HONOLULU LIBRARY

— AND —

READING ROOM ASSOCIATION.

THIS INSTITUTION is located on the corner of Hotel and Alakea streets, directly opposite the building of the Y. M. C. A., and is open every day and evening, Sundays included.

The Reading Room is supplied with all the local journals, as well as nearly fifty of the leading foreign papers and magazines.

The Circulating Library consists of over 3,000 volumes, and is constantly increasing.

The Reference Library contains a valuable line of cyclopedias, dictionaries, and works of a similar character.

A handsome parlor is provided for conversation and games.

The Circulating Department is closed on Sundays.

Terms of membership: Signing the roll and paying the regular dues, fifty cents a month, quarterly in advance.

Strangers from foreign countries and visitors from other islands are welcome to the rooms at all times, but as the Association has no other regular means of support except the dues of members, it is expected that residents of Honolulu who desire to avail themselves of its privileges, and all who feel an interest in maintaining an institution of this kind in our community, will join the Association and pay the regular dues.

ELECTORAL INDEPENDENCE.

The National Executive Committee of Independent-Republicans, derisively called Mugwumups by the party that suffered from their defection, has just issued its report of the Presidential campaign of 1884. Full financial statements are given, accounting for all the money raised and spent by the organization. It is shown, also, by carefully prepared tables, that in every State in which Independent campaigns were conducted, Blaine's percentage of the total vote was less than Garfield's. Americans bid fair soon to realize that personal independence is the keystone of liberty. As the Colonists of '76 gave the keynote of human liberties to the world, so the manly action of the Independents in the last Presidential contest gave a cue of deliverance from partisan bondage to the people of many countries otherwise enjoying the boon of freedom. The Prohibition party showed equal independence, and taught all who need it a like salutary lesson, in the fight made for its peculiar cause. Not that the world was previously without the example of electoral freedom, for the glory of politics in the British Islands to-day is that a party to gain or retain power must secure and maintain command of the thinking faculties of the nation. Latterly, in the United Kingdom, party machines, more or less thoroughly organized, have come into play, but they are not simply engines for forcing men into partisan moulds. They are the agencies through which appeals to the public mind may most effectually be made, and by which the results of those appeals may be the most certainly gathered at the polls. Of course, all the work of the British party machinery is not so legitimate, but reference is only made here to its operation upon people who have minds. The flotsam and jetsam of the body politic are the prize or the prey of the party best equipped for recovering them.

PARTIZANSHIP.

Commenting upon a distasteful proposition uttered by the Tribune, the New York Nation speaks a wholesome word for the benefit of people liable to be carried away by mere party names and traditions. The proposition was that the Republicans of New York would honor General Grant's memory "most truly by rededicating themselves to the unselfish service of the Republican party." Upon this ill-timed counsel the Nation, among other remarks of a personal nature, says that party "is an instrument created every now and then by free peoples for meeting what seem to be the wants of the time, with appropriate legislation. It has no more claim than a horse and buggy on anybody's reverence for other things than its utility." This is an idea worth considering not alone in the United States. Because certain men have done good service for their country in times past, under the name of the organization that had placed them in power, it does not follow that equally good service should be expected of any set of men banding themselves together under the same name, and professing reverence for the acts and characters of those who have worthily discharged the particular trusts reposed in them. No party, no man, is entitled to the confidence of a people whose principles, professions and policy do not have an intimate connection with the needs of his nation at the time when he seeks popular support. Every time has its special necessities. Even the very men most suitable as rulers under certain circumstances may be very unsuitable under others. The circumstances may change so rapidly, too, as to give an appearance, to a distant view, of extraordinary fickleness in the demand for a change of rulers, when, in fact, that is the product of intelligent appreciation of the situation. A party maintained in power by its traditionary hold upon the individuals composing it, much beyond the summit of its usefulness, becomes a grievous tyranny over the most democratic nation. Also, a party that has no rallying watchword better than the obsolete phrases into which the principles of its fathers and founders crystallized, has passed its stage of vital usefulness, and the independent minds of a country must demand that it be superseded by an organization based upon living issues.

Evidences are accumulating that President Cleveland's administration is going on record as a popular one for its solid merits. His calling a halt in the indiscriminate marching out of office-holders for political reasons, simply, was expected to create a revulsion of feeling in the party that elected him. On the contrary, even "down south" where Democracy, rightly or wrongly, is supposed to be the most rabid, the President's firm stand for his professed principles of reform is meeting with unqualified approval in the party conventions.

S. S. wharf. The captain reports fine weather.

Schr Mana brought 20 cords of firewood from Nuu, Maui.

LOCAL & GENERAL NEWS.

There is a letter for Sig. Unulta Santini at the office of the Italian Consul, Mr. F. A. Schaefer.

The St. Louis College Boarding and Day School for boys will resume operations on the 14th September.

Dr. Baker, V. S., was driving about town last evening looking for a man supposed to have stolen two pigs from his ranch at Palama.

Five colts, entered at the Custom House as thoroughbreds, arrived by the Claus Spreckels this morning for Col. Z. S. Spaulding, of Kauai.

The members of Oahu Lodge No. 1, K. of P., will celebrate their fourteenth aniversary by a social, at their hall, on Saturday evening next.

At the office of the Water Department is a plan of the Nuuanu Valley syphon and waterworks surveyed, levelled and drawn by G. E. G. Jackson in July last.

About $2,000 have been subscribed for securing a season of opera from Signor Farini and company, so that the success of the project may be considered assured.

Mr. Windgate, superintendent of the freight clerking department of the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Co., has resigned his position. He intends to take a trip to the Coast with his family.

A Board of Inspectors for the suppressing of disease among animals has been appointed for Maui, as follows: Dr. A. H. Bailey, executive inspector; S. F. Chillingworth and W. P. A. Brewer.

A movement is on foot to bring about an organization of all interested in the promotion of diversified industries, with the ultimate object of securing a combination of all the agricultural associations in the kingdom.

Ah Kui was discharged from penal servitude yesterday, having worked a year to pay a fine of $100 for smoking opium. The law is that a man of no property or means who has served twelve months, in default of paying a fine, is entitled to a discharge.

It having been reported that the price of exchange for silver on San Francisco had been put up at Spreckels' Bank, a reporter called there and made enquiries. He was informed that silver exchange was still sold at one percent sixty days, and gold one percent sight.

A complimentary dinner was given at the British Club last evening to the Hon. A. S. Hartwell, in anticipation of his projected departure from the kingdom. The Hawaiian Bar Association were the hosts, Hon. H. A. Widemann presided, and a pleasant evening was spent.

A large number of people took advantage of the fine weather to attend Mr. Adams' sale. Among those present are His Majesty the King, Princess Likelike and Princess Liliuokalani. At noon reports from the sale were to the effect that bidding was lively and very good prices were being obtained.

Mr. R. M. Daigle, machinist, is seriously ill from blood-poisoning in the face. Calling to see him, our reporter found him reclining on a bed in his shop, one side of his face terribly swollen and discolored, the eye being closed up. The trouble originated in a boil on his lip. Mr. Daigle is a hardworking artisan, and his misfortune calls for the sympathy of the community.

While the dredge was digging off the O. S. S. wharf this morning, the dipper brought up a large stone with a stout cod line fast to it. The line was new and it led along the bottom of the bay in the direction of Ewa. A small boat was procured and an expedition formed to follow this mysterious line to its obscure end. It led to that isolated house on the Ewa side of the bay, and it was kept in position at that end also by a stone. What use was made of this submarine line is not yet known, but it is conjectured it may be connected with opium smuggling. Further investigation may lead to startling developments.

Editor Bulletin:—In your issue of yesterday you ask, "What in the world is 'Shawknit.'" I would answer by saying it is a new style of Sock or Stocking, made by the Shaw Stocking Company, of Lowell, Mass., and is superior to anything made in being one continuous piece without any seams. It is universally admitted to be the most perfect sock ever patented. These goods can be seen at M. McInerny's store, where men's and boys' sizes are offered for sale, and where the public may examine them at their leisure.

A HORSE CASE.

About the only important business before the Civil Court this morning, was taking the conclusion of evidence in a suit of breach of warrantry brought by D. T. Lane against Miles Bros., horse dealers. One of a lot of horses imported by defendants in October last, and sold for them at Adams' salesroom, was bought at $250 by Lane, who found the animal was lame. About six months later the horse, which was called "Comet," took glanders and had to be shot. At this time Lane was absent on the Coast, and evidence was given that on his return he said he was sorry the horse was shot, as he had ascertained what was known about the animal on the Coast and valued it at $1500. On the part of the plaintiff it was testified by several witnesses that the horses were all warranted sound at the sale, that owners or auctioneer had not this one's mentioned lameness, and that after the sale the horse was so lame as to be useless. Defendants, on the contrary, testified, supported by other witnesses, that it was stated publicly at the sale that this horse had gone lame, but that it was only a temporary trouble caused by standing so long on board ship. C. Miles swore that when the horse was shot for glanders he had entirely recovered from his lameness. Judge Bickerton continued the case for judgment until the 31st inst.

LAZINESS THE BANE OF HONOLULU.

"The fact of the matter is," said a gentleman who takes a lively interest in all the discussions of local improvement in the Bulletin, "the people here are too lazy to do anything for the good of the country."

"It's a lazy climate," interjected the reporter.

"Yes; there are white men walking the streets and loafing about, too lazy to do harder work than reading the newspapers, who might be benefiting themselves and the country by raising vegetables and fruit, or, at all events, in some useful industry."

The reporter, being aware that he was in the presence of one of the best resident authorities upon such a topic as that struck, only needed to listen to the ensuing words of truth and soberness.

"Scarcely a vegetable or fruit that grows anywhere but can be made to flourish here, and it is a shame that our markets and tables are so meagrely supplied with those descriptions of food, so desirable and even necessary to a wholesome dietary in a tropical climate.

"There is a great want of intelligence and forethought shown in the kinds of trees favored in Honolulu. Oranges, limes, peaches, and other fruit trees, would thrive with very little care, yet scarcely anything is planted but palms, monkey pods and others useful only as firewood outside of shade and ornamental purposes.

"They have a grand custom in Mexico, that exists also in Spain, of planting fruit trees by the roadside. People journeying through the country, as they go along, think nothing of getting off their horses to plant the seeds by the way. The result is that the tired and thirsty traveler often meets with a tree bearing delicious fruit, far from any dwelling or house of refreshment. I can never forget the delight with which, after riding some hours on a hot day in Mexico, I came upon a plum tree laden with ripe fruit. It was a most refreshing repast for a tired and thirsty man.

"Then, even in the matter of shade and ornament, more practical wisdom and taste might be exercised. For street adornment what fine effects could not be produced with the Samang (monkey pod), Ponciana with its crimson flowers, Cathatacarpus and other beautiful species? Besides their ornamental characteristics, those named make excellent timber.

"The algaroba (that, by the way, is a misnomer, as the proper name of the tree is El Carob) has been discredited because of the slight hold its roots take in the ground, rendering it liable to overthrow in a gale. But with proper treatment that fault may be overcome. It is a well-known fact that a tree extends its roots to the same compass as that of the branches. Now, by trimming the branches of the carob close in for a few years the roots, instead of spreading out near the surface, will strike down and so take a firm hold of the ground."

After some conversation on other interesting topics, in the course of which the author of the above sentiments expressed his belief that the Bulletin was doing much good in advocating industries and improvements, the interview closed.

POLICE COURT.

Thursday, Aug. 27th.

Ah Sing, for stealing chickens from George Castle, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment at hard labor. It appears the prisoner tried to get into the fowl house at 2.15 A. M. yesterday. Making a noise in pulling off a slat, he was heard by some Portuguese, one of whom, after a chase, caught him. He offered his captor money and a watch to release him, and when that proved unavailing he tried to bite him.

M. E. Singleton was charged with heedless driving. His express had come in contact with one driven by Aeeona, and broken a wheel of the latter. The evidence did not show any want of care on the defendant's part, and he was found not guilty and discharged.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF EX-MINISTER HENRY A. PIERCE.

Henry A. Pierce, formerly United States Minister of Hawaii, died Wednesday at the Union Club. The deceased, who was born in Boston on December 15, 1808, visited San Francisco, then the village of Yerba Buena, in September, 1828, as supercargo of the brig Griffin. He soon afterward became the Hudson Bay Company's agent at Honolulu, which was his home for twenty years. He formed a partnership with Captain Charles Brewer of Boston, and in the course of time accumulated half a million dollars. He then returned to Boston, and when the first regiment was formed there, in 1861, he subscribed $5,000 and afterward increased his contributions for the cause to $50,000. President Grant sent him as Minister to Hawaii, where he remained on duty for eight years. When President Hayes appointed his successor he became the chief of the King's Cabinet, and afterward was largely instrumental in securing the passage of the reciprocity treaty. The deceased leaves a wife in Boston, a daughter, the wife of ex-Mayor Clapp of Greenfield, Mass., and a son. He was a life member of the Pioneer Society.—[California paper.

A USEFUL DOG.

"Expect they had some fine pups up at the Chicago dog show," remarked a passenger from Ohio, "but I have a dog at home I wouldn't trade for the best of 'em."

"What breed is he?"

"Don't know exactly, but call him a coaly."

"Collie, you mean?"

"No, I mean just what I say—coaly. Money wouldn't buy that dog. He's a cur, but we couldn't keep house without him. You see, several years ago I trained him to bark at the railway trains as they passed our house. That's his sole business—barking at trains. He does just whoop her up, especially at coal trains. Well, he annoys the railroad men so that every fireman and brakeman on the road has sworn to kill him. Oh, he is a valuable dog."

"I can't see where the value comes in."

"You can't? Well, you could if you was in my place and had all the coal you could burn, and some to sell, thrown right off at your back door, free of cost."

A QUESTION FOR CASUISTS.

An old darky was preaching some time since and he saw one in his congregation asleep, so he began: "You remember when Paul was preaching in de temple a damsel was asleep in the fourth story, and she fell down smashed all ter smashes, and the fragments they picked up twelve basketsful, and whose wife will she be in the resurrection?"

ROMANCE AND REALITY.

Arrangements were being made for an amateur representation of "Romeo and Juliet." Mrs. S. was cast for Juliet, but some difficulty was had in finding a suitable Romeo.

"Why don't you play Romeo yourself, Mr. S.?" suggested one of the young ladies. "You would do it splendidly I am sure."

"What!" he exclaimed, "with Mrs. S. as Juliet? Why we've been married three years."

WILLING TO DO WHAT HE CAN.

Woman—If I give you something to eat will you saw a little wood?

Tramp—No, mum. I'm too weak to saw wood. I'm not lazy, jest weak, but I'm willin' to do what I can. You give me a good dinner, an' I'll sit out in the cornfield for a scarecrow while I'm eatin' it.

THEY CAME FROM NEW JERSEY.

"Are you happy, ducky?"

"Reasonably so, dear."

"Why, darling, what do you mean by that?"

"I mean that I'm as happy, dear, as anybody could be with a fall bonnet in the summer time."

NO CHANCE FOR AN ALIBI.

"If you are innocent," said a lawyer to his client, an old darky, who was charged with stealing a ham, "we ought to be able to prove an alibi."

"I don' 'spects we kin," the darky replied doubtfully.

"At what time was the ham stolen?"

"Bout lebben o'clock dey say."

"Well where were you between 11 o'clock and midnight; in bed?"

"No, sah; I was hidin' de ham."

MODESTY AND BRAINS.

Modesty is shown by the deep groove in the upper lip down from the nose; but, says authority, modesty is large in all those in whom the brain and nerve system predominate, whether this sign be present or not. Wherefore, friends, let us all cultivate modesty as significant of brains.—[Boston Gazettee.

GOOD FOR THE LADIES.

The annual meeting of the "Central Committee of the National Society for Women's Suffrage" was held early this month. Without being an advocate of women's rights, it cannot be denied that Miss Lydia Becker, for instance, is a more eloquent and rational speaker than many a member of either the present or the late Cabinet.—[London Life.

FALSE SENTIMENT.

The sentimentalism or patriotism which interferes with justice or punishment in this country does not simply weaken respect for law but it actually endangers the community. Three or four years ago a farmer of violent temper near Paterson, New Jersey, shot and killed a young man one Sunday morning for what the murderer was pleased to call trespassing. The young man was one of a company of Germans who had come to the top of the mountain to greet the rising sun with songs. The farmer was acquitted by a jury of his sympathizing neighbors at a cost to him of $20,000. The lesson was so far lost upon him that two or three days since he attacked two clergymen with his pitchfork and two savage dogs. The "intruders" barely escaped with their lives. Their offense was drinking water from his well after getting permission of his daughter. There are altogether too many such men in city and country. They put the lives of innocent persons in constant jeopardy. Nobody knows how or when they will fly out. If there is any reason why such men should live and mad dogs should die it ought to be published. Certainly they ought to be securely confined for life somewhere.—Detroit Free Press.

Bilkins, whose language is flowery, called his wife 'a daisy,' during their engagement; during their honeymoon he called her "a pink," and now when she meets him with a rolling-pin, at 2 o'clock in the morning, he calls her a "night blooming serious."

Notice to the Public.

We take pleasure in announcing to the public that, in addition to our
Pastry and Confectionery Business,
We will open our
Ice Cream Parlors !
Which have been fitted up elegantly according to our trade, on SATURDAY, APRIL 25th.
Our Cream will be only of superior quality, made of genuine cream. As we have made arrangements with the Woodlawn Dairy to supply us only with a first-class article from samples we have had of the same, we are able to guarantee satisfaction. The following assortments of Ice Creams and Sherbets we will keep at our opening, and many more kinds if trade will justify it:—
ICE CREAMS:
VANILLA, LEMON, CHOCOLATE, COFFEE, STRAWBERRY, PINEAPPLE and COFFEE GLACE.
SHERBETS:
ORANGE AND STRAWBERRY.
Parties supplied any day except Sundays. Those wishing Ice Cream for Sunday must leave their orders on Saturday before 9 p. m., which will be delivered before 10 a. m. Sunday. The creams will be packed so that they will keep eight hours in a first-class condition. Hoping to get a share of public patronage, and thanking the public for their liberal past favors, we remain, respectfully,

A LOST ART.

In a recently published story by Mr. Walter Besant, that charming author has the temerity to affirm that letter writing as an art is not extinct. Nay, he goes further. He alleges that letters as copious and as charming as any of the last century are now constantly passing through the Post Office. And he adds to the sum of his hardihood by ridiculing the correspondents of a by-gone time as people who had to weigh every phrase, and think out their epigrams and sweet things for weeks beforehand. The reason for this laborious method he attributes to the fact that in the old days the writer was conscious that his letters would be shown about and, very likely, read aloud. It is perhaps scarcely fair to take the casual expression of a novelist as seriously as though it were a problem in Euclid, or a dissertation on Conic Sections. Moreover, Mr. Besant is a humourist, with a touch delicate at times as that of Charles Lamb; and humourists, we know, have a sad habit of turning facts topsy-turvy for the fun of the thing and mere joy in the quaintness of the inversion. It may hap, however, that the author of The Revolt of Man is in earnest. His ridicule of the laboured epistles of our ancestors may be genuine, and his belief in the sweetness and light of modern letter writing may be a real and simple faith. In that case, the statement cannot be permitted to go unchallenged. Conversation and correspondence have alike deteriorated, and for reasons which are not far to seek. It is true that the lower orders, having, owing to the beneficent operation of the School Board, acquired a greater facility of expression and a greater precision, the ill-spelt and conventional forms which passed as letters between servant-maids have ceased to be in vogue with those deserving characters. No longer does Mary in the country address her friend in town in the well-worn exordium, "My dear Jane I hope you are quite well as this leaves me at present." Education has ameliorated, and indeed reformed, all that. But in the upper and middle classes there is observable no such corresponding improvement. The art of letter writing is a lost art—lost, because not practised; and not practised because the necessity for the art has ceased to be.

There are certain numerically small and select coteries in which even now the letter writer may be discovered. Literary people, for instance, are much given to the interchange of epistles sometimes with a freedom which is also affected. Mr. Besant is a literary man, and his correspondence, we may, without impertinence say, is principally with gentlemen of his own delightful calling. We are happy to think that the novelist's correspondence with publishers is considerable. But publishers, like other men, have sadly fallen off in their correspondence since the early days of the century, and their communications are now valued rather for the enclosure contained in the letter than for the letter itself. For the purposes of this argument, however, I may assume that the majority of the novelist's correspondents are those of his own profession. On this account he will, no doubt, take a sanguine view of correspondence generally. He judges the mass by the contents of his own letter-box. That is no fair test. The literary man writes the vast majority of his matter for the public. If he pens a sentence, he is conscious that hundreds and thousands of eyes will peruse it. This knowledge naturally begets a feeling of responsibility, and in some writers a habit of restraint, or an affectation of manner. When the author ceases work for the day, when he has—if we may venture on so commercial an allusion—put up the shutters and shut the shop, he finds it impossible to leave the tricks of the trade behind him. Inawkwardly, and with results infinitely more studied and formal when penning an epistle to a friend than when producing material for that which authors fondly call "the million." The late lamented Alexander Pope took infinite pains with his correspondence, and, indeed was so vain of his efforts as a letter writer that he often thought it a sin to waste a more than usually happy effort on one individual. Thus the Dean of St. Patrick occasionally received a communication from the little poet in Twickenham containing scandal and epigram and happy classical quotation of which he thought himself to be the sole depositary, but which, with altered name and address, had been forwarded to some other gentle or noble admirer of the famous translator of the Iliad. When the letters of modern literary men are published, the some straining after effect is usually observable. That latest victim of the "d—d good-natured friend," Thomas Carlyle, is affected and self-conscious to a degree in his correspondence. And, indeed, the majority of authors produce their letters with an idea that some day—"love, I know not when or how"—but some day, they will become the property of the public as much as their books, or articles, or essays.

A general introduction of the type writer will, we apprehend, do much to reduce the correspondence of authors to the dull level observed in that of meaner mortals. This ingenious instrument is being largely adopted by members of the literary craft. It is difficult to understand a man becoming witty or epigrammatic, or even garrulous, while working a machine. Though, truth to tell, we know of one man of genius who turns off verses on the type writer—works poems on an implement played like a piano, so that he appears at the same moment to be engaged in producing the libretto and composing the tune. His, however, is an exceptional case, and his poetry is not likely to take a high place in the national literature. The adoption of the new invention will have an unhappy effect in depressing less mechanical operators, and there is no reason why the novelist of the immediate future should not commence his letter to the poet with, "Dear Sir, —I have to acknowledge your favor of the 20th inst.;" and end it with, "I remain, dear Sir, your obedient servant, etc."

There are causes, however, less fanciful than the extended use of the type writer which have led to a deterioration in our correspondence. The hurry and jostle of the times leave little leisure to those who may have a taste for that almost forgotten art. People have a greater mistrust of each other. They do not care nowadays to wear the heart upon the sleeve, or exhibit their nature on notepaper with an interesting and sometimes amusing candour. The world has received an access of cynicism. It has received, moreover, an access of vulgarity. The parvenu sits in high places; the huckster is your most distinguished patron of the arts; and the finest productions of the painter or the sculptor find themselves in the galleries of the new rich. Thus gossip, which in the old letter-writer formed a not inconsiderable part of polite correspondence, has to deal with personages who are forbidding accidents in society. Scandal, too, has lost its piquancy because it has become general. Stimulating episodes in the "Hig-lif" are discussed with freedom by City clerks and omnibus lads. There are no more letters, because there is nothing left to write about.

"A book's a book, although there's nothing in't," wrote Lord Byron. The same, however, by no means holds good about a letter. Its merit consists in the elegant and racy recital of facts not generally known. And in these printed letters, of which we possess so vast a quantity, scandal will be found to constitute "the cream of the correspondence."

In illustrating this alleged decline of the art of letter writing, we do not, of course, including love letters. "Elia" has given a list of "books that are not books." In some such category must be placed the amorous epistolary interchange between those suffering from this midsummer madness. They are letters that are not letters. Herein the natural man exhibits himself with a comic candour. Even famous literary men, wounded with the fatal dart, have committed epistolary follies calculated to make angels weep. The artless art of love-letter writing alone survives and flourishes. All others have gone by the board.—London Life.

Boston Traveller: "Some people are born to ill-luck. An old woman who has pasted nearly 5,000 medical recipes into a book during the past forty years, has never been ill a day in her life, and she is growing discouraged."
