RESTORED TO HEALTH

BY THE USE OF
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
Mrs. M. A. Cumming, of Yarraville, Victoria, Australia, says:
"About a year ago, I had a severe attack of influenza, which left me very weak, without energy, appetite, or interest in life. Obtaining little or no relief from doctors, or from the many remedies recommended to me, I finally tried Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and from that time, I began to gain health and strength."

I continued the treatment until fully recovered, and now have very great pleasure in telling my friends of the merits of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and the happy results of its use. I consider it the best blood-purifier known.

CONSUL AND CAPTAIN.

NEWSPAPER ATTACK OF WHALER SHOREY UPON CONSUL MILLS.
The Facts in the Case—Absurdity of Complaints—Must Be Evidence to Convict.
A letter in a city paper, purporting to have been written by Captain Shorey of the bark Gayhead, criticizes the course of Consul-General Mills in dealing with the three sailors suspected of having set fire to that vessel some days ago. Whaler Captain Shorey is doubtless a gentleman and a scholar; but he has found occasion, if he wrote the article in question, to publish his unwarranted attack upon an officer of the United States Government after leaving the country. The facts in the case, however, are well known to all who have interested themselves in the matter and that Mr. Mills' course was one of strict justice to all parties concerned can not be questioned.

In his letter Shorey says: "Notwithstanding the fact that there was good and sufficient evidence to convict the men," etc. Marshal Hitchcock says of this that "there was no evidence to warrant the detention of the men." The special officers who worked up the case reported no evidence except the suspicions of the captain and crew. Consul Mills said at the time: "I have seen no evidence that can be used in making out a case." Captain Shorey said at the time: "I have no evidence, but have strong suspicions. I have noticed the men talking together."

Captain Shorey says Deputy Marshal Brown "was himself satisfied of the tenor and strength of the criminating evidence." Mr. Brown said Thursday night: "That statement is absolutely false. The captain wanted his men brought to trial, but had no evidence against them, and we could find none."

The men were discharged by Marshal Hitchcock after he (the Marshal) had reported to Mr. Mills his inability to find evidence to convict the men of the crime charged against them. The remainder of the statement of Captain Shorey, treating minor matters, is found to be misleading and unwarranted. That the men are tough is generally admitted. The Captain, however, refused to part with them, even after the Consul had offered to accommodate him by taking them off of his hands.

Investigation shows that the Marshal, Mr. Brown and other parties drawn into the matter agree that Consul Mills did his full duty fairly and carefully.

FASHIONS.

Tempting Variations in Gowns and Small Accessories of Costume.
At this time of year, when a brightening up of dark winter clothes is required, the many little floral adjuncts to dress deserve and receive increased attention.
Among things altogether tempting to many feminine eyes are pretty warm hooded velvets, blouses of a different color from the skirts, amethyst, moss green and black being particularly effective, made without any basque—as all bodices and blouses are now worn inside the skirt—with very large sleeves, and trimmed with creamy guipure, usually in deep narrow vandykes from the throat downward. Sometimes narrow bands of fur at the throat and wrists replace the guipure, and for smart occasions ermine is used. A pretty toilet, consisting of a gray skirt, an amethyst velvet blouse with straps of cream guipure, a sable throatlet with a bunch of feathers in the small animal's mouth, and a large hat of black felt with several black feathers was much noticed at a recent entertainment.

Wide silk lace ties, warm as a boa, serve as wraps for the throat by day as well as becoming headgear for evening entertainments on leaving heated rooms. Fine white cambie evening pocket handkerchiefs are edged with black, instead of the usual white lace for mourning, and look stylish when carried by a well dressed woman. Numbered with other Parisian fancies is that of running two narrow black ribbons through the edge of the veil worn with large hats, causing it to hang like a bag.

Latest French skirts perfectly plain in front and on the hips, but have two outstanding plaits at the back. For smart wear two rows of buttons are placed on each side of these plaits at the waist, having two long ends of ribbon from each, reaching to the ground. This is more affected by young girls on light materials, and it is a pretty, graceful effect. The ribbon is often of the same color as the bodice. For day wear the skirts are well off the ground.

Short waistkin zones, with waistcoats on cuffs, are worn with brown or almost any skirt, for outdoor walking. With a brown skirt a brown felt hat, trimmed with brown and moss green, with a clustering mass of violets at the back nestling into the upturned brim—nothing could look better. Brown plush and black velvet are also equally fashionable. These out of door zones are quite among the principal Paris novelties of the winter season. Occasionally in evidence in New York, they present a decidedly airy and monarchical aspect on any save the mildest of days.

The two Paris gowns in the first cut illustrate some new features, notably the five box plaited skirt and the graduated plait set on the bodice.

In the second cut may be seen a variety of pretty throatlet affairs—throatlet in mink fur, adorned with a chon and pointed ends in soft satin, in keeping with the Hing; folds of bright surah silk, veiled with dark gauze and draped at the side under two rows of bows of the two colors; fox box, showing animal's head and cluster of varieties in collarlettes.

A black silk petticoat, with narrow blue stripes, a chiffon frill round the edge over an under one of blue silk and a pair of black and blue stays to match figure in a recent transaction.

Very narrow home finish ladies' handkerchiefs for general use. Dressier ones have an embroidered edge or are lace trimmed.

Dahlia is a lovely shade when seen in combination with jet. Many cloth dresses of the shade have velvet sleeves and trimmings of the same velvet.

It is in charming "tea blouses" that many fashionable women now receive their friends who drop in to tea. One model is made of rich red brocade, with a full puffed front and a box plait down the center. Radiating from this at the top is some heavy guipure insertion, in straight lines, held in place by ornamental buttons. The sleeves are of red chiffon; also the collar band.

The fashion to have a velvet toque and muff to match is a pretty and practical one.

A CRISP FAIR.
It is a well known fact that a cat usually falls on its feet. This may be proved by taking a cat and dropping it from a certain height. That it should fall on its feet is not due to luck, but to a well defined principle of mechanics.

When you hold a cat with its feet upward, the back will be observed to curve outward. But as soon as you let go the animal turns over in the air and curves the body forward, thus displacing the center of gravity so that the fall is made on all fours.

A TEST CASE.

Misprison Prisoner to Resort to Habeas Corpus.

It is understood that one of the native political prisoners convicted of misprison of treason will make a test case through the agency of the writ of Habeas Corpus. Their plea will be Mr. Neumann's famous objections to the jurisdiction of the court. Antonio Rosa will likely be selected to start the case before the Supreme Court. He is now on Kaula. The matter will likely come up as soon as he returns.

A Roof Garden.

Captain C. J. Campbell has a flower garden on the top of the shed at the Inter-Island dock. Violets are among the number of flowers that are doing well. Before the next revolution Captain Campbell will plant in his garden a few specimens of iron wood, shooting spruce and Indian war clubs.

SHARPSHOOTERS WILL CAMP.

Sharpshooters Are to Have an Outing in May Next.

The Sharpshooters Company had a meeting in their room at the drill shed last evening. The most important matter acted upon was a proposal for a week's "camp" some time in May. Hanaleia, the well-known inlet or bay beyond Koko Head, was selected for the camp. About three dozen members will probably take in the outing. M. N. Saunders is the chief mover in the matter. Lieutenant Dodge is general superintendent of ways and means.

The committees are: Finance—M. N. Saunders, F. S. Dodge and F. Leslie. Transportation—C. J. Campbell, J. L. McLean and A. W. Keech. Commissary—L. S. LaPierre. Music—Joseph Marsden. Targets—O. E. Wall.

A Curiosity in Public Houses.

A little public house, in which the land lord and his customers have a curious experience, stands on the boundary line dividing the townships of Darwen and Oswaldtwistle, Lancashire. The boundary line runs directly through the center of the hostelry, and as there are public rooms on either side of the passage two licenses are necessary. The publican is compelled to remove from the Darwen side of the 10 o'clock every night, according to the conditions of his license, but the Oswaldtwistle license allows him to keep his door open until 11 o'clock. In order not to lay himself open to a prosecution by Darwen, therefore, the landlord, when the clock chimes 10, compels his customers to remove from the Darwen side of the Oswaldtwistle side of the house and shuts the doors of the early closing portion. It is stated by the landlord that he qualifies himself for voting in both townships by fixing his bed directly over the boundary line.—London Tit-Bits.

BOOK BINDING.

Its Beginning and the Transition From Ancient to Modern Methods. It was only when writing was made upon separate pieces or sheets of a pliable and perishable material that binding proper was invented to hold the pieces, or sheets, together and give strength to them and protection and beauty.

But here, again, we must distinguish. The pliable written sheet may be either rolled or folded, each giving rise to a form of binding peculiar to itself. The rolled sheet is bound by fastening each sheet to the other sideways and rolling the whole from end to end, the last sheet serving as a cover to all the rest. This form of binding is no doubt the more ancient of the two, and it was for a long time in general use. It was used, for example, by the Egyptians—it was probably invented by them—and it was used by the Greeks and by the Romans, and great libraries of rolls existed for some time after the Christian era, and many industries were engaged in contributing to the perfection of the binding. It has, however, been superseded for many centuries by the folded form of literature, the invention of which is attributed to Eumenes, King of Pergamum (from whom, it is said, the parchment, or skin, prepared for writing on, in the third century before Christ. But if the form has disappeared the terminology of the roll has survived, and the word "volume" originally a thing that is rolled or wound up—i. e., a roll—is now applied indiscriminately to its substitute, the book of folded sheets.

The folded sheet, or section, as it is called, is bound by simply sewing or otherwise fastening the parts of the sheet to one another at the back cross or fold, and a number of sections are bound by fastening each of them to some common support at the back, so that when all are sewed or otherwise fastened they may yet be free to open and to shut at pleasure at the front or "fore edge."

The invention of the folded sheet thus gave rise to the invention of modern binding, which, in its essence, is the union at the back of the folded sheet, book, or, as I may say, despite the latent contradiction, the folded volume.—Fortnightly Review.

STORED AN EMPTY BARREL.

Nine Months In a Storage Warehouse and Three Carriage Paid on It.

"I got my familiar out of storage the other day," said a New Yorker, "and my wife and I thought we would unpack the china and bric-a-brac ourselves, instead of paying 50 cents an hour to the storage men to do it. The stuff was packed in five barrels, one of which, we noticed, was lighter than the rest.

"When we began to unpack that one, we concluded that it must contain our most fragile articles of vertu, for we first came across a layer of excelsior and soft paper a foot in thickness. Below this was another layer, equally thick, and when we had half unpacked the barrel and found nothing but excelsior and soft paper we knew not what to think.

"We were still more flabbergasted on finding no china on removing the packing. We of course concluded that our things had been stolen and reproached ourselves for our false economy in doing the unpacking ourselves, for it is a rule of the storage concern we patronized not to pay for any articles broken or missing unless its men do the unpacking.

"As we missed nothing when the other barrels had been unpacked, my wife caught her eye on the lighter one, and she finally remembered that when we gave up housekeeping, 1 1/2 years ago, there was a lot of excelsior left over when the china had been packed. In a fit of economy she packed it all in a separate barrel, which she had only packed and carried to the hotel where we spent the winter. It was stored in the garage without being unpacked, and in the spring was sent to the storage warehouse.

"We accordingly have paid not only for the storage for nine months of three empty barrels, but for its cartage on three different occasions—from the house to the hotel, from the hotel to the storage warehouse and from the warehouse to where we now live!"—New York Sun.

Edison's Bet.

There is probably no other country where so much and so curious betting takes place as in the United States. Especially in this line, the late Thomas Edison, it is said, made his first unusual experiment in electricity as the result of a bet. He was a telegraph operator, and the lunches of the boys were carried in tin cans, into which reached a wire, causing much trouble during mealtime. Various methods were tried to get rid of them, and finally Edison made a bet that he would suppress them. The next day the dinner cans were piled in a heap, and the wizard placed around them a coil of wire, many tin foil ribbon about an inch wide, and about a quarter of an inch away another similar circle, and then he connected both with the current. The consequence was that every roach in trying to get to the cans placed himself with his hind legs on one pole (or piece of foil) and his fore legs on the other, thus completing the circuit, and rolling over dead. The bet was won, and the dead piled up like an Irish fence.

A Clock in a Wine Bottle.

There is now being exhibited in the window of the shop of Mr. Kaps, the watchmaker, a clock the works of which are in the inside of an ordinary clear glass wine bottle, the dial plate being set obliquely on the top of the bottle. How the works were introduced into the bottle is the mystery at first glance, but even when it is ascertained that no single piece is wider than the neck of the bottle, the wonder then occurs to the mind as to how the pieces of such delicate machinery were therein put together.—Democrat Argus.

Unique Coat Buttons.

Arthur H. Phenix of Philadelphia has a pair of gold backed cuff buttons, fashioned from pieces of his own skull. His trinitium was weighing four times, the last operation yielding a piece of bone 4 1/2 inches in circumference. It was a brilliant idea to utilize his superfluous cocoon matter in the form of jewelry. Manufacturing jewelers seeking suggestions may take advantage of this one.—Jewelers' Circular.

A Good Excuse.

"Jimmie, where did you get this 5 cent?" "It's the money you gave me for the weather, mamma." "Then why did you keep it?" "My teacher said I was a heathen,"—Harper's Bazar.

Mamma—Here, your shoes are all worn out again. Do you think you could possibly keep your feet off the ground two weeks? Albert—Yes, mamma, dear, if I only had a safety.—Harper's Young People.

DEAR SIR:—The Onomes Sugar Co. has now in use three of the Stubble Diggers.

I think these machines are indispensable for the proper cultivation of ratoon. We have never had an implement that would so thoroughly loosen the earth around the stools and put the soil in such condition that the air, moisture and fertilizer would so readily find access to the fine roots of the cane and the soil around them.

I am glad to testify to the merits of these tools. The sugar land Disc Cultivators arrived too late for much use in the cultivation of the last young plant and ratoon, but I believe they will prove to be very useful and labor saving implements in Districts where cane is raised without irrigation. Yours truly, W. W. GOODALE, Manager Onomes Sugar Company.

SQUAD 8 GRUMBLING.

ONE CITIZENS' GUARD DETAIL THREATENS TO DISBAND.

Object to Regulations—Court Martial Idea Galls Them—Don't Like a Lieutenant.

Squad 8, Citizens' Guard, has a kick coming. At a meeting held Wednesday evening they turned their battering rams on the rules and regulations adopted for the organization. They cannot swallow the manual.

In the squad objections to the rules seem to vary considerably. All unite, however, in objecting to this section: "Any member of the Citizens' Guard on active service who shall fail to comply with the rules and regulations here set forth, and such other rules as in times of necessities the exigencies of the case may require, will be subject to court martial."

"We, being private citizens," says one, "and only volunteering our services for cases of emergency or actual necessity, are not to be hampered with military regulations. That's all right for the regulars and the volunteer military companies, because it is customary, but we do not purpose to submit to it."

At the meeting Wednesday night an officer of the squad laid down his badge and commission. His reasons, as given, were that he would not serve under the regulations. Other members were only prevented from following the Corporal's example, by a call being made for a special meeting tonight week to consider what should be done.

Certain members of the squad add an objection to the regulation in effect that none of their officers were present at the meeting that adopted them. The minutes show, however, that both Sergeant Simonson and Corporal Dwight attended the meeting.

Says an outside officer: "There is a good deal of feeling in Squad 8 over the recent election for Division Lieutenant. They put up a man and another squad ran a man. The former was beaten. Since then the squad and Division Lieutenant have not pulled together worth a cent."

The officers of this squad are: J. V. Simonsen, sergeant; C. R. De ment, first corporal; E. Hingley, second corporal; P. O'Sullivan, third corporal; C. B. Dwight, fourth corporal. One of the above says of the dissatisfaction: "Squad 8 will likely disband. We do not care to be bossed in any such manner."

The dissatisfaction is found to extend to no other divisions. Officers and men generally accept the regulations and are highly pleased with them. The court martial matter, many say, is proper and is put in to enforce performance of duty when in actual service. It is contended that the section only applies when the Citizens' Guards are on duty.

WILL SOON BE SUPPLIED FROM ARTESIAN WELLS.

Pumping Plant Arrived by the Australia—Now on the Ground—Oahu Plantation Pumps.

Very soon now the city will have artesian water from the two new wells at the corner of Alapai and Beretania streets. One well is finished, and McCandless Bros. will turn the other over to the Government in a few days. Mr. Rowell is rushing work on the station building. The Blake pump, which is a powerful beauty, came consigned to the Honolulu Iron Works by the last Australia. The last of the heavy machinery was delivered at the station by Huxtable & Co. today. Mr. A. Brown, the energetic superintendent of water works, is doing more than his share in improving, extending and amending the pipe lines. He is still wedded to the idea of a reservoir on Punchbowl and has secured approval of the plan. The reservoir will be but a short distance from the new pumping station. It will be but a few weeks at most when the city is independent of the Nuuanu

A HOPELESS CASE.

After putting all the strings the barber pulled it up.

His wife had told him that he needed it badly, and after thinking it over for a week he decided to do it.

He had been sitting in the barber chair for the last half hour. All those little attentions for which the barber is famous had been shown upon him with lavish hand and tireless tongue.

A deep strain of inevitable relief upon the face of the man, as the barber pulled the string up, and the little man's face showed a look of intense interest.

"That's a fine job, sir," said the barber, looking at the man's hair.

"No, sir, I never use the stuff," snarled the man, with a look of disgust.

"A shave, sir?" suggested the barber in an offhand way as he examined a greasy hand.

A Mountain Missionary.

CHAPTER I.

WHY HE WENT TO KENTUCKY.

Mr. Robert Peters, or Father Peters, as he was called by the mountaineers, was born in Ohio, and was a missionary,

and ten years before the war he

with his wife and daughter, moved into the Cumberland mountains in southeastern Kentucky. Only an intermediate religious spirit could have induced Father Peters to leave his home in the East, and to go to a missionary station in the mountains of Kentucky,

and to take up his abode among the hills of the Cumberland range. It would be difficult in the United States to find a place

and a people in more violent contrast with his old associates. Wealth, or at least comfort, and intelligence were the rule in northern Ohio. There was hardly an exception to poverty and ignorance in the new home.

But Father Peters, without giving a thought to the sacrifice he was making,

felt that he was coming as a missionary to the heathen quite as much as if he had gone out to the heart of darkest

Africa. He built a large double log cabin that was quite palatial and a model of home comfort in contrast with the cabins of his neighbors, and as he know that the people were too poor

to contribute to his support he broke up

a little farm and astonished his neighbors

by introducing agricultural appliances

and methods such as they had never before heard of or dreamed of.

Soon after his arrival, and with no assistance from those whom he had come to benefit, Father Peters built a log meeting house across the rough mountain road from his home and sent word through the hills that hereafter

there would be preaching every Sunday morning at Bradley's Crossing, as the place was called.

At first the people did not take kindly to the missionary. These mountain-ers, who were so proud of their isolation, and who were so proud of their independence, do not favor the coming of interlopers. The man who may not own an acre of rocky hillside is strong in the belief that the mountains round about

are the exclusive property of himself and his kin. Then, again, while there were no slaves in this part of Kentucky,

the people had a bitter hatred of aboli-tionists—a hatred that grew more intense as the day of strife approached.

They believed that every northern man was an abolitionist, and at first they were inclined to think that Father Peters had come into the mountains to spread his pernicious political principles rather than to preach the gospel.

Although young enough to be her husband's daughter, Mrs. Peters threw herself heart and soul into his work.

She was a woman of much culture and force of character, and before she had been a year in the mountains she established a school in the meeting house.

Excepting Bradley, the blacksmith,

and the children of a family named

Burris, that lived near by, the school was not attended. Neither the mountaineers

nor their fathers had had any "book

learnin'" and so they reasoned that their children could get along without it.

Then they had a dim notion that schools and abolition were closely related.

Gradually the meeting house became a rendezvous for the mountaineers for ten miles round. It was particularly popular in the summer season. Then groups of lank men and women, often accompanied by troops of ragged, tow-headed children, would come down the

A French Boy Hero.

Another name, our Paris correspondent says, is added to the list of boy heroes of the French wars by the death of a drummer boy at the siege of Mauthausen 191 years ago.

The circumstances, overlooked at the time,

were brought to light by modern historians

of the French revolution. Stranh, or Struh,

as it is also spelled, was a drummer at 14

in the French Royal Swedish regiment. It was on the 15th, 1793. The army of the convention had undertaken to raise the siege of Mauthausen by the Austrians, and Stranh's regiment had been sent to occupy the village of Doustries. Regardless of danger, the young drummer slipped through the lines of Austrian skirmishers by helms and ditches, and reached the center of the village, where he proceeded to perform on his drum a rattling call to arms.

The enemy, believing that the French had occupied the village, retreated in disorder.

This enabled the French to get up to the first houses of the village. By this time the Austrians had discovered how they had been played with, and were in no humor to forgive the author of their defeat. Stranh ran for his life, but too late. Surrounded in front of the church by Hungarian gren-adiers, he fell, having himself shot down several of his assailants. A peasant hidden in a loft had witnessed the whole scene. Some years later in the army he met Stranh's

brother, who was aware that the drummer boy had been killed, but were ignorant of the circumstances of his death until the peasant told them. In 1871, in opening the ground in front of the church of Doustries

for the burial of the dead, a peasant hidden in a loft had witnessed the whole scene.
