WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28, 1893.

THE HABEAS CORPUS CASE

At the habeas corpus proceedings yesterday Mr. Creighton claimed that by the terms of its proclamation of last January, the Provisional Government had no power to do more than keep order until it secures annexation and to administer such laws as are not monarchical.

That the Provisional Government had no right to make bail depend on the will of the Attorney-General, or of any one but a judge. To make bail depend on the sweet will of a prosecuting officer was opposed to all constitutional right, was more than the Czar of Russia can do, and what cannot be done in any civilized country.

That the Constitution of 1887 is now in force, or else we are living under a despotism.

That, according to Judge Cooley, the Provisional Government is established merely for a temporary emergency until a permanent government can be formed, and that it has no right to make laws like that under which defendant is held.

That the Act of the Provisional Government under which the defendant was arrested does not express all its objects, and is therefore opposed to Article 77 of the Constitution of 1887, viz:

"Article 77. To avoid improper influences, which may result from intermingling in one and the same Act, such things as have no proper relation to each other, every law shall embrace but one object, and that shall be expressed in its title."

That the warrant of arrest is defective, because it fails to set forth the charge.

Mr. Creighton enlarged on the wrong that was done to the defendant by holding him in jail on a mere political charge, and giving his political opponents power to keep him behind iron bars, and deprived of the society of his family and friends, and closed by announcing that the important question to be settled is, Are we living under any Constitution or not? If so, the Constitution of 1887 is in force. It is time to call a halt in the way the Provisional Government is legislating.

Mr. Hartwell said that in order to decide whether strong language is justified by the facts and the law of a case, it is essential to learn what the facts are, and what the law is.

Defendant's counsel claims that the Hawaiian Government which now exists, which is the only one which exists, and is the Government which alone protects the lives and property of all persons in this country, has no legislative functions! It is the first time in history that it has been claimed that any civilized Government does not include legislative powers in its ordinary functions. No matter what that excellent man, Judge Cooley, with his evident lack of knowledge of facts, may think or say, the Hawaiian Government is a Government with legislative functions, and the court decided this in the Sheldon case. It is absurd to say otherwise.

This is not a question of politics, as defendant's counsel, and as many other persons in this community appear to regard it. It is a misnomer to call treason and treasonable utterances politics. The disputes between political parties in times of excitement often are very heated; but they never call in question the existence and right of existence of the Government under which all political parties exist, and which all persons are alike bound to protect and support.

It is high time to call a halt in such reasonable talk. The complaint fully states the offense in the words of the act of the Provisional Government. That act is not opposed to the requirements of Article 77 of the Constitution of 1887.

The Hawaiian Government is to-day carried on as the Government of the British Empire is carried on, upon constitutional principles, in accordance with the proclamation of January 17 last.

It is not for the defendant to complain that the Government has reduced the death penalty of treason and has allowed one accused of a treasonable offense to have bail if the Attorney-General consent. The law formerly allowed no bail for treason. The English law to-day allows bail in such charges only on the consent of a High Secretary of State. It is folly to talk of Czars of Russia and of despotism, in the light of all the history of England on the subject of bailable and treasonable offenses.

Judge Cooley's views that the Treaty power under the Constitution of the United States did not allow the annexation of Louisiana are not the views which prevailed in the United States Senate at the time when Louisiana was annexed, and his view that it is unconstitutional to annex any territory out side of the American continent is not supported by any jurist or constitutional lawyer as thus far is known. Even he does not, however, claim that the present Government of Hawaii has no legislative power.

OCCASIONALLY a Honolulu paper sneers at a land boom, but if such a thing ever comes to Oahu island the journals of the day will have reason to thank their household gods that it headed in this direction. Land booms made Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, Denver, Los Angeles, Seattle and Tacoma. One of them found San Diego with 2500 inhabitants and gave it 32,000 in twelve months and led to an investment of over $20,000,000 there. After a year's experience with a boom visitation, Honolulu would be a capital of 60,000 people, with a gridiron of electric roads, with bi-weekly steamers to the coast, with suburban railroads and a cable under way, and with private and public improvements galore. Is it quite worth while to sneer at such phenomena as these?

THE burden of the Royalist lay continues to be the patience with which the ex-Queen awaits an answer to her appeal by the United States. She is represented as still confident that President Cleveland will reply to her favorably. In the meantime the American Government continues its investigation of Island affairs with the view of finding out whether annexation would be worth while as a business and political proposition. How this comports with the idea that restoration is in the wind no fellow could find out. Do Royalist prints imagine that, if the United States should see fit to decline a respectful proffer of the group after it had sent a friendly envoy to look into the thing, it would turn about and knock down the party that made the tender?

THE work which the New York Sun is doing for annexation is what might be expected of the ablest, most present and progressive paper in the United States. The Sun's arguments in point have not yet been overruled in any court of public opinion, least of all by that which the ultra-administration papers affect to represent. A feature of especial significance in the Sun's annexation program is that it is based upon the historic and consistent principles of democracy.

UNTIL the Chicago people set their houses in order for the proper reception and care of a great crowd, it will be well for Hawaiian tourists to defer their visit to the World's Fair. All accounts agree that the pilgrim and the stranger in the Windy City is likely to be taken in both as respects accommodations, prices and food. By August and September the signs will be more propitious, and besides, the Fair will then have become complete in its details.

In his exhaustive essay on Hawaiian affairs Judge Cooley did not attempt to state any grounds for restoration. The subject did not, perhaps, occur to him. It rarely does to anybody outside a small conspirators' faction on these Islands.

Walter G. Smith, editor of the STAR, is ill of la grippe and is absent from the office much of the time. There is a rumor about that young Mr. Spreckels and his mother will return to the States by to-morrow's steamer. The Duke of Newcastle, who was expected to arrive on the Alameda, will postpone his trip until the return trip of the Australia.

Miss Susan W. Folger, daughter of the late Secretary of the Treasury Folger, is a passenger en route on the Belgic for the States. Edward Oppenheimer of Simon & Co., silk merchants of Yokohama, is on a visit to New York city by the steamer Belgic to-day.

The Misses Malone and Bates, teachers of the Kamehameha preparatory school, left on the Hall yesterday for a trip to the other islands. Among the Miiki Maru's passengers were Mr. Onake, son of the Hawaiian Minister Resident, Dr. Komai of Hamakua and a son of J. O. Naca yama.

The following persons are booked to leave on the Mariposa for the Coast to-morrow: Miss M. B. Fanning, F. W. McChesney, W. W. Warner, M. S. Grintman and wife, W. E. C. Harrison, Dr. Thomas Slater.

The Woman's Board of Missions meets this afternoon at the Central Union Church at half-past two.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with

Wampole's Tasteless Preparation

OF

Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

OUR LETTER FROM HILO.

MATTERS AND THINGS ON THE BIG ISLAND.

The Work of Development—Subsidence of the Coast Line—The Road Board, etc.

HILO, June 26.—It can scarcely be said that the country over which the traveler journeys in a trip through Puna is replete with that beauty of scenery where "every prospect pleases, and only man is vile"; there is instead a ride of most dreary monotony through a section almost depopulated, over lavas in many places as bare and black and shiny as on the day they first congealed, in others covered with heavy forest growths, while here and there scattered along are spots covered with a scanty herbage of grass that finds but a precarious foothold in the hollows and crevices of the rocks. It is a delightful contrast to enter some dense cocoanut grove and halt to rest for awhile under one of the palms, there to sip the cool and refreshing milk of the fruit. At such times the silence is unbroken save for the soothing of the wind through the broad leaves overhead, or the gentle murmur of the swell. In these groves are often laid the scenes of many an old Hawaiian legend. The one at Keahialaka contains on old heiau of sports, while near the one at Kahaulea was erected the great sacrificial heiau, from which in war times signals were transmitted to distant South Point and East Point. This heiau is to-day in almost perfect state of preservation.

But what strikes the traveler most is the sight of some of these palms, evidently thriving though surrounded entirely by water, while the dead stumps of others can be seen standing out of the sea as much as 300 feet beyond the present shore line. This striking fact is more noticeable near Kapoho, Pohiki and Kaima than elsewhere, and illustrates the subsidence of that whole portion of the Puna coast line in late years.

One would be led to suppose that this process was still under way, judging by the present location of a prominent point on the Kapoho coast which less than twelve years ago was at least one hundred feet distant beyond high water mark while to-day the sea washes four hundred feet beyond it; again, the fish ponds of Kapoho, which at one time were the determining factors in the value of that land, have now sunk entirely beneath the waves.

This remarkable subsidence of the coast line extending around the whole south part of the island, from Kapoho to Kahuku, was, or is, a direct result of the earthquake of 1868, when that whole portion of the island was rent asunder and a portion of it pushed for several feet into the sea. The enormous pressure of material with which Kilauea must have been filled at the time, and which found its exit in the flow that destroyed the better part of Kahuku, forced its vent in the crack which ran diagonally through the crater and back of the Kapapala ranch, thence above the village of Waiohinu until it reached Kahuku, while from the crater the crack also extended in an easterly direction toward the Puna coast, though it is lost somewhere in the impenetrable woods of that district.

At a point about three miles below the volcano it crosses the Keaouhou road, and there the creek is about eight feet wide and very deep. A little to the north and west of Waiohinu the road was cut squarely in two, and one part of it shoved by the other a little more than the width of the road, or from 12 to 15 feet, while between Punahou and Ninole the road was entirely submerged. At this place the coast sank from six to eight feet, at Keaouhou about five feet allowing the sea to make in for several hundred feet of the land.

This sudden submerging of so immense a tract, if but a few feet, probably induced the disastrous tidal wave which followed up the cataclysm and caused the destruction to so much life and property. It is the only instance of a subsidence of the Hawaiian coast noted in modern times, though from the many wide and deep cracks in the interior of Puna, which, hidden beneath the dense foliage of a tropical jungle, are unperceived by the traveler until he stands at their very brink, it is not improbable that even more sudden remarkable geological changes have occurred in the dim and distant past.

Plantation affairs through Hamakua do not look very encouraging so far, the actual tonnage of crops just harvested is far below the approximate figures given some time ago. Kukaia on the extreme east end of the district pans out but 800 tons, and the dry months of May and June have given planters but little encouragement for the ensuing year. There is a buoyant feeling however, among the small farmers and homesteaders, many of whom have harvested their first crop of high grade coffee, one individual alone showing a yield of 1000 lbs from 1/2 an acre. The Honouliuli plantation in Hilo has for some time past gone into coffee culture, and already shows an extensive area developed. Mr. Rycraft of Puna has over 35,000 trees growing on his estate many of which will blossom out this year and yield a fair crop.

On the Volcano road about 100,000 coffee trees have so far been set out, and as the construction of the road progresses more land is being opened up, in every way suitable for development.

M. McINERNEY.

Are we to be, or not to be, a part of the Great Republic, seems to be the burning question of the day, and one we had rather leave to wiser heads than ours to solve; and while great statesmen are wrestling with this momentous question, we want to have a little "prow-wow" with you on some other subjects, that concern you as well as ourselves.

Has it not occurred to you that you've been wearing that old hat long enough! In these progressive times if you intend to be "in it," you've got to keep pace with fashion. No matter how otherwise well dressed you may be, unless your hat is the correct thing you bear a shabby appearance.

We have already laid in a stock of the Latest Hats of the coming Spring and Summer styles, in hard felts, soft felts and straws, and including a line of the celebrated "Fedora" Hats, at present all the rage in the United States. There is therefore, no necessity for you to hang on any longer to that old Tile that bears such a strong resemblance to the hat "your father wore."

Believing that business will be better in the near future, we have not hesitated to keep our stock full in all lines. Take collars for instance: We have almost everything you could wish for. If you wear a standing collar, just come in and take a look at our "Narenta" or "Ardonia," or if you prefer a turn down collar, try the "Winnipeg" or "Goswell;" we have have lots of others, and can't fail to suit you. Cuffs in abundance, links or otherwise.

Neckwear in profusion, scarfs, windsors, 4-in-hands, and a special lot of "Boys' Bows," suspenders in great variety, leather and woven ends, good strong, serviceable goods.

We might go on indefinitely, but space is valuable, and to enumerate everything we carry would fill a pretty fair sized book. If there is anything you want in the men's line, just drop in and see us, and if we can't suit you, we don't believe any one can.

If you should want a pair of nice shoes, let us try a hand at fitting you. Did it ever occur to you

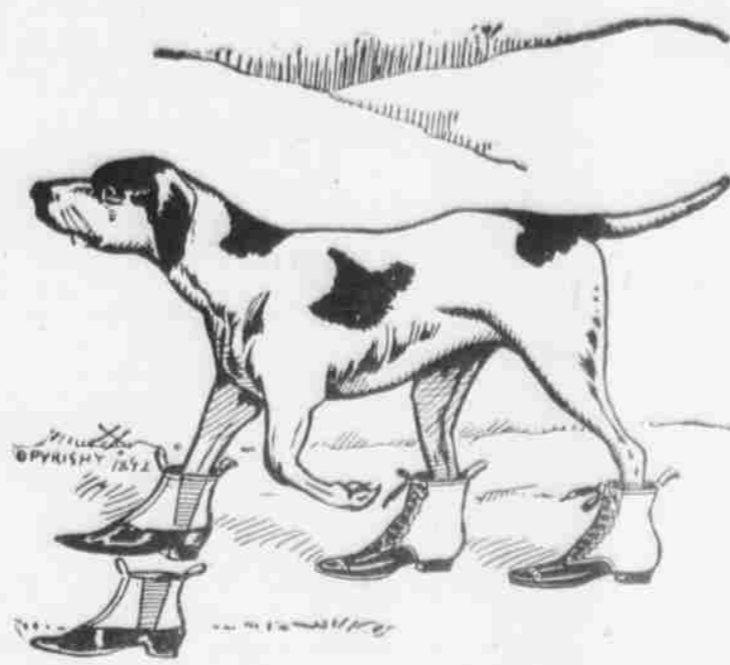

How much a man is like his shoes; For instance, both a soul may lose. Both have been tanned; Both are made tight by Cobblers; Both get left and right; Both need a mate to be complete; And both are made to go on feet.

They both need healing; oft are sold, And both in time will turn to mould. With shoes the last is first; with men The first shall be the last; and when The shoes wear out, they're mended new; When men wear out, they're men dead too.

They both are trod upon, and both Will tread on others nothing loth. Both have their ties, and both incline When polished, in the world to shine; And both get out. Now would you choose To be a man, or be his shoes.

M. McINERNEY.

POINTERS IN SHOES

Just three pointers will be enough for you:
1st—We have over 20,000 pairs of Shoes in stock to select from, embracing all leading lines.
2nd—We buy in larger quantities than any one in the country, only spot cash, consequently we buy cheaper.
3rd—We have no extraordinary inducements to offer; you would distrust a man who had gold dollars to sell for ninety cents. Look out for the shoe man with that kind of a story; his shoes may be Counterfeits.

Lower down is the land of Keauau belonging to W. H. Shipman, which, in respect to area, depth and fertility of soil, is in every way identical with Oia. More than 4000 acres of this land of Keauau adjoin both sides of the Volcano road, and being clear and open, cover a site of what could make one of the largest and best plantations on the Islands.

The construction proper of the Volcano road still drags its weary pace along, solely owing to the few number of men employed, mostly prisoners, with regard to whose assignment on this work, outside of the local districts, whence they are drafted, and whose own needs demand the application of such labor, there is a feeling not altogether favorable, and though all parties unite in the desire to throw no obstacles in the way of the completion of so important a public work they also feel that the engagement of a few more laborers, through the disbursement of a few more dollars monthly, would prove an advantageous policy; more especially when the superintendence, as at present, is high priced and capable.

Though men may come and men may go, our own road board symposium holds on immovably as the rock of Gibraltar, nor heeds the gibes and taunts of the indignant taxpayers, as it pivots within a radius of a quarter of a mile of Akana's coffee shop on Front street, which is the customary gathering place for these grave and reverend seigniors when weary with the cares of state or jaded with fruitless discussions over how not to build roads with wages at $1.00 per day, hours from 7 to 4. Just now the Chairman is absent attending Aloha Aina meetings in Kau, and your correspondent has been unable to ascertain who presided in his place at the Aloha Aina meeting which took place here on Thursday last at which it was expected that important letters received from Honolulu by the last mail were to be read to the crowds of patriots assembled. But the letters had not materialized and after listening for awhile to the noble sentiments and holy exhortations of such statesmen as E. Kekoa and others of that ilk, the members of the audience took a hasty leave of each other to resume their laborious occupations of lounging around.

We are glad to welcome among us our old friend Charles Notley, and have no fear but what he will prove as honest and efficient in the new position of custom house collector, which he was suddenly called upon to fill, as he has shown himself to be in positions of lesser responsibility. Coming as he does utterly unprepared to discharge the duties of an office of which the details must be both complex and laborious, we feel sure that until greater familiarity shall come with time, Hilo's pushing citizens will "be to his faults a little blind, but to his virtues very kind."

We understand that a petition is being circulated having for its object Mr. Stuppelbein's reinstatement.

Died on Sunday night, June 25th, Mr. Hughie McGuinness, late of Honolulu, engineer by profession, from a complication of disorders induced by asthma and broncho-pneumonia.

A. B. I.

THE CLUTCH OF A HURRICANE.

From 9 o'clock in the morning till 4 in the afternoon the sky was cloudless and without a breath of air stirring, and the surface of the ocean was like glass. At the last named hour it became as dark as if night had shut down. The glass had been steadily falling since noon; one had but to look at sky and water to know what was coming. By half past four the ship was stripped for the struggle, life lines rove along the decks, and the watch below turned up. The lamps were lighted, all work suspended, and then began a period of suspense like the waiting for a battle to open.

Two thousand miles of Indian ocean rolled between us and the nearest foot of land. The ship lay as helpless as a log, heaving and lurching on the ground swell, and from the depths of her hold came queer strange noises to further awe and oppress the sailors gathered forward. It is during a calm that the creak of bulkheads, the grinding of the cargo and the doleful complaints from yards and blocks are heard the loudest. "Hear the dead men moaning!" whispered the sailors to each other as strange noises came out of the west.

It was a wild, gressome sound—sometimes like the cry of a night bird afar off and again reminding you of the vibrations of a harp string. Such sounds are only heard at sea when the elements are preparing for fierce war fare. Let them come to the ears of the lone lighthouse keeper on the coast, and he would tremble like a child and mayhap desert his post.

"Hear the drowning men sob!" whispered the sailors again as the ship rested on an even keel for a moment. From stern to rudder the waters beat against her sides with a furious gurgling, like unto the gasping, sobbing sound a man gives out as he sinks for the last time. It is a sound to bring a chill and make your flesh creep when night is at hand and the wrath of heaven making ready for its spring.

At 5 o'clock the only change is that the darkness is more intense, and the silence has become so profound that the cheep! cheep! of a block aloft is annoyingly painful. There are no orders to be given. Those who converse lower their voices, as people do when there is death in the house.

At 6 o'clock the men are sent to supper. They eat in such silence that the ship seems to be deserted forward of the mainmast. They hurry the meal, for no man can say what moment the storm king will make his wild change. Two or three of them light their pipes, and the blaze of the matches strikes against the darkness as if it were a stone wall. It is the darkness of the

They Have Come!

Those Razor Strops you have been waiting for several weeks, are here. They are so good that it has been said of them, that if you lay your razor, and one of these strops down together on your washstand, the razor will keep a fine edge; still, we recommend following the directions printed on each strop.

Anti-Rattlers. We have a new kind which you can put on to the shafts of your buggy, without breaking four fingers and a thumb. They prevent two things—rattling and swearing.

Boardman's Pat. Wrench.—4 sizes, just the kind of combination wrench to have about the house.

Try the new Keystone Egg Beater, if you want a beater that will do quick, clean work.

Hose, 1/2-in. to 2-in., 3 and 4-ply plain or wired, just received; cheap and good quality; also carbolized. We have a large stock of "Hubbuck's," "Pioneer," and cheaper brands of White Leads and Zinc. Also, Oil, Turpentine, and all painters' supplies, and you will do well to see our Stock and get our Prices before you paint your house.

American Flags,—6 to 18 feet long, came by the last steamer to us. They are a fine lot, sewed bunting.

Fire Arms and Ammunition.—A new lot of Sporting and Target Rifles, Colt's new Navy, Smith and Wesson, and cheaper Revolvers, came last week and can now be seen. We carry the most complete assortment of Cartridges in town, from 22 to 50 cal., and always have plenty of them.

Leather.—We have received within the past sixty days, by steamer and sail, 66 Rolls of Leather, containing 9088 lbs., and 5347 ft.; also, 3 bales containing 142 doz. sheep skins, so it looks as if we meant to keep our Stock of Leather up, although by getting it in large lots, we are able to keep the prices down.

Salt.—We are headquarters for Hawaiian Salt, as we make it. That the quality is good, and Price Low, is easily shown by the large quantity we sell every week.

Blight Compound.—Five gallons will make 65 gallons of wash. You spray your Lime and Orange Trees with this wash, and the Blight will do the rest, die and drop off the trees. We have the compound at our store, or can give you an order on the Gov't. Nursery for it, but don't forget to bring a 5-gallon can to put it in. We sell spraying outfits.

THE SUPREME COURT

DECIDES THE WALKER CASE THIS MORNING.

With the Result That the Defendant is Remanded to the Custody of the Marshal.

It was not generally known that the decision in the Walker habeas corpus case would be rendered this morning; hence there was a very slim attendance of spectators when the Supreme Court went into session at 10 o'clock.

Judge Frear was about to read the decision when Attorney Creighton rose to present a further argument in support of his views. While the court inferred that the attorney was very much out of order, he was given a hearing.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

June Term, 1893. In the Matter of the Application of John F. Bowler on behalf of T. B. Walker, for a Writ of Habeas Corpus.

OPINION OF THE COURT BY FREAR, J.

The prisoner is held by the Marshal under a warrant of arrest issued by the District Magistrate of Honolulu, in the usual form, commanding the Marshal to arrest the prisoner and two others "accused of the crime of conspiracy in the foregoing affidavit."

Counsel for the prisoner contends that the prisoner should be discharged, because (1) the Executive and Advisory Councils of the Provisional Government had no power to pass Act 3 prior to the passage of Act 4, which provided among other things that the two Councils should act jointly in the exercise of general legislative powers;

The first of these points is res adjudicata. This Court has held that the Executive and Advisory Councils possess general legislative power by virtue of the Proclamation of January 17, 1893, and not by virtue of Act 4.

As to the second point, the reason for requiring that "every law shall embrace but one object, and that shall be expressed in its title," is, as expressed in Article 77 itself of the Constitution, "to avoid improper influences which may result from intermixing in one and the same Act, such things as have no proper relation to each other."

The improper results to be avoided are, principally, "hodge-podge," or "log-rolling" legislation, surprise or fraud upon the legislature, and concealment of the subjects of legislation from the people: Hyman Bros. vs. Kapena, 7 Haw. 76.

"The general purpose of these provisions is accomplished when a law has but one general object, which is fairly indicated by its title. To require every end and means necessary or convenient for the accomplishment of this general object, to be provided for by a separate Act relating to that alone, would not only be unreasonable, but would actually render legislation impossible."

fair intentment can be considered as having a necessary or proper connection. The Legislature must determine for itself how broad and comprehensive shall be the object of a statute, and how much particularity shall be employed in the title in defining it.

"There has been a general disposition to construe the constitutional provision liberally, rather than to embarrass legislation by a construction whose strictness is unnecessary to the accomplishment of the beneficial purposes for which it has been adopted."

The courts of California and Ohio even go so far (too far, we think) as to hold that such provisions of the Constitution are merely directory and not mandatory at all. Washington vs. Murray, 4 Cal. 388; Pitt vs. Nicholson, 6 Oh. St. 177. In O'Leary vs. Cook Co., 28 Ill. 534, cited with approval by Judge Cooley, it was held that a clause prohibiting the sale of ardent spirits within four miles of a college was so related to the primary object of an Act incorporating the college as to be properly included within it.

It is unnecessary to consider Sections 6 and 7 of Act 5, for, even if they are not fairly within the object of the Act as expressed in its title, that would not affect the constitutionality of the rest of the Act. Cooley Const. Lim., p. 148. There can be no question that the offense described in Section 5, under which the prisoner is charged, is properly related to treason. Section 1 provides that persons who levy war against the Government, or adhere to its enemies, are guilty of treason. Section 2 provides the penalty for treason. Section 3 relates to the evidence necessary for conviction. Section 4 provides for the punishment of those who, having knowledge of the commission of treason, conceal it. Section 5 provides for the punishment of those who conspire to levy war, &c., against the Government.

It appears that T. B. Walker, in whose behalf the petition is made, is held under a valid warrant of arrest, issued by competent authority, for an offense which is not bailable under a Constitutional law, he is hereby remanded to the custody of the Marshal. C. CREIGHTON for petitioner. A. S. HARTWELL for respondent. HONOLULU, June 28, 1893.

As soon as the final announcement had been made Marshal Hitchcock escorted Walker to the Police station, where he was joined by Sinclair and Crick and taken into the Court room. Judge Carter was ready and the hearing of the charge of conspiracy was at once commenced. The prosecution was represented by the Attorney-General and A. S. Hartwell, while the interests of the defendants were cared for by Chas. Creighton, A. P. Peterson and J. A. Magoon.

The Court room was crowded with spectators who occupied every inch of vacant space, even appropriating the seats usually delegated to the use of the officers, attorneys and reporters.

Before proceeding Judge Carter stated that before any proceedings in the present case were had it was arranged between him and Judge Foster that he was to preside on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, that they had notified the attorneys to that effect and that Mr. Creighton had answered as follows: "With reference as to whether yourself or Mr. Carter should sit at the examination of Walker et al to-morrow."

"After consultation with my associates I shall leave that entirely to yourselves, neither objecting nor consenting on behalf of the defendants to Mr. Carter's sitting. CHAS. CREIGHTON."

The case opened with the reading of the complaint; the defendants offering an objection to it that it did not state a definite time or place of the commission of the offense, and also that it virtually charged four offenses in place of one. These were overruled by the Court.

for us to inquire into the policy or wisdom of such a law. That rests solely with the legislative body.

It is further urged that, since Section 9 of Act 3 in terms repeals Ch. 6 of the Penal Code, Act 3 itself which is by its title only an amendment of Ch. 6 of the Penal Code, must also be repealed.

On his redirect examination Attorney-General Smith elicited the facts that he had been invited to visit defendants at their houses but had not done so. That he did not give Walker the formula because he did not have it made out, that he would not have given it him anyhow, and that he did not take any stock in the men.

D. R. Power testified that he is engineer's yeoman on the Boston, is acquainted with Crick and knows Walker slightly. Met them last at the corner of Nuuanu and King streets on May 27th about 7:30 p. m. Crick and one or two others were standing on the corner. Crick said he had a certain high explosive that he proposed to use inside of two weeks to blow the Provisional Government to hell. Told him to keep that to himself. Orlick and Brown and another man whom I did not know were present.

"There is the strongest kind of presumption against the existence of that species of absurdity in the intention of the Legislature which would consist in a design to defeat its own object. Yet it not infrequently occurs that one portion or provision of a statute, if literally or even naturally construed, would practically nullify the whole, or some material portion, of the remainder of the act, with the effect of defeating its obvious purpose. In cases of this description, it is a settled rule of construction, flowing from the obvious absurdity of any other, that such an interpretation shall, if possible, be placed upon the statute, ut magis valeat quam pereat."

"A declaration in the last section of an act that all acts or parts of acts relating to the subject matter thereof should be repealed from and after the time when the act should take effect, would not be construed as a repeal of that act, but of all others upon the same subject matter." D. Section 265. The repealing section need not be referred to in the title of the act. Cooley, Const. Lim., 145.

It appearing that T. B. Walker, in whose behalf the petition is made, is held under a valid warrant of arrest, issued by competent authority, for an offense which is not bailable under a Constitutional law, he is hereby remanded to the custody of the Marshal. C. CREIGHTON for petitioner. A. S. HARTWELL for respondent. HONOLULU, June 28, 1893.

Before proceeding Judge Carter stated that before any proceedings in the present case were had it was arranged between him and Judge Foster that he was to preside on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of this week, that they had notified the attorneys to that effect and that Mr. Creighton had answered as follows: "With reference as to whether yourself or Mr. Carter should sit at the examination of Walker et al to-morrow."

"After consultation with my associates I shall leave that entirely to yourselves, neither objecting nor consenting on behalf of the defendants to Mr. Carter's sitting. CHAS. CREIGHTON."

The case opened with the reading of the complaint; the defendants offering an objection to it that it did not state a definite time or place of the commission of the offense, and also that it virtually charged four offenses in place of one. These were overruled by the Court.

The first witness for the prosecution was one of the men from the Boston named Orlick, who testified that he was acquainted with the defendants, had met them at divers times and places in the last three months and that he held the position of water-carrier on the ship. That the defendants were on the Boston one Sunday in May, at which time he had had a conversation with Walker, in which the latter asked him if he knew the composition of fulminate of silver or mercury, to which he replied that he did, but that he did not give it to him. Had several conversations with Crick. Met the latter on the 27th of May at the Merchant's Exchange saloon at 10:30 p. m. He appeared to be drunk, said he was English, didn't believe in the Provisional Government and had bombs enough in his possession to blow it to hell. Witness told him not to make such remarks or he might get into trouble. Another petty officer present advised him to the same effect, to which Crick answered that he didn't give a damn. Witness thought that Crick meant dynamite bombs. Two other men from the Boston, Power and Brown, and some citizens were present.

On cross examination by Attorney Creighton nothing new was developed, the witness sticking to his testimony in chief.

On his redirect examination Attorney-General Smith elicited the facts that he had been invited to visit defendants at their houses but had not done so. That he did not give Walker the formula because he did not have it made out, that he would not have given it him anyhow, and that he did not take any stock in the men.

D. R. Power testified that he is engineer's yeoman on the Boston, is acquainted with Crick and knows Walker slightly. Met them last at the corner of Nuuanu and King streets on May 27th about 7:30 p. m. Crick and one or two others were standing on the corner. Crick said he had a certain high explosive that he proposed to use inside of two weeks to blow the Provisional Government to hell. Told him to keep that to himself. Orlick and Brown and another man whom I did not know were present.

In his cross-examination of this witness, Mr. Creighton confined himself to questions as to the sobriety of those present, and for his trouble was rewarded with the statement that the witness himself did not take a drink during the evening; that he had looked in the saloon and seen Orlick, Crick and others there, and that he was not acquainted with Sinclair.

At this point the court adjourned till 2 p. m.

The afternoon session is in progress as we go to press.

LIVELY TIMES ON HAWAII.

BURNING OF THE OLD VIERA HOTEL.

Senao's Store Again Robbed—An Overseer Shoots a Jap—Moonshiners Fatally Hurt.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL.

There will be races at Waialua on July 4th.

Theo. H. Davies & Co. will close their store on Friday for the purpose of taking stock.

The rumor that the Crescent Baseball Club was about to be disbanded is denied by its members.

The likelihood looks away, yesterday, a number of 100-horse, buyers and jockeys for the Kahala races.

Egan & Gunn are opening bed-rock prices at their great clearance sale. Give them a call before going elsewhere.

Fire balloons, torpedoes, firecrackers, rockets, Roman candles and everything you want, at your own price, at the I. S. L.

Notice is given that payment has been stopped on three drafts issued by the Board of Education in favor of W. J. Wells.

The creditors of Cham Wah Ling, a bankrupt, are notified to appear on the 7th of July before the Circuit Court and prove their claims.

The gripe appears to be more severe in Maui than here, twenty cases being reported in Waialua hospital, and 100 in Dr. Herbert's district.

Parties wishing to make entries for the boat, yacht and swimming races on the Fourth of July should communicate with J. W. Jones.

Several men from the Boston swam ashore last night and proceeded to take in the town. Three of them were landed in the Police Station before their clothes were dry.

It is said that the gripe is more severe in its effects on native Hawaiians than on foreigners and that several of the former who have died in the past few days owe their deaths to its cause.

At three o'clock this morning sleepers on Beretania and Nuuanu streets were awakened by a native who was blowing blasts on a fish horn. The police might have done good work in suppressing the nuisance.

Another Concert.

Professor Berger and the boys of the Hawaiian band will give another concert at the Hotel to-night in honor of the Belgic's passengers. The concert last night was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience.

6. Waltz—"Vienna Stories".....Strauss

"Hawaii Polka."

An Historic Flagpole.

The flagpole originally erected by Kamehameha IV in the palace grounds, and afterwards removed by Kialaka, to a position in front of the barracks, has been sent to J. W. Kalua, of Waialua, Maui, who will have it erected in his yard. The pole is eighty-two feet high and Mr. Kalua intends to float an eighteen-foot American flag from its top on the morning of the Fourth.

Death of a Well-Known Lady.

THE BELGIC ARRIVES FROM YOKOHAMA.

The Mike Maru Sails for Japan—The Pele Arrives—The Bark Leahi at Mahukona.

The Oriental and Occidental Steamship Company's liner Belgic, Commander Williams H. Walker, docked at Pacific Mail dock this morning at 6 o'clock, eleven days and thirteen hours from Yokohama. The commander reports having experienced moderate easterly winds and fine weather throughout the voyage.

The bark Mary Winkelman expects to sail on Friday. The steamer Waimanalo is working up a good trade to windward of Oahu. The schooner Mahimahi finally completed repairs and sailed away to-day for Waialua.

The American brig Geneva is at Hilo being loaded with Hakalua, Waiaka and Waiaka sugar and will sail next Friday, and on the same day the Hawaiian bark Leahi will probably sail from Mahukona.

The Japanese steamer Mike Maru, after considerable delay, finally got away at 11 o'clock this morning for Yokohama, with six cabin and about 800 steerage passengers.

gloomiest dungeon ever built by human hands. It seems to press you down like dead weight and to clutch at you with clammy fingers.

"Ready there! Forward!" The captain's sudden shout is followed by a long-drawn moan in the west—a moan which gradually changes into a wild, fierce scream as the gale strikes us. We are broadside on. Every man holds on for dear life. The great ship is at first pushed down until her decks are awash, and then she is lifted up and heeled over to port—over and over until the ends of her yards are in the water and her decks are straight up and down. Men shut their eyes that they may not see the spectre of death. One—two—three minutes, and then she slowly rolls back to the starboard, swings her head to the east, and away we go before a shrieking, howling, screaming hurricane, which seems maddened at our escape. The ship must be brought around before the sea gets up. Men clutch and crawl and creep about. The din is infernal. No orders are given, but all understand what is to be done. When all is ready, she swings slowly about, with her nose to the gale, falls off on the port tack, and the storm-sail holds her there. The wheel is lashed, another sail is made ready in case of accident, and human hands can do no more. The wrath of heaven has been let loose on the wide sea, and were there mountains here the force of the wind would make them tremble to their foundations.

At midnight the ship is soaring up, up, up, until you half believe the gale has clasped hands under her keel and lifted her clear of the mad waters. She reaches the crest of the mountainous wave, hangs there for a moment and then rushes down, down, down, until every lip breathes a prayer and every heart stands still. At the crest of the wave a legion of demons are skulking and shouting. Down in the hollow it is so quiet that you can hear the drip of the water from the roof of the deck-house. At daylight the spectacle is appalling. The ocean is snow white with its boiling. The waves come rolling up until they seem to tower as high as the mastheads, and from the crest of each one the gale catches the milk white foam and whirls it in patches and sheets higher than the peaks of the Andes.

As the sun comes up, red and dull, there is a shout from every man on the decks of the ship. Broad away on our starboard side is an English troopship, wrecked aloft and damaged awash. There are gangs of men at the pumps, and her decks are crowded with others who can do nothing but wait. The gale will not reach its height till noon. There is not one chance in a thousand for that ship. Her sluggish actions tell us that the water is gaining on the pumps, and the wild flings of her bowsprit are tokens that she is inclined to broach to. They see us as we see them. Here and there is a woman, here and there a sailor, but most of them are soldiers. They set no signal. There is no hand outstretched. Some of them do not even raise their eyes to us. Some are dumb with the horror of the situation. All are helpless as the shreds of foam flying across the face of the morning sun. It is scarcely thirty minutes from the time we catch sight of her when her head swings away, the gale catches her broadside, and next moment she has vanished from sight, swallowed up as a stone drops out of sight down the shaft of a mine. We utter a cry of horror, but they are dumb. The gale brings no shout, no cry. One moment she was there with six hundred souls aboard. The next it is as if we had slept and dreamed it all. M. QUAD.

ATTACKED BY A LIONESS.

Thrilling Adventure of a Woman While Driving Alone.

REDDING, June 14.—Mrs. Kamene, whose husband is one of the owners of the Hidden Treasure mine, near Iron Mountain, was returning to the mine from Redding one day recently, when she saw what she supposed to be three dogs playing in the road. These supposed dogs were lion cubs. She had hardly passed them when the lioness sprang from the brush and planted two paws on the buggy. She was badly frightened, but hit the animal on the head with the butt of her whip. At the same time her spitted horse, started and as a result the lioness lost her hold and fell in the road. She whipped up and escaped, although the lioness followed a short distance. These animals are reported plentiful in the neighborhood.

BONES IN A COURTROOM.

To Be Used in Evidence in an Idaho Murder Trial.

HALEY (Idaho), June 14.—The trial of John Hendel, a German, for the murder of Leander Halstrom, a Finn, in this city last winter, has just commenced in the district court before Judge Stockinger. It will be an interesting trial on account of the doubt as to who fired the fatal bullet, there being one Louis Schroeder who also participated in the shooting affray, and who is held on a charge of murder. Physicians were today ordered by the court to exhume the body of Halstrom and remove the bones that came in contact with the bullet, to be used in the trial. Much interest is manifested in the case.

The United States Capitol at Washington is one of the most majestic buildings in the world. It was first begun in 1793, when the north wing was founded. This was finished in 1800, and the south wing was begun in 1811. The building was burned by the British in 1814, and rebuilding did not begin until 1817. In 1851 the new extensions began, the House of Representatives first occupying its present hall in 1857, the Senate its present quarters in 1859.
