LONDON BUSINESS.

THE ENGLISH METHOD SEEMS ANTIQUATED TO AN AMERICAN.

Some Peculiarities in Banking—Caution
Exercised in Opening New Accounts—
A "Crossed" Check—Old Firms and Their Numerous Branches.

To the American the methods of conducting business in London seem slow and antiquated. There is an evident desire on the part of many large firms to make the transaction of business difficult instead of easy. There is an outer inquiry office, at which you must give your name to a clerk, who often intimates by his looks that he is conferring a favor by taking it; the name is passed on to another, and you are finally told to take a seat in a reception room until the principals are at liberty to see you. All this contrasts strongly with the accessibility of business men in America.

The greatest caution is exercised in the opening of new accounts. Before you can buy goods you must first be introduced by an old customer or establish your responsibility and credit before you step into a bank in London and put your money on the counter and ask to buy a draft on New York, Berlin or Paris; you will be told that they do not know you and can only sell drafts to their regular customers or to people introduced by them. There is no question that the money you offer is not good, but they do not know you.

STILL STRANGER.

I was once, you may say, refused a draft in a bank in which I had a special deposit of 500 dollars at interest, and, notwithstanding I brought the clerk from the special deposit department of the bank to vouch for my identity, the draft clerk told me:

"Ah, yes! you have a special deposit in that department, but special deposits are received from any one without introduction, and really, since you have never been introduced to the bank, you are still in the position of stranger to us, and we cannot tell you the draft."

Another banking custom that seems strange to us is that open checks (not "crossed") are paid to strangers without identification. If you have a check payable to "John Jones" or order, the bank does not require that you be identified as John Jones, but you present the check, endorse your name, John Jones, on the back and receive the money in full.

But most checks are "crossed" and not "open checks," and you cannot get the payment of a "crossed" check by presenting it personally at the bank, no matter how much you may be identified. To "cross" a check you draw two parallel lines across the face of it, and write between them either the name of the bank with whom the person who will cash it is paying him, or deposit it, or simply the words "& Co." any check so "crossed" must be deposited in a bank for collection and presented by a bank messenger for payment. This crossing of checks thus forms an almost absolute safeguard against payment to the wrong persons. It might be adopted with advantage in other countries.

WITH A DOZEN BRANCHES.

Some of the London banks have deposits of $100,000,000 and $200,000,000, but this is the total of deposits of the one bank in the "City of London," of its dozen or more of branches in "larger London," and its thirty or forty country branches, so that to compare the deposits of the largest London banks with those of the largest New York banks would hardly be fair, unless you added to the deposits of the New York banks the deposits of all the concurrent banks.

The principal of subsidiary branches is carried through many other businesses. Some of the clothing and furnishing houses, the grocers and provision dealers, tea merchants, fruit stores, dyers and cleaners, restaurants, booksellers and stationers have from six to twenty branch establishments, and these in turn open to other shops on the same street belonging to the same firm. It is said that a shop on any of the main thoroughfares in London can afford to cheat every customer, because the crowd of strangers passing the door will continue to furnish new victims year after year. It may be that experience proves that when the number of people passing is so great, that the opening of new branches in the little alleys, lanes or courts, where they first started—London Cor. Philadelphia Times.

LATEST NEWS.

The Queen has taken an active part in the recent secret negotiations. She has recognized not merely the weakness of the present Cabinet, but the utter impossibility of Salisbury's continuing to hold the combined offices of Prime Minister and Foreign Secretary, as his health suffers seriously by the strain of the last two years. November is the time fixed for the change, simply because that is the most convenient period. The Queen will then be back at Windsor and Hartington will have finished his holiday. Salisbury, who is to be at Hatfield House in October, will have found time to wind up his affairs. We shall then be on the eve of a political era which commences with November. As to the Cabinet, it is no use speculating how particular offices will be arranged, because no details are likely to be settled for the next three months, but it would not be surprising to see Chamberlain at the Admiralty Office and Churchill in the War Office. The Cabinet under Hartington will be limited to fourteen members.

BERLIN, August 1st.—It is reported that Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha will start for Bulgaria to-morrow to assume office, against the advice of his family.

goods have done great injury to the railroads, especially in Georgia. The damage to motion cannot be estimated. So much destructive effect has occurred in twenty years. A telegram to the "Chronicle" from the upper Savannah valley reports all the bottom lands flooded, and the damage cannot be estimated. Continuous rains have fallen in the upper country. No loss of life is reported.

New York, July 26th.—Charles H. Reed, one of the lawyers who defended Guiteau, attempted suicide this morning by jumping into the North River from the ferryboat. He was rescued and taken to the Chambers-street Hospital, where he is suffering from injuries inflicted by a blow from the paddle-wheel of the ferry-boat. Reed has lost all his legal practice and is reduced to great poverty. A few days ago he was arrested for trying to rob the till in a saloon in Jersey City, but was not prosecuted. Reed was subsequently arraigned at the Tombs Police Court. He said he was drunk when he jumped into the river, and did not know what he was doing. He was committed to the care of the Commissioners of Charities and Corrections to be examined as to his sanity.

New York, July 26th.—The boats of the Monarch line of steamers between this port and London, which were put up at auction in the latter city some weeks ago, could not be disposed of and were sold yesterday. There are five vessels in the service, each of 4,500 tons burden and 2,500 horse power. Three of these boats were purchased by the firm of Wilson & Sons of Hull, which owns the largest fleet of steamships of any private firm, and will probably now start a new line between New York and London. The other two boats were purchased by the Allan line of Royal Mail steamers which plies between England and Canada.

Louisville, August 1st.—The election for State and Legislative officers of Kentucky passed off quietly. The length of the ticket and the local contests make the return slow in coming to hand. The Democratic gain in Louvville city and county, was 3,000. Major returns from the State indicate Republican gains, but it is estimated that the Democratic State officers will be elected by a large majority. The Democratic losses are mainly in local contests. The Legislature will be largely Democratic.

BALTIMORE, July 26th.—Judge Bond, sitting in the United States District Court to-day, decided that Thomas Wiggins, known all over the world as "Blind Tom," the pianist, shall be delivered on or before the 16th of August into the custody of Mrs. Eliza Bethune, who represents Carlitz Wiggins, the mother of "Blind Tom." Also that James S. Bethune, who has charge of him, shall at the same time pay over to Mrs. Bethune the sum of $7,000 for past services.

WASHINGTON, August 1st.—Mrs. John A. Logan has arrived at her home in this city. She is reported to be in a serious condition. It is said that her shoulder blade, which was dislocated, will have to be reset, as the first operation was somewhat of a failure.

A painter named James Martin fell off the Brooklyn bridge, a distance of 150 feet, striking the water on his chest. He was picked up by the tug William Longon and transferred to the Chamberlain Hospital, when it was ascertained that he had received no serious injuries.

PHILADELPHIA, July 30th.—A party of twelve prominent business men went out in a yacht this morning to cruise about the coast. When off the lower part of the city a squall capsized the yacht. All were rescued except Thomas Kennedy and the colored cook.

CINCINNATI, August 1st.—The indications to-night are that the Workmen have carried the State ticket in Newport, Ky., by 900 plurality, and in Covington by 260 plurality. They are elated and sanguine of success in Kenton and Campbell counties.

McKeesport, July 30th.—A coach attached to a mixed train ran off the track and down an embankment to-day and was totally wrecked. Eight passengers were injured more or less, and two will probably die.

THE OLD MILL.

Here from the brow of the hill I look
Through a lattice of boughs and leaves
On the old gray mill with its gambrel roof,
As it stands silent in the shade.
I hear the water that passes by below,
And the rushing water's song;

And I see the black goats that feed tall
At the road going down to town.

I go to sleep in there, I just think,
With my eyes on the house before,
And think with many a moulder's gift,
As I sit there in the shade,
And while the wind whistles single bourn,
And flings and dashes us free.

The wheel might stop or the wheel might go—
It was all the same to me.

"Tis twenty years since last I stood
On the spot where I stand to-day
And the mill is still there, the miller is dead,
But both, till we fall into ruin and wreck,
To our fortune of toil are bound,
And the man goes and the stream does,

And the wheel moves slowly round."

Boston Beacon.

A DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS.

What He Says of Muscular Development—Valuable Physiological Hints.

Though once a Scotchman, Director Goldie has been an American for thirty-six years. He is 49, but his looks belie him, for they tell that he is not over 35. If the gentle Lycurgus could see him he would embrace him with joy notwithstanding the slight difference in their methods. For six years Director Goldie was the champion all round athlete of the old Caledonian club. He filled the hair of muscular development at Princeton for sixteen years, and this year, over there paled him with so many equals, and this, that and the other that he was forced to study physiology in order not to appear ignorant before his pupils. It made him one of the best of the common sense physiologists in the United States, and he came to his new post at the New York Athletic club here as well equipped for his duties as any man in America.

"My rule," he says, "is to take the material that comes to my hands and improve it in the natural way."

That is the whole science of modern athletics. Lycurgus did not do that. He took the pick of the lot every time and compelled them all to do one way. Professor Goldie permits his 399 to do 399 ways.

"I can't watch 'em," he declares, "and there's no use making absurd rules that men are not going to keep."

Spoken like a man!

"The chief trouble with athletes in America," he continues, "is that they overdo athletics. We cannot do the work here as we do in England, because more out of us to resist the climatic changes and influences. We are a nervous people, yet we persist in living at high pressure all the time, thus rendering ourselves the more nervous. Americans are forever trying to do their best. It is a great mistake."

"In what other way can you tell what's in a man?"

"By his general methods and condition. I'll give you an instance. At one of our exhibitions Ford surprised himself by vaulting two inches higher than he had ever gone before. I was not surprised. I knew it was in him from what I had seen him do in the past. He never outdid him self in exercising."

"And as for running?"

"The same rule. I never care to see a man do his best before the race. Under no circumstance should he be permitted to test his speed within twenty-four hours of the contest."

A certain well known turfman of this city lets his horses in the morning; they go well enough to win everything, but in the afternoon they invariably lose the race.

"How do you train your jumpers, professor?"

"No two men jump alike. Each has a style of his own and I must insist on every man jumping after the manner that corresponds with his own. I am aiming that style toward perfection. I have seen excellent jumpers ruin their chances forever by imitating the style of some whom they admired. This same is true of running. We must not force a run to change his style too suddenly. It must be gradual, to let the man start jumping with his own style, and then, if at all possible, make it more difficult than the next. Watch me. In most races the start is of the utmost import, an advantage gained in getting away often wins a race."

"What hours do you recommend for taking exercise?"

"Two hours before a meal or two hours after. I don't believe a man should exercise on an empty stomach, of course, he was brought up that way. Never change a man's habits suddenly. Six o'clock dinner is the bane of athletic men in America."

"How about food?"

"Eat any sound food you like and that agrees with you. I like oatmeal and thrive upon it. It might make you sick. If so, don't touch it. You know what is good for you far better than I do."

"Is the shower bath good after exercise?"

"If the water isn't too cold, yes. Never go to extremes. Many constitutions can't stand the shock of a cold plunge. I think tepid water is best, as a rule."—New York Tribune.

Dust in the Stores.

While the gulls are advocating the laying of the dust in the streets, I wonder that some one does not take up the dust nuisance in the stores. Every afternoon, between 5 and 6 o'clock, the floors are swept and the clerks breathe an atmosphere of dust that is sometimes frightful and always unpleasant. It is just the hour of the day when sweeping should be done, and the emporiums are closed after the day's work, the air is close and dry, and the heat great, for there is not much ventilation in a large store. No matter if the floor is sprinkled, a cloud of dust always rises up and settles upon the counters. Often the man who sweeps out wears a sponge over his mouth and nose to prevent coughing.—Lady Clerk in Globe Democrat.

Tennyson and His Trees.

I saw the poet in his best advantage under his own trees and walking over his own domain. He took delight in pointing out to me the finest and rarest of his trees—and there were many beauties among them. I recollect most vividly Whitstable Oak Knoll, a Davies, little more than a year old when he led me to one of his favorites, an aspiring evergreen, which shot up like a flame. I thought of the graceful American elms in front of Longfellow's house, and the sturdy English elms that stand in front of Lowell's. In this garden of England, the Isle of Wight, where every tree is decked with small lavish extravagances of greenery, so that it looks as if it must bankrupt the soil before autumn, I felt as if weary eyes and overtasked brains might reach their happiest haven of rest.—Dr. Holmes in The Atlantic.

When I am called upon to take the "mug" of a noted criminal who has fallen into the clutches of the police authorities, and the subject objects to the performance, I usually get a detective to engage him in conversation, and then turn the camera upon him, and have him before he knows it. My instinct is to allow him in the detective's room, and hence I have little trouble in that respect. Police Photographer in Globe Democrat.
