THE LATE CHIEF JUSTICE

With reverent grief THE INDEPENDENT places upon the bier of Dr. Albert Francis Judd, late Chief Justice of the Hawaiian Islands, its wreath of cypress and laurel. Those evergreens live longer than the more perishable flowers as typical of the fact that the Chief Justice's fame will not be transient, but will grow with years as his legal and administrative labors on behalf of Hawaii became better known and more widely appreciated.

As a lawyer, under his leadership, the decisions of the Supreme Court of Hawaii have been recognized by the Judiciary and Bars of highest international repute as having been of the greatest merit and sound to the core. His intimate knowledge of the Islands, the language, traditions, habits and customs of the Hawaiians and the strong attachment the late Chief Justice entertained for the native race were of invaluable assistance to Bench and Bar alike.

As a gentleman he was all that a gentleman should be quiet, considerate, kindly, refined and courteous and at times long suffering and patient under political attacks which would test the forbearance of most men. Ever ready, nay anxious, to assist the young and ambitious as pirant for legal honors he yet could be kindly but reproachfully severe on delinquent transgressors of the code of ethics of the Bar.

He was not an orator but rather a graceful and cultivated speaker possessing the gift of a clear, distinct and musically modulated voice, and that voice could speak words well worth listening to and such as would leave good seed behind if the soil was tilled to receive them. An earnest thinker, an earnest Christian and an earnest patriot, Albert Francis Judd was worthy of his honorable predecessors in the Chief Justiceship of Hawaii, and we reverently bow the head to-day before his grave.

The Queen's Birthday.

The unsigned "By Order" notice calling for a meeting of British Residents, on Saturday evening at the Arlington Hotel, to arrange for a celebration of Queen Victoria's Birthday failed to meet with a responsive echo, but some 25 or 30 very indignant men met and scored the unknown "caller" who was not present and who, it has developed, was Mr. A. St. M. Mackintosh. It is thought probable that a special cricket match may be arranged for the day, but the main effort will be made to honor the day by honoring her Majesty's representative at his reception.

The Kinsu and Claudine last week towed the ship John C. Potter off a mud bank at Kibei. No damage done. She was coal laden.

DEATH OF THE CHIEF JUSTICE.

Mourned by Many He Joins the Great Majority in the Mansions of Eternity.

The tension is over, the silver chord has been severed and Albert Francis Judd, one of Hawaii's most learned and distinguished of Chief Justices, has gone to rest for eternity after his life-long labors faithfully wrought to their end. He died at 7:30 last evening with the echoes of the church bells in his ears.

Albert F. Judd, L. L. D., was born January 7, 1838, and was the son of Rev. Gerritt P. Judd, who arrived in 1833 in Hawaii with the second band of missionaries from Boston. The immense influence exercised and the valuable services rendered by this illustrious man to Hawaii are matters of historical record. It might almost be said that he was mainly responsible for modernizing and Americanizing the system of government on the Islands.

The late Chief Justice was educated at Punahou College under the able tuition of Rev. E. G. Beckwith and Rev. Daniel Dole, the father of our President Governor. He completed his academical and law course at Yale, graduating in 1858 at the age of twenty, and in later years being honored by his Alma Mater with the degree of L. L. D.

Returning to Honolulu he commenced the practice of the law. He travelled extensively through the American continent and Europe to ripen his education and broaden his mind.

In 1873 he was appointed Attorney-General, and on February 18, 1874, accepted the position of Second Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, becoming First Associate Justice on February 1, 1877, and subsequently succeeding to the Chief Justiceship on November 5, 1881, on the death of Chief Justice C. C. Harris. He retained the position until his death, as a tendered resignation has not been officially accepted.

On February 18, 1899, the 25th anniversary of the late Chief Justice's appointment to the Bench was celebrated by a banquet given to him by the members of the Hawaiian Bar, over which General A. S. Hartwell presided, and at which President Dole and nearly every member of the Bar in Honolulu were present. The sentiments of respect and the expressions of confidence in his wisdom, ability and integrity then expressed were endorsed by all, and more especially the fact of the vast beneficial influence he had wisely used in educating the Hawaiian magistracy, for he was a thorough Hawaiian scholar, and the young lawyers of the Hawaiian race to whom he was fondly attached.

The late Chief Justice married early in life Miss Agnes R. Boyd, daughter of Rev. James R. Boyd of Geneva, New York, and seven sons and two daughters survive.

They are Agnes E. Judd, Albert F. Judd, Jr., James R. Judd, Henry Judd, who is at present in Yale College in the junior class, Charles Sheldon Judd, Gerritt P. Judd, Lawrence McCully Judd and Sophie Boyd Judd. Besides these are the three sisters of the deceased, Mrs. E. K. Wilder, Mrs. Augusta Carter and Miss Helen Judd.

The flags on the Executive and Judiciary buildings were half masted today, the Courts and the government offices were closed, and the doors of the Judiciary building bore the sombre signs of mourning in respectful homage to the memory of late Chief Justice.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Nuuanu Valley at 4 o'clock this afternoon and not from Central Union Church, and the solemn services will be conducted by Rev. W. M. Kincaid.

As the Chief Justice demitted from the Masonic fraternity some time ago it is thought not probable that the masons will make any official demonstration, especially as it is the desire of the family to have a simple funeral. The public character of the deceased will, however, naturally call for the attendance of public officials and of the Judiciary and the Bar.

The pall bearers will be the six sons of the Chief Justice now resident in Honolulu.

In death the calm expression of the Chief is there but the face and frame are much attenuated.

Getting Extravagant.

President Dole has visited Koolau on this island to look into the interests of the Settlers who wish to surrender their leases of 1750 acres in exchange for the privilege of settling on the land as home-leaders.

Mr. Dole was greeted by the school children at Huna, who were told to turn out en masse (26) and sing patriotic songs like "I would leave my happy home for you;" "The girl I left behind on Hawaii;" and "There will be a hot time at the primaries."

The President will take a deep and practical interest in the lands, and as an earnest he sent a baseball outfit to the boys and a croquet set to the girls.

The name of Dole is now forever commemorated at the Hauula school, and the taxpayers are anxious to know whether the generous gift of the governor was paid out of the fund from which he swelled the Maine fund to his personal glorification.

A DAY OF MERRIMENT.

Employees of the G. P. O. Close Shop, And Have An Outing

The long train of fine passengers cars were filled with gaily attired excursionists outside the railroad station yesterday morning, when the crowd surging on the platform was suddenly increased by a large number of young people, whose faces were familiar to the public and whose hats were "stamped" with leis.

It was the Post Office employees bound for a vacation of a few hours and having for once a day off.

During the past five years there has not been a Sunday which the hardworking "boys" could call their own. Fate made a steamer arriving or departing on every Sunday and the mail men had to stay in their harness and hustle and grin and bear it.

They were determined to have a picnic however and after consulting timetables and steamer schedules it was found that May 20 would be a day on which even Dr. Sereno Bishop couldn't growl for not having letters, not arrived, delivered to him.

The idea of the picnic was started about Christmas time when the Le Munyon Photographic Co. presented the P. O. clerks with a purse of $25 as a token of its appreciation of the work of the bureau. Louis Kenake, who knows a luau when he sees it, called on the boys and without stuffing a ballot box it was decided to use Le Munyon's generous gift as a foundation for the celebration of a general holiday. The boys subscribed freely and the business houses who remember the bureau every Christmas by a present were asked to "hold on" until the right day was there, which they did with pleasure adding to their Christmas boxes several extras of the very best brand.

Yesterday morning the P. O. party, 52 in number, got on board the morning train. The party was composed of all the employees of the Bureau with the exception of the Postmaster-General and his brother, who were unable to attend owing to the serious illness of the latter. In the party were also Mr. Le Munyon, the guest of honor, ex-employees of the Post Office and representatives of the Press, besides "Jock" Maguire, who personally conducted the party to Waipahu where the feast took place.

While near Moanalua a steamer was sighted coming into port, and the boys with great joy yelled, "You are too late, we can't go back." (It was only the Bloemfontein and she carried no mail.)

At Waipahu everything was in readiness to accommodate the party. Mr. Levi, one of the oldest employees of the Post Office, lives at Waipahu and he had full charge of the luau, which was to take place in an open lot adjoining his cosy home.

Louis Kenake was the host of the day, and was, like he is in the "mail mill" here, there and everywhere. He attended to the "inner man" of all present and never overlooked his own digestive container. Mr. Le Munyon took several pictures of the happy crowd, and the mandolin and other instruments furnished an improvised orchestra.

When Kenake said "ready" the party fell to with a good will, and the table laden with all the delicacies of a native luau was beleaguered and justice done to clams, crabs, fish, pig, poi, etc. A few bottles of beer were also unsealed for the benefit of the "appraisers."

Speeches were in order and Louis Kenake made an eloquent address in honor of Mr. Le Munyon, who really was the originator of the outing. Then there were toasts to the Postmaster, to the Secretary, to Kenake and his long suffering delivery department, to the ex-employees, to "Jock" Maguire and even to the Press.

When all were satisfied Louis heaved a sigh and whispered: "I wish they would be as ready to sail in, when a mail arrives as they are to tackle the refreshments," and he suggested a visit to the Oahu Sugar Co.'s mill. It was great interest to all to take a walk through that magnificent building, especially to those in the party who never saw a mill before. It was also amusing to listen to some of those who know a mill from outside explaining in an easy Munchausen manner the process of sticking a stick of cane in at one end, having wheels run around and, behold, get the golden dividends in Honolulu.

The iron horse snorted however, and the train made a halt to pick up the jolly party which had thoroughly enjoyed the outing and the members of which felt ready to return to routine work to-day, but all hoping that five years shall not pass by before another Post Office excursion takes place. Next time, Louis, it will bewrong of the "mail" department to exclude the female friends. They will resent it, and where will the boys be without the "girls on the Post Office verandah?"

primaries Saturday in the Fourth
