counting room, into the social circle, into the place of innocent recreation and amusement, take but this with you, and—pure, happy, noble, confident—you may smile when men tell you that Christianity is dead. Do this and with you at least, it will never die.

But there is still one other method of obeying the command of the Lord and that is by encouraging and aiding those agencies which are established for the particular purpose of bringing the gospel to those who know it not. There are many such agencies. There are the larger and more public societies for the church at large, and then there are smaller societies connected with each individual church and which like tributaries to a mighty river help to raise the mighty floods of the waters. Just such an agency we have in the Ladies' Missionary Society of the church. Just such agencies we have in the home mission field—that field which is assuming such vast proportions. And just such an agency we have in the field of foreign missions assuming such vast and encouraging proportions in every part of the world. Friends, let us all do what we can—do what we can to promote the interests of the Master's kingdom. "Go," Christ virtually says to each one of us here to-day, "go and proclaim My gospel to every creature."

The story is told of a famous Boston lawyer that one day, after having a slight discussion with the Judge, he deliberately turned his back upon that personage, and started to walk off. "Are you trying, sir, to show contempt for the Court?" asked the Judge sternly. "No, sir," was the reply, "I am trying to conceal it."

SHOOTING AT RANDOM.

On Saturday evening about half-past 6 o'clock, Mr. Victor Fagerroos and August Herring were about to pass over Smith's bridge when a hawk approached them from the opposite direction. A passenger in the hawk sung out them to get out of the way. They did so, but on passing them, a shot was fired by the hawk passenger. The bullet passed close to Fagerroos' head. He followed up the hawk and the hawk jumped out and again fired at Fagerroos. The person who fired took refuge in a Chinese store. He was recognized as Sol Yung, a general business agent and collector. A warrant was issued for his arrest, and served on him that night by Officer Hopkins. Yesterday morning he was released on bail of $1,000. This morning, on being arraigned in the Police Court, he disclaimed all knowledge of the affair, and said he could prove he was elsewhere at the hour stated. A remand was granted until Wednesday next.

THE FAR NORTH.

The steam schooner Dolphin arrived from the Behring Sea August 29. Capt. Warren says as the Corwin was towing three schooners which she had seized into port, and not caring to follow in the wake of the cutter, he put a little distance between it and the Dolphin. He knows nothing about the seizure further than he can corroborate the statements of other captains as to the distance from land, seventy or eighty miles. During the whole of his cruise Capt. Warren never once sighted St. Paul or St. George, the islands leased to the Alaska Commercial Company. He was, he claims, on the high seas, and the right of search, far less the right of seizure, does not there exist. The Dolphin, which left Victoria on the 18th of May, has had a remarkable successful trip, bringing back probably over 2,000 seals. All the schooners have done well. The season has been very favorable, the weather being clear and calm, with much less fog than usually prevails in those northern latitudes.

The schooner Alfred Adams, from Behring Sea, brings 2,000 seal skins. She reports a submarine volcanic eruption in Behring Sea on the 7th of August, when the deck was covered with ashes for several hours. On July 6th the Adams spoke the schooner Silva Hardy, on the 6th the schooner Teresa, on the 4th the schooner Adele and on the 23rd the schooner Black Diamond. On the 29th the steam whaling Orea was spoken and reported her catch to be five whales in five days. She was blubber-logged after taking in the last one. All was well on board. On August 3rd the whaling bark Ida T. Harriman was spoken. All was well on board, with three catches, one sperm and two right whales.

Great Excitement in Wales about a Marvellous Cure.

Living Six Years Without Going to Bed.

MR. EDITOR:—While spending a few days at the pleasant seaside town of Aberystwith, Cardiganshire, Wales, I heard related what seemed to me either a fabulous story or a marvellous cure.

The story was that a poor sufferer who had not been able to lie down in bed for six long years, given up to the doctors, had been speedily cured by some Patent Medicine. It was related with the more implicit confidence from the circumstance, as was said, that the Vicar of Llanystyd was familiar with the facts, and could vouch for the truth of the report.

Having a little curiosity to know how such stories grow in travelling, I took the liberty while at the village of Llanystyd to call upon the Vicar, the Rev. T. Evans, and to enquire about this wonderful cure. Though a total stranger to him, both he and his wife most graciously entertained me in a half hour's conversation, principally touching the case of Mr. Pugh, in which they seemed to take a deep and sympathetic interest, having been familiar with his sufferings, and now rejoiced in what seemed to them a most remarkable cure.

The Vicar remarked that he recognized his name had been connected with the report from his having mentioned the case to Mr. John Thomas, a chemist of Llanon. He said Mr. Pugh was formerly a resident of that parish, but was now living in the parish of Llandudno.

He strongly vouched Mr. Wm. Pugh's character as a respectable farmer and worthy of credit. I left the venerable Vicar with a livelier sense of the happy relation of a pastor and people, feeling that he was one who truly sympathized with all who are afflicted in mind, body, or estate.

On my return to Aberystwith, I was impressed with a desire to see Mr. Pugh, whose reputation stood so high. His farm is called Pancom-Mawr, signifying "above the dingle," situated near the summit of a smooth round hill, overlooking a beautiful valley in which is situated the lovely Llandudno Church of Llandudno. I found Mr. Pugh, apparently about 40 years old, of medium height, rather slight, with a pleasant and intelligent face. I told him I had heard of his great affliction and his remarkable and almost miraculous relief, and that I had come to learn from his own lips, what there was of truth in the reports.

Mr. Pugh remarked that his neighbors had taken a kindly and sympathetic interest in his case for many years, but of late their interest had been greatly awakened by a happy change in his condition. What you report as having heard abroad, said he, is substantially true, with one exception. I never understood that my case was ever given up as hopeless by any physician. I have been treated by several doctors hereabouts, as good as any in Wales, but unfortunately no prescription of theirs ever brought the desired relief.

Fifteen years ago, he said, I first became conscious of a sour and deranged stomach and loss of appetite, which the doctors told me was Dyspepsia. What food I could hold in my stomach seemed to do me no good and was often thrown up with painful retchings. This was followed after a time with a hoarseness and a raw soreness of the throat, which the doctors called bronchitis, and I was treated for that, but with little success. Then came shortness of breath and a sense of suffocation, especially at night, with dizziness, and I would have to get out of bed and sometimes open a door or window in winter weather to fill my lungs with the cold air.

About six years ago I became so bad that I could not sleep in bed, but had to take my unquiet rest and dreamy sleep sitting in an armchair. My affliction seemed to be working downward into my bowels as well as upwards into my lungs and throat. In the violent coughing spasms which grew more frequent, my abdomen would expand and collapse and at times it would seem that I should suffocate. All this time I was reduced in strength so that I could perform no hard labor and my spirits were consequently much depressed.

A Woman's Sufferings and Gratitude.

A Voice from Austria.

Near the village of Zillingdorf, in Lower Austria, lives Maria Haas, an intelligent and industrious woman, whose story of physical suffering and final relief, as related by herself, is of interest to English women. "I was employed," she says, "in the work of a large farm-house. Overwork brought on sick headache, followed by a deadly fainting and sickness of the stomach, until I was unable to retain either food or drink. I was compelled to take to my bed for several weeks. Getting a little better from rest and quiet, I sought to do some work, but was soon taken with a pain in my side, which in a little while seemed to spread over my whole body, and throbbled in my every limb. This was followed by a cough and shortness of breath, until finally I could not sew, and I took to my bed for the second, and as I thought, for the last time. My friends told me that my time had nearly come, and that I could not live longer than a few hours. Then I happened to get one of the Siegel's pamphlets. I read it, and my dear mother bought me a bottle of Siegel's Syrup, which I took exactly according to directions, and I had not taken the whole of it before I felt a great change for the better. My last illness began June 1, 1883, and continued to August 9th, when I began to take the Syrup. Very soon I could do a little light work. The cough left me, and I was no more troubled in breathing. Now I am perfectly cured. And oh, how happy I am! I cannot express gratitude enough for Siegel's Syrup. Now I must tell you that the doctors in our district distributed handbills cautioning people against the medicine, telling them it would do them no good, and many were thereby induced to destroy the Siegel's pamphlets, but now, wherever one is to be found, it is kept like a relic. The few preserved are borrowed to read, and I have lent mine for six miles around our district. People have come eighteen miles to get me to buy the medicine for them, knowing that it cured me, and to be sure to get the right kind. I know a woman who was looking like death, and who told them there was no help for her, but she had consulted several doctors, but none could help her. I told her of Siegel's Syrup, and wrote the name down for her that she might make no mistake. She took my advice and bought the Syrup, and now she is in perfect health, and the people around us are amazed. The medicine has made such progress in our neighborhood that people say they don't want the doctors any more, but they take the Syrup. Sufferers from gout who were confined to their bed and could hardly move a finger, have been cured by it. There is a girl in our district who caught a cold by going through some water, and was in bed five years with costiveness and rheumatic pains, and had to have an attendant to watch by her. There was not a doctor in the surrounding districts to whom her mother had not applied to relieve her child, but every one crossed themselves and said they could not help her. Whenever the little bell rang which is rung in our place when somebody is dead, we thought surely it was for her, but Siegel's Syrup and Pills saved her life, and now she is as healthy as anybody, goes to church, and can work even in the fields. Everybody was astonished when they saw her out, knowing how many years she had been in bed. Today she adds her gratitude to mine for God's mercies and Siegel's Syrup. MARIA HAAS."

The people of England speak confirming the above.

THE FATE OF THE AMETHYST.

Captain Sandman of the Russian steamer Alexander reports from Petropaulofsky, under date of June 19th, as follows. His letter comes via Victoria to this port: "During the past winter numerous pieces of wood, evidently belonging to some wrecked vessel, have been thrown out on the Commodore Islands, but nothing could be made out of them with the exception of two ship's hatches that came ashore near the village of Copper Island. They are both 5 feet 2 inches long; one 3 feet 5 inches wide; the other 3 feet in width. Each has 3 oak frames; the outer board is oak, the rest pine. There are two iron ring bolts in each, pretty large and old. The hatches have never been painted. I think I shall bring them to San Francisco in the fall, as they look very much like such as the whaler Amethyst would have had."—[S. F. Bulletin.]
