TUESDAY, JULY 17, 1894.

A SLIGHT SPLIT.

The royalists seem to be splitting into two factions, viz: those who want to join the 'Peoples' alleged party and those who demand that nothing of a compromising nature be done until the 'last chance' commission sent to Washington is heard from later.

ABOUT PLATFORMS.

The local politicians are at it hammer and tongs beating new platforms into shape for the coming election. Those already issued, with those to come, will doubtless contain much that is good, with a greater or less percentage of 'private views' publicly expressed, which are almost certain to be rejected by voters.

For the present the various proposed political platforms seem unnecessary, especially as the supporters of good government have already settled upon a platform, viz: 'The Republic of Hawaii and ultimate annexation to the United States.'

a pound is added and the tax is then called the graduated land tax. This tax increases by one-eighth of a penny on the pound with each additional $5000 until the value of the property reaches $210,000, when the tax is placed at two pence, after which there is no further raise.

The immediate and seemingly sole object of the graduated tax is to compel the large landholders, or those who have purchased for the purpose of speculating, to throw their holdings upon the market for the benefit of bona fide settlers.

The income tax is fixed at sixpence a pound on the first £1000, after deducting £300 exempt by law, and one shilling on all taxable incomes exceeding £1000. All incomes from mortgages and land rents and profits are also exempt from this tax.

The report in question states in several different places that the people who pay the least taxes, or are entirely exempt therefrom, consider the system just and equitable and that it is so extremely popular any attempt to return to the single-tax system would be met with strong opposition, as stated; and Consul Connolly adds it is his opinion that any proposed change would be met with open revolt.

WORKING FOR A CABLE.

CANADA AND AUSTRALIA MAY BE UNITED.

Difficulties of the Plan Discussed-The Conference Asks England to Survey a Route.

GRADUATED TAXATION.

The United States Consul at Auckland, New Zealand, has reported to his Government on the graduated plan of taxation in New Zealand and on the results thus far obtained. Consul Connolly introduces his report with the statement that the taxation laws of New Zealand excel those of the other Australasian colonies and those of many other countries.

The result of this test has been, as stated in the report sent to Washington, that the system has become so popular with the people of the colony would 'resist to the better end' any step toward a return to the single-tax system.

The application of the graduated system of taxation is succinctly as follows in New Zealand: To raise the £360,000 necessary three taxes are levied, viz., a land tax proper, a graduated land tax, and an income tax. On this point the report says:

Taking the figures for 1893, in these three classes, there are 12,360 persons who pay the land tax, yielding $232,381; 1491 who pay the graduated land tax, yielding $67,880, and 3448 persons who pay the income tax, yielding $73,937.

Another delegate drew attention to Hydrographer Wharton's report made in 1887. In this report Wharton says: 'Looked at from an admiralty point of view, the sole advantage of a submarine cable across the Pacific would be the power of communication afforded with ships at Honolulu and the Fiji and the surrounding groups. From an imperial point of view, any alternative line of communication with our possessions must be of value, but there are grave drawbacks to this present proposal. It has been gradually recognized that in order to minimize the effect of break-downs on a submarine cable the individual lengths between landing places should be as short as possible, in order that the time lost by bringing over a steamer until repairs can be made good should be reduced to a minimum. Now the proposed line would not only be made up of the longest lengths of submarine cable known, but the state of trade and the calling places are such that steamers might not be available for temporary service in case of messenger vessels being required.'

In reply Sanford Fleming said: 'Look how dependent on foreign powers Great Britain is at this moment for the security of its telegraphic communication with Asia, Australia and Africa. In fact, it may be said that telegraphic communication between the home Government and every important division of the empire, except Canada, is dependent on the friendship of Turkey. And is not Turkey continually exposed to imminent danger?'

A motion of F. B. Satter of New South Wales 'that, in the opinion of this conference, immediate steps should be taken to provide telegraph communication by cable, free from foreign control, between the Dominion of Canada and Australia' was finally adopted without dissent.

A resolution was also adopted asking the imperial Government to make the necessary survey and bear one-half the expense. Another resolution favored the extension of the proposed cable to the Cape of Good Hope. The following was also adopted: Resolved, That this conference is of opinion that any provisions in existing treaties between Great Britain and any foreign power which prevents self-governing dependencies of the empire from entering into agreements of commercial reciprocity with each other or with Great Britain should be removed.

DULL MONOTONY IN FOOD.

It Will Eventually Result in Banishing Appetite and Gastronomic Comfort. Nowhere do we need more change than in our diet. The law that makes boiled mutton and rice pudding daily food is the most unwholesome and unpalatable of laws.

Next to dullness in serving, mystery is perhaps the most important factor in forcing an appetite. The hungry man who comes from business with his stomach mortgaged to frenzied ebullience on Monday night, must be fed on Tuesday night and clops on Wednesday night eats his dinner merely because he is a hungry man, but he of the delicate appetite is turned over helplessly to the dining room of the wise housewife who never publishes her bill of fare in advance. The not knowing what is coming and an element of surprise in what does come, if the food is in itself desirable, will do more than anything else to convert putting new life into a listless palate.

Don't serve too many sorts of things at one time, as a superabundance always tends to nausea and a repudiation of the whole. And avoid as well that popular but fallacious maxim. And strive to find new ways—good new ways—especially of cooking meat and of making desserts. Many nutritious well-regulated luncheon recipes between eight or ten menu recipes and perhaps a dozen of desserts, whereas both these numbers could easily be multiplied by 100 without loss of interest.

A remarkable streak of good luck I ever knew of in the horse race business occurred to a prominent merchant in Chicago. 'I was well known turfman. A tout induced him to bet $1,000 even money on a horse called Jim Douglas, and the next day he was greatly worried, as he was not a betting man. At that time $1,000 was a considerable sum to him. Going to the bookmaker, he explained matters and told him he wanted to know how to get his money back. The bookmaker informed him that the only way he could come out even was to bet another $1,000 on the field against Jim Douglas. He did this and thanked the man for his advice.

It happened that during that night Captain Sam Brown added his horse Mona to the entries of this race. The race was run the next day, and Mona came in first, with Jim Douglas second. The bookmaker had not only got back his money, but had won $2,000 besides, for both his bets drew. The fact that Mona had not been entered at the time he placed his money on Douglas made the latter just as good as first so far as his bet was concerned. Then, Mona having won the race and being the field, secured his second bet. I tell you that is what horsemen call business man's luck. Such good fortune would not happen to a professional bettor in a thousand years.'—Chicago Tribune.

What He Wanted. 'I tell you, Parker, money is scarce.' 'Don't get scared. I'm not going to dun you for that $10 you owe me.' 'Oh, I wasn't thinking of that. I was fixing to ask you to lend me another ten.'—Brooklyn Life.

'You don't see anything like so many trunks with covers on them as you formerly did,' said a traveler, 'but I have occasionally seen lately something that I don't remember to have seen at all years ago, and that is people carrying handbags protected with covers.'

THAT REPUBLICAN PARTY.

THE CITIZENS MEET AND ADOPT A PLATFORM.

They Favor Income Tax, Partition of Lands, Sunday Amusements, the Cause of Labor, Etc.

The International Scholastic Club held a special meeting Monday evening for the purpose of adopting a platform for the proposed new republican party.

The committee appointed to prepare the draft had failed to act, and the following platform was offered by the President of the Board of Trustees, considered by sections and finally passed as a whole:

Platform of the Republican Party of the Republic of Hawaii.

First—We hold above all other considerations the protection of life, the enjoyment of property, the peace and quiet of society, the sacredness of homes and the social duties of communities; and believing the above conditions are easier attained under republican forms of government, we heartily endorse the action of the Constitutional Convention in framing a republican polity and the action of President Dole in proclaiming the Republic of Hawaii, July 4, 1894; and we will oppose any effort, direct or indirect, to establish a monarchical or any other than a republican form of government in the Hawaiian Islands.

Second—We favor the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States of America.

Third—We favor the cession of Pearl Harbor to the United States upon terms satisfactory to both Republics.

Fourth—God endowed the sea with life for the use of all mankind. We favor free fishing privileges.

Fifth—We are in favor of the free delivery of mail in Honolulu and in other towns of the Republic when such towns may acquire a population of 10,000 persons.

Sixth—We favor such changes in the road system as will insure the better construction and supervision of all highways.

Seventh—We favor the complete revision of the laws relating to assessment and taxation, and we believe sound business principles demand that all property be assessed at its actual value.

Eighth—We favor strict legislation for preserving the purity of the ballot and prohibiting the corrupt use of money in elections.

Ninth—We are opposed to the employment in Government offices, if avoidable, of the relatives of those holding salaried offices under the Government, and favor a system of civil service examinations and promotions especially in the higher grades of employment.

Tenth—We believe that the interests of the Republic will be served and promoted by appointments for merit and not for family influences. We oppose changes in minor offices for political reasons alone. If the incumbent is loyal to the Republic and meritorious, and we strenuously oppose the importation of persons from abroad to fill Government positions so long as there are loyal residents of the Republic competent to occupy them.

Eleventh—We favor a graduated income tax.

Twelfth—We demand that revenues shall be limited to the necessary expenses of the Government.

Thirteenth—We favor such legislative and executive policy as will improve the condition and maintain the rights of all people who labor, and by constant effort, both by legislative act and individual example, to develop and improve the natural and artificial resources of the Republic, and to keep the money of Hawaii at home for the benefit of all its people.

Fourteenth—We favor a law governing convict labor in the penal institution of the Republic that will work the least possible injury to free labor.

Fifteenth—We favor that the constitution should be amended to the end that the President, heads of all departments and judges of the Circuit Courts shall be elected by a direct vote of the people.

Sixteenth—We favor the absolute suppression of Asiatic immigration into this country, and a close check upon the importation of contract laborers for any term of months or years.

Seventeenth—We stand unequivocally for the American system of public school and opposed to any appropriation of public moneys for sectarian schools. We declare that only by united support of such common schools, taught in the English language, can we hope to become and remain a homogeneous and harmonious people.

Eighteenth—We unequivocally condemn trusts and combines of any character whatsoever and any agency tending to amass wealth in the hands of a few. The land of the Republic should be controlled and possessed for the benefit of the producer, and limited in acreage to each possessor to such a degree as to insure the people against monopoly and speculation. We have granted to landless native Hawaiians of the aboriginal race, (Kuleana, a small holdings) that is for such as have families dependent upon them for support and who are loyal citizens of the Republic.

Nineteenth—We advocate the perpetuation of systems of public works in order that the surplus labor population of the Republic of Hawaii, except Asiatics, may be afforded employment.

Twentieth—We advocate a reduction in the qualifications for elective privileges as rapidly as the change of sentiment in the common enemy and the political condition of the country will render safe to the cause of civilization and the Republic.

Twenty-first—We demand the repeal of the obnoxious and iniquitous Sunday law, and favor such legislation as will insure band concerts on Sunday and other amusements afforded the people in enlightened communities.

Twenty-second—We invite all loyal citizens of the Republic to join with us in support of these opinions. In the adoption of the foregoing, permanent officers of the Honolulu Club of the Republican party were elected. They are as follows: President, C. Klomme; first vice-president, H. Klemme; second vice-president, G. Markham; recording secretary, G. Cavannah; corresponding secretary, J. Cranston; treasurer, A. E. Miller.

THE PHILADELPHIA.

She Will Probably Leave by the Middle of September.

It is officially known that the Charleston has received orders to proceed from Callao, Peru, to Mare Island Navy Yard, where her bottom over-hauled at that place, receive necessary repairs and finally report here as the relief of the Philadelphia. From Washington, June 13th, orders were cable to the Charleston to proceed to Mare Island. Giving her five days to coal and with usual steaming from that place she ought to have reached San Francisco on or about July 9th.

The officers of the Philadelphia, without exception, are a credit to the great country they represent and are men of whom Americans in the Hawaiian Islands feel proud. They have added much to the social life of Honolulu—so generally extended to them and their families—and all will feel glad to see the grand old ship steam away, carrying friends who have approached nearer and nearer to the general heart of the intelligent community as the days have passed.

The Philadelphia reached Honolulu in September 1893, and it now looks as though it would be the middle of September 1894, before she will depart.

HUGH CENTER LEAVES.

MR. BLOUNT'S HOST AND THE SPECKELS BOYS.

He is Succeeded at Spreckelsville by Mr. Hoffacker—Likely to Remain With Class.

Mr. Hugh Center, who for fifteen years has preserved an intimate business connection with the Spreckels family, has severed himself from the Hawaiian Commercial & Sugar Co. on Maui and will leave for San Francisco by the next steamer, there to make his future home.

As is generally known, Mr. Center was always a close friend of Claus Spreckels, and when the recent troubles arose in the Spreckels family, whereby a split has been made apparent, he was outspoken in his sympathy for the old gentleman. This was anything but pleasant to the younger boys, now of the Hawaiian Commercial Co., and doubtless had much, if not all, to do with the departure of Mr. Center from the Islands.

Though it is little known, the unpleasantness in the Spreckels family is not an ordinary every-day occurrence, but is a fight of the bitterest kind and has developed a deplorable accompaniment of prejudice on both sides. There is little doubt that Mr. Center's removal had been determined upon by the Spreckels boys as soon as the sentiments of the former were known, but the matter was deferred to the proverbial "convenient season."

Before returning to the islands by the Belgic, the Spreckels engaged the company of Mr. J. Hoffacker, his brother-in-law; and the report gained circulation in San Francisco that Hoffacker was coming to the Islands to succeed Mr. Center as manager of Spreckelsville. Such was the case.

The change was made with very little feeling on either side, Spreckels simply asserting that nothing was being conducted in a suitable manner, and Mr. Center inviting the new husbandmen to get someone who could please him. Mr. Hoffacker was promptly installed at Spreckelsville, and Mr. Center is in the city expecting to leave for the United States at his earliest opportunity. Of course it is presumed that Claus Spreckels and John D. will receive Center in their fold again as soon as he reaches San Francisco.

Mr. Center is an estimable gentleman and has many friends in the Islands; and though he was unfortunately led to the royalist side of politics by Claus Spreckels, and was thereby blinded to the real interests of the country and himself, the general public will regret his final departure; and when he may find it well to return, his many friends will be ready and waiting to receive him.

Mr. Hoffacker, the new manager of Spreckelsville, is said to be an experienced business man.

CULLINGS FROM THE COURTS.

Discussion in Several Cases and Probate of Will Filed.

A decision in the matter of the estate of C. Mansole, deceased, was filed this morning. The matter was formerly heard in chambers by a Circuit Judge who admitted the will to probate. The case was appealed, however, to the Circuit Court and the jury returned a verdict for the contesting plaintiff. The case then went to the Supreme Court on several exceptions, the principal one being that contestant, Elizabeth Harvey, had not shown herself to be an heir to the decedent.

In the discussion the exception to overruling the motion to dismiss the appeal is sustained, the verdict set aside, and the case remanded to the Circuit Court, with instructions to dismiss the appeal.

A discussion in the case of The Provisional Government vs. Joseph Caserio, manslaughter, was noted this morning. The defendant was tried at the May term of Court for killing Kaubane, a native policeman, found guilty and sentenced. Before pleading his Counsel, J. A. Magoon, moved to quash the indictment on several grounds. Exception was afterward made, carrying a motion for a new trial. The Court treats the whole matter and ends by saying: "We therefore overrule all the exceptions taken and the motion for a new trial, and it is so ordered."

The will and petition for probate of will of Kahale having been filed, the Court orders and appoints the 17th of August as the day on which it will hear proofs of said will and said application. The papers also contain a petition that Cecil Brown be appointed administrator of the estate of S. Kahale.

In the Tai Wo Chan Company's bankruptcy case, McChesney & Sons have filed objections to the filing of proof of the claims of Lum Kan, et al, against the estate of bankrupt and having a voice in the choice of an assignee. The hearing is set for next Friday, July 20th.

THE FAITHFUL GROW CALLOUS.

Two Peoples' Party Men Show Dis-satisfaction.

Members of the alleged Peoples' Party are growing away from their professed solicitude for the peoples' interest, if the words of two of their officers are to be credited. It is quite true that the reports come from the two officers themselves, and hence must be taken for what they are worth.

The first of these parties is Mr. James Quinn who informs the STAR reporter that he has kicked out of the Vice Presidency of the Club, and will leave himself when the party is fully organized. He supports a part of the principles of the new organization.

Harry Von Werthen, secretary of the Club, also wears a smile of dissatisfaction. Some days ago he gave out that he had refused to subscribe to some oath prescribed by the club. He speaks as if he doubts the possibility of reaching the height of his political ambition through the agency of the party he is now in.

PHILADELPHIA ASHORE.

Two Companies and the Relief Corps Drill at Union Square.

Two companies from the United States flag ship Philadelphia landed for regular shore drill at 9 o'clock this morning. The detachment consisted of the marine corps and four companies of blue jackets. The marine corps was commanded by Captain Cochran, and the companies by Lieutenants Werlich, Maole and Sharp, and Cadet Berry. The flag ship's band and the relief corps were also in attendance.

The march was continued through Queen street and up to Union square where the drill took place. Dress parade, company, battalion, riot, bayonet drills, etc., were gone through with. The American boys acquitted themselves in fine style and their maneuvers were enjoyed by a number of spectators. The return to the ship was made at 10:30 o'clock.

ENDANGERED BODY AND LIFE.

But Brave Ludloff Prevents Chance of a Catastrophe.

The action of mounted patrolman Ludloff in stopping the runaway horse on Queen street last night is considered a brave act and reflects great credit on that patrolman.

The horse, drawing one of Schuman's hacks, was charging down Nuuanu at a break-neck rate, speeding to certain disaster beyond Queen street. Ludloff gave chase, and lassoed the runaway, as the vehicle was crossing Queen street toward the wharf, and threw the animal down.

Unfortunately, however, Ludloff's horse was thrown by a quick turn of the runaway, cutting both knees to the bone, and straining the officer's leg to such an extent that he had to be taken home.

BARK ALLEN'S SURVIVORS.

MEN DRIVEN TO CANNIBALISM IN THE NORTH.

The Ghostly Sight That Met the Eyes of the Rescue Party—Returned Sailors' Story.

When ships strike rocks in Arctic seas the result is won. The whaling bark James Allen, which sailed for the north from San Francisco on the 14th day of last April, ran on an unknown reef at 1:30 o'clock on the morning of May 14th and was wrecked. Five men are known to have been lost. Fifteen are still missing.

The following is the story of the wreck and sufferings of the crew as told by Captain Huntley to the San Francisco Call after the return of the fifteen survivors:

"It was 1 o'clock in the morning. I was on deck directing the course of the bark. The fog was thick and we were traveling a dangerous part of the sea. 'The ship must have drifted on to an unknown rock. She struck and the panic came. Order was restored quickly and the men behaved well.

'Ordered four boats cleared away, which was done. I then told the men to get into them as soon as possible. 'All obeyed with the exception of the fifth mate, who refused to comply. He stuck to the ship and I am certain he must have gone down with her.

'The Allen listed, her stern sank slowly, then with a plunge she disappeared. 'In the darkness the boats were separated, but as morning dawned the craft in which I had embarked came up with two of them. The third boat is the one that is still missing and was in command of Second Mate William F. Allen and manned by fourteen men.

'The sea was rough, so I ordered the two boats to follow mine and I then headed for Anila Island, where we landed and remained until the 16th of May.

'There were twenty-six men in our party all told. Our provisions were very low. We consulted and agreed to put off for Unalaska, a distance of about 130 miles. We left on the afternoon of the 16th.

'Heavy weather came up on the 19th and the wind continued to increase in violence until we were obliged to abandon one of the boats and divide the men among the other two.

'The storm continued through the night, causing great suffering among us. Our hands and feet began to swell, and we could scarcely use the oars or manage a sail.

'On the morning of the 20th my boat capsized, and the crew and myself, number thirteen souls, were thrown into the sea. The remaining boat came quickly to our rescue, but still too late to save the lives of John White, an engineer, and William Fitzgerald, a sailor and a native son of California, G. E. Loy and Frank Murphy, seamen. These poor fellows were all drowned before our eyes.

'On the 21st we landed at Unwak Island, living there from hand to mouth by gathering shellfish and catching cod. Our hooks were made of wire and rendered our angling only partially successful.

'From the day of landing up to the 5th of June six men died of exposure. They were: William Dory, Joseph Penn, Sam Masterson, Austin Gileson, Harry Taylor, and Pat Connelly. All were buried under the sand of the beach.

'On the 5th I selected a crew of five men and started for Onalaska for help. We provisioned our boat with a fresh haul of codfish and several gallons of fresh water, of which there was luckily plenty, and sailed away, arriving with out mishap at Onalaska on the 12th.

'I boarded the Bear and told of the nine men we had left behind. Captain Healy lost no time in getting under way, and on the 14th we arrived back at the island, finding the men alive but just able to crawl about.

'Here the Captain paused and passed his hand across his forehead. Then he continued: "This part of the story I would rather not relate, for I found them in a smoke-brimmed hut, clustered about a pot that was boiling over a fire. That pot contained human flesh."

'The nine sailors in duck uniform told the story of how they were forced to become cannibals better than Captain Huntley could hope to relate it. They repeated their experience without any greater show of remorse, and did not hesitate to unfold the detail of their feast of death.

'William Andrews, foremast hand, acted as spokesman. He is an intelligent blue-eyed man, of not more than 30 years of age, with a pair of badly figured hands that had suffered severely from frost bite.

'After the captain left for Onalaska," continued he, "we used our two remaining fishhooks to catch fish. Our luck varied, and it was difficult for us to depend upon the catch for food.

'Our quarters were in a little dug-out that was hardly large enough to accommodate all. We burned a fire in the center of the abode day and night, but the driftwood we gathered was so water-logged that it smoked fearfully, affecting our eye-sight.

'We had a shotgun and plenty of ammunition, but there was nothing to shoot except seals, and these were so wild that we could not get within range of them. Shellfish then became our food.

'We scoured the island for bivalves and soon exhausted the supply. There was a spring of water close to the dug-out. We almost lived on water. 'Days came and went and still no sign of a rescue party. It rained almost continually, and we were forced to remain under shelter nearly all the time and suffer tortures from the blinding smoke that filled the hut. Our feet and hands were frost-bitten, and our strength was fast leaving us.

'Every green twig or blade of grass that sprouted was ravenously devoured. We would sleep occasionally, but when we did it was only to dream of tables spread with steaming viands and luscious fruits. We would awaken to the dread reality with a shudder.

MEN DRIVEN TO CANNIBALISM IN THE NORTH.

The Ghostly Sight That Met the Eyes of the Rescue Party—Returned Sailors' Story.

When ships strike rocks in Arctic seas the result is won. The whaling bark James Allen, which sailed for the north from San Francisco on the 14th day of last April, ran on an unknown reef at 1:30 o'clock on the morning of May 14th and was wrecked. Five men are known to have been lost. Fifteen are still missing.

The following is the story of the wreck and sufferings of the crew as told by Captain Huntley to the San Francisco Call after the return of the fifteen survivors:

"It was 1 o'clock in the morning. I was on deck directing the course of the bark. The fog was thick and we were traveling a dangerous part of the sea. 'The ship must have drifted on to an unknown rock. She struck and the panic came. Order was restored quickly and the men behaved well.

'Ordered four boats cleared away, which was done. I then told the men to get into them as soon as possible. 'All obeyed with the exception of the fifth mate, who refused to comply. He stuck to the ship and I am certain he must have gone down with her.

'The Allen listed, her stern sank slowly, then with a plunge she disappeared. 'In the darkness the boats were separated, but as morning dawned the craft in which I had embarked came up with two of them. The third boat is the one that is still missing and was in command of Second Mate William F. Allen and manned by fourteen men.
