A MODEL-MAKER'S VIEWS.
A business which is nearly at a standstill—Patterns for Inventors.

"There are not more than twenty shops in the city of New York devoted to the making of patterns or the building of models," said a pattern-maker to a reporter, as he stood at his lathe turning a piece of wood. "The business does not seem to grow like other trades, and I must confess I am somewhat at a loss to discover the reason. You certainly would suppose that in a great metropolis like this inventors would be so plenty that hundreds of pattern and model-makers would be kept busy all the time working out their ideas in wood. Inventors, however, do not quite so plenty as that. There are plenty of men who are always on the point of making a great invention, but somehow they never reach the successful issue.

"I have been in this shop thirteen years and during that time have employed a great many different workmen. My experience has convinced me that there has been no improvement whatever in the machinery used in my business over that of a quarter of a century ago. We use exactly the same tools as we did then, and do our work in the same manner. This, I suppose, sounds somewhat strange to you, but it is nevertheless an undisputed fact."

"Do you have any trouble in getting good apprentices?"
"Yes, we do. The young men who come to learn the trade are usually ignorant fellows who have received but little or no education. They are faithful in their work, and seem to want to learn, but their ignorance of the slightest mechanical principles is a serious drawback to their advancement. I have often wondered why it is that more of the bright boys who graduate from our public schools do not take up the skilled trades. There is a good field here for such workmen as they would make. Somehow the boys all prefer to become clerks in dry goods stores or horse-car conductors instead of the period of our apprenticeship while nominally three years, is really unlimited. A workman is learning something new all the time. There is no limit to the variety of work we are called upon to perform."

"A man comes in here and explains to me what he desires to construct. He has, perhaps, made no drawings or measurements, but he expects me, after listening to his descriptions, to go to work and make the pattern, or model, whichever it may be, without any further assistance from him. If we were called upon to construct the same pattern quite often, why then we might be able to improve our machines and tools. As it is now, we can never tell what will make during the next twenty-four hours. Of course, a great many of our orders come from manufacturers. These are accompanied by the drawings and measurements, and are therefore more easily filled. Occasionally a crank comes in with a queer machine which he desires me to model. I usually tell such individuals that I have no time to do their work, and recommend them to some one whom I think will perhaps humor the crank's whims. Do we get good prices for our work? I have received as high as $100 for a model. It depends in a great measure upon the intricacy of the machine to be constructed. We pay our workmen from $3 to $5 a day.

The True Inwardness of Wagner's Music. (Chicago Times.)
Wagner is representative of German imperialism, of united Germany. The "Jahrbuch fuer die Deutsche Arme und Marine" is an article by Lieut. Remak, in which he discusses humanity and war. He announces that the end of war is victory, and to secure this, humanity must be subdued, the tender feelings must be subdued, the charging squadron and the flying battery must not hesitate to trample and grind the wounded who lie in their path, and comrades by saying: "Upon the subject of our next war, our descendants must read in history the summary judgment: The German people gained the victory, thanks to their reckless warfare, annihilating, exterminating, subjugating everything in their way."

It is precisely this ignoring of the delicate sensibilities, this disregard of sentiment, this hoarse resounding trumpet blast of defiance and destruction that are developed by Wagner. He reverses the system which makes the theme subservient to the music; he does not select sunny pastoral subjects for treatment. There are no noisome courtiers, lascivious lutes, nor enraptured couples in his creations. He deals only with the powers of war and death. His heroes are demigods, mighty in stature, unrelenting in hate, incessant in combat, brutal and overpowering in love. His women are never shrinking, rouged, bedizened sentimentalists; but robust creations, who hover delightedly among the dead, the wounded, the clamor, the terrific shock of the battle-field. They have no rose-tinted bonnets to which they invite their lovers, but meet them beneath the awful crags of the spirit-haunted mountains when the storm shakes the very foundations of the earth; they stand in the presence of gods, and are fierce, virile, robust, without a trace of human alloy. All this is in accord with the spirit of the new empire; and the harsh dissonances, the occasional grand harmonies, the forceful volcanic explosions of Wagner are its exponents.

There are fifty farms in Switzerland devoted to small culture.

THURSDAY July 24. CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

A question of veracity has arisen between the ADVERTISER and the "Gazette" on the subject of Chinese immigration. We stated that "during the year ending May 31st, the arrivals of Chinese had been 2,282, while the departures had been 1,733; net gain of Chinese population during the twelve months ended May 31, 1885, 529."

Table showing arrivals and departures of Chinese from June 1st, 1884, to May 31st, 1885. Columns include date, month, and number of arrivals/departures.

Table showing Police Offenses During June. Columns include offense type, number of offenders, and total number of offenses.

have thus established the absolute accuracy of our statement, so far as the material allegation is concerned, and it is now in order for the "Gazette" to apologize. Our contemporary deals with a period of seventeen months, namely, from January 1, 1884, to May 31, 1885, while the ADVERTISER dealt simply with the twelve months from June 1, 1884, to May 31, 1885.

We have thus disposed of the question of veracity. Space does not admit of further discussing the question of policy, which really is the material point at issue, although the "Gazette" suggests that a discussion of policy is "crossing the scent."

We are enabled to-day, to publish the detailed statement of domestic exports, an approximation to which was printed by us yesterday. The result justifies our statement that the returns from the outputs would increase the estimated totals. This we find to be the case. We estimated the export value for the June quarter, upon the basis explained yesterday, at $3,175,709 94.

The parade of the antiques and horrors on the Fourth of July, will commence at 5:30 a. m., the procession forming in the vacant lot above Dodd's stables on Fort street. The line of march will be through Hotel, Nuuanu, King, Punchbowl, Beretania, Fort, Nuuanu, Nuuanu, Hotel and Fort streets, in the order named, to the point of starting, where the procession will be dismissed.

PRESENTATION TO CONSUL-GENERAL McKINLEY. An hour or two before the departure of the Alameda yesterday, the following letter and the cane mentioned, were handed to Mr. McKinley, late United States Consul, but now commissioned Hawaiian Consul-General on the Pacific Coast.

"Dear Sir—We, the undersigned, residents of Honolulu, desire to express to you our sincere regret at the termination, by your departure, of the relations which have existed between us for the past years of your official life in our midst. The close intercourse between the United States and the Hawaiian Kingdom renders the post of United States Consul at this port one of peculiar importance, and brings the incumbent into constant communication with every business house and business man.

"The harmony of these relations depends very largely on the personal, as well as the official bearing of the Consul, and it is our especial desire to express our sense of the courteous and obliging manner in which you have transacted all the official business that we have had to bring before you.

"We beg you will carry with you the accompanying walking-stick, only to remind you at times of the sturdy friends you have left behind, and who will miss your genial smile and hearty words.

"The following is Mr. McKinley's reply to the above letter: "HONOLULU, July 1, 1885. "To Messrs. A. J. Cartwright, Theo. H. Davis, and others—Gentlemen: Your valuable token is truly a surprise, and from my whole heart I can only say at this time that I return my sincere thanks, not only for the elegant gift, but for the many kindly expressions you have tendered. It shall be my pride, through life, to carry with me this walking-stick, and as the years come and go I shall be pleased to lean on this staff and feel it emblematic of that firm, true, and abiding friendship which smooths the path of life, and supports tottering age to the brink of the grave.

"Again I thank you each and all, and you have my sincere hope that your lives may continue beyond the allotted time, and may be always abounding in peace and joy.

Departure of the Alameda. There was an unusually large number of people on the steamer and wharf yesterday bidding farewell to friends. Among them were His Majesty the King, H. R. H. Princess Liliuokalani and Governor Dominis, the Minister of Foreign Affairs and Finance, and the Attorney General; the relatives and friends of Miss Annis Montague and Mr. Turner; a whole host of friends of Mr. McKinley, and of the ladies and gentlemen who have been visiting the islands, besides a large number of kaamainos, who were saying good-bye to the Hawaiians who were going to the Coast.

By the Alameda yesterday, His Majesty the King sent to the care of Manley Hopkins, Hawaiian Consul-General at London, a portrait of himself to be presented to His Holiness the Pope. The picture represents His Majesty in a dark blue dress, and on the breast is displayed the insignia of the order of Pius IX, lately bestowed by the Sovereign Pontiff. The painting is a remarkably fine piece of art, being a faithful portrait, artistically executed by W. Petrovich.

DOMESTIC EXPORTS. Official Statement for the Past Quarter and Half-Year.

Table showing Domestic Exports for the past quarter and half-year. Columns include commodity, quantity, and value.

LOCAL AND GENERAL. H. R. H. Princess Liliuokalani will hold her usual weekly reception at Palama to-day from 3 to 5 p. m.

Under instructions from Messrs. G. W. Macfarlane & Co., Messrs. Lyons & Levey will offer for sale on credit, new consignments of miscellaneous and desirable goods.

Deputy Marshal Dayton is having built outside of the enclosure on the quarantine grounds a small building for the reception of patients who may be suffering from fever, but who have no other symptoms of contagious sickness.

Police Court. BEFORE POLICE JUSTICE BICKERTON. Ah Chook, Ah Hog and Ah Pau were charged with having opium in their possession. Police Officer No. 13 testified to having found the three defendants in a room on King street, and Ah Pau had an opium pipe and fixtures. They were taken to the Station House and Ah Pau and Ah Hog were found to have opium on their persons.

The Trustees of the British Museum have just acquired a beautiful drawing attributed to Piippo Lippi. It represents the Madonna seated, supporting the Child on her knee, while on each side of the throne are two saints. It is executed in pen and bistre. Fra Filippo was born about 1406 in Florence and died in 1469.

GENERAL WAR. HOW EUROPEAN NATIONS WOULD BE PREPARED FOR IT.

Numerical Force of the Various Armies—German, French, Russian, Austrian, Italian and English—Peace Footing and War Strength. [Brooklyn Eagle.] The combined armies of all Europe in time of peace number about 4,000,000 men, and in time of war can be raised to the enormous aggregate of 12,500,000.

The strength of the French army on a peace footing is 499,000 men, of which 284,000 are infantry, 69,000 cavalry, 69,000 artillery, and 12,000 engineers. On a war footing the French could bring 2,400,000 men into the field. In time of peace 32,000 French troops are kept in Algeria.

A French regiment of infantry of the line consists of three active and one depot battalion and numbers about 2,000 men in time of peace and double that in the event of war. A regiment of cavalry consists of the depot, and numbers 900 men. The French artillery consists of thirty-eight regiments, forming nineteen brigades.

The British army is recruited by voluntary enlistment, and, although the number varies, usually numbers 135,000 men inclusive of 60,000 British troops in India. The men are enlisted for six years and then pass into the reserves. The present strength of the army reserve is 40,000 men. In case of war the reserves are called out, and the militia, numbering 140,000 men, embodied, and should the United Kingdom be invaded, 350,000 volunteers would be available, which, with 15,000 yeomanry cavalry, would make a total force of 580,000 men.

The peace strength of the Russian regular army is 840,000, the war strength 2,365,000. The latter embraces 1,915,000 infantry, 95,000 cavalry and 210,000 artillery. The irregular army number 44,000 on a peace footing and 163,000 in time of war, 142,000 of this force being cavalry.

The Austrian-Hungarian empire has an army of 275,000 men on a peace footing, capable of being increased to 1,000,000 on a war footing. The standing army is formed after the model of that of Prussia in the system of the universal liability to arms. The strength of Italy's standing army on a war footing is about 735,000, the militia, 300,000, and the territorial militia, 1,000,000. Probably the first two figures would represent the actual force available.

Sweden has four classes of troops, the enlisted troops, the national militia, the landowners, which are paid and kept by the landowners, the militia by the Gothland and conscription troops. These, with a few volunteers, form a force of 196,000 men available in time of war. The army on a peace footing does not exceed 41,000 men. The Norwegian army numbers 18,000 in time of peace and 40,000 in time of war.

TALK WITH A GROCER.

WHAT AMERICANS EAT AND DRINK—SOURCES OF SUPPLY.

Drawing upon the World for Its Finest Products—Foreign Fruits Superior to the Native—Some Items Concerning Coffee.

(Chicago News Interview.) "The sale of foreign preserved fruits is necessarily very limited," said a retail dealer, who claims to keep on hand the finest groceries the world affords.

"The best prunes are imported from France. Of course the Swiss cheese leads. It is astonishing how many people eat Swiss cheese. The other Swiss cheese sold here is Neuchâtel. It is all supposed to be made among the picturesque mountains of Switzerland of the same milk, but lots of the article is manufactured in this country from cows' milk, and some right here in Chicago.

A popular dessert cheese is the edam, which is made in Amsterdam. The French goods are the fromage de Brie from the Meuse and the fromage de St. Emilion, all very nearly alike, and each taking its name from the locality where it is manufactured. Another French cheese is the Societe Houcfort. Grated French cheese is a hard cheese brought from Italy and used in macaroni. There is a pretty steady call for English cheese, which is better than the American article, and will be till we have as good milk stock and as rich pasture as they possess in Great Britain.

The leading kinds are old Gloucester, Cheddar, and Stilton. The two latter are small cheese, that of each end. "Where are most of the olives grown?" "In Spain and Italy, although some are grown in the south of France. They are prepared for shipping, however, mostly in France. Large houses send buyers yearly throughout Spain and Italy to contract for the crop. The most of the olive oil is made in Italy, mills for the purpose being common. In the south of France, in Chicago who last year purchased an olive mill in his native land with his savings for the six years he had been in this country. The millers do not buy the olives of the growers, but grind and press them on shares, after the plan of the old-time flour makers."

"Are any mushrooms put up in this country?" "Oh, they are all brought from France. English meadows produce good mushrooms, and this fungi is highly prized there. Truffles are seldom called for. They are used only to give piquancy to fowl or game stuffing. Snails are asked for but by a few epicures with foreign-acquired tastes. Sardines are shipped from France, but not from the coast of Maine, although no genuine sardines are caught along the American coast, and the Maine fish dubbed with the name rank and coarse. Teas are more largely Chinese than Japanese."

"Where are capers grown?" "In France, but they might just as well be grown and bottled in this country, for they are nothing more nor less than the nasturtium seed. There are few country housewives who do not pick green nasturtium seeds and throw them into a weak brine to keep till the autumn season of mixed-pickle and mango making. They are picked at different stages of growth, the smaller and most tender being the highest prized and bringing the most money. Capers are the first picking, supersedes the second, and capotes the third."

"What do you consider the most important commodity of the American grocery trade?" "Coffee, by all odds. People could better do without sugar than without coffee. You may think that a strong statement, but it is indisputable. The Americans are a nation of coffee-drinkers. America consumes over one-third of the entire product of the world. No breakfast table, whether in the abode of the rich or of the poor, is considered complete without it. To many persons it is more necessary in the morning than food."

"But where is it cultivated now?" interrupted the reporter. "Over almost all the tropical belt. There are between twenty-five and thirty different kinds of coffee. Brazil is merely in its infancy now, and it produces one-half of the entire coffee crop. The strong coffees, Rio and Santos, are mostly grown there. The west and south are the principal consumers of Rio. The water here and south is so largely filled with lime that it destroys the fine, delicate properties of the mild coffees so prized in England. You know coffee is divided commercially into two classes, mild and strong. A very small amount of Mocha is brought into this country, that sold under the name not being Mocha at all. The most prominent of all mild coffees is Java. It is raised on the islands of Java and Sumatra, and ranks first in the estimation of the coffee-drinkers in the United States. Ceylon is the rival of Java, but we seldom get any plantation Ceylon coffee here, as it is sent to England. Mexico raises some coffee, and there has been a wonderful improvement in the variety grown there in the last five years."

"How much coffee is consumed here yearly?" "Probably between 500,000,000 and 700,000,000 pounds."

The All-Conquering Passion. [Detroit Free Press.] Ouida says that the love of a girl should not be begged but conquered. That's the way the do it in Africa. The swain gets behind a tree, and when his bird comes along he clubs her and carries her home on his shoulders.

CASH FOR OLD LETTERS.

The Market Value of Answers Written to Quack Cure-Alls.

"How do these people who pretend to give you a cure for every ailment for nothing make it pay?" "Strange as it may seem," replied a physician, "the part of the business which these quacks advertise to do for the good of humanity pays them nothing at all. They are like the Irishman who sold eggs at a loss. He said that it was the quantity that paid him. The same way with these people. It's the quantity that pays them. It isn't the amount of medicine they send out, either, but merely the number of letters received, that makes that kind of business profitable. How? Listen, and I'll tell you. Take one case. It is typical of thousands. A person writes to one of those firms whose advertisements appear in every country paper in the union. He may have liver complaint, or kidney trouble. Perhaps he is dyspeptic, or suffering from some other kind of disease. He resolves to write to one of the philanthropists, and that's the name they put on their letters. They are not after your custom, but they do want your letter, for that is the only merchantable article in the whole transaction."

"There are houses in New York," he continued, "where they make it a business to simply trade in these letters. Many a man, after having written for medicine from a certain house and received a little box of worthless ground herbs, valued at about 1 cent, has been surprised a short time after to receive circulars and letters from all sorts of people about everything conceivable that can be purchased with money. He wonders how people down east have learned his address. It was that fatal letter he wrote to the medicine house. As soon as that especial firm had done with the young man his and thousands of other letters were sold for a good round sum. The price varies according to the supply and demand. I have known a bundle of letters numbering 1,000 to have been sold for $500. A few years ago there was a firm for the cure of everything that flesh is heir to doing business in Detroit. It became bankrupt and a receiver was appointed, and upon an order from one of the judges, he disposed of about 3,000 letters, receiving therefor nearly $2,000."

"You see now why it is to the interest of such men to advertise so liberally in small papers and invite correspondence. All these people lay particular stress on the fact that their letters are not for the patient to make visits. Years of practice in certain branches of medicine, they claim, enables them to properly diagnose a case from the letter written. A diagnosis is very easy when the same remedy is applied to everything. The writer gets a box of herbs, or a little bottle, or a box of pills, and the sharp gets the letter, which is of much more value to him than the worthless stuff he sends his writer. Nor are these letters destroyed when once sold. They are passed on and on, sold and resold, till the victim absolutely refuses any more circulars or removes to some other city. His name is then stricken off the list of 'greeneyes,' and he obtains peace once more."

How Sympathy Depends on Appearance.

[Chronicle "Undertones."] I have come to the conclusion that human sympathy, like human respect, goes entirely on appearances. A man may be suffering agony from some hidden trouble of the brain or the body, but he will not get half as much sympathy as the man whose eyes are watery and whose nose is inflamed from a cold. One fellow who has a headache that is splitting that portion of his anatomy open, but the fellow with the hollow cough will divert every atom of human feeling in the street to himself. The writer gets a letter asperating than to have some one tell you how well you are looking when you're dying of indigestion. It's like watching a fellow crack nuts with his teeth when you've got the toothache. It's more bearable to have a fellow look sick when you are well than to be congratulated upon your healthy appearance when you are sick.

The average human being will not believe a man is starving, unless he can see his ribs. A man never gets much sympathy for a broken leg until it is all done up in splints. A carbuncle on the back of a fellow's neck will inspire more pity than a hidden spinal complaint. A man may travel around with an aneurism of the aorta and the fellow who has the shingles goes to go to bed with a sick headache will get all the jellies and stuff his lady friends can send him. "Everybody tells me I'm looking well," said a cynic follow the other night. "Last week I had a cold in my head, and everybody sympathized with me. Now that it has gone down and tackled my bronchial tubes, I feel as if I were in for consumption, I don't get any sympathy at all."

The Term "Chestnut."

[Chicago Times.] It is with genuine satisfaction we learn that the term "chestnut," as applied in the colloquial slang of the day to a stale joke, implies no reflection upon the character of the chestnut of commerce and the Italian roasting machine. A gentleman writing to the New York Sun asserts, with every appearance of authority, that "chestnut," as opprobriously applied to a joke, was first used concerning some hoary witticisms in the performance of a minstrel company at the Chestnut Street theater, Philadelphia. One of these was repeated in the lobby of the Continental hotel in that city, and the relater was promptly reprimanded on the ground that the Chestnut Street theater had a copyright on it. From this actors came to apply the single word "chestnut" to every story they heard frequently repeated. Without this explanation the public might have gone on using the term "chestnut," supposing all the time that it derived its slang significance from the very unpleasant sensation occasioned by biting into a "most seeming fair" nut of the custaceae vulgaris only to fill the mouth with the bitterness of its mold or the dustiness of its must.

Cattle Shrinking by Shipment.

[National Stockman.] Those not conversant with the subject would hardly suppose that cattle will shrink more in process of shipment in severe cold than in severely hot weather, yet such is the case. Indeed, nothing will so quickly reduce the weight of a ripened animal as to subject it to a long haul in a stock car with the thermometer below zero. Animal life is sustained by combustion, and the bullock or pig in transit through an icy atmosphere is being slowly burned up in flesh and tissue.

Death of One Blunder.

Among the 1,200 laws regulating the French press is one centuries old, which threatens the proof-reader with death for even one blunder.

Japanese girls, it is said, use their fingernails as pens when writing love letters.

Vaccination in Prussia.

Vaccination is carried out so strictly in the Prussian army that not a soldier has died of small-pox since 1875. If the same system could be applied to the whole population of Europe it is believed that the disease would disappear in five years.

The "Curse of Scotland."

[Chicago News.]

A popular theory is that the nine of diamonds is called "the curse of Scotland" because the duke of Cumberland wrote an order on it in 1745. This is disproved by the fact that the card was known by that name some time before—and, en passant, it may be remarked that exactly the same story is told of the duke of Monmouth before the battle of Bothwell Bridge.

Other explanation are: First, the arms of the detested earl of Stair, who promoted the union, remotely resemble the nine of diamonds; second, "curse" is a corruption of "cross," and the nine pins on cards were in the form of a St. Andrew's cross; third, every ninth king of Scotland has been "a tyrant and a curse to that country"; fourth, a belief in Queen Mary's reign attempted to steal the crown jewels—he got away with the nine diamonds, and all Scotland was taxed for the theft; fifth, King James IV., before Flodden, spent time searching for a missing card—the nine of diamonds—which time would have been better spent in preparing for the fight on the morrow; sixth, Mary of Lorraine (others say James duke of York) introduced the game of "comete" into Scotland, the nine of diamonds is the winning card, and many of the Scottish nobles lost sums of money all at once at the game; seventh, the Scots held in utmost detestation the pope. At the game of Pope Joan, the nine of diamonds is pope; therefore the nine of diamonds is "the curse of Scotland." With all these theories it is not probable that the card was obtained by the duke of Cumberland, "the butcher's disatch," as the Cumberland's message "Spare none," alleged to have been written on the nine of diamonds, is termed.

Experience in a Cyclone.

[Macon Telegraph and Messenger.] Capt. Thomas T. Houch describes his experience in the cyclone: "I heard a noise outside and ran out to see what it was. I saw at some distance off a heavy black cloud, funnel-shaped and twisted at the bottom like a screw. It seemed whirling with immense rapidity and cyclone through the air, and it felt like a wild animal. It was just awful. People began to cry out and run around distracted and I felt very queer. I saw that big black thing come bounding along like a great cannon ball and I went about to fly away with it and he an angel. The cloud did not lie close to the ground, but bounded up and down, jumping clear over the tops of some of the trees and tearing others to pieces. "I thought I would lie down while I selected a spot that was full of water. I don't know why I chose such a place, but maybe it was because I was in a hurry and did not have time to choose well. It was a soft place, however, and had its attraction at the moment. After I had got myself well settled in the mud, I say that the cyclone was giving me the go-by. It passed about 200 yards to my left and tore things up terribly. There was a tree standing there full view. The cyclone struck it about four feet from the ground, turned the branches and all around a half a dozen times like lightning, and then snatched the whole upper portion into kindling wood and carried it off. It was an awe-inspiring sight, and, although I am glad I saw it, I don't want to see it again—not so close, anyhow."

Curing a "Masher."

[Minneapolis Barzoo.] She came into my office selling letters and patent bill-holders. She was pretty and sweet, and somewhat talkative. "My life is hard, she said, "but I have a jolly lot of fun. When I was at St. Paul I stopped at the Science hotel, my husband and I. He was a traveling man, and he and I went to town at the same time. I happened to meet a Bible agent, who was determined I should go to work for him—got mashed a little, I think. Anyway, he followed me about until I got rather tired of it. He wanted to call and see me at the hotel, and I let him come! "Now, my husband stands six feet two and is built like John L. Sullivan, and when that little Bible peddler got into our room the sweet, sunny smile died out of his face, and when my husband took him on his face and told him sweet little stories about good little children that had gone to heaven and had their pictures preserved in Sunday-school books I thought he would die. My husband told him he was real glad to find such a nice little fellow, and was so glad he liked me, and that when we got rich we would adopt him—but I must go. "No, I don't think, but it is impossible to keep such a traveling man, and making fools of themselves, and gathering up their samples she went away."

"River Cattle" in Florida.

[Book Reviewer.] In an interesting sketch of "Life in Florida," in one of the chapters of her book Mary Treat says: "Large herds of cattle have their feeding grounds in the rivers and streams. In the bays and coves of the St. Johns are acres of the volneria spiralis which grows as thickly as grass upon the barrens. The grass-like leaves are from one to three feet long and the slender spiral flowering stems are often five feet. Sometimes hundreds of cattle may be seen together feeding upon this plant, standing up to their backs in water. With heads entirely under water, they fill their mouths, then elevate them to chew and swallow. The natives call this feeding 'mashing.' A true river animal will not feed on the barrens. With this plant the cattle eat a large quantity of animal food. Thickly adhering to the leaves are countless small cocoons holding the larvae of a chronomusid fly. The kind of diet in manner of feeding ought in time, according to Darwin's theory, to evolve a new species of 'box.' "A New Kind of Powder. [Chicago Tribune.] It is said that Krupp, the gunmaker, has introduced a new kind of powder. It is known as brown powder, owing to its peculiar color, which resembles that of chocolate and owes its secretory to a mere accident. The brown powder appears to have a decided advantage over the black in producing a greater velocity with an equal pressure of gas, and is applicable to guns of every caliber. The remarkable fact about it is that it explodes in a tightly closed space, while in the open air or in a powder-box it ignites slowly and without explosion, although it is said to consist of saltpeter, sulphur and charcoal, like the black powder, the difference consisting in the relative proportions of these ingredients.

Oatmeal and Dyspepsia.

[Chicago Times.] The fact that Carlyle did not escape dyspepsia by oatmeal has attracted general attention to that article of food. A French physician has pointed out that the Scotch, who eat more oatmeal than any other people, are pre-eminent a dyspeptic people so long as they remain at home and adhere to their oatmeal diet, and he rightly argues from this fact that oatmeal is exceptionally difficult to digest.

Utility of Drawing.

[The Current.] Linear drawing has been introduced, by recent enactment, into all the elementary schools of England. The theory is that a knowledge of this kind of drawing is useful in almost every kind of trade or handicraft.
