A VERDICT QUESTIONED.

A jury's verdict is no more above criticism than a judge's decision.

A learned, experienced, and impartial judge may sometimes err, and an intelligent jury may also do the same.

We are of opinion that the verdict of the jury in the Comacho case, tried for manslaughter in the second degree, was an error.

The accused was acquitted. No doubt the gentlemen of the jury were conscientious in their finding, and leaned, as juries are always supposed to lean, to the side of mercy; but was it such as the circumstances of the case would lead intelligent people to expect, especially in view of the Patten case, still fresh in many memories?

The personality of the accused should have no consideration in the matter. A man is shot and killed, not in a heated squabble or in self-defence, but while retreating from the natural effect of such a verdict is to impress not over-intelligent people with the belief that they may use fire-arms on similar occasions with impunity, and a considerable percentage of the community consists of this class of persons, who have deadly weapons among them in too great abundance.

STREET GRADING.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—Permit me to add a few words to what has already appeared in your columns on the subject of street grading.

The object of street grading, as we all know, is to carry off water and prevent its accumulation in any one spot. A glance at very many important parts of this city, after a heavy shower, will at once show to what extent this first principle has been neglected. Not only are large sheets of water, with no possibility of escape, to be found, but the gentleman in charge of this important department of our public works has, in some instances, succeeded in his art so as to force the water into the private premises of residents.

A case recently was brought to the writer's notice, where the proprietor of a dwelling situated on King street, seeing the impending danger of being flooded out as the rainy season approached, protested against his property being made a sort of reservoir consequent upon the system of grading, so called, now being adopted, and was informed by a Government official that he, the proprietor, had the remedy in his own hands by purchasing the necessary lumber to form a substantial curbing and building up the side walk abutting the premises.

Whether or not owners of property should be compelled, at their own expense, to protect themselves in the manner stated, I am unable to say. I do know, however, that, in this particular instance, the work, involving considerable expense, was done by said land owner as a matter of necessity, simply to save his property from inundation.

I am, etc., OBSERVER.

Minister Thompson at Hayti reports a battle Oct 2 between General Thalmage's forces and General Segretine's command, beginning at 7 o'clock in the evening and lasting all night. Thalmage was killed. There was a large number of killed and wounded on both sides.

ANOTHER POINT IN THE CHINESE QUESTION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—There is one point in relation to the Chinese question which seems to have been lost sight of by Mr. Gribble—and to some extent by his able critic—one which, as it appears to me, is fatal to the main contention of the former writer, and goes to support the position assumed by "Reef Orme."

One, moreover, which is absolutely essential to a fair consideration of the subject from either standpoint. I allude to the progressive character of the Chinese. However marked the traditional conservatism of this remarkable race, it has now awakened from its long sleep, and the evidences of that awakening cannot but be apparent to the most casual observer.

Both your correspondents have named certain classes of the community whose interests are said to be affected by Chinese competition, and inasmuch as they have done so they have proved themselves advocates of class interests, which, as a matter of policy, is un-sound.

The conditions existing at the present moment are not those which will always exist; neither are they those which existed at the inception of this difficult problem in the Hawaiian kingdom. Time was when the Chinese coolie, imported for the purposes of plantation labor, confided his attention to that sphere. He was an unskilled laborer, and the only persons with whom he competed were the unskilled laborers of other nationalities. Unskilled, did I say? He was unskilled in the ordinary acceptance of that term, but skilled in a marked degree in the art of acquiring a knowledge of other industrial pursuits. The result has been that he has not remained within the sphere for which he was originally intended by those who imported him. He has gradually pushed his way into others, and consequently his competition, instead of affecting only one class of the population, presses sorely upon several.

And have we any good reason to suppose that he will not do in the future what he has done in the past? Why should we fondly imagine that the bland Celestial has now reached finality and will rest on his oars? Will he not rather push on into other spheres of labor in the hope of bettering his condition yet further? If so, it is not this or that class, but the entire community whose interests will be affected by Chinese competition. Glancing down Reef Orme's list I fail to discern one sphere of life into which the Chinaman is inherently incapable of entering. In the United States, if I am rightly informed, he has already been admitted to the bar in one isolated instance—an earnest of what we may expect in the future. Hence, as "Reef Orme" says, "We are on the threshold of an irresistible conflict."—a fact which may possibly come to be regarded as a truism by the entire community when it is no longer a matter of prediction, but of present fact. G.

A FEW WORDS ABOUT TIGHT SHOES.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—It does not infrequently happen that parties complain of their shoes not fitting them on account of some defect or another. To such parties as these I should like to address a few words, in the hope that they will avail themselves of such benefit as may be obtained from perusal; or, in other words, if they should think that the shoe fits them, then, for Heaven's sake, let them wear it, with the sincere wishes of "good luck."

It is only after doing considerable battle with my feelings, that I concluded to write on this subject, which is a most disagreeable task to me; especially considering that far more experienced pens than my own have written on it. Still, in the hope that some may see themselves as they are seen by others, and that these lines may induce happiness to return where it is at present missing, I will, with your kind permission, offer my feeble effort.

How often have we been unwilling witnesses to domestic troubles and scenes, and that in 9 out of ten cases, where the couple are only too young for the matrimonial state, having contracted matrimony at an age when they required most the attention of a father, mother or teacher, or where marriage has been entered into too hastily.

Marriages at the present day are considered merely a business affair, that can be either entered into, or withdrawn from, on the most advantageous terms obtainable, while the sacredness of the matrimonial state is either laughed at and totally ignored, or else held in very light esteem.

Quite often, and that some time shortly after marriage, we witness scenes of trouble and difficulty, where a short time ago all seemed happiness. Divorce is the subject now talked about. All supposed friends and mere casual acquaintances, are hunted up and entertained often against their will—with recitals of domestic difficulties. This thing might be pardoned, for only too often it is the outgrowth of a foolish ignorance, instead of being a sign of depravity of heart.

But what are we to think of people of advanced age, married, and parents of children, who, instead of showing up the foolishness of these young people's actions to them, are inclined to sympathize with them, or worse still, encourage them to continue in their foolish manner by entertaining them in return with recitals of their own domestic troubles, or entering into light and disgusting conversation.

If these scenes were enacted in a town of poverty and ignorance, a tear of compassion would be in order; but where the parties claim a high standard of intelligence, proprietors of their own business, or in the enjoyment of responsible positions, married, and with children—then, I say, treat these people, these supposed, but false friends, with the coldest of contempt. Shun them, as vermin and poisonous reptiles until they turn to correct their errors. B. B.

Honolulu, Oct. 25, 1888.

SPORT IN THE SANDWICH ISLANDS.

The following article appears in the London Field of August 4th. It is from the pen of Mr. Scott B. Wilson, a gentleman who has been staying in the islands for some time past:

Few travellers, I believe, visit this interesting group of islands in search of sport, though no doubt many of your readers have passed through Honolulu, the chief port and capital of the islands, en route to the Colonies or China. But as the island on which Honolulu is situated is by no means as favourable for the sportsman as the island of Hawaii, I propose to give a brief sketch of the sport to be had on that island and generally throughout the group. There are seven principal islands—Hawaii, Maui, Lanai, Kahoolawe, Molokai, Oahu, and Kauai; two of these, Lanai and Kahoolawe, are almost destitute of forest, and of but small extent.

Hawaii is the most southerly island of the group. It is, roughly speaking, triangular in form, and has an area of 4100 square miles. A great portion of the island consists of lava fields and flows belonging to three great mountains—1. Mauna Kea, 13,805 ft.; 2. Mauna Loa, 13,700 ft.; 3. Hualalai, 8275 ft. The greater part of the island is encircled by a belt of thick forest, which at some points stretches down almost to the sea, but its lower edge averages an elevation of 1500ft. The width of this belt varies greatly at different points in some places, as, for instance, Kealakouia (the scene of Cook's death); it stretches from about 1500ft., some six miles up Mauna Loa, while at others, take Kukuilahe, one soon emerges through the forest belt on to the Waimea plains. I may here mention that the only two real forest trees to be found on the islands are the Ohia (Metrosideros polymorpha) and the Koa (Acacia Koa). The sandalwood, the false sandalwood, the Aalii (Dodonaea viscosa), and the Mamane (Sophora chrysophylla) are never found in this lower forest belt.

Throughout the island, at an elevation of 6000ft., the forest becomes scanty, the Ohia being in this region reduced to a mere shrub. This higher region is above the influence of the N. E. trades, and has perhaps the most healthy and invigorating climate in the world. The forest is in few parts impenetrable to the sportsman, owing to the countless herds of wild cattle, which, by barking the old trees and browsing down the young, have opened up the formerly dense jungle, and I fear that if no check is put on their ravages, the forest of Hawaii will be at no very distant date, and with it its interesting feathered inhabitants, a thing of the past.

I will now give an account of the game birds found on the island. The Hawaiian goose (Bernicla sandvicensis), native name Nene.—This interesting indigenous species is the largest game bird found on the islands. A pair sent by the author last July, may be seen at the gardens of the Zoological Society. Though not so plentiful as formerly, it is still by no means uncommon in certain districts of Hawaii. Its favorite haunts are, strangely enough—this is in the breeding season in December—the old lava flows, than which region nothing more unsuited to a goose can scarcely be imagined. In the months of June and July the Nene is to be found at an elevation of some 5000 feet, and here, too, seems to show a preference for the clinker beds. Its food, I believe, consists principally of berries, such as the Ohelo (Vaccinium reticulatum), the strawberry (Fragaria chiliensis), and a black berry called by natives Popolo. The weird cry of this bird is very distinct from that of any other species which I know. It is a bird easy of approach, and I am told that, if one of a flock is wounded, the remainder will not leave their companion, and the sportsman, if heartless enough, may kill the entire flock. The Nene was, in old times, kept by the natives, and acted as a sentinel, uttering its peculiar note at the approach of a stranger.

As an instance of the tameness and attachment of the Hawaiian goose, I may mention one which would follow its mistress for a distance of fifteen miles, and not once, but on my occasions; indeed, the goose was in the habit of accompanying her on her rides as a dog would. My friend Judge Bickerton was successful in inducing this bird to breed in Honolulu. I believe, some years ago, Lord Derby had the same success in England. The only two islands on which the Nene is resident are Hawaii and Molokai, but it has been occasionally observed on Nihiat by Mr. Francis Gay.

Anas superciliosa (native name Koloa).—This is the only indigenous species of duck. It is distributed throughout the group. On Hawaii it appears to be not so abundant as on Kauai and Oahu; still, it is to be found in fair numbers in the ponds in the Hamakua bush, between Kukuilahe and Waimea; also in ponds in Kona and near Mana. In the marshes near Honolulu, within a short distance of the town, it is also to be found. In plumage, this species much resembles the female of our mallard. Among the migratory species of ducks are the pintail, widgeon, shoveller, teal, and, it is said, occasionally the famed canvas back. The shoveller is very abundant, and gives excellent sport. The pintail I have also seen in fair numbers on Hawaii.

The golden plover (native name Kolea) charadrius fulvus which visits these islands is, according to my friend Dr. Stejneger, the Asiatic form, as distinguished from the more easterly American Ch. dominicanus proper. The plover is a regular spring and autumn migrant, arriving in July, and leaving early in May. Specimens I shot in April had the full breeding plumage—breasts as black as jet. Enormous bags of plover may be made if one finds out a pond which they are in the habit of frequenting, or else towards evening, when they assemble in great numbers on the sea beach. The chief food of the plover—inland at least—on the Waimea plains for instance, where most of my plover shooting has been done, consists of a grub called by the natives poko, which at times is very abundant; then is the time for plovers. Shortly before their departure in spring, they become so fat as frequently to burst on falling to the ground. In old times, the natives were very expert in snaring them, but, like all their old arts, it has been forgotten, or the present generation are too lazy to practice it. Near Honolulu good plover shooting may be had.

The California quail (native name Kapululu).—This introduced bird gives excellent sport, more especially in the mountain region, where it flourishes best. Here, on the large open plateaus, or rather in the kipukas (openings or rather wide open spaces in the forest), large bags may be made. On an extensive plateau in Kona, at an elevation of about 5000ft., I have, on the discharge of my gun, seen as many as 150 on the wing at one time. The quail thrives best on the dry uplands of Hawaii, though I have shot them in some numbers among the lantana scrub, below 1500ft. This bird was only introduced in 1859, and the rapidity with which it has increased is most encouraging, as, though not the equal of the plover, a quail pie is by no means to be despised, especially in the uninhabited region of the interior, where the sportsman has to a great extent to depend on his gun.

Pigeon (native name, Nunu), the descendants of the domestic pigeon, are now very plentiful on many parts of Hawaii. By finding out their roosting places—in some deep rocky gorge or subterranean cave—excellent sport may be had as they fly in to roost. The pheasant was brought here from England, via the Colonies. Molokai and Oahu are the only two islands the pheasant has yet reached. On Molokai it has increased enormously, and, I am informed by Mr. Bishop, is a sad enemy to the potato fields. On the island of Oahu, within three miles of the town of Honolulu, the pheasant is to be found in fair numbers. At Waialua, on the same island, really good pheasant shooting is to be had.

Wild turkeys are abundant throughout the group. They are delicious eating.

Pigs were abundant at the time of Captain Cook's visit; the natives offered him pigs as sacrifices. Now they are to be found in great numbers on Hawaii, and afford excellent sport for the rifle; indeed, a fierce old mountain boar is no mean antagonist, and the speed of their first rush at the horseman is astounding. Perhaps the best place on Hawaii to enjoy this sport in perfection is at Mana, the residence of the Hon. Samuel Parker, under whose hospitable roof I made a week's stay. Mr. Parker is a thorough all-round sportsman, and a man will be hard to please if he is not satisfied with the wild boar and wild bull shooting, added to which cattle driving, with its exciting sport of lassoing. The native Hawaiian is a fine horseman, and I should imagine that the stars at least of Mr. Parker's men must be quite the equals, in lassoing, of the Mexican cowboy.

I forgot to mention wild goats, which are still abundant on parts of the island, and are fine practice for the rifle. The natives will run them down over the roughest ground imaginable. SCOTT B. WILSON.

SANTA CLAUS IN TOWN.

One of the most attractive places in town at the present time is Waterhouse's No. 10 store, Fort street.
The upstairs room is a sight to behold, filled as it is with toys of every description. To enumerate all would fill a volume, but among others may be mentioned by-cycles, tricycles, velocipedes, rocking horses, doll's carriages, wagons, carts, dressed and undressed dolls, mechanical toys, games of all kinds, baskets, building and alphabetical blocks, china tea-sets, musical instruments, foot-balls, Noah's arks, guns, croquet, tennis and cricket sets, fishing-rods, etc. Not one quarter of the things have been mentioned. As the early bird catches the worm, parents and others should call at the store at once, and not delay. The quality of Waterhouse's stock of holiday goods needs no comment whatever.

SUPREME COURT NOTICE.

The following notice is posted in the office of the clerk of the Supreme Court:

Whereas many cases, locally belonging to the several Circuits, are brought in the Supreme Court, whereby it has frequently become impracticable to try all the cases within the statute terms, and whereby the jurors of the Supreme Court have the burden of trials which might be brought in the Circuit Courts:

It is hereby ordered: That, in making up the calendar, ejection cases for land in the 2d, 3d, and 4th Circuits, and other causes where the parties or the defendant reside in, or where the causes of action arise in, said Circuits (even when such cases are continued from a previous term), shall be placed on the calendar after all other jury cases.

Rule XXII is hereby modified accordingly.
By the Court:
WILLIAM FOSTER, Clerk.
Honolulu, Oct. 22, 1888.

BITUMINOUS ROCK PAVEMENT.

A new pavement is now in the San Francisco market, which bids fair to soon come into general use.
It is bituminous rock pavement.
The process consists in disintegrating the rock at the mines by a patent machine and converting it into bricks by hydraulic pressure of five hundred pounds per square inch. This squeezes the oil out and leaves a compact malleable brick, which can be moulded to any size or shape, including bricks for water channels. It can be laid down cheaper than any other pavement in cement, is noiseless and practically indestructible. It can be shipped anywhere and is easily handled.
The bricks can be used for sidewalks, avenues, stable floors, cellars, yards, etc. They are cheaper than wood or composite stone and will last forever. The bricks are to be made so many inches square and one could tell exactly what labor, etc., would cost. The work of tendering is reduced to a certainty as the area to be covered would be known.

Samples of the pavement have gone to England and the Australian Colonies. There is no doubt an unlimited field for a noiseless indestructible pavement, and as California has the only known rock fit for the purpose and owns the patent machine and patent for the brick as well, it looks like a pretty secure monopoly.

Some of the pavements have been laid down in San Francisco. It is intended to send some to Honolulu and have it laid down on some street where the most traffic occurs.
Capt. J. H. Brown when at the Coast saw this pavement and no doubt will be able to give full particulars regarding its usefulness.
Minister Thurston was to have been shown the pavement before he left San Francisco.

A company has been formed, the stock all taken and the machinery will all be manufactured before the end of the year. It looks as if such a pavement is just what is wanted in Honolulu.

MORE SHOOTING.

LEPERS FIRE ON POLICE OFFICERS AT EWA.

On Tuesday last Officer C. B.
Reynolds of the Board of Health instructed special officer Kingsley to go to Ewa for the purpose of arresting several lepers known to be in that district. Kingsley has had some experience in this line, having recently captured a number on the island of Kauai. A list of names of those suspected being lepers was handed to Kingsley, and two or three of the names were specially marked, as being men who were likely to carry shooting irons. Reynolds had been there himself and was fully acquainted with the character of these two or three men.

On Wednesday Kingsley, with the Deputy Sheriff and a policeman, called at the house of a suspected leper named Manuela, but he was not in. They then proceeded to Aikulan's house, and were within three hundred yards when fire was opened on them by Aikulan and also Manuela. In all Kingsley counted nineteen shots. The nineteenth shot struck him, passing right through the calf of his leg. The latter had a Colt's revolver and used it. One of the lepers got behind a horse and fired at the officers from underneath the belly. All the time the lepers were firing they were retreating until they finally got to a bluff and then Kingsley stood a little chance with them. One of the shots Kingsley fired struck the horse which the leper was hiding behind. It rolled over apparently dead. The lepers used Winchester rifles.

Kingsley telephoned to town what had happened and at 5 o'clock last evening Officer Reynolds left for Ewa. He met Kingsley coming in alone. Dr. Wood dressed the wound and to-day he is in a comfortable condition though he will have to lay up for several weeks.

PERSONAL.

Hon. D. H. Hitchcock is in town waiting the arrival of Mrs. Hitchcock and his daughter Miss Alme on the Zealandia. They will all leave for Hilo next week. Miss Alme has just passed the law course at Ann Arbor, and has been admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of Michigan. She will apply for admission to the Hawaiian bar and practice in Hilo along with her father. It will be the first instance of a lady being admitted to practice in the Courts of the Kingdom.

GOLD STORAGE IN NEW YORK.

Walking along the immense foundation of the approach to the Brooklyn bridge I found one of the arches utilized in a very ingenious manner, being occupied as a cold-storage warehouse. There is another on West street near Washington Market and the business is so good that a third one has been erected uptown. The method is to freeze meat by artificial process and hold it in this condition as long as may be required. The advantage is a security against a glut in the market. Conversing with the pioneer in this business, who has carried it on for ten years with success, he told me that last spring the price of dressed beef was so low that a large quantity was put into his establishment and frozen, thus keeping it for three months, when an advance took place and the meat was sold at a profit. He also told me that he employed nearly a dozen men and consumed ten tons of ice a week, and also paid $4,000 a year for his warehouse, and even with all this expense it was a paying business. Sometimes the market is overstocked with poultry, and a heavy decline in prices may be imminent, but the dealers escape this by the cold-storage system, which is now one of the prominent features of the market system.—[N.Y. Corr.

a severe engagement took place.
The battle resulted in the defeat of the natives, with a loss of 300 killed.
The hussars also suffered heavily, sixty-four of their number being
