"I feel that it is impossible for me to say too much in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. I was a great sufferer from numerous boils in my head. Job's comforters failed to comfort me, and I suffered from numerous boils. When I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla I had six of them, only four of which came to a head, and since then, thanks to this good medicine, I have been free from this great affliction. I gained 11 pounds in three weeks. The Catarrh in my head which has troubled me for years has also been cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla and I am enjoying good general health. I earnestly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla to all who are afflicted." W. L. TUCKER, Roseburg, Oregon.

Do You Use Any of the Following Articles?

If you do, call on us and examine same, and we know quality and prices will suit you.

Paints and Oil.—By the bark "Nantilus" we have added to our large stocks in this line. Good weather will soon set in and you will want to paint your house, and when you do, use pure paints, not some cheap article that will "peel" or "chalk" off in a few months. Hubbuck's White Lead Zinc, and Pale Boiled Oil, have stood the test in these islands for years, and the quality to-day is as good as when it was first introduced. We get these Paints and Oils direct from Hubbuck & Son, and thus know that they are genuine. We also keep Hubbuck's Green, Yellow, Black, Oxide and Mast Color in 25 lb kegs.

Cartridges.—If you use a shot gun we can give you your choice of black or nitro powder cartridges, all carefully loaded. We have a few shells loaded with "Walsrode" powder, a very strong powder that has been adopted for warfare by three great nations (not including the P. G.) It is said to be the most reliable of all smokeless powders and very safe in any well made gun. The charges are in bulk one third of any other powder, and is "guaranteed good for five years in any climate damp or dry." If you are interested in the numerous Rifle Matches or enjoy largest practice either with Rifle or Revolver use U. M. C. cartridges for best results; 50 out of a possible 50 can be made with this brand, provided the rifle, and the man are in good order. We have all sizes of U. M. C. cartridges from 22 to 56 cal.

Everything we have mentioned is to be had for the asking (and a little hard coin) at the old stand on the corner of Fort and King streets.

GRAVES OF INDIANS.
ABORIGINAL CEMETERIES WHERE GOOD WARRIORS SLEEP.

Barbaric Gougeons Where the White Men Cease From Troubling and the Redskins Are at Rest—The Lonely Tomb of a Pagan Pioneer.

Travelers along the Columbia and Puget sound, and on north through British Columbia and Alaska, occasionally observe queer Indian sepulchres and learn therefrom a little about the burial customs of the aborigines of those regions, but scarcely gain more than an inkling. From the stone cairns along the banks of Snake river, the elevated platforms in the treeless valleys, to the canoe graves along the branches of giant fir, the relations of deadness with their graven tombs, poles, and the funeral pyres of the Alaskans, he finds a great variety of burial methods, yet all concerning the same purpose—that of an effort so to dispose of the dead warrior that he shall find entrance to the spirit land and be properly equipped for enjoyment of its pleasures.

One idea seems to be common to all tribes, no matter how widely scattered, and that is that the future state shall be a continuation of the same purpose—that of the highest pleasures of this life. For this reason the dead Indian is buried with his weapons of war and the chase, and oftentimes his dogs and horses are killed and buried with him.

The disposing of the body above ground is the most universal custom, partially, no doubt, because of the fact that the labor for an Indian has neither the inclination nor the tools to perform, but chiefly because the deceased may the more easily be reached by the spirits of the living. Along the deep canyons of Snake river, in the absence of timber, cairns of loose rocks are piled above the dead body and its accompanying accessories. These little mounds of rock may be seen high up on the canyon's side. In the adjacent rockless and treeless valleys bodies are elevated upon scaffolds supported by poles cut from the slender cottonwoods that fringe the streams. Here it is no unusual sight to see the dead body of an Indian securely fastened upright upon a pony and arrayed in feathers and gaudy blankets, the pony trotting along with his inanimate burden toward the burial place.

In the Columbia river there are several islands that have been used exclusively for burial places for many years, probably for centuries. One of these is Coffin rock, near Kalama, near the mouth of the river, and is a long narrow island, the surface of which is a level of volcanic ash. Here thousands of Indians have found sepulture. Farther up, between the Cascades and the Puget Sound, is an island named "The Island of the Dead," where the dead are buried on a high ground from time immemorial. The name is a word of the Chinook jargon, signifying "Dead Island." Upon this island are heaps of grinning skulls, and unassorted bones, the rough wooden sleds once built for their protection, having long since succumbed to the disintegrating power of the elements.

Adjacent to one of these deathlands rises an elegant granite and marble monument erected in the memory of Victor Trevitt, a pioneer of Oregon who was slain through-out the Pacific coast. He was an old resident of the Dalles, and upon his death, some years since, he was his own special request buried among the bones of generations of Indians who were laid to rest long before the white men were known in this coast. Farther down the river is Bradford's island, also covered with bones and skulls.

In Puget sound there is an island similarly used and known locally as "Burial Island." The various tribes about Puget sound and the inland seas stretching northward toward Alaska often utilize the canoe of the dead warrior for a coffin. His carefully wrapped body, with bow and spear, is deposited in the "cannon" and placed on a platform high in the branches of a tree or raised on poles.

Farther north these deathlands are still more elaborate. On Shell island, at Fort Rupert, near the upper end of Vancouver island, B. C., there is an Indian cemetery of considerable pretensions, consisting of huge canoes and deathlands of various styles of architecture. These northern tribes also erect huge carved images and poles by their deathlands. They have considerable skill in carving.

A tradition of the Columbia river Indians will illustrate the belief of the natives in the activity of the spirits of their departed friends. The greatest demigod of all was Speel-yah, the coyote. At one time he was seen lying at a rapid rate, and there was great mourning. Whai-ma, the eagle, who had lost many friends, was told by Speel-yah that the dead would not always remain in spirit land, but, like the brown and dead leaves of autumn, would come to earth again with the opening buds and flowers of spring. In the evening he was seen to enter the land to spirit land and bring them back at once. After many days they came to a large water, on the other side of which was a village.

Spirits conducted them across the water, and they entered the principal house of the village, which was lighted by the moon, and this luminary was seen to enter the water that had jumped to it from the earth. Speel-yah killed the frog and swallowed the moon, leaving the house in darkness. In the excitement that ensued Whai-ma caught the spirits and confined them in a large box. Speel-yah put the box on his shoulders, and the two invaders started back for the land of the living. Soon the spirits in the box began to come to life, and Speel-yah's burden grew too heavy for him to carry. Thinking they were so far from the spirit land that the ghosts could not find their way back again, Speel-yah lifted the lid and let them out. They vanished immediately and returned to the land of the dead. Whai-ma was much disappointed, but said when the lids opened in the spring he would try again, but the coyote said it was better to let the dead remain where they were. Had not Speel-yah opened the box the dead would now come to life every spring, according to the belief of those who put their faith in the legend.—San Francisco Examiner.

A Patron Saint's Statue Robbed.
There has lately been robbed the statue of the Virgin of Attocha, the patron saint of Madrid, of the magnificent jewelry which it was covered. The robbery took place in the Madriene Church del Buen Suceso, where the statue had been temporarily placed, and among the treasure stolen was a valuable opal and diamond ring which had been presented by the queen regent, and which she had given to Queen Mercedes, the Infanta Pia and the late King Alfonso, to each of whom it in turn belonged.

An Expensive Drug.
Angry Man—That prescription you gave me to have killed for my wife cost me a pretty sum. My dog ate it.
Physician—It certainly will not cost you much to have it refilled.
Angry Man—That is not the point. The dog died, and he cost me $100.—Vuck.

The Choice of Weapons.
It was Paul de Cassagnac who wrote to Victor Noir:
"I am the offended party. I have the choice of weapons, I choose the French grammar. You are dead."

FURCLAD ESKIMOS.
Real, Bear and Dog Skins Clothe Both Sexes Almost Exclusively Alike.

These Eskimos were the queerest, dirtiest looking individuals I had ever seen. Clad entirely in furs, they reminded me more of monkeys than of human beings. Their hair was black, and was cut 2 or 3 inches in height, round as a dumpling, with a large, smooth, fat face, in which two little black eyes, a flat nose and a large expressive mouth were almost lost. His coarse black hair was allowed to straggle in tangles over his face, ears and neck to his shoulders, without any attempt at arrangement or order. His body was covered with a garment made of birdskins, called by the natives "ahtee." The feathers were next the body, and outside of this a garment made of seal-skin, the fur on the outside, called "metcheh."

These garments, patterned exactly alike, were made to fit to the figure, cut short at the hips, and in pointing to point back and front; a close fitting hood was sewed to the neck of each garment and invariably reached over the head when he was out of doors. His legs were covered with seal-skin trousers or "nanookies," reaching just below the knees, where they were met by the same kind of seal-skin boots, called "kamiks." We learned later that seal-skin trousers were worn only by those men who were not fortunate enough or able to kill a bear. In winter these men wear dogskin trousers, which are as warm as those made of seal-skin, but not nearly so stylish. Winter and summer, the men wear stockings reaching to the knees, made of the fur of the arctic hare.

At first I thought the woman's dress was identical with that of the man, and it puzzled me to tell one from the other, but a day or two I made out the many little differences in the costumes. The woman, like the man, wore "ahtee" and "metcheh," made respectively of the same material, but the skin, they differed in pattern from those of the man only in the back, where an extra width is sewed in, which forms a pouch, extending the entire length of the back of the wearer and fitting tight around the hips. In this pouch or hood the baby is carried. His little body, covered only by a shirt reaching to the waist and a pair of trousers, which are as warm as those made of seal-skin, is placed against the bare back of the mother, and the head, covered by a tight fitting skullcap made of seal-skin, is allowed to rest against the mother's shoulder.

In this way the Eskimo child is carried constantly, whether awake or asleep, and without clothing except the shirt and cap, until it can walk, which is usually at the age of 2 years. Then it is clothed in skins, exactly like the father if it is a boy, or like the mother if it is a girl, but the material about it is the youngest member of the family, after it has learned to walk it takes its place in its mother's hood whenever it is in need of protection. These little mounds of rock may be seen high up on the canyon's side. In the adjacent rockless and treeless valleys bodies are elevated upon scaffolds supported by poles cut from the slender cottonwoods that fringe the streams. Here it is no unusual sight to see the dead body of an Indian securely fastened upright upon a pony and arrayed in feathers and gaudy blankets, the pony trotting along with his inanimate burden toward the burial place.

THE HAWAIIAN STAR

PUBLISHED EVERY AFTERNOON EXCEPT SUNDAY BY THE HAWAIIAN STAR NEWS-PAPER ASSOCIATION, LTD.

WALTER G. SMITH, Managing Editor, HENRY MANNING, Business Manager, FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1894.

THE UNION PARTY PLATFORM.

The Union Party platform embraces radical policies which the STAR has always professed and is, therefore, the platform of the paper. Opposition to Hawaiian monarchy, allegiance to the Provisional Government, political union with the United States, land for small holders, equal rights and no privileged classes in politics, severe restrictions about Asiatic agricultural labor, a plank prohibiting the immigration of Asiatic mechanics, merchants and artisans, public improvements to afford work for the laboring classes, no employment of prison labor in mechanical pursuits, no offices for disloyal citizens, an equitable tax system—these are principles which have always and will continue to enlist the faithful services of this journal. Their application to the objects of the Union Party, coupled with a policy of conciliation and fair play between conservatives and radicals will, no doubt, be greatly to the advantage of the loyal citizenship of these Islands.

DEATH KNELL OF RESTORATION.

If the Hawaiian Royalists have any lingering idea that the McCreezy resolution empowered President Cleveland to restore Mrs. Dominis, or that it had such intent, they should read the speech of Mr. McCreezy himself in support of his measure. There is the usual political humbug in that address as a matter of course, but the part which bears on restoration, and which we have italicized, disposes of Mrs. Dominis' in very explicit words. We quote:

"Let Hawaii work out its own salvation" and "let the United States restore the ex-Queen of Hawaii to her throne," are not interchangeable terms. Meanwhile the increasing friendliness of the American Minister to the Provisional Government, as shown in his manner of dealing with it, justifies the best hope of those who desire our natural good will to the Government of the United States to be reciprocated.

MR. WILLIAM COLEMAN called upon the STAR yesterday to state that he was not able to talk as freely with the United States Consul General as he could have wished, otherwise he might have left a better impression upon Mr. Mills. He showed this journal a number of newspaper clippings which referred to him as an active military man and Democratic politician in Missouri; also letters from Senator Cockerell and Gov. Porter recommending him for a position under the public printer. The letters speak of Mr. Coleman in flattering terms. It is proper to say that he disclaims any ulterior purpose in coming to Hawaii, and wishes to be set right, in that respect, before the public.

THE KAUAHANE FUND.

The first response to the STAR's appeal for aid for the widow of the murdered police officer, James Kaiahane, came in the form of this pleasing letter from the United States Legation:

UNITED STATES LEGATION, HONOLULU, February 22, 1894. EDITOR STAR: Mr. Willis desires to subscribe to the fund for the family of Officer Kaiahane, for which purpose check is enclosed.

Captain Barker of the Philadelphia also contributed. The fund now in hand amounts to $68.50. That sum ought, in view of all the circumstances of Kaiahane's death and the needs of the widow, to be multiplied by ten.

YESTERDAY our esteemed morning contemporary predicted settled weather. To-day it rained as usual. We have a fellow feeling for the Advertiser, for it is but a fortnight since the STAR announced, on the authority of Prof. Lyons, that the weather would at once become "satisfactory." It was small comfort in the days of deluge that followed to find out that he meant satisfactory to ducks.

FINANCES OF THE WEEK.

MINISTER DAMON'S REGULAR STATEMENT.

The usual Excellent Showing of the Monetary Concerns and Statistics of the Hawaiian Government.

NEWS IN A NUTSHELL: An interesting communication from Dr. Emerson will appear Monday.

The Philadelphia minstrel troupe had a crowded house and gave a fine show.

The Councils adjourned for a week on account of Washington's birthday.

Crescent baseball team will hold a meeting at the Y. M. C. A. hall at 7:30 this evening.

Some Government land at Kalihi offered for rent in our "By Authority" column.

A native was knocked senseless by a bolt of lightning at Lihue, Kauai, last Monday.

The house and lot lately occupied by Mrs. Philip Obergert in Pauoa Valley is offered for sale.

Complaint is made to the police that the animals hanting the bus up Nuuanu hill are cruelly treated.

There was a fire on Kalihi mountain Wednesday night. About thirty acres were cleared of grass.

Ab Chew was fined $500 and sentenced to six months at hard labor this morning for selling opium.

Rev. H. H. Parker conducted the funeral services of James Kaiahane. Several hundred people attended.

Deputy Marshal Brown has a sample badge for the Citizens Guard that a supply house on the coast proposes to furnish.

Joe Casares, the smugler and murderer, is able to move about his cell today. He has not yet been told that Kaiahane is dead.

Kum Wan the bad Chinaman, is blue again and says he would sooner die than return to prison. His cousin is trying to get a lawyer for him.

All the firemen have petitioned for a change in the service uniform and will most likely secure it. The boys want blue shirts instead of red ones.

Mossman Again. Wm. L. Mossman, the young postmaster charged with embezzling Postal Savings funds, is before Judge Whiting and a jury again. The defendant is being tried on a second count which alleges that he converted $50 of trust money to his own use.

Mortgagee's Notice of Intention to Foreclose and of Sale.

PURSUANT TO A POWER OF SALE contained in that certain mortgage from G. W. Lincoln to Thomas R. Lucas and John Lucas, executors of the will of Geo. Lucas, deceased, as trustees for themselves, and John Nott, made June 26, 1893, recorded in the Register Office, Oahu, in Liber 139, page 496-7-8, the undersigned give notice that they intend to foreclose said mortgage for condition broken, that is to say, the non-payment of principal and interest when due. Notice is likewise given that the property described in said mortgage will be sold at public auction at the shop on King street in Honolulu, on Saturday March 31, 1894, at 12 o'clock noon of that day. Jas. P. Morgan, Auctioneer.

The property covered by said mortgage being and being singular the following described personal property, situate and being at the shop and office heretofore owned and occupied by G. W. Lincoln, on the makai side of King street, in said Honolulu, consisting of: 1. One iron tilting-top combination saw table and all saws used in connection therewith; 2. One set dado cutters and head; 3. One grindstone, frame and pulleys complete; 4. One boring machine attachment for saw table and three emery wheels; 5. One steam engine and boiler and all shafting, pulleys and being attached thereto or used in connection therewith; 6. One large iron safe now in mortgagor's said office; 7. One desk and all other office furniture in said mortgagor's office; 8. One mortise machine and all chisels belonging to or used in connection therewith; 9. The lease by and under which said mortgagor holds the said premises.

(The said lease has not very long to run, but may be renewed upon favorable terms by the purchaser for which arrangements can be made before the sale. The lease is a valuable one as the rents derive therefrom by the lessee should equal if not exceed the ground rent, leaving this large shop and mill practically rent free.)

At the door-way there was an elderly woman in a ragged dress...

They disappeared, and we heard a woman's voice weeping, even above the organ's strains...

Five summers ago when you wooed her you stood on the self same place. Face to face, heart to heart, never dreaming...

She has struggled and yearned and aspired—grown purer and wiser each year; The stars are not further above you in your humors...

Her eyes they are sweeter and calmer, but pure as the clear as well; Her voice has a tender cadence, but is pure as a silver bell.

Her face has the look worn by those who with God and his angels have talked; The white robes she wears are less white than the spirits with whom she has walked.

And you? Have you aimed at the highest? Have you, too, aspired and prayed? Have you looked for a nobler ideal? Have you conquered it unaided?

Go measure yourself by her standard. Look back on the years that have fled; Then ask, if you need, why she tells you, that the love of her girlhood is dead.

SUBSCRIBE for the Best Weekly Newspaper ever published in the Hawaiian Islands. Try it for three months. It will cost you just a dollar. American money taken at par.

FOR a dollar you naturally expect to get a dollars worth. The WEEKLY STAR will give it to you. One Dollar for three months.

THE question that now agitates the public mind to the exclusion of the tariff and Hawaiian affairs is how to get the worth of your money. One dollar invested in three month's subscription of the WEEKLY STAR will be worth hundreds thrown away on other publications.

WEEKLY payments are all very well, but the WEEKLY STAR is satisfied if you will pay once a quarter, in advance, of course. A common, ordinary U. S. or Hawaiian dollar, sometimes called a cart-wheel and sometimes the "Almighty," will pay for three month's subscription to the WEEKLY STAR.

STAR. This word by itself looks lonely. So did the "Lone Star" of Texas, but it got there all the same, and is now a member of the brightest constellation old Mother Earth has ever known.

The "Lone Star" of Hawaii will get there, and don't you forget it. There are two or three kinds of "Stars" but those we are looking out for are the "Annexation Star" and the WEEKLY STAR. The former we are bound to have in time, and the latter costs just One Dollar for three months. Take them both. You will have to, sooner or later.
