PEPPERMINT AND ITS SOURCE.

A Small County in New York Said to Supply the World.

"Nice peppermint drops these?" said a leading druggist, as he weighed out 10 cents worth to a lady customer.

"Yes, and have you any idea where peppermint comes from?"

"Raised in most places, along streams, and gathered by country folks and sold to country druggists."

"No, sir; not a bit of it. The world's supply of peppermint comes from a single county in New York, Wayne by name, of which Lyons is the county seat, a pretty town on the River Clyde, and half way between Rochester and Syracuse. Well, last summer I spent some time in the town, and was surprised to find that the raising of peppermint, which would be called almost a wild herb, was here a great industry."

"Millions in it?"

"Yes, and the origin of it becoming a business is interesting. They told me there that about sixty years ago, or about the time the Erie canal was opened, that there was a Connecticut Yankee named Burnett, who made his living by raising peppermint and distilling it, putting into little bottles and traveling over the country and selling it. That was long before the day of patent medicines or drug stores. This Burnett owned a small farm near Deerfield, Conn., a sort of hillside concern, where the weed grew wild. In his travels he got as far west as Lyons, where he discovered abundance of his profitable weed growing wild along the streams. Well, he caught the western fever and selling his farm came to New York."

"Made a success of it?"

"Not only that, but the weed here possessed not only an abundance of oil, but of a better quality, and he embarked his all in the manufacture of the oil. He made so much out of it that the neighbors followed suit and either distilled on their own lands or turned over their crops to Burnett."

"He was a sort of peppermint king?"

"No; that honor was reserved for another man—Hiram G. Hotchkiss—who is now 75 years old and has become a millionaire out of the weed."

"What is the crop worth this year?"

"The mint acreage is about 4,000 acres, and this is not more than half what it would have been if the season had been favorable. The total product of oil this year will be $120,000. In a fairly good season it rises to $200,000."

"It's no longer a weed, then?"

"Not out there. It is a legitimate agricultural crop, planted and attended to as wheat or potatoes—Cincinnati Enquirer."

Hot Water for Members of Congress.

In one of the secluded rooms connected with the house of representatives is a most elaborate wash-stand, with a nickel-plated faucet arising from the center. During the lunch hour a colored attendant is kept busy washing and wiping delicate glasses, which he keeps arranged in perfect order around this wash-stand.

It happened to go into this room, and saw a sight which is worth describing. A well-known congressman entered and asked the servant for a glass of water. The attendant turned the wheel of the faucet, and filled the glass full of hot water and handed it to him. The member sipped it slowly, and while doing so two others came in and went through the same performance. The servant who tells me that I would be surprised to know the number of congressmen who are taking the hot-water cure. There are two or three dyspeptics in the house who regularly take three or four glasses a day—one before congress meets, at noon, one before lunch, an hour or two later, and one after adjournment. Since they have been taking the cure they claim that they are troubled very little with their complaint.—Washington Post.

The Customer Was in a Hurry.

Waiter—Is y' in a hurry?

Customer—Yes, yes.

Waiter—Den why not take dat steak rare 'stead of well done if y' is in a hurry, boss?—New York Sun.

Old Book on Colonial History.

Maj. Ben. Perley Peers has a copy of "De Br's Voyages in Virginia," a valuable and interesting, printed in 1580—being 290 years old! Who has an older book on colonial history than this?—De troit Free Press.

Then Let Him Be Anathema.

The man who always leaves the door open behind him is first cousin to the one who scatters orange-skins on the sidewalk, and is likewise a poor relation of the one who never cleans the snow and ice off his sidewalk.—Chicago Journal.

Oil Fields with Curious Names.

The petroleum fields in New York have the curious titles, "Oil of Joy" and "Grass-opper Field." The first is named after the discoverer of the field and the latter from the appearance of huge old-fashioned beams which pump the oil.

England's Discounted Cavalry Troops.

The latest returns published by the war office regarding the twenty-four regiments of regular cavalry in the British army show that for upward of 17,000 cavalry troopers there are only about 10,000 chargers.

MORE ABOUT THE APPROPRIATION FOR ROADS.

In addition to the appropriations set forth in the Advertiser yesterday as available for the streets of Honolulu and roads adjacent thereto, there is a further sum of $2,987 98 road tax unexpended in the district of Kona, Island of Oahu.

Honolulu forms part of this district, and therefore is entitled to a share of the amount stated.

Beyond this sum, the bulk of which should certainly be spent within the limits of Honolulu proper, we have special appropriations for this district mixed up with those for the Island of Kauai, which misarrangement reflects somewhat upon the Revision Committee.

These are:

Bridge and grading Punchbowl street.....$1,000

Bridge and grading Kinau street.....5,000

Opening road from Kamahele to Smith's bridge.....2,000

The Punchbowl and Kinau street appropriations were intended to pay old liabilities, and therefore do not count.

We presume the debt incurred on this work will be paid, but it will be seen that there is still something to come and go upon besides. It follows therefore that there is a sufficient sum available for the construction and repair of streets and roads in and around Honolulu if the Minister so applies it. The necessity for road construction and repairs cannot be questioned with any pretense to honesty or truth, although there has been a denial of it in a native paper. The truth is, the line of Beretania street is dangerous to life, while the road to Waikiki is also in a very bad condition. Other roads and thoroughfares are equally bad. As the weather appears to be settled for the time being, would it not be well to apply some of the available revenue to this absolutely necessary work? Of course we quite understand that the Legislature, having largely exceeded all possible income in its appropriations, a great deal generally will depend upon the discretion of the Government as to expenditure, but in this particular case executive discretion is restricted considerably, and at least the road tax is available and may not lawfully be diverted to any other purpose.

We do not lose sight of the fact, however, that other districts of the Kingdom are quite as badly off in the matter of roads and bridges as Honolulu. They likewise are entitled to their road tax and specific appropriations, or as much of the latter as may be available. Concurrent testimony from all the islands declare the state of the roads to be a disgrace to the Kingdom. This testimony should not be disregarded. The revenues of the Government are very largely derived from direct taxes, and it is one people and property owners find that they obtain nothing in return for their contribution to the public treasury, they may conclude that an entire change of system should be inaugurated by way of experiment. It is in the power of the Administration to satisfy the just and reasonable expectations and requirements of the country, but if they ignore these, on their own heads be the responsibility for what may follow.

ASTRONOMICAL OBSERVATIONS AND OTHER SCIENTIFIC WORK.

Professor W. D. Alexander and Mr. E. D. Preston, of the United States Coast Survey, proceeded to Pearl Harbor yesterday by the Government tug Pella, which was placed at their disposal by His Excellency the Minister of the Interior. They will probably be absent four or five days, during which interval they will endeavor to determine the exact latitude of the island of Oahu by a series of observations upon twenty-four pairs of stars. Should fine weather continue there can be no doubt of the absolute success of these observations. A pier has been constructed near the salt works, inside Pearl Harbor, where the observations will be taken.

Great scientific interest attaches to this work, as also to the pendulum experiments which Mr. Preston will conduct when his astronomical observations are finished. It will be remembered that Mr. E. D. Preston was charged with the duty of determining the force of gravity from pendulum observations at Caroline Island in 1883, when he was attached to the United States Eclipse expedition in the Hartford that year, and that he made similar experiments at Lahaina and Honolulu on his return. The result was so successful and interesting in determining the fact that there is a large deflection of gravity caused by the attraction of mountain masses, that it was deemed of importance to continue the experiments on a more extended scale at some future time. Through the persistent efforts of Professor Alexander this is now in a fair way of accomplishment. His Excellency Mr. Aholo has given authority to incur the necessary expense to bring the pendulum apparatus of the United States Government from Washington to this country, and for its efficient use while here. As it weighs several tons the magnitude of the undertaking will be apparent. The friendly and considerate act of the United States authorities in this particular should not pass without recognition and thanks.

THE MCGIFFIN TRIAL.

Second Day of the Proceedings—The Prisoner Found Guilty—Sentence Deferred.

The trial of McGiffin was resumed in the Supreme Court yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The first witness called was John Kidwell, who stated that after the robbery he saw Harry McChesney with a man in a wagon whom he thought was McGiffin.

Mrs. McChesney stated—I know McGiffin. He is present in Court. Have seen him around my house, once alone and once with my son. They came together with a load of watermelons. McGiffin was seated on the wagon and turned away when I went out. It looked as if he did not want to see me. I remember the time the money was stolen. It was steamer day. McGiffin came once to my house. It was after a trunk had been stolen. He came to look over the house to find out a clue to the thief. Cross-examined—My son is 16. I do not remember the time the trunk was stolen. McGiffin came soon after, and I showed him over the house. We have a monkey. McGiffin was not playing with it the day they came with the watermelons. I have complained to the authorities about my son keeping late hours. He earned $10 a week at the store. I collected the money and gave him $2 out of it each week. I had never suspected him of being dishonest. I collected his wages because I thought a boy of his age should not have so much money.

The prosecution here rested.

Mr. Creighton moved for the discharge of the defendant on the ground that there was a fatal variance between the allegations in the indictment and the proof. The indictment alleges the amount to be $930 of lawful money of the realm, whereas the proof is that a large part of the money consisted of Spreckels & Co.'s certificates and U. S. greenbacks, which are not lawful money. Again, the prosecution has not proved that they are of any value. There was also a variance between the description of the property in the indictment and the proof, and the proof does not identify the property in such a way as would enable the defendant to plead an acquittal or conviction if charged subsequently with a larceny of the same thing.

After argument by the Attorney General, the Chief Justice overruled the motion to discharge the defendant, as under the statute the indictment was sufficient.

Mr. Creighton noted exceptions to the ruling.

The first witness called for the defense was Fred Grannis, who stated—I am an operator for the Mutual Telephone Company. I have known Harry McChesney quite a while. Have been with him a good deal. Met him at different times of the day. I went with him once to Waialua. It was after the 10th of September. While there he made a proposition to me that he could get money from his father, and wanted me to put it into the bank in my name. I refused, and told him I did not want anything to do with it, as I did not wish to get into trouble. Cross-examined—McChesney met me and asked me to go to Waialua. We went to his house first. Harry got some tins of fruit and meat and put them into the brake. I saw Mrs. McChesney and spoke to her. I cannot say for certain that I asked Mrs. McChesney to let Harry go to Waialua. I told her I was going to fetch some horses from there, and wanted Harry to help me to bring them up. I was looking for horses for a Mr. Cameron. While at Waialua we stopped at Emerson's. We were there from Thursday to Saturday. It was on the Friday that the conversation took place about putting the money in the bank. We quarreled at one time about some stamps. I have lived in the same house as McGiffin on Emma street. I have never been out with him at nights.

Mr. Justice Bickerton was next called, and testified as to the criminal record kept by him in the Police Court when Police Justice, in the case of the King vs. McChesney and McGiffin, on the 28th of October.

Police Justice Dayton stated—I know Mrs. McChesney. At the time I was Deputy Marshal I remember her coming to me about Harry. I cannot state how often she came. Her other son came more frequently. It was during the absence of the father at the Coast that complaints were made. Harry would stay out late at nights. He was like the rest of boys.

J. H. Soper stated—I was Marshal of the Kingdom at one time. I know McGiffin. I gave him a commission as special police officer. His name did not appear on the pay roll at the Station House. Cross-examined—McGiffin was engaged in opium cases; also in other cases. He had given information to the Attorney General which was very valuable. He was paid by the Attorney General, but in what form I do not know. I think his salary was charged to incidentals. I could not say that he received most of his pay from opium cases. Capt. O'Connor first told me about McGiffin. I had no knowledge of his character at the time I appointed him. His commission was cancelled some time before I went out of office. I do not remember authorizing him to go to McChesney's house to search.

This concluded the evidence for the defense. The Court took a recess until 1 o'clock.

On resuming, Mr. Creighton commenced his argument for the defense. The evidence of Harry McChesney, he said, had not been corroborated in any material point, therefore the jury could not convict on the evidence of an accomplice not corroborated. He reviewed the whole of the evidence, pointing out to the jury discrepancies, and looked upon the case as a McChesney conspiracy. In conclusion he asked the jury to acquit the prisoner. Mr. Creighton spoke one hour and twenty-five minutes.

The Attorney General, on behalf of the Crown, argued that the evidence of Harry McChesney had been corroborated on material points by independent witnesses. He spoke for half an hour.

The Chief Justice charged the jury at some length. If the jury found that the evidence of McChesney had been corroborated materially, then they should find the defendant guilty of receiving stolen property. His Honor was very explicit in propounding the law to the jury.

At 10 minutes past 3 o'clock the jury retired to consider their verdict. Seven minutes later they brought in a unanimous verdict, finding the defendant guilty of receiving stolen property over the value of $100.

Mr. Creighton noted exceptions to the verdict as contrary to law and the evidence.

McGiffin was then removed and sent on to the reef. He is an old jail bird, having been on the reef several years for implication in a robbery at a laundry. He was also mixed up in the theft of a canoe. How he came to be commissioned a police officer with such a record is a mystery that a good many people in this community would like cleared up.

The punishment prescribed for receiving stolen property over the value of $100 is imprisonment at hard labor not exceeding five years and a fine of $500.

The following are the receipts of domestic produce for the week ending Friday, January 21st: Sugar, 25,030 bags; rice, 2,374 bags; paddy, 1,724 bags; bananas, 2,458 bunches; corn, 224 bags; ginger, 50 bags; pia, 30 bags; 400 skins and 24 hides.

There were shipped to San Francisco during this week 24,047 bags sugar, 575 bags rice, 51 kegs molasses, 54 boxes beet leaves, 3,140 bunches bananas, 1,587 hides and 1,289 skins. The domestic produce was valued at $132,264 80.

He Would Not Serve It.

A subpoena was presented to Marshal Kaulukou yesterday to serve. He refused to do so, as it was not properly made out. It was to subpoena J. H. Soper in the case of The People vs. McChesney and McGiffin, whereas it should have been The King vs. McChesney and McGiffin. The Marshal is evidently well posted in law, as this little incident will prove.

Road Work.
A gang of prisoners is employed throwing the accumulated mud from the sides of Liliha street to the center of the road. If the roadbed is skillfully made and covered a sufficient depth with hard rock of uniform grade, the work will be permanent. Unfortunately there is no hard rock available, although it might be easily procured, and it is intended to tide over the difficulty by spreading coral roughly on it. This will be better than nothing, however, and in a few weeks perhaps Liliha street will be available for wheeled vehicles without incurring any extra risk for springs.

A second gang of prisoners has been similarly engaged on Punahou street. So deep was the accumulation of mud on the center of the road, however, as a result of their labor, that two or three days ago the school bus stuck fast in it, and the children were forced to get out and wade through the tenacious clay as best they could to the somewhat firmer footing close to the fence on the roadside. Whether anything will be done in the way of metaling Punahou street remains to be seen. The Waikiki end of Beretania street is impassable, and must be properly built.

The Explorer.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock their Excellencies L. Aholo, Minister of the Interior, and P. P. Kanoa, Minister of Finance, accompanied by Mr. John A. Hassinger, Chief Clerk of the Interior Department, and Mr. Julius H. Smith, Superintendent of Public Works, boarded the steamer Explorer, lying in the stream. His Excellency Mr. Aholo took formal possession of the vessel on behalf of the Hawaiian Government, and Mr. Hassinger hoisted the Hawaiian flag at the mizenmast. The vessel is now in charge of F. Marcos, late police officer, acting for the Interior Department.

A Runaway.

Yesterday afternoon a horse attached to an express carriage owned by Manuel Reis was on the United Company's stand, corner of King and Fort streets, when some foolish person came along and struck the animal rather sharply on the back. This startled it, and it dashed on to the sidewalk between Hall's store and another carriage and turned on to Fort street. When the animal reached Wilder's corner the carriage struck the fence near the fountain, and its career was stopped. The carriage was damaged to the extent of about $50.

The stern-wheel steamer Ewa arrived January 21st, 45 minutes from Pearl River, with 150 bunches bananas.

The schooner Rob Roy arrived from Koolau January 21st with 420 bags rice.

The steamers Kinan, Likelike, Lehu, Eilauea, Hon, Surprise and Mokohi will arrive to-day from windward ports.

The American bark Southern Chief sailed January 21st for Hongkong with 12 Chinese passengers, six of whom were from this port, and the rest in transit from Portland, Oregon. She has also on board 650,000 feet lumber.

The schooner Walohi brought 1,040 bags sugar from the Grove Ranch Plantation, Maui, which were transferred to the tern W. S. Bowler January 21st. She encountered severe weather on her last trip, and several of her sails were torn, which compelled her to put into Molokai to mend them before proceeding to Kuan.

Captain Charles Smith of the schooner Walohi states that the steamer Surprise, which left this port last Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, arrived at Kuan, Maui, at 1 o'clock last Thursday afternoon, having encountered a succession of head winds since leaving this port.

The schooners Waleha and Waimanu, on account of the exceedingly boisterous weather at Kuan, Maui, were obliged to seek refuge at Lahaina, Maui, where they were safely at anchor when the schooner Walohi left.

THE ISLANDS OF THE PACIFIC.

An Entertaining Lecture by Mr. J. T. Arundel, F. R. G. S., London—Facts About Samoa.

An extremely interesting lecture was delivered at the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening by Mr. John T. Arundel, F. R. G. S., to a large and appreciative audience. Starting on the line of the steamer track from San Francisco, he gave his personal impressions respecting the islands on and near its route. Passing over the Sandwich Islands, as they were probably better known by the audience than by himself, he briefly touched upon Starbuck Island, Fanning's Island, which latter he anticipated would grow into great importance on the completion of the proposed cable; Sydney Island, and a group of special interest, that of Samoa. He briefly sketched the social and political conditions prevailing under King Malietoa and how his authority is menaced from time to time by the Vice King. The Samoans he considered one of the largest races of the Pacific, but also one of the most warlike. The original Malietoa, from whom the present Monarch was descended, occupied very much the same relation to Samoa as Kamehameha did to the Hawaiian Islands, for he was the founder of the present dynasty. He was a great warrior, and since he died the people had been less inclined to fight. The Samoans in later years had acquired a remarkable predilection for cricket, but they were not in the habit of playing with teams of eleven. A team usually comprised about a hundred. One village would play another, and a large amount of time was consumed in this way. One of the old missionaries held cricket to be sinful, and prohibited church members from playing the game, but the younger missionaries of the present day encouraged it. The lecturer, for his own part, thought it a fine thing to get the Samoans to do anything at all of a physical nature. Not long ago a lengthy petition was got up and signed by the King, Vice King and nearly every Chief in Samoa. It was addressed to Queen Victoria, and set forth that various nations were casting eager glances upon the Islands, but their own wish, if they were to belong to any one, that they should belong to the British Queen. It had been shown to the lecturer by the English Consul, who said he was afraid it was not worth the paper it was written upon. Shortly after this the German merchants, who were very much annoyed about it, began to talk politics to the people. Their reply was in effect, "We have written to Queen Victoria, and we are not going to do anything except play cricket until we hear from her." On the island of Tutuila, off the west cape of which the mail steamers call, was one of the finest land-locked harbors in the Pacific, Pangopango Harbor. In appearance it resembled a beautiful Scotch Lake. Mr. Arundel had visited this harbor in his steamer the Explorer (now in Honolulu), and it was not long before the vessel was surrounded by canoes and 500 or 600 natives came on board, it being impossible to restrain them, even the steam whistle striking but momentary terror into their hearts. The object in going there was to have the steamer painted, which was impracticable while the natives persisted in coming on board. The matter was accordingly represented to a Chief of reputed influence named Maunga, who settled the difficulty by coming on board herself, none but her immediate attendants being permitted to follow. He described this Chiefess as being a fine, strapping girl of 18, whose presence seemed to fill the entire saloon. So great was the respect in which the sanctity of Sunday was observed, that even the sudden advent in the harbor of a steamer of 3,000 tons did not attract the natives from church. This incident was given to show the reality of Christian teaching in Samoa. Referring to the natural history of the group, a singular fact was stated with regard to a sea worm called the palolo, which made its appearance regularly upon the same day each year with undeviating regularity in October or November, according to the phase of the moon. It was the custom of the natives to go out in canoes at the appointed time to catch them. The Washington Commission now sitting to consider the future of Samoa was briefly alluded to, but the lecturer did not think there need be any fear for Samoa's future, for had not Samoa been taken under the wing of Hawaii? [Applause.] Speaking of the other island groups, he stated that in several of their number there had been some great chief, a born leader of men, who in each case might be regarded as a parallel character to Kamehameha, notably, Thakambau of Fiji, Malietoa of Samoa, Queen Pomare of Tahiti and George of Tonga. The latter, who was still living, was over 90 years of age, and nearer seven feet than six in stature. The Kermadec Islands, the latest acquisition of the British Crown, were briefly touched upon, as also Macanlay's Island, Sunday Island, the Society Islands, the Friendly, the Gilbert, the Marquesas and the Solomon Islands, besides many others, nearly all of which were personally familiar to the lecturer, and concerning nearly every one of which he had something of interest to say, which held the attention of the audience throughout. The Pacific Islands were characterized as one of the most successful fields of missionary enterprise, it having been mutually agreed among the different denominations to allot a particular section to each one. Every line of steam communication was described, that in the southern part of the ocean world being very much more extensive than was generally supposed. In conclusion, the lecturer foreshadowed the vast importance which would be likely to attach to the Pacific in the future upon the introduction of new lines of steamers, opening of the Panama Canal and the completion of the cable. He also urged upon the white residents of Oceania the moral responsibility which rested upon them to exert a refining, pure and noble influence over the aboriginal races.

The lecture was evidently much appreciated, as shown by the frequent applause and the many personal compliments tendered at its conclusion, one lady presenting Mr. Arundel with a floral tribute in the shape of a magnificent bouquet of roses.

The Honolulu Almanac and Directory.

This annual for the present year has been laid on our table. As its title page indicates, it contains complete statistical and general information relating to the Hawaiian Islands. The directory pages and commercial and vital statistics make it an invaluable work of reference. Beneath each month's astronomical table and calendar appear readable editorial remarks on subjects relating to the Islands, giving such information as tourists will like to have so compactly. Mr. Laine contributes an article on "Spanish Discoveries of Hawaiian Islands." There is an editorial description of the Hawaiian Islands; also a review of the year 1886, an account of the King's Jubilee last year, another of the great fire of April 18th last; a statement of the city improvements recently made and projected, and a statement of the Royal Hawaiian Band and its doings. There are also reports of the wreck of the ship Dunnotar Castle, of improvements to the water works, marine casualties and other events of the past year. Mr. F. L. Clarke discourses in several pages on ferns and calabashes, being a recognized connoisseur in both fern lore and native archaeology. The editor describes graphically the voyage between San Francisco and the Colonies. Moreover, there is a historical sketch of the partially built St. Andrew's Memorial Cathedral and a notice of the new Kaumakapili native church. The almanac is finely printed, and altogether a credit to the ADVERTISER office in mechanical execution. Mr. R. J. Creighton, the editor and compiler, has in this work made a monument to his literary capacity and industry in the Hawaiian archives.—[Daily Herald.]
