THE CLOWN HAS HAD HIS DAY.

The Double Circus-Ring and the Wealth of Attractions Killed Him.
(New York Mail and Express.)
"It is a sad fact," mournfully said a veteran circus manager, "but it is beyond dispute that the days of the joke cracking and song-singing clown are over. He expired when the double circus-ring came into vogue. In his place the horse-play or pantomimic Grimaldi arose."
"How did the double ring kill the witty(?) clown?" asked a reporter.
"The vast audience could not hear him. The miles of canvas, the amphitheaters, filled with 10,000 people, made the great lung power necessary to be heard an utter impossibility. The large railroad traveling circuses have nothing but pantomimic clowns. In the small shows, where actors are few and something must be done to fill in the time for the acrobats or whatever they may be to rest, before they appear in some other daring feat, under other dazzling names, the song-singing, punning clown is used. But he is fast going out for other reasons. The newspapers and almanacs contain nearly all the jokes and puns, and to repeat them in the ring over and over again becomes monotonous and tires even those who do not read. Then to supplant this, horse-play was invented."
"What do you mean by horse-play?"
"Broad humor. For instance, the clown sticks a needle in a chair, and the ring-master innocently sits down on it. He goes up in a hurry. This kind of fun tickles the audience. They see it and understand the point made, but it is not so with a pun or joke. I was a clown before I became proprietor and I know all the inside tricks of the profession. When I traveled in the small towns of 8,000 and 10,000 inhabitants I always managed to pump some gaudy man in the town before the performance, so as to get off a local gag. This always pleased the audience, and occasionally caused a little row if the 'gag' was at the expense of some fellow in the audience. Then I would sing a song and hear all the little boys in the streets singing it afterward. There was some glory in that. But now the clown is a first-class tumbler and a good pantomimist to succeed. He sinks his individuality with some ten or fifteen others, who come out caricatured in the audience. The lines are drawn and the old order giveth way to the new. Grimaldi's mask has more fun in it than Dan Rice's double entendre jokes. Sic transit gloria mundi."

The Yankee in Cuba.
(Harper's Bazar.)
Genuine Yankees, such as are portrayed on the stage, are growing very scarce. Most persons have never seen one, and believe that quaint angular figures, drawing nasal tones, and odd conceits ascribed to them, are the products of the brains of novelists and playwrights. Nevertheless they do exist, and the writer met one in Santiago de Cuba the other day. The city is a very strange place. The houses and stores are so built that the walls can be almost entirely thrown open, while the interiors have courts that are unroofed and unobstructed to the sky. The money of the country is familiar to an American. The Yankee had just landed when he spoke as follows: "Somehow I can't tell when I'm indoors and when I'm out. I've got a room, or something, in a hotel here, and I've been into it, quandering around, but I could not tell when I was in the parlor or when I was in the kitchen or back yard, so I'm standing out here in the park not to make any mistake. I started down the street a minute ago, but I got afraid I might make a mistake and get arrested for 'bein' found in somebody's back parlor. I've got a lot of the money of the place, but I can't make heads nor tails of it. I took some of it back when I got it, and passed it over the same counter—so I reckon it's genuine. I could write the history of the place already. All I need is the dates. It was evidently built the year after the flood; it's been shook down by an earthquake, burned up by a volcano, resettled, and left just as 'twas found. The whole country is best what it's been let alone. Wherever the people have touched it they've made a mess of it."

At the Dog Modiste's.
(Chicago Journal.)
An American lady who visited the store of a dog modiste in Paris declares that she never before had seen such amusing sights. The place was not so much a store as an establishment with halls and rooms richly furnished. Ladies tripped in and out all day long, most of the visitors having with them pugs and terriers. The pet dogs were scattered through the rooms, each awaiting its turn. Many small mats and rugs were around waxed floors, and every bit of carpeting of the kind was occupied by some pretty little creature. These dogs have various dresses. The robe used in the morning is a garment of dark blue cloth. It is called a pailot, and is lined with red flannel. From a leather collar little bellsingle as its wearer walks along. Sometimes a bunch of violets is fastened on the left shoulder of the dog. On very cold days the pet is clad in sealskin of the same pattern, the collar being in fur mounted in silver.

(Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.)
Some people think it would be nice if everybody in the world would mind their own business. But it would not. Over one-half of the people in the world would be out of employment and not know what to do with themselves.

JAPANESE IMMIGRANTS.

The arrival of a Japanese steamer with 973 immigrants is an event of more than passing interest. No other class of labor yet introduced to these Islands promises such satisfactory results as the Japanese. By this arrival, however, there is a great disparity between the sexes, there being only 35 females to 938 males. So far as manual labor is concerned this may be satisfactory, but looked upon from social and economic grounds it is regrettable. Women are as much wanted as men—indeed, more so—to build up the fabric of this country.

Mr. Irwin, Hawaiian Charge d'Affaires at Tokyo, who was a passenger by the Japanese steamer, reports that there were 28,000 applicants for passages, which sets the question of supply at rest. He, however, rejected all applicants except those who were practical agriculturists and young men. Three classes of applicants were rejected wholly—those who had not performed their full military service in the Japanese army; those who belonged to the old military order; and lastly, fishermen. We think the Hawaiian Government and planters will approve Mr. Irwin's method of selection.

It is a matter of deep regret that infectious disease should have broken out among the passengers, but the fact that no death occurred during the voyage is a proof of the high average condition of the health of the immigrants. This being the case, we anticipate that the medical staff at the quarantine station will soon be able to master the disease, which has appeared only in its mildest form. We understand that in addition to isolating the sick and those who show suspicious systems, the health authorities will separate those who are well into groups of convenient numbers, keeping them quite apart from each other. This will still further tend to limit the area of infection, and will enable those groups which are unquestionably well to be discharged from quarantine earlier than they would otherwise probably be.

ATTENTION ON FEMALE LUNATICS.

Some time ago we noticed the fact that females in the lunatic asylum of this Kingdom were entrusted to the care of male Kanaka attendants, and we protested against the continuance of the system as absolutely wrong in every possible aspect. Better, we said, bring trained female nurses from abroad than continue in the matter, and no interest whatever appears to be taken in the condition of these unhappy females, even by their own sex. There are female organizations in Honolulu for a great variety of objects, but when it comes down to the practical work of humanity we don't find many of them to the fore. Why not take our charitable institutions into the scope of local female philanthropy. There is a wide field for usefulness open. Let charitable, Christian women step into it and see that our public institutions are properly managed, at least so far as female inmates are concerned. We do not know whether anything improper has taken place in our lunatic asylum, but we do know that opportunities exist, and that human nature is not less degraded here than in New England, for example, where great scandals have grown out of precisely similar conditions. The following editorial note from the Rochester "Democrat and Chronicle" will sufficiently justify what we have written in this relation:

Scandalous stories about the management of the Massachusetts insane asylum and other charitable institutions are coming to light. It appears that officials and attendants have been sustaining improper relations with female patients. The Buffalo "Courier" makes the excellent suggestion that such scandals might be avoided by placing female patients under the care of those of their own sex. "In our day," it says, "unless the iniquities, to which women are subjected are the theme of constant discussion, and when women are seeking employment in every avenue of business and industry, it is singular that no sticklers for their rights are found to urge the propriety and justice of giving to women exclusively the management of public institutions for the care or for the punishment of feeble-minded or criminal women."

DIRECT TRADE WITH JAPAN.

We understand that the Japanese Government are anxious to promote direct trade with Honolulu and San Francisco. Should a Japanese steamship line be established on this route it would be of course take in Hongkong, making Yokohama and Honolulu way ports, and San Francisco the American terminus. This enterprise would be of very great commercial value to Honolulu and the industries of this Kingdom, because it would give us direct and regular steamship connection with Japan, to which we must for the future look for our labor supply. The Japanese Government are willing to give a subsidy of $200,000 a year, and this Kingdom may be asked to contribute.

BLACKBERRIES would grow to perfection in this climate, in moist and sheltered spots. It is one of the most profitable crops raised on the Coast. A small rancher in Napa county a few years ago cleared $700 an acre from his blackberry patch, and he is doing as well yet for aught we know to the contrary. He was near a great consuming market, however, and similar results might not be made here; but we certainly should do as well as ranchers in San Bernardino valley, San Diego county, California, do. The San Diego "Sun" bears testimony to the fact that in 1884 a Mr. Penman, living in the aforementioned valley, made over $350 from less than an acre in blackberries. There are many little valley nooks on this island where similar results might be had. Blackberries would sell well in Honolulu.

CALIFORNIA cherries are in active demand in Chicago and other Eastern points at present. A ten-acre cherry patch at Petaluma last year yielded as much money as 700 acres in wheat. The superiority of the fruit of the Golden West over all competitors was demonstrated at the New Orleans Exposition, hence the increased demand, in the great American cities, for California fruit. This will tend to increase the price. As we depend upon California for our fruit supply in Honolulu this is an important consideration. Why not raise enough fruit to meet the local demand, anyhow?

THE "Gazette" is slowly but surely coming round to the opinion that Honolulu—and necessarily also the entire Kingdom—could not very easily be better governed than it is. This is the plain English of its article of the 17th instant upon municipal affairs. We are always ready to recognize and commend intelligent repentance.

Receipts of Domestic Produce.

The receipts of domestic produce at Honolulu for the week ending June 15th were as follows: Sugar, 30,833 bags; rice, 25,668 bags; awa, 635 bags; salt, 250 bags; corn, 28 bags; coffee, 30 bags; wool, 4 bales; molasses, 165 barrels; fire-wood 80 cords; hides, 433 pieces; goat skins, 2,049 pieces; bananas, 200 bunches; horses, 12 head; cattle, 33 head; sheep, 223 head; pigs, 3 head; goats, 3 head.

Arrangements have been made by which all letters intended for persons on board the Japanese steamer will be forwarded to them through the Post Office, and letters from the ship will be fumigated by Marshal Dayton and then sent to the Post Office for delivery.

SMALL-POX.

Arrival of 973 Japanese Immigrants.

Ship and Passengers Quarantined, Small-pox Being on Board.

Yesterday morning, at an early hour, the Japanese steamer Yamihino Maru, which has been expected here for some days past with Japanese immigrants on board, was signalled. Pilot McIntyre and the Port Physician, Dr. Henri McGrew, went out to meet her, and in a short time the vessel was seen coming into the harbor.

While she was coming in, Dr. McGrew called at the residence of His Excellency Mr. Gibson, President of the Board of Health, about 8:30 o'clock a. m., and gave him the health report of the vessel, signed by the ship's doctor and the Captain. From this report it appeared that there were 938 Japanese men and 35 women immigrants on board, besides a few passengers in the cabin, and the crew. The health of all were reported by the ship's doctor as good with the exception of twelve of the immigrants, who were or had been sick with measles. Of these, seven were reported as having recovered, three as being nearly well, and two as still sick.

A CLOSER INSPECTION ORDERED—SMALL-POX DISCOVERED.

Mr. Gibson was not satisfied to accept the report without further knowledge of the state of the health of the immigrants, and directed the Port Physician to take two other experienced doctors with him and make another examination of all on board the steamer. Dr. McGrew accordingly took Doctors Brodie and Webb with him, and went on board the vessel again. This second examination developed the fact that three of the cases reported as sick with measles really had small-pox.

The three physicians made their report to the Board of Health about 11:30 a. m., a meeting of the Board having been called, and a resolution was immediately passed, authorizing the President of the Board to quarantine the vessel and all the people as he might deem best. Mr. Gibson immediately telephoned to Deputy Marshal Dayton to place a GUARD OF THREE BOATS AROUND THE STEAMER.

And to allow of no communication with the shore. The doctors, when they came ashore, took the precaution to disinfect themselves thoroughly with carbolic acid, as did the pilot and the Secretary of the Board of Health, who had gone alongside the steamer upon her arrival.

It may be mentioned that neither the Captain nor any of the cabin passengers had suspected that there was any dangerous disease on the vessel. Consul General Irwin, who had come ashore to see his family, upon being directed to return on board again, and to remain there until all danger of possible contagion had disappeared, complied very cheerfully and promptly with the order, and is now, with the other passengers, making the best of the situation.

QUARANTINING THE PASSENGERS.

Arrangements were at once made by the President of the Board of Health to have the immigrants on the steamer transferred to the quarantine depot, where there is every convenience for the accommodation of 1,500 people. The steam tug Eleu was detailed to tow two scows alongside the steamer, which has been ordered to go outside the reef and anchor, and by sundown yesterday the whole of the immigrants were comfortably established in quarantine. Deputy Marshal Dayton has charge of their arrangement and of the grounds, with strict instructions to maintain the quarantine until further orders.

The quarantine grounds and buildings are in excellent order, there being, besides the main building, a number of detached cottages for those whom it may be desirable to separate from the rest. Dr. Webb has gone over to attend to the medical and sanitary arrangements for the present, and during the whole time that the Japanese may be detained there they will have the services of a skilled physician.

The work of landing the immigrants at the quarantine station was made very easy and comfortable for them on account of the long wharf and causeway that have recently been built over the shallow water of the reef. In former times people who landed there had to wade about a half a mile, walking on sharp coral. Now they are landed dry shod.

A MILD TYPE OF DISEASE.

Much regret has been expressed that these cases of sickness should have occurred, but it is hoped that inasmuch as the disease has developed itself in the mild form known as "varioloid," and as the oldest case is but six days old, that the isolation of the sick and their watchful care and intelligent treatment in quarantine will prevent the disease from spreading, and that the sick ones may be cured. It is fortunate, perhaps, that the Health authorities have to deal with Japanese, who are so entirely amenable to discipline and so responsive to kind treatment. No apprehension need be felt of there being any unauthorized communication between them and the people on shore during their enforced detention at the quarantine station. His Majesty the King has expressed his regret that the people who have come to settle in his Kingdom should have met with this disagreeable experience, and that Mr. Irwin, and the special Commissioner from the Japanese Government, who are passengers by the steamer, should be obliged to remain on board while the vessel is outside the reef.

The precaution taken by the President of the Board of Health in ordering another examination of the immigrants as soon as he ascertained that there was any sickness among them, and his promptness in taking effectual steps to guard the health of the city from contagion, are to be commended. As far as possible the disease has been isolated.

The Australian Mail Service.

The "Gazette" published a very sanguine statement regarding a projected fast Australian mail service, on the authority of Captain Webber, of the Zealandia. It should, however, be borne in mind that no Australian Government contributes to this service, which is now, and has been since November last, wholly maintained by New Zealand. Nor has New South Wales so far given any hint that it would renew its contribution. Doubtless it would be a very good thing for Honolulu if a couple of "Atlantic racers" were put on this line, but there is no money in the trade or service to warrant the expense.

In this connection Postmaster General Whitney informs us that Captain Webber stated to him, in reply to inquiries as to whether the service would be kept up after November, that nothing was yet settled; but that full power had been given by the contractors to enter into an engagement with the New South Wales and New Zealand Governments for a rapid service to be performed in 28 days' time between Sydney and London via Honolulu and San Francisco. The agent is fully empowered to bind his principals to commence the new service from the 1st of January, 1886, and to continue it on the basis of a 28 days' schedule. It is not improbable, Mr. Whitney thinks, that the forklift service from Fiji to Auckland and Sydney may be adopted, though Captain Webber did not refer to it. This service, we may add, was dropped at the request of the contractors, who were unable to maintain the five ships needed to run it. A direct service to Sydney might call at Kandavu, but there is neither mail, freight nor passenger trade to warrant it, and as New Zealand has subsidized a direct steamship line between that colony and Fiji, it will not be likely to pay a foreign steamship company to destroy the traffic it is building up with local steamers.

Beecher on the Puritan Sabbath.

"Everybody notices," said Mr. Beecher recently in Boston, "that Sunday is not kept as it used to be. Whether for better or worse, a little of both I think, that is the fact. The cords are not so tight. We don't begin Sunday on Saturday any more. We don't absolutely forbid all cheerful converse on the Sabbath morning. We more than smile; we are not afraid to lay forth our hand, nor to walk forth in the communion of nature or in the garden. In various ways the Sabbath has been popularized, as it is said, and over that some grieve. The church is not so awful as it used to be. It is larger, freer; it is more cheerful. Children are not petrified as they used to be. I used to love to go to church because I did enjoy walking down the half-mile of street, and hearing the birds and hearing the wind in the trees, and when I got into church I didn't dare stir, and so I went to sleep largely, with an occasional rap of grace on my head, but the church was always cold and unsympathetic to my young nature. I can't remember one single thing in my young history inside of father's church that ever touched my imagination or my heart, except the flying-in of swallows once in a while, that would come in of a summer when the windows were open; that was a means of grace to me."

Questionable Loyalty.

We are accustomed to hear a good deal of the loyalty of Canada to the British throne, but a recent transaction in Montreal casts a shadow over its loyalty and raises a doubt as to the permanent connection of the Dominion with the United Kingdom. The following from an American paper is a summary of what took place upon the occasion referred to: "At a banquet of the National Club in Montreal, on the 2d June, the toast, 'The Independence of Canada,' was drunk with great enthusiasm, and was responded to by the Mayor of Montreal; while the toast, 'The Queen,' was received in silence. Among the 150 guests at the banquet were the Mayors of six Canadian cities and a number of the members of the Provincial Parliament. The object of the feast was 'to give a denial to the assertion made by the opposition and the English press, that there were no men of prominence in Canada who favor independence.' The speakers declared imperial federation to be impracticable, and said if there was to be any further federation it would inevitably be with the United States."

SHIPPING NOTES.

The British bark Tycoon, Captain Ruckaby, sails to-day in ballast for Humboldt Bay.
The schooner Mile Morris brought 199 sheep and 39 bales of wool from Lanai on June 17th.

Mr. W. Fennell acted as purser of the steamer Lehu on her last trip, Turner Kibbling staying on shore on account of illness.

The brigantine Claus Spreckels, Captain Drew, will sail for San Francisco to-morrow with about 10,000 bags of sugar.
The steamer Lehu arrived at midnight on June 17th, with 2,192 bags sugar from Hamakua. Captain Davis reports rough weather at Hamakua, and lots of rain at Keahou, the new landing of the Volcano route.

The bark Catharine finished discharging her cargo on June 17th. She will load with sugar for San Francisco after the barkentine Mary Winkelman.

The American barkentine Mary Winkelman, Captain Backus, sails at noon to-day for San Francisco with about 12,000 bags sugar, weighing 32 tons, and also 200 barrels molasses. She will take six passengers.

The schooner Rainbow brought 300 bags sugar on June 17th, and transferred it to the brigantine Claus Spreckels. She left here last Monday evening for Koolau, and arrived in port again yesterday morning, making, perhaps, the quickest round trip on record.

Chief Engineer Hughes, of the steam dredgers will commence the work of breaking up the coral rocks at the Oceanic Steamship Company's wharf this morning, by means of a chisel weighing nearly 2,000 pounds. This chisel is fastened to the pile driver, and is then let down into the mud. After the chisel has broken up the rocks the dipper will be let down to haul up the pieces.

Japanese Special Commissioner.

Among the passengers by the Yamihino Maru, is a Special Commissioner appointed by the Japanese Government to inquire into the working of the emigration from their country to Hawaii, and to make more perfect arrangements therefor. This Commissioner is a gentleman of high rank and influence, being an adopted son of Count Inouye, Japanese Minister for Foreign Affairs. He is accompanied by his wife, who is also an adopted daughter of the same statesman. Their enforced detention on board the steamer is regretted by all, but as the immigrants have been removed from the vessel it will soon be famigated, and the vessel passengers, who did not in any way come into contact with the disease, will be permitted to land, due precautions regarding disinfection being taken.

Mynah Birds.

The mynah birds are very pugnacious, but they are not "useless," as the "Bulletin" states. No more useful bird has ever been introduced into this country. Where they are numerous, they have all but exterminated the army worm which, before their introduction, destroyed pasture and good cattle feed every year of greater value than all the ducks and chickens in the Kingdom. Let the mynahs be protected, despite their pugnacity and occasional mischief. They are the friends of graziers and market gardeners.

Police Court.

BEFORE POLICE JUSTICE BICKERTON.

WEDNESDAY, June 17th.

W. Horan was brought up on a remand to receive judgment for an assault with a deadly weapon. His Honor, in summing up the evidence, pointed out that the evidence of Mr. Wilson, Chief Engineer of the O. S. S. Mariposa, to the effect that he heard Horan say, during his fight with Agnew, that he, Horan, would stick this into Agnew as far as he could, had not been disputed. His Honor also showed how a pen-knife could be used to inflict the injuries received by Agnew without any bystander seeing the weapon. Taking the evidence, altogether, His Honor was of the opinion that the cutting was done by the defendant. He thought that the case was one that called for severe punishment, and he accordingly sentenced the defendant to five months' imprisonment with hard labor and to pay a fine of $150. Defendant's counsel noted an appeal to the Supreme Court.

A Portuguese named d'Almeida was charged with the larceny of property belonging to Messrs. Muller, Hackfeld and Pfleger. He was remanded to the 19th instant.

P. Quinn, H. Smith and Peterson were charged with drunkenness. The first was remanded until the 18th, and the other two were fined $5 and $1 costs each.

J. Smith and C. Branden were charged with assault and battery. The former was fined $10, and the latter $15.

Naval Supplies and Admiral Upshur.

The following dispatch from Washington, dated June 2nd, possesses some interest in Honolulu, which Admiral Upshur recently visited in the Hartford: "It is expected here that on the return of Admiral Upshur from the Pacific squadron he will explain satisfactorily the reports that he compelled Paymasters to purchase supplies from other than the lowest bidders. The explanation which is credited by naval officers is that five ship chandlers at Callao made a corner in naval supplies and ran the prices up very high. Finally one of them broke, and agreed to furnish supplies at the market rates. Thereupon Admiral Upshur directed that purchases should be made from that firm. Subsequently he went to sea, and other firms, in self-defense, lowered their prices even below those of the firm who broke the corner. Admiral Upshur's order was still valid, and purchases were made in accordance with it, which gave rise to the charges that he had directed purchases to be made from a firm which was not the lowest bidder."

Excelsior Lodge, I. O. O. F., will hold a meeting this evening.

"L'AMOUR ET LA VERITE."

[Virgie W. Cloud in Detroit Free Press.]

Where an ancient garden closes
There bloomed, as the spirits know,
The king of the red and the white,
And his queen, with her heart of snow;
And over the two swung higher
Nor ever they swayed apart,
The one like a flame of crimson fire,
And the other with the snowflake heart.

When at last, in the flowering May-time,
A strong armed knight there came;
Rode forth, at dawn of the d - time,
And gathered the white and the flame;
Vowing to guard them forever—
The fair white rose for his crest,
And yielding the red rose never
From the heart of his mail-clad breast.

But ah, for the vows that are scattered!
And alas, for the wind and snow!
The queen's light leaves far scattered.
And the fair white heart lay low!
How a trace of its perfume lingers!
For he yielded the red rose so red,
To a touch of fairly white fingers,
The bond of a lily like head.

Peculiarities of Jay Gould.
[New York World.]

When Jay Gould sits down to talk to any one he invariably looks around for a scrap of paper, and is not easy until he has it. He takes it by the ends between the thumb and forefinger of each hand, twirls it back and forth unceasingly. If he is sitting in an arm-chair he likes to rest his elbows on the arms, & sometimes he leans forward and sometimes back, and he generally throws one leg over the other. He is not apt to keep his eyes in the face of the person with whom he is talking. On the contrary, he sits with his head partially turned or his eyes cast down, as if weighing in his mind what is being said to him. Now and anon he will look into the face of the person who is addressing him to show that he is paying attention.

He does not, as a rule, do much more than answer questions. He is a great deal better listener than speaker. What he has to say is couched in very few words. If the conversation takes place in his office he is likely to take a seat near the desk, so that he can catch on every now and then, or the tape to see his quotations. Gould is not a good man for the newspaper interviewer, for the reason that he has so little to say. Giuseppe Morosini, the secretary and custodian of Gould's private papers and secrets, de-lights to tell of a time when he was interviewed by mistake for Gould.

A correspondent of a Washington sheet came to see Gould. Somehow or other he encountered Morosini, and, not knowing the difference, he wasted no time, but out with his note-book and flooded the Italian financier with questions which were answered as fast as they were put. The correspondent wrote until the advertising columns of his journal were crowded on and then disappeared. The interview, Gould was described as a tall, broad-shouldered man, iron-gray mustache and imperial and ruddy face. His secretary was a tall, well-dressed, skinned man, with a full beard. That was Gould himself, who was a witness to Morosini's little joke, and sat at a table near looking over papers while it was being perpetrated.

Cutting Bones with an Electric Saw.

A novel bone-cutting instrument has been used, the wards of the city hospital on Randall's island, and at the orthopedic clinic of the New York post-graduate medical school and hospital for several months. It has been employed in performing operations for the cure of various bony deformities and diseases of joints, and has proved to be of such great utility that it will doubtless supersede all other instruments now used for these purposes. The object that the inventor of this instrument had in view was to do away with the bungling and unworkmanlike methods which surgeons have been forced to employ, and more particularly to make it unnecessary to resort to the revolting method of using the mallet and chisel upon human beings.

The new instrument is called the electro-osteotome and is actuated by a current of electricity derived from a powerful primary battery or from an accumulator. It is provided with various sizes of trephines, drills, and circular saws, which are made to revolve at the great speed of 12,000 revolutions a minute. The largest long bone of an adult subject can be sawed through in five seconds, and the bones of children can be divided in from two to three seconds. The cut surfaces of the bone are perfectly smooth, and are in marked contrast to the bruised and splintered ends of those divided by the chisel and mallet. Few persons have seen or heard of this novel surgical instrument, as the only instrument made has remained in possession of the inventor and has never been used except by him. He has refrained from urging its claims upon the profession until he had thoroughly demonstrated its utility. So far he has performed fifty-one distinct operations upon living subjects, and a great advantage has been gained by its use in each case.

Mexican Pack Mules.

[San Francisco Record.]

Mexican mules are beyond comprehension. When tired, they will run widely off the trail, up and down the hill, and bite at every green thing they see. In camp at night they will stand perfectly quiet till their saddles or aparejos (pack saddles) are taken off, and then they usually take the combined labor of several men to remove "the bridle or headstall. Then they will run frantically in the dirt for a while. When the corn for their feed is spread out, they will gather around it and sootily kick each other all their ribs crack. They will not eat over a handful of corn each, and will then go off and browse on dry grass and leaves. In the morning they will meekly form themselves in rank in front of the apaches and quietly submit to be packed, only indulging in a little kicking among themselves.

Catalogue of Stars.

[Chicago Herald.]

One of the greatest astronomical works of the century, a catalogue dealing with 75,000 stars in the southern hemisphere, has just been issued. In London five persons were engaged in the work for a period of fourteen years.

Minority Rule.

[Father Ryan.]

In the intellectual orders minorities always have ruled and always will rule. One hundred men do most of the thinking for an army; six men do the singing for a choir; and so in all the branches of thought.

Floating Saw Mills.

[Exchange.]

Floating saw mills are common on the lower Mississippi. They pick up the drifting logs, turn them into lumber, and sell the product to the planters along the shore.

CURIOUS AUTOGRAPHS.

HOW MANY NOTED CHARACTERS SIGN THEIR NAMES.

An Intensely Interesting Collection of Signatures for the Student of the Relations Between Chirography and Character.

The following interesting bundle of autographs is from the collection of Mr. Edward W. Bok, of Brooklyn.

Jay Gould
JAY GOULD.
The signature of Jay Gould is little and blind and crooked.

W. H. Vanderbilt
W. H. VANDERBILT.
This is the most valuable autograph in the lot. It is worth $150,000,000. W. H. writes a hand like a school girl.

Laura D. Bridgman
LAURA BRIDGMAN.
Laura D. Bridgman, blind, deaf and dumb, has a remarkable signature. She writes a peculiar upright printing hand, not inelegant in appearance.

John Taylor
JOHN TAYLOR.
A letter with the lithographed head, "President's Office, Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Utah," is signed in a farmer-like hand, "John Taylor."

Brigham Young
BRIGHAM YOUNG.
Here is Brigham Young's, written in a character that is bold and sweeping, like one of Brigham's Mormon edicts.

Oscar Wilde
OSCAR WILDE.
Here is one that looks both cranky and contented. He seems to spell his name "Wild." To go with this aesthetic signature is the following gem: "To disagree with three-fourths of the British public on all points is one of the first elements of sanity."

Charles Guiteau
CHARLES GUITEAU.
The handsomest signature in the column here presented is that of Guiteau, the assassin of Garfield, dated "United States Jail, Washington, D. C., May, 1882." It is graceful, even and strong, a strange contradiction to the supposed indications of chirography.

Jefferson Davis
JEFFERSON DAVIS.
The feeblest signature of all, apparently. It looks as if it had started to grow upright, but had been set down upon at a very early stage of existence.

Bismarck
BISMARCK.
The reader will probably be surprised to learn that the above name is that of Bismarck. It is written in German, which is the reason of its apparent illegibility. Whatever it may look in English, in German it is a strong, plain signature.

George Francis Train
GEORGE FRANCIS TRAIN.
In some ink marks that look like a giraffe struck by lightning we make out the following: "Good for one hundred dollars at the next centennial." George Francis Train.

John Humphrey Noyes
JOHN HUMPHREY NOYES.
For his age the leader of the Oneida community writes a firm, strong hand, characteristic of the individual he is.

Sitting Bull
SITTING BULL.
This gentle red man's fist is more used to grasp the scalping knife than the pen.

John K. Emmet
J. K. EMMET.
"Dot vas me," he writes. But who would know it from his signature?

George Thompson
GEORGE THOMPSON.
A long letter, all ink, underlining, quotation marks, and swell and blow and humbug, is signed by this preposterous individual, the late George the Count Joannes, "of the New York supreme court."

Anthony Comstock
ANTHONY COMSTOCK.
The truly good man who is so much concerned about public morality, quotes a scripture verse in a small and shrinking back hand as follows: "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

P. T. Barnum
P. T. BARNUM.
When the great showman is overtaken by death he will doubtless be in the act of advertising. In answer to a request for his autograph he writes that the trunk which Jumbo (now on the Atlantic) will bring over is well made and can withstand the knocks of baggage smashers.

Mrs. Charles S. Walker

MRS. TOM THUMB.
This little creature, lately married to Count Magri, writes an ordinary large feminine hand, of the old fashion, before the present style of huge signers for the sex came in.

Mary E. Walker
DR. MARY WALKER.
The hybrid lady's signature looks "40 ways for Sunday." No two letters slope the same way.

H. S. Tanner
DR. TANNER.
A long, gushing letter accompanying this autograph proves that the champion sinner is better at fasting than at spelling.

Henry Bergh
HENRY BERGH.
"Remember He that made thee also made the brute," writes the philanthropist who takes the part of the weak brute against the strong one.

Laura D. Bridgman
The men of the older day are fast passing away. Of those who made United States history 20 years ago, and those who took part in the striking political events immediately following, there will soon be few remaining. Among those that are left a melancholy interest at present centres in ex-Secretary Frederick T. Frelinghuysen. During his residence in Washington Mr. Frelinghuysen devoted himself to the duties of his office early and late. No clerks worked harder. A predisposition to fatal disease was aggravated by this close application to office duty. He kept up, however, until the Arthur administration went out. It often happens that those who are ill and dying continue at work long under pressure of excitement or important duties. As soon as the strain is relieved they succumb. So with Secretary Frelinghuysen. He was prostrated with illness immediately after the close of his term of office, and was taken carefully to his home in Newark, N. J.
