

Washington Report on employment of young people

Senator Hiram L. Fong Papers

Public Relations, Speeches, statements, and messages, Box PR18, Folder 106

<https://hdl.handle.net/10524/85351>

Items in eVols are protected by copyright, with all rights reserved, unless otherwise indicated.

UHM Library Digital Collections Disclaimer and Copyright Information

BOORUM & PEASE "NOISEAR"®

WASHINGTON REPORT

FOR

THE HONOLULU ADVERTISER

1960

BOORUM & PEASE "NOISEAR"®

For: Honolulu Advertiser
Feb. 14, 1960

By Hiram L. Fong

WASHINGTON--A subject of major concern to me and to many Islanders today is the employment of our young people. We have a very high percentage of young people in our state population. Many of them are well-trained and capable in their professions and technical skills and have a desire to serve our Government in a civilian capacity.

Because of our geographic location, recruitment officers of the various agencies of our Federal Government did not make the trip to Hawaii to obtain employees for their respective agencies. Travel costs made this phase of recruitment prohibitive. However, I have now arranged with three of our Federal Government agencies that they send representatives to interview and attract potential good-will ambassadors from Hawaii.

Announcements of their visits will be made known in the Honolulu newspapers.

Through the columns of the Honolulu Advertiser, I would like to cite some employment opportunities overseas with the Department of State, the International Cooperation Administration, and the United States Information Agency.

Professional and clerical employees may become career members of these agencies.

Last October and November, I made a tour of the Far East and observed that these agencies are doing much to stem the tide of Communism in that area of the world. Americans abroad are extending professional assistance to accelerate progress in newly developing and independent nations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE -- In its search for new employees the Department is always interested in recruiting individuals who represent the diverse interests of the United States and who have a firm knowledge of foreign affairs.

Opportunities exist in both the Domestic and Foreign Service fields.

Persons who wish clerical positions in the Department or in the Foreign Service may write directly to the Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C., for the proper set of application forms.

The Foreign Service represents the American people and the American Government at more than 280 posts throughout the world. Men and women of the Foreign Service who staff the embassies, legations and consulates maintained by the United States abroad are the operating force through which our Government's international relations are conducted.

There are three types of appointments to the Foreign Service:

3

1) Foreign Service offices -- at home and abroad, the majority of these posts are being filled by career Foreign Service officers. They have the opportunity to advance from the lowest rank to the highest rank of career minister or career ambassador.

The Department has maintained contact with the University of Hawaii since 1950, informing it of examination plans and encouraging students there to take the examinations. Also, newspaper releases regarding forthcoming examinations are sent to Hawaii newspapers. Application must be made by October to take the examination in December in Honolulu. Last year 36 applications were made, but only 18 applicants actually appeared to take the examination.

Applications are made to: the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

2) Foreign Service Reserve Officers -- occasionally the need arises for skills not readily available within the Foreign Service Officer Corps. The Secretary of State is then authorized to meet these special operating needs by making limited appointments, not to exceed a five-year period, to the Foreign Service Reserve.

Individuals interested may write to: Employment

Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

3) Foreign Service Staff -- comprised of stenographic, clerical, and technical personnel. Greatest need here is for secretaries, stenographers, communications clerks, and general clerical personnel.

Occasionally a need arises for diplomatic couriers, nurses and telecommunications technicians.

Applicant may send letters to the Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION ADMINISTRATION -- agency which administers the Mutual Security Program of helping under-developed countries of the world.

In its challenge to help budding nations in the Far East, Near East and Africa, ICA faces two tasks -- the first is to prevent the conquest of peaceful nations through military force, and the second is to cooperate in the social and economic fields so that peaceful nations can develop self-reliance and reasonable self-sufficiency.

A few positions are available in Latin America for Spanish-speaking applicants.

James W. Riddleberger, ICA director, recently told me that the agency plans to continue "to tap the exceptionally fine manpower resources which Hawaii offers the Technical Assistance Program."

ICA policy is to seek to recruit overseas personnel from all parts of the United States in order to provide the best representational picture of our country.

In Mr. Riddleberger's estimation, Hawaii has important resources of personnel that have not yet been tapped. While the skills sought are limited to no single occupational field, there is much valuable know-how in the fields of tropical agriculture and tropical medicine.

In December of last year, Harry A. Hinderer, ICA director of personnel, spent several days in Honolulu meeting with Dr. Dai Ho Chun, director of the International Cooperation Center, and with representatives of the U. S. Civil Service Commission and the U. S. Employment Service.

More than 50 candidates for secretarial positions were interviewed. At the present time, ICA is in the process of employing over half of them for assignment all around the world.

Applications may be made directly to: Office of Personnel, International Cooperation Administration, Washington 25, D. C.

UNITED STATES INFORMATION AGENCY -- Although the USIA is only six and a half years old (created on August 1, 1953), it has a vast network of activity -- more than 200 information offices throughout the world, which are integral parts of the regular foreign service establishments of the U. S. Government. Media used include radio broadcasting, press and publications, motion pictures and library programs.

President Eisenhower has said of the information agency that "This is a key instrument in our efforts to promote peace, world understanding and eventual reduction of armaments. "

The President set the principal task of the overseas information program when he directed the agency to "submit evidence to peoples of other nations that the objectives and policies of the United States are in harmony with and will advance their legitimate aspirations for freedom, progress and peace. "

An integral part of this basic mission of the agency is to counter Communist propaganda.

Strategic, commercial and political interests of the United States require that U. S. objectives, policies and actions be accurately presented and explained to the world.

Positions available in this agency are broken down into three categories -- clerical and other employees; professional and administrative; and technical positions. The latter are primarily in radio broadcasting and require language specialists, radio engineers and power plant technicians with the Voice of America. Inquiries and applications for ^{the Voice of America} this division of USIA should be directed to: Chief of the Recruitment Branch, U. S. Information Agency, 1776 Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., Washington 25, D. C.

Those applying for clerical positions must be experienced stenographers or business or college graduates with business training.

Positions in the professional field are classified as follows: public affairs officer, cultural affairs officer, librarian, information officer, press officer, radio officer, motion picture officer, junior officer and binational center officer (as teacher, director of activities, director of courses and administrator).

Applications for USIA positions should be addressed to:
Personnel Division, U. S. Information Agency, Washington 25, D. C.

Washington Report

Senator Advises On Federal Jobs

(Editor's Note: Following is another article in the Sunday Advertiser series, "Washington Report," in which Hawaii's members of Congress report to their constituents.)

By SEN. HIRAM L. FONG

WASHINGTON—A subject of major concern to me and to many Islanders today is the employment of our young people. We have a very high percentage of young people in our state population. Many of them are well-trained and capable in their professions and technical skills and have a desire to serve our Government in a civilian capacity.

Fong

BECAUSE OF OUR geographic location, recruitment officers of the various agencies of our Federal Government did not make the trip to Hawaii to obtain employees for their respective agencies. Travel costs made this phase of recruitment prohibitive. However, I have now arranged with three of our Federal Government agencies that they send representatives to interview and attract potential good-will ambassadors from Hawaii.

Announcements of their visits will be made known in the Honolulu newspapers.

Through the columns of the Honolulu Advertiser, I would like to cite some employment opportunities overseas with the Department of State, the International Cooperation Administration, and the United States Information Agency.

PROFESSIONAL AND clerical employees may become career members of these agencies.

Last October and November, I made a tour of the Far East and observed that these agencies are doing much to stem the tide of Communism in that area of the world. Americans abroad are extending professional assistance to accelerate progress in newly developing and independent nations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE—in its search for new employees the Department is always interested in recruiting individuals who represent the diverse interests of the United States and who have a firm knowledge of foreign affairs.

Opportunities exist in both the Domestic and Foreign Service fields.

Persons who wish clerical positions in the Department or in the Foreign Service may write directly to the Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C., for the proper set of application forms.

THE FOREIGN SERVICE represents the American people and the American Government at more than 280 posts throughout the world. Men and women of the Foreign Service who staff the embassies, legations and consulates maintained by the United States abroad are the operating force through which our Government's international relations are conducted.

There are three types of appointments to the Foreign Service:

1) FOREIGN SERVICE OFFICES—at home and abroad, the majority of these posts are being filled by career Foreign Service officers. They have the opportunity to advance from the lowest rank to the highest rank of career minister or career ambassador.

The Department has maintained contact with the University of Hawaii since 1950, informing it of examination plans and encouraging students there to take the examinations.

Also, newspaper releases regarding forthcoming examinations are sent to Hawaii newspapers. Application must be made by October to take the examination in December in Honolulu. Last year 36 applications were made, but only 18 applicants actually appeared to take the examination.

APPLICATIONS ARE made to: the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C.

2) FOREIGN SERVICE RESERVE OFFICERS—occasionally the need arises for skills not readily available within the Foreign Service Officer Corps. The Secretary of State is then authorized to meet these special operating needs by making limited appointments, not to exceed a five-year period, to the Foreign Service Reserve.

Individuals interested may write to: Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C.

3) FOREIGN SERVICE STAFF—comprised of stenographic, clerical, and technical personnel. Greatest need here is for secretaries, stenographers, communications clerks, and general clerical personnel.

Occasionally a need arises for diplomatic couriers, nurses and telecommunications technicians.

Applicant may send letters to the Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D.C.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION ADMINISTRATION—agency which administers the Mutual Security Program of helping under-developed countries of the world.

In its challenge to help budding nations in the Far East, Near East and Africa, ICA faces two tasks—the first is to prevent the conquest of peaceful nations through military force, and the second is to cooperate in the social and economic fields so that peaceful nations can develop self-reliance and reasonable self-sufficiency.

A FEW POSITIONS are available in Latin America for Spanish-speaking applicants.

James W. Riddleberger, ICA director, recently told me that the agency plans to continue "to tap the exceptionally fine manpower resources which Hawaii offers the Technical Assistance Program."

In Mr. Riddleberger's estimation, Hawaii has important resources of personnel that have not yet been tapped.

WASHINGTON REPORT
For: Honolulu Advertiser
February 14, 1960
Senator Hiram L. Fong

COPY

WASHINGTON -- A subject of major concern to me and to many Islanders today is the employment of our young people. We have a very high percentage of young people in our state population. Many of them are well-trained and capable in their professions and technical skills and have a desire to serve our Government in a civilian capacity.

Because of our geographic location, recruitment officers of the various agencies of our Federal Government did not make the trip to Hawaii to obtain employees for their respective agencies. Travel costs made this phase of recruitment prohibitive. However, I have now arranged with three of our federal government agencies that they send representatives to interview and attract potential good-will ambassadors from Hawaii.

Announcements of their visits will be made known in the Honolulu newspapers.

Through the columns of the Honolulu Advertiser, I would like to cite some employment opportunities overseas with the Department of State, the International Cooperation Administration, and the United States Information Agency.

Professional and clerical employees may become career members of these agencies.

COPY

Last October and November, I made a tour of the Far East and observed that these agencies are doing much to stem the tide of Communism in that area of the world. Americans abroad are extending professional assistance to accelerate progress in newly developing and independent nations.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE -- In its search for new employees the Department is always interested in recruiting individuals who represent the diverse interests of the United States and who have a firm knowledge of foreign affairs.

Opportunities exist in both the Domestic and Foreign Service fields.

Persons who wish clerical positions in the Department or in the Foreign Service may write directly to the Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C., for the proper set of application forms.

The Foreign Service represents the American people and the American Government at more than 280 posts throughout the world. Men and women of the Foreign Service who staff the embassies, legations and consulates maintained by the United States abroad are the operating force through which our Government's international relations are conducted.

There are three types of appointments to the Foreign Service:

COPY

1) Foreign Service offices -- at home and abroad, the majority of these posts are being filled by career Foreign Service officers. They have the opportunity to advance from the lowest rank to the highest rank of career minister or career ambassador.

The Department has maintained contact with the University of Hawaii since 1950, informing it of examination plans and encouraging students there to take the examinations. Also, newspaper releases regarding forthcoming examinations are sent to Hawaii newspapers. Application must be made by October to take the examination in December in Honolulu. Last year 36 applications were made, but only 18 applicants actually appeared to take the examination.

Applications are made to: the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

2) Foreign Service Reserve Officers -- occasionally the need arises for skills not readily available within the Foreign Service Corps. The Secretary of State is then authorized to meet these special operating needs by making limited appointments, not to exceed a five-year period, to the Foreign Service Reserve.

Individuals interested may write to: Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

⁻⁴⁻ COPY

3) Foreign Service Staff -- comprised of stenographic, clerical, and technical personnel. Greatest need here is for secretaries, stenographers, communications clerks, and general clerical personnel.

Occasionally a need arises for diplomatic couriers, nurses and telecommunications technicians.

Applicant may send letters to the Employment Division, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION ADMINISTRATION -- agency which administers the Mutual Security Program of helping under-developed countries of the world.

In its challenge to help budding nations in the Far East, Near East and Africa, ICA faces two tasks -- the first is to prevent the conquest of peaceful nations through military force, and the second is to cooperate in the social and economic fields so that peaceful nations can develop self-reliance and reasonable self-sufficiency.

A few positions are available in Latin America for Spanish-speaking applicants.

James W. Riddleberger, ICA director, recently told me that the Agency plans to continue "to tap the exceptionally fine manpower resources which Hawaii offers the Technical Assistance Program."

ICA policy is to seek to recruit overseas personnel from all parts of the United States in order to provide the best representational picture of our country.

-5-
COPY

In Mr. Riddleberger's estimation, Hawaii has important resources of personnel that have not yet been tapped. While the skills sought are limited to no single occupational field, there is much valuable know-how in the fields of tropical agriculture and tropical medicine.

In December of last year, Harry A. Hinderer, ICA director of personnel, spent several days in Honolulu meeting with Dr. Dai Ho Chun, director of the International Cooperation Center, and with representatives of the U. S. Civil Service Commission and the U. S. Employment Service.

More than 50 candidates for secretarial positions were interviewed. At the present time, ICA is in the process of employing over half of them for assignment all around the world.

Applications may be made directly to: Office of Personnel, International Cooperation Administration, Washington 25, D. C.

UNITED STATES INFORMATION AGENCY -- Although the USIA is only six and a half years old (created on August 1, 1953), it has a vast network of activity -- more than 200 information offices throughout the world, which are integral parts of the regular foreign service establishments of the U. S. Government. Media used include radio broadcasting, press and publications, motion pictures and library programs.

President Eisenhower has said of the information agency that "This is a key instrument in our efforts to promote peace, world understanding and eventual reduction of armaments."

COPY

The President set the principal task of the overseas information program when he directed the agency to "submit evidence to peoples of other nations that the objectives and policies of the United States are in harmony with and will advance their legitimate aspirations for freedom, progress and peace."

An integral part of this basic mission of the agency is to counter Communist propaganda.

Strategic, commercial and political interests of the United States require that U. S. objectives, policies and actions be accurately presented and explained to the world.

Positions available in this agency are broken down into three categories -- clerical and other employees; professional and administrative; and technical positions. The latter are primarily in radio broadcasting and require language specialists, radio engineers and power plant technicians with the Voice of America. Inquiries and applications for the Voice of America division of USIA should be directed to: Chief of the Recruitment Branch, U. S. Information Agency, 1776 Pennsylvania Avenue, N. W., Washington 25, D. C.

Those applying for clerical positions must be experienced stenographers or business or college graduates with business training.

COPY

Positions in the professional field are classified as follows:

public affairs officer, cultural affairs officer, librarian, information officer, press officer, radio officer, motion picture officer, junior officer and binational center officer (as teacher, director of activities, director of courses and administrator).

Applications for USIA positions should be addressed to:

Personnel Division, U. S. Information Agency, Washington 25, D. C.