

MOI WAHINE WAS SENT TO BOTTOM BY THE KUKUI

LAHAINA, MARCH 2, 2:20 P. M., TO THE STAR, HONOLULU.—MOI WAHINE SANK. SEVEN SAILORS DROWNED. CAPTAIN SAM ONLY PERSON SAVED. HE DRIFTED IN ON A PLANK TO AWALUA, LANAI, YESTERDAY P. M. AND HAS JUST ARRIVED AT LAHAINA. WIRELESS.

The following speculations about the fate of the Moi Wahine appeared in the first edition of The Star before the above wireless was received:

"I heard that the Moi Wahine had sunk with all hands," was the sensational message telephoned into The Star office this morning.

Immediately supplementary inquiries were made, but no verification could be had of this, so it is hoped that there is no truth in the statement. The captain of the Kukui, which struck the Moi Wahine at 8:15 on Monday night, smilingly refused to believe that anything so serious had happened to the little vessel. He said she might have had her jibboom broken, or something like that, but he could not believe that she had been injured enough to sink her.

If the blow that she got from the Kukui had been sufficient to sink her, why, he reasons, the Kukui would have been severely dented, instead of which she showed no effects at all from the impact.

The captain of the Kukui maintains that there was no watch being kept on board the Moi Wahine at all. She was certainly burning no lights, and if there was a man at the wheel, then he must have been asleep. The Kukui on the other hand, was burning many high-powered electric lights, and as soon as the collision occurred, she slewed around, and played on the vicinity with her searchlight for an hour and forty minutes, before giving up the search. The skipper is of the opinion that she has run somewhere for repairs, say in the lee of Lanai. If this is the case, then she will not be heard from for a while, as there is no wireless installation on that island. Then again, he says that maybe she has kept right on to Honolulu, Hawaii, the port for which she was bound. If such is the case, then the fact that she has not arrived there does not give ground for any fears, for she would have had to make steamboat time to have got there so soon. Anyway, he declines to think that there is any serious side to the matter at all.

The agents for the Moi Wahine when seen this morning said that they had not received any word from her either, but they take a hopeful view of the matter and think that she is either sheltering for repairs, or has been so little injured that she kept on to Honolulu. They have wireless over to have her arrival reported to them immediately she shows up. They are naturally anxious about her, as there are eight lives aboard. The bright spot in the whole affair is that no word was received from Molokai. If as the captain of the Kukui says, only a ten-knot breeze was blowing at the time, then a boat could have reached the Island of Molokai, and word of misfortune could have been sent to them here.

They also decline to think that possibly the boat sank right away, which would account for the Kukui's crew being able to locate her with the searchlight. They said that they understood that some delay took place in getting the light into play, so it is possible that unless it was an extremely powerful light, the vessel would have been beyond the searcher's vision.

DR. BRINCKERHOFF DIES IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 2.—Dr. Walter Brinckerhoff died today unconscious. Cause unknown.

Geo. P. Castle received the foregoing cablegram this morning. As the news circulated this morning, it was received with sorrow both in medical and lay circles.

Dr. Walter R. Brinckerhoff came here in 1905 under appointment of the United States government as director in charge of the United States Leprosy Investigation station, one of his first concerns in that regard being to look after the preliminaries of establishing a leprosarium on Molokai. Prior to coming to Hawaii he had been conducting leprosy investigations in Manila.

He filled the position of director until 1909, when he resigned and, at his own request, was the same year appointed as assistant director, Dr. Currie having been appointed to the chief place. Dr. Brinckerhoff took out a territorial license to practice medicine on August 5 1909, but a year later left the Territory to become professor of pathology in the medical department of Harvard University, a position he held until his death.

Dr. Brinckerhoff married here in August, 1906, Miss Nellie Mandana White of Winchenden Springs, Mass., a sister of Mrs. James B. Castle of Honolulu. His married joys were destined to be brief, Mrs. Brinckerhoff dying on April 1, 1909, leaving a newborn son with her husband. The child is now staying with his paternal grandmother in Boston.

Many medical literary remains of

Dr. Brinckerhoff evidence his industry of research and production. Among them are the following:

"Leprosy Like Disease of Mus decumanus (rats)," 1906.

"Control of Leprosy by Segregation," 1908.

"The Present Status of the Leprosy Problem in Hawaii," 1908.

"The Reaction of Leprosy to Moro's Percutaneous Test," 1908.

"A Note upon the Possibility of the Mosquito Acting in the Transmission of Leprosy," 1908.

(With Dr. Moore) "Upon the Utility of the Examination of the Nose and the Nasal Secretions for the Detection of Incipient Cases of Leprosy," 1909.

"Work for the Extermination of Rats," 1909.

"On the Control of a Chronic Infectious Disease," 1909.

(With Dr. Wayson) "A Report upon the Treatment of Six Cases of Leprosy with Naline," 1909.

"Leprosy in the United States of America," 1909. This treatise was read by Dr. Currie at the leprosy conference at Bergen, Norway, the same year.

(With Mr. Reinecke) "Statistical Study of an Endemic Focus of Leprosy," 1909.

"Rat Leprosy," 1910.

Doctors Currie, Brinckerhoff and Hollman were the first ones to confirm Mr. Clegg's method of cultivating the bacillus of leprosy artificially outside the human body, a discovery which received worldwide mention last year.

COMMISSION GOVERNMENT AMONG HOUSE BILLS RELATING TO HONOLULU

The matter of making such changes in the act providing for the government of the City and County of Honolulu as will do away with the conflict of authority between the Mayor and the board of supervisors came up this morning in the house as the result of the introduction of a bill on the subject by Representative Castle. This afternoon Representative Long will introduce a second bill on the same subject and a third bill will be fathered by Representative Archer. All tend towards the same purpose, but those brought forward by Long and Archer are for government by commission, though their details differ considerably. The idea of those interested is to offer different solutions of the present tangle and to have a public meeting held at which the various ideas may be submitted for the consideration and discussion of the public.

The bill introduced by Castle is simply a modification of the present law, through which the Mayor will still retain his office and salary, but will simply be the presiding member of the board of supervisors, when it comes

BILL FOR ARMORIES FOR NATIONAL GUARD

A bill providing for a new armory for the National Guard in this city, to cost $125,000, was introduced this morning by Representative Kellinoh and passed its first reading. The bill in addition to this item provides for a further expenditure of $10,000 for an armory at Lahaina, Maui, and concrete storerooms for the armories at Hilo and at Waialuku. The general sentiment of the House seemed favorable to the act but it may be scaled down before final passage.

affray, being too drunk to remember. Kalawala, the woman assaulted, said that the assault took place after both defendants had awakened from a drunken stupor. The woman was fined $5 and costs, but Metcalf, who had previously been convicted for assault, was fined $50 and costs. City and County Attorney Cathcart asked for a substantial sentence, stating that it was only an aggravation of the offence for the defendant to plead that he knew nothing about it. Judge Lymer remembered that such was Metcalf's plea on a former occasion and imposed the fine mentioned.

DEMOCRATS FILIBUSTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2.—The senate took up the question of a tariff board but the Democrats filibustered. A consideration of appropriations then took place and the senate passed the bill of $155,668,000 for pensions and $5,000,000 for fortifications. The diplomatic and consular bill calling for $4,000,000 also passed.

NOMINATION FOR REGISTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 2.—James C. Napier of Tennessee has been nominated for Register of the Treasury.

MORNING CABLE REPORT.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Hope of action on reciprocity has about been abandoned so far as the sixty-first congress is concerned.

In yesterday's session of the senate a fierce debate was waged over the matter of the creation of a tariff board of experts to investigate trade conditions at home and abroad to obtain accurate information upon which future tariff revision might be based. This bill is an administration measure, which has passed the house. The opponents succeeded in staving off the vote this morning and the senate rose without having taken action.

The agricultural bill, carrying an appropriation of seventeen millions, was passed early in the day.

CHICAGO, March 2.—The striking printers on the two Hearst publications here, who went out on Monday, received a severe blow yesterday when orders came from the officers of the International Typographical Union instructing them to go back to work.

THE SITUATION AS TO CHOLERA

There have to date been thirteen cases of the cholera, including eleven deaths.

The latest three cases are those of the Manoia, Kallih and Luzo street incidents, the latter not having previously been reported.

The deceased are Hawaiians. The man who died on Luzo street at one o'clock this morning used to be a road supervisor in Koolau.

There was a meeting of the Board of Health this morning and a regulation was adopted whereby all poi shops will be closed except under certain restrictions. Practically the restrictions are that the taro that is to be made into poi must be taken to the Kallih poi factory, the Waterhouse concern, which will from now on operate under the supervision of an agent of the board of health, and at cost.

The greatest vigilance is being maintained and it is not thought by the Board that the disease will spread to any extent, if the advice of the health authorities is observed, namely: That water be boiled, and that fresh fruit and vegetables and water be avoided—and that poi, unless manufactured under the supervision of the board of health be cut out.

Admiral Cowles Cooperates. Admiral Cowles when seen this morning by a Star representative, stated that he was endeavoring to cooperate with the Board of Health in its efforts to minimize the spread of cholera. With this end in view modified quarantine has been declared. This means that the men have had their leave curtailed, and there will be other things that will have to be observed by them. This modified quarantine the Admiral thought, was sufficient to meet the situation, for he does not think there is any need for alarm over the present outbreak.

LAW REVISION BILL IN HOUSE

One of the important matters which came up in the House this morning was the introduction of a bill providing for a new compilation of the laws of Hawaii, to be known as the Revised Laws of 1912. The Governor is authorized to appoint a commission for this purpose, which shall compile and arrange for the publication of all statutes on the books after the adjournment of the legislative session of 1911. The members of the Code Commission must be attorneys and one may be a judge of the Territorial Supreme Court. The books are to be similar to the present Revised Laws, but with their title in gold-letting and the sum of $10,000 is to be appropriated for the pay of the members of the Code Commission and their clerk hire and other expenses, while $5,000 is named as the figure for printing.

GOVERNOR'S POWER EXCITES CURIOSITY

The Senate this morning had a friendly discussion of House Bill 3 which seeks to make a gubernatorial appointive job vacant when the man holding said job is sick or absent or negligent, or "for other cause."

Upon Chillingworth's motion the matter was left for final action until tomorrow morning, Chillingworth very modestly and without any reason stating that he was unfamiliar with the English language and wanted time to thing over the mysterious "for other cause" idea.

Fairchild was wide awake, as usual, and he didn't like that "other cause" business.

Somebody remarked that it gave the Governor the opportunity of firing a man because he didn't like the look of said man's face. That "somebody" was Fairchild.

The bill was up for the third reading and, after an amendment had been made eliminating the objectionable words "or for other cause," Chillingworth's motion to defer prevailed.

Senator Judd spoke learnedly on the matter from a legal standpoint, showing that the bill did not conflict with the prerogative of the Senate as far as appointments went.

But the motion to defer was sympathetic with the possibility of something "catchy" in the wording of the bill.

Heart and Home Talks

by Barbara McBoyd

A WIFE WITH LITERARY ASPIRATIONS.

An unexpected problem has developed in a hitherto happy home which threatens to disrupt it. Just how to deal with it the husband scarcely knows.

It is strange what things, never anticipated when the marriage vows were taken, will crop up as the years of married life flow on! Without some North Star of absolute duty to guide, how easy it is to slip gradually out of the right course.

In this home the wife has discovered within the last six months that she has literary ability. One day she wrote a story, which she sent to a rather high-class magazine. It was quickly accepted, and with the acceptance came a charming little note from the editor commending her work and asking to see more.

Unfortunately the praise went to her head. She became immediately convinced that she was a genius, and since then home and children have been neglected for her literary labors. What was once a happy home is now disorderly and ill-managed. Her former interests and associates have no attraction for her. She longs only for the company of "high-brows."

The money she makes by her pen is not actually needed. Her husband has a comfortable income and she has always had what she wanted within reason. So that it is not for the money that she is thus working. She gives scant heed to his arguments and pleadings. Privately she rather scorns the fact that he has not a mind above creature comforts. All of which shows rather clearly that this home is drifting toward the rocks.

It will be argued by some that this woman is selfish. But it will be argued by others that she has a right to develop her individuality, and that if she has a talent she ought to use it.

Which is the winning side of the debate?

In all these matters, after all, the solution comes back to the old, old question of right and wrong. It is a straight, straight standard—that of what is purely right. One should set one's conduct up along side of it, and one glance will show where it twists and warps and turns away from this straight rule.

This woman made a solemn promise to do certain things. Nothing has absolved her from this promise. She owes certain duties to her children. Nothing can release her from the performance of these duties. If she falls in any of these things by reason simply of selfish considerations, she is a shirker and a quitter, untrue and unfaithful to her obligations. If she can do her duty by her home, and in addition do this writing, then there is no wrong in it. But her home and its obligations come first.

But, turning aside for a moment from the right and wrong of the matter, and looking ahead to the years to come, what will she gain by her present course? If she were sure that she is a great genius, and that she would write a book that would move the world, she might in the eyes of some, perhaps, be justified in being recalcitrant to her obvious duties. Even this is doubtful. One is rarely called upon by the powers of good to do wrong that right may come.

RESTORING LANDS TO SETTLEMENT.

The President has signed a proclamation eliminating 33,526 acres from the Kern national forest, California. These changes are the result of a careful field examination made by the United States Department of Agriculture in pursuance of a general plan for the correction of all national forest boundaries.

The lands eliminated by this proclamation are a portion of the Owens River valley, and consists of two separate areas, one lying to the north and northeast of Owens lake, and the other extending in a southerly direction from the south end of the lake. The forest boundary as now established follows closely along the base of the foothills on the east slope of the Sierra Nevada range.

The unappropriated portions of the lands eliminated by this proclamation will be restored to settlement and entry after they shall have been advertised in the local papers by the Secretary of the Interior.—Forestry Service Bulletin.

she will be forgotten. In the meantime her husband's and her children's lives may be ruined.

One will say the husband should be man enough to take care of himself, and let his wife's talent develop. Perhaps he should. But the children need a mother's love and training. And in the final count it is better to write living books through the lives of men and women who day by day, by beautiful and happy living, will do good in the world, than to write dead books of paper whose mission for good is doubtful.

The woman who wrecks her home for an uncertain literary career is certainly choosing the less beautiful and less enduring things of life.

Over the Teacups

By Lady Gay

A marriage is one of the most sacred rites in our limited terrestrial existence.

But even solemn as it may seem, especially to the unhappily happy and exceedingly nervous participants, there is often a humorous side to the situation.

One of our young ministers of the community is very popular with all classes of society, and it is on him the following story is told.

It seems there was to be an elaborate wedding in Chinatown, and the pair being of the Christian faith, and holding the aforesaid young minister in the esteem which he deserved, they sent for him.

In grand state then, was he driven to the auspicious house, where an array of carriages and automobiles was in line before the door.

The groom met the minister and, with not a little ceremony, escorted him up a long flight of stairs.

Arriving in the midst of the hubbub, he was seated at a table, where all kinds of delicious viands were served him, and samshu was offered him wherein to drink a toast to the sweet young bride.

Radiating good nature and feeling like a bridegroom himself, the young minister at last exclaimed:

"Now, for the wedding. Bring on your happy pair!"

The ceremony over, more squabs and curried eggs were served, till preparing to depart he said to the groom:

"Now, I must be going, will you attend to my fee?"

"Wait a moment, sir," said the groom. "Don't leave yet. We need your presence to lend dignity to the occasion."

So the young minister had some more squabs and wondered inwardly.

"All this is very fine, but what about my fee?" Finally he could restrain himself no longer and put the thought into words, "My fee! my fee!"

"Yes, indeed," replied the groom, "I'll see to that."

So speaking he returned with a little envelope, which he presented the minister, who, in turn feeling of it, recognized the familiar touch of a dollar and a half-dollar placed together and wrapped up.

Going sullenly home he muttered, "Last time I'll go to Chinatown for a wedding! A dollar and a half! A whole afternoon wasted for a paltry dollar and a half!"

When he reached home the package was torn open.

The coins were gold, one, a twenty-dollar piece, and the other a glistening ten!

Very beautiful was the reception held at Washington Place on Monday afternoon from three to four o'clock in honor of the visiting Shriners and their wives.

About one hundred and fifty guests called. The large reception room was filled with potted palms and ancient royal kahilis, as sacred to monarchical times in these islands, and these in combination with the handsome teakwood divans and couches, inlaid with mother-of-pearls, which characterize the drawing room of the historical mansion created an alluring setting for the receiving party to whom each guest was escorted by Colonel Curtis P. Iaukea.

Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani was seated in a high backed carved Chinese ebony chair over which was thrown a gorgeous yellow feather cape, the royal emblem hers by right of blood and ancestry.

Receiving with her were Princess Kalaniana'ole, Princess Kawananakoa and Mrs. Serepta Gulick. These ladies were gowned simply but elegantly, Princesses Kawananakoa and Kalaniana'ole wearing white lace and linen robes, Queen Liliuokalani wearing a soft silk gown of violet.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Faxon Bishop entertained at a handsome dinner on Monday evening, in honor of Ex-Governor and Mrs. George R. Carter, who have recently returned from a year's sojourn in Europe and a tour of the world.

The dinner appointments were very elaborate, orchids having been chosen to dress the table. A basket of these frail lavender blooms was tied with a butterfly bow of palest blue tulle which fell, veiling the basket, with crumpled, sinuous ends over the lace cloth. Tall silver stands supported candles, whose soft light was in tune with the ensemble glowing through shades of gold.

Monogram guest cards completed the appointments and the resplendent beauty of the table.

The guests were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. R. Carter, Major and Mrs. Samuel W. Dunning of Fort Shafter, Major and Mrs. Edward J. Timberlake of Fort Ruger, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ivers, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Holloway, Mrs. Harry Macfarlane and Mr. Fairchild.

Mr. Stack, a guest at the Moana Hotel, entertained at a very pretty luncheon at the Country Club on Monday afternoon. Covers were arranged for eight.

A dark brown basket filled with gold and brown nasturtiums blossomed into fragrance on the center of the table and flowers and natural foliage were strewn here and there over the cloth.

The guest cards were hand painted scenes in pastel water colors.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. McElwee of the Moana Hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Bibben, Mr. and Mrs. Gilman, Mr. Woon and the host.

A charming pot luncheon was given Monday afternoon at her home on King street by Mrs. George Beckley, in honor of Mrs. Henry Beckley.

The table was carpeted by sprays of lace maidenhair, over which rose a soaring centerpiece of the variegated hibiscus in a riot of colors for which Mrs. Beckley is famed. Leis of crimson carnations and malle were twined into long wreaths, and these were draped over the shoulders of the guests, and worn during the repast and afternoon.

Those present were Mrs. Henry Beckley, Princess Kawananakoa, Princess Kalaniana'ole, Mrs. E. D. Tenney, Mrs. Helen Noonan, Mrs. Frank Woods, Mrs. C. S. Holloway, Mrs. Gussie Schmidt, Miss Juanita Beckley, Mrs. Annie Conrad, and Mrs. Martha Dowsett.

Major and Mrs. Wendell C. Neville entertained at a delightful little dinner party on Tuesday evening.

Covers were arranged for eight, and the table decorations were prettily conceived in tones of gold.

The guests were Captain Lowrey, Commander Campbell of the British cruiser Kent, Captain and Mrs. Arthur Marx, and Lieutenant and Mrs. Pratt.

Invitations have been issued for a luncheon at which Mrs. Charles H. Atherton is entertaining this afternoon.

The most beautiful luncheon of the season was that at which Miss Agnes Walker entertained at her home in Nuuanu Valley on Tuesday for a number of her younger friends.

Covers were arranged for ten guests at an oblong luncheon table, thrilling in its profusion of lavender orchids, tulle and maidenhair. Rustic boxes in which these tender beautiful blossoms grew were placed along the table and banked round solidly by a bewildering display of maidenhair. Long streamers of lavender and green tulle were caught here and there coquettishly and from their restraint of Cupid's bow knots and butterfly bows disappeared over the edge of the handsome table.

The guest cards were in lavender and gold, in dainty orchid design.

The guests were Miss Wilhelmina Tenney, Miss Catherin Goodale, Miss Edith Williams, Miss Bernice Hartwell, Mrs. Clarece Short, Miss Helen Alexander, Miss May Damon, Miss Claire Williams, Miss Beatrice Holdsworth, and Mrs. Arthur Mackintosh.

Very delightful was the musicale at "Overseas," the home of Judge and Mrs. Sydney M. Ballou, at which they entertained on Monday evening, when Mrs. Robbins Mattell Anderson made her debut locally before a number of friends. A quartette of Mr. Benjamin Marx, Mr. Love, Dr. Ramus and Dr. Wall added much pleasure to the evening. Mrs. L. Tenney Peck presiding at the piano.

The program follows:

VIOLIN VIRTUOSO KOCIAN TONIGHT

Honolulu's music public will have the opportunity tonight of listening to the world-renowned violin virtuoso, Kocian, in a specially arranged program. The concert will be given at the Hawaiian Opera House under the direction of W. D. Adams. The presentation of Kocian to Honolulu marks another notch in the series of presentations of some of the most widely known artists, for in the list is Madame Calve, Signor Gasparri, Kubelik, while several bands renowned in the musical world, such as the Besses o' the Barn Band and the Kilties, and in addition several pianists, have been heard by Honolulu audiences, and none of them have disappointed.

Kocian is by far the foremost of his class in the world. He is one of the younger artists but possesses a musical temperament which far excels even that of Kubelik. The concert tonight will be attended by patrons who will occupy almost the entire house, and the young virtuoso will face an audience of proportions equal to that greeted by Madame Calve.

The first number will be played at 8:15 and no one will be seated after the number is commenced.

EARTHQUAKE IN NEW HEBRIDES

The colonial mail brings the following: A serious earthquake occurred at Santo on November 13.

The shock extended south as far as Mallicolo. The occurrence caused a good deal of damage to shipping in the group.

According to some accounts, mountain peaks tumbled off, while on the west coast there was a tidal wave, after which the beach was found to be three feet higher.

No loss of life occurred, but stores owned by Messrs. Kerr and Thomas were wrecked.

The occurrence caused a great deal of excitement among the natives.

A letter from the Rev. D. L. Paterson, of Malo, New Hebrides, says the earthquake on November 9 did a lot of damage. Dr. Annand had never seen anything like it before. "With us," says the letter, "it damaged three tanks, one of them beyond recognition; then our church has been thrown out of plumb by about four inches. In the house we had many things broken. Boathouses were thrown down, and some dwellings were demolished. On Santo over 100 landfalls are visible, and one village on the south coast has been levelled to the ground. A number of the natives are suffering from earthquake sickness."

Another letter states that at Big Bay intermittent earthquakes were in progress for two weeks during November.

Once upon a time, a man who was too economical to take a paper, sent his little boy to borrow the copy taken by his neighbors. In his haste, the boy ran over a four dollar stand of bees, and in ten minutes looked like a watery summer squash.

His cries reached his father, who ran to his assistance, and, failing to see a barb-wire fence, ran into it, breaking it down, cutting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a five-dollar pair of pants.

The old cow took advantage of the gap in the fence, got into the cornfield and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket, his wife ran, upsetting a four-gallon churn full of rich cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole "flock." In her hurry she dropped a seven-dollar set of teeth. The baby, left alone, crawled through the spilled milk into the parlor and ruined a twenty-dollar carpet. During the excitement the oldest daughter ran away with the hired man, the calves got out and the dog broke up eleven sitting hens.

WHY WE REFUSE AID.

The President of the Board of Health, Mr. E. A. Mott-Smith, is reported by the morning paper to oppose the plan of asking such Federal assistance in cleansing the town of cholera as other American and colonial-American cities freely ask for and freely receive.

His reasons are given as follows:

"It is not costing very much and we are fully equipped ourselves to handle the matter. The volunteer assistance we receive is making matters easy and it is, in fact, making local handling of the situation possible.

"I think it would be a mistake to ask for outside help and that purely local control of the situation will be worth real dollars to the Territory."

And so it is fear that "local control" may be taken away! We wish to Heaven it were taken away in all health matters, for then the city would be kept clean "between times" and not merely made clean while in peril and when it is too late to save human lives. For months, while the President of the Board of Health has been absent on other duties, Honolulu has been allowed to become dirtier and dirtier. Under this head the Advertiser, only the other day, reviewed incidents which fairly put the burden of blame for cholera upon the very men who now say they "need no help in suppressing it." Perhaps if luck is with us, it will turn out that they do not, but the lessons of the past are all the other way. The Star cannot learn the exact dimensions of the big sum which was spent in 1895 by the Board of Health to suppress the cholera but it knows what that same Board spent in fighting the bubonic plague in 1899. That sum was two million dollars of local treasury surplus and we burnt three millions of dollars' worth of property besides, on account of which the United States settled claims in the sum of two millions. But we "kept control." We were still able to stay on the salary list.

It will be all right if the Board makes good at once; if it stops the deaths and the outlay and releases the quarantine soon. It will be all right if the cholera does not spread into the plantations, but if it does and things go from bad to worse here, this Administration had better not risk "keeping control" much longer or it may lose that privilege in other things besides sanitation. The people are getting restive over waiting for an antidote from those whose carelessness, indifference or helplessness in public sanitation are responsible for the bane. They are not keen for making expenses. They are quite willing that the money raised here by themselves for a safeguard which is not erected, save partially during epidemics and then at vast cost, should be kept for roads and bridges and public schools instead, while the money of the United States, which is freely given for the sanitation of other tropical and semi-tropical American cities and is always available, should be expended here instead.

There stands the Federal Government, introducing the new Public Health Service, the business of which is to cleanse American cities where maladies exist which threaten commerce, travellers and Federal garrisons and the lives of the people. Here is a port infected with cholera, at a crossroads of commerce, visited by travellers, housing garrisons and surrounded by plantations employing an army of Asiatics disdainingly ready help. It is a port with but a small fund to draw upon, having surrendered the greater part of its public revenues to the United States at the time of annexation, yet a port which declines to ask for the efficient aid to be had for nothing. San Francisco had no hesitancy in seeking Federal money for its rat crusade. Jacksonville, Florida, surrendered its "control" of the yellow fever epidemic gladly enough to Uncle Sam, who drove the disease away. Manila and Havana, lairs of pestilence, let themselves be cared for by the Federal officials who have reduced sanitation to a science. Only Honolulu looks askance at the means of relief which is at once the best and cheapest, and does so because its costly ornament, the Territorial Board of Health, fears to "lose control." It is small solace to those who die that they do so under strictly Territorial auspices even for the benefit of fellow-citizens on the payroll. Some of their surviving friends feel that they might better have lived by accepting the grace of Uncle Sam, even if they had to endure the black looks of dislodged payrollists afterwards.

Uncle Walt The Poet Philosopher

One man who is dismal and grim as a storm, with eyes that are abysmal, disheartens the crowd. I know of a dealer in pickles and olives who lutes a glad spirit on the sight of a grin. He prances the floor on, and scowls at his clerk, and seems to be sore on the emaciated neck. He thinks that good humor is foolish and vain, and carries a tumor instead of a brain. His clerk wouldn't care if they saw him no more; and some day the sheriff will close up his store. His patrons grow weary of such a sour dog; they find things less dreary around at the morgue. I know of a grafter in rags and job-hair, whose jubilant laughter resounds in his lair. His mirth is outrageous, but serving good ends, for it is contagious, and brings him to friends. The salesman who tinker around in his store all day he's a thinker—what man could ask more? I say that your scowling costs more than a grin; and growling and growling are stupid as sin.

LITTLE INTERVIEWS

SENATOR FAIRCHILD—We ought to have a town meeting before March 15 to consider taxation matters.

GEORGE A. DAVIS—If the Federal government can give a better health service than we can and pay the bill, why not let it?

ROBERT CATTON—Why not organize the citizens to clean and inspect the town as they did before and put the Federal authorities, who fully know their business, in charge?

JOHN SMITH—I was told yesterday by a well-known lawyer that there is not now a single Hawaiian engaged in commerce on the island of Oahu. There isn't even a native poi shop.

C. S. DESKY—I have several thousand roses growing in the Kalia valley and they are fine. But it takes a lot of poison to get rid of the pests. I am beginning to know as much about poisons now as a criminal lawyer.

J. LIGHTFOOT—I would suggest that, after dark, distinguishing colored lights be placed on the King street and Emma street cars. Many a King street car is stopped at the corner by someone who wishes to go up Emma street. Time and trouble would be avoided if different-colored lights were used.

RALPH JOHNSTONE—Why don't we get out picture postcards for distribution abroad, showing the busy scenes which were presented in Honolulu's main streets during the visit of the Shriners. I'm not referring to the thousands who lined the highways during the procession, but the everyday scene during their stay in this city. Seems to me there was more shopping and a bigger crowd of local people and visitors than on ordinary occasions.

CAPT. BRAY—I have a theory with regard to the cholera as well as others. A lot of blasting has been done near the Quarantine Island—Rotten Row, as it is called—where all the old hulks have been anchored for years. Some of these hulks have sunk and I think a lot of old copper and poison-saturated wood from those old boats have been the means of poisoning the fish. When you look at the black muck that goes up with each blast, it looks anything but healthy, and the fish have been poisoned by the explosions. The natives have been picking up the fish and eating them. The fish swimming around the wharves have appeared to be stupid and sick. The natives have been fishing all around the different wharves, and I cannot help thinking that the whole trouble is right here, and that the fish have been poisoned. That is where the trouble has come from.

JOHN EFFINGER—The Star has had quite a little to say lately about the plan now being discussed in California to provide for the "recall" of the judges in that State. I think that most thoughtful persons will agree that the measure ought to fail, although there are two sides to the shield. The President carries the "recall" of the judges in the Territories under his hat; that is to say, although the judges in the Territories are appointed for a definite term, the President may remove them at any time, with or without reason. Probably the "recall" scheme would not have found so many adherents in California had it not been for the scandal growing out of the decision of the Supreme Court in granting Alva Starbuck the confessed and convicted grafter, a re-hearing. It must be admitted as rather significant that, as soon as the demand for the enactment of the "recall" measure became somewhat widespread, the Supreme Court vacated its decision giving Starbuck a re-hearing. The bar is largely to blame for the growing lack of confidence in the judiciary. If the lawyers would put aside personal considerations and recommend only the best among them for the bench, a better order of affairs would obtain. In the old days, judges were made out of lawyers; now we make lawyers out of judges. This gives the bench an elementary kindergarten aspect; it should not have.

In similar ways other powers of the Mayor are cut down and placed in the hands of the board. The important section of the Long bill is on the government by commission idea and provides for the amendment of the city and county act in Section 24, as follows: Section 24. The officers of said city and county shall be a Mayor; a board of seven supervisors, of whom the Mayor shall be one, ex-officio; a sheriff, who shall be ex-officio coroner; a city and county clerk, who shall be

CYCLONE JOHNNY THOMPSON CRITICISES AUSTRALIANS

Cyclone Johnny Thompson regards Australian sportsmen with mixed feelings, but he is sincere enough in his criticisms of them to give the referee of the most important bouts lately pulled off in Australia credit for being about the best referee in the game.

"But we have to expect that," said Thompson to the representative of the Star last night. Thompson was a through passenger on the Moana and is on his way to the States, afterwards to join Hugh McLutosh and the contingent of American pugilists now en route to England from Australia.

Thompson had a good deal to say about conditions generally in Australia and the results of the trip as it affected him personally. He fought seven fights, won six of them, and he declared he was robbed out of the decision in the seventh fight, that with Dave Smith, the conqueror of Billy Papke. In this bout, which went the full twenty rounds, Thompson declares he didn't get a fair deal.

Thompson's battles were as follows: Beat W. Unholz, six rounds; beat Hughie Mehegan, five rounds; beat Tim Land, 20 rounds; beat Jerry Jerome (colored), three rounds; beat Tim Land, three rounds; lost on decision to Dave Smith, 20 rounds; beat Billy Papke on points, 20 rounds.

Thompson made good with the Australian fans; in fact, he does not think there was one of the visiting Americans who was as popular as he was, and he is looking forward to the time when he can get back to the Commonwealth again. He credits the Australians with being able to promote a fight, but was surprised to find they do not advertise the fights extensively.

Thompson does not think that Dave Smith could ever make the middleweight limit, and in support of this he declares that Smith had to work very hard to make 165 pounds to meet Papke. When Smith fought Thompson he tipped the beam at about 176, says Thompson, who was thus giving away 25 pounds. Thompson points to his defeat of Papke with keen relish, and is confident that he could stack up against Smith creditably again.

Thompson doesn't understand the Australian sports. He found that the Australians did not take the American fighters on trust at all. "We had to make good seven or eight times before they would give us any credit," he said, "but once we were taken up by them we were all right. They are sticklers for the men they like. But you have to make good first," he added.

Tim Land and Hughie Mehegan impressed Thompson favorably; both would make good in the States, he thinks.

CHAMPION RUNNER KING-KAOO DUE THIS MONTH

Jimmie Fitzgerald, the Irish-Canadian runner, who is now in New Zealand, will arrive in Honolulu on March 28 by the Canadian-Australian steamer Makura, according to advices received by Jack Scully this morning. Fitzgerald is one of the world's speediest runners over the fifteen-mile course, being undefeated at that distance, and he also holds the one and five miles championships of Australia. He is coming to Honolulu to race Soldier J. B. King, Antone Kaoo, Tsukamoto and whoever else there is in the Territory capable of giving him a good race.

"As I did not get any news from you by the 8th Inst., I, of course, concluded that there was nothing doing in Honolulu and left Sydney for New Zealand to make some races here and when your cable was sent to me I was fairly in a fix, as it was too late to catch the Moana for one thing and for another I had practically arranged to run here against a fellow named Ornstein, champion of New Zealand over ten miles."

This explains why Fitzgerald could not come as expected on the Moana, and he goes on to state, in his letter to Scully, that he can come by the Makura and race here just as soon as required, suggesting, however, that he be allowed a fortnight to get into trim.

The letter is satisfactory to Scully and he will now discuss the proposition finally with Soldier King and a cable to Fitzgerald will be dispatched within the course of the next few days. At the time of writing everything seems to be in line for Fitzgerald to arrive at the end of the present month and race King early in April. The matter is entirely in the hands of Jack Scully and King, and both are keen on getting Fitzgerald here. King has already run against Fitzgerald and he is anxious to have another contest with him, as he thinks he can down the Irish-Canadian champion over a ten-mile route. Fitzgerald will probably meet King in a ten-mile match race and afterwards King, Kaoo and Tsukamoto in a fifteen or twenty-mile event. The races ought to be more attractive from a sporting point of view than any we have ever had in these islands. Fitzgerald has a world-wide record and he has been running splendidly in Australia.

KING-KAOO RACE PENDING

Owing to the fact that Antone Kaoo was out of town on Tuesday night the meeting arranged between King, Kaoo, Tsukamoto's representative, and the manager of the Athletic Park did not take place. So far no definite arrangements have been made as to the next race in which King or Kaoo will participate, though it was given out that a twenty-mile race was decided upon and then that a fifteen mile event was to be run.

As the matter stands at the moment, according to Soldier King, the three runners are to meet at a luau on Saturday at Waiialua and will then come to some understanding as to the distance to be run and the date. It is expected that fifteen miles will be set as the distance, though over this distance there are few who will give the Waiialua Horse a chance. Tsukamoto has friends who claim he can beat Kaoo over that distance, and they are willing to back their opinion. There are a couple of other runners who are likely to enter the race, says King, so that general interest may be excited by the event. Still on King's running a 15-mile race looks like a gift to him.

King wants to run on March 12th, so as to have plenty of time to train to meet Fitzgerald, but it is probable that a later date will be chosen. A definite announcement may be expected on Monday next.

SPORT NOTES

The Oahu College doubles tennis tournament will conclude this afternoon on Alexander Field, the final match being between Wm. Hitchcock and Cyril Hoogs and Edwin Paty and Oswald Hind. The game is expected to be a very interesting one. The skill shown by Gibb and Hind in the semifinal match against Wm. Paty and Ran Hitchcock stamps that double as a really fine combination, but in defeating Atherton Richards (holder of the singles' cup) and Wm. Morgan, the Hitchcock-Hoogs pair put up a performance of real merit. This semifinal went the full five sets, Hitchcock-Hoogs winning 8-6, 2-6, 7-5, 6-8, 6-2. The other semifinal was won 6-1, 6-3, 6-1.

The field events which were to have taken place at the Kanehameha School last Saturday will be held on Friday afternoon next. These events will conclude the preliminary meet and after that the team for the meet against the Oahu College on the 11th inst. will be chosen.

The sporting writer of the morning paper has discovered that the Wall cup competition will commence on March 4, as announced by The Star, and in which announcement exception was taken.

TENNIS TOPICS

Maurice McLoughlin, the holder of the Virginia cup, playing in the tennis trials at Long Beach on February 15, defeated Tom Bundy, the challenger, in straight sets. Score, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

In the semifinals of the men's doubles McLoughlin and Sinsabough defeated Bacon and Young 5-7, 12-11, 6-15.

In the semifinals of the mixed doubles Hazel Hotchkiss and McLoughlin defeated Mrs. E. O. Bruce and Young, 6-2, 6-1. In the other frame May Sutton and Tom Bundy defeated Florence Sutton and Sinsabough, 6-1, 9-7.

Before a throng of tennis fans Miss Hazel Hotchkiss of Berkeley displayed her skill at 10-sets at Long Beach on the 15th.

Although slightly off form, not having spent as much time on the courts lately as has been her custom, she easily defeated Mrs. Whitson by a score of 6-2, 6-1. Her strokes were freer and surer than when she last played here, and her meeting with May Sutton should attract a fine crowd, for a brilliant exhibition is sure to result.

Miss Hotchkiss has added some new strokes to her repertoire in the form of a straight drive and smash, and has perfected her cut strokes and backhand slice.

With Maurice McLoughlin, she administered another defeat to Mrs. Whitson, who played with Alphonse Bell, taking the sets by a score of 6-2, 6-3. It would be hard to find a pair of mixed doubles better than the two San Francisco players, although some of the experts are predicting that Tom Bundy and May Sutton will defeat them.

T. R. Pell won the national indoor single tennis championship at New York on February 18 on the courts of the Seventh regiment armory, defeating William B. Cragin Jr. by a score of 6-2, 6-3, 6-3. The victory gives Pell permanent possession of the Seventh regiment challenge cup.

THE POINT OF VIEW.

The Eastern man looked at the driver of the stage which was to land him near the Top-Notch mine, and found him an interesting specimen in many ways.

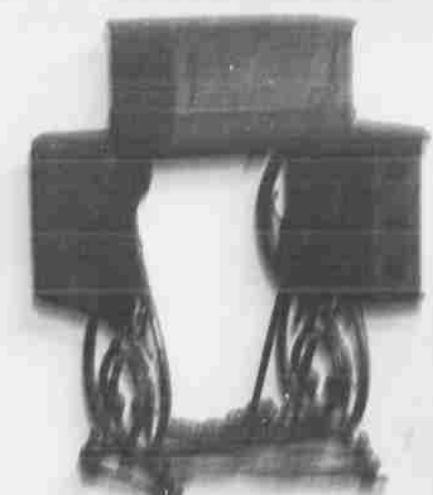

"But I didn't let him suspect I intend to use him for material," he thought.

"I suppose there are a great many queer people about here," he said with caution a moment later. "You must have a good chance to see them."

"The best there is," returned the stage driver. "As I said to Sam Barker the other day, if one of us knew how to write stories all we'd have to do for characters would be to take 'em from the folks that land here when the train from back East comes in."

Haleiwa holds the palm for every meet. HOW ABOUT ICE? Editor Star:—I would like to know how many of the ice companies in Honolulu are having their ice made from distilled water. This is a question that all will be interested in, for in water, disease germs lurk, and although they are frozen, the heat of the body would warm them back to life, thus enabling them to commit their dreadful ravages. Now, this is a serious question, for many people use ice just exactly as they get it from the makers, so unless it is made from distilled or absolutely pure water, there is great danger in its free use. I think that this is a matter that the Board of Health should see to, as I am afraid that failure to look to this might mean the spread of the infection. C. H. W.

THE LAHAINALUNA CLAIM. The Senate Judiciary Committee made report this morning on House Bill 14, to pay $15,000 to F. J. Lowrey, G. P. Castle and W. O. It is the claim of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions to Lahainaluna, on a land claim, alleging a breach by the Territory of an agreement made in 1849 between the Kingdom of Hawaii and the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. The bill passed second reading.

Owing to the fact that the British man-of-war Kent leaves tomorrow it has been found impossible to arrange the association football match between a team of the Hawaiian Association League players and the "White Horses" as the Kent team is known among naval teams. This morning Secretary Gray visited the man-of-war and though the project was warmly welcomed the early departure of the boat prohibited the match from being played. Lieut. Napier declared that on the return of the Kent in June such a match would be welcomed.

NATIVE FOOD AND CHOLERA. Mrs. Kimira M. Johnson, a well known and respected Hawaiian woman, has some interesting things to say about the cholera regulations.

"It is easy to make poi safe enough at home by boiling the water with which it is prepared, but how about the fish entrails which so many Hawaiians eat? They take the insides of four kinds of fish, akule, kapakapa, ahi and opelu, and put them in a bowl with a lot of chili peppers. This mixture is kept for two or three weeks at a time and used as a sauce for flavoring other dishes. But you can see for yourself that this mixture is not good in cholera times and that the eating of it and of raw shellfish picked up on the beach is a good deal more dangerous than eating poi."

HOUSE TAKES UP POI QUESTION

The health committee made a report at the afternoon session of the house to the effect that the poi factories and shops had been closed by the board of health on account of their unclean condition and the discovery of a cholera patient in close proximity to a poi shop which he had previously visited. It is also stated that the board of health had taken charge of the Kulihi factory and would deliver poi from raw materials at cost. This action was the part of the board of health was highly commended and after a short discussion the report was adopted by a unanimous vote.

When the House of Representatives adjourned at noon today a number of the members were awaited by a group of their constituents, who demanded that something be done to allow them to obtain poi. The matter had already come up in the House through a resolution introduced by Representative Sheldon, demanding an investigation of the cutting off of the Hawaiian food supply. A slight fight developed over the final passage of Senate Bill No. 25, appropriating the sum of $2,000 for the publication of the decisions of the United States District Court, but it was passed. U. S. HEALTH OFFICER TELLS HOW TO PREVENT THE CHOLERA

Dr. Carl Ramon, at the head of the United States Public Health and Marine-Hospital Service, yesterday gave a Star reporter an interesting and important talk on what should be done by the people of Honolulu as a precaution against the cholera.

He said, Dr. Ramon, who is doing all in his power, together with Territorial authorities, to prevent the spread of the disease, makes public the following advice:

"It is advised to drink only bottled water. As a precaution the Superintendent of Public Works has issued orders for the use of arsenic water as a preservative against cholera. It is a safe drink to people who use alcoholic beverages, since it is sterile. Some folks appear to think that water taken after a drink of whiskey is rendered safe by the whiskey. Well, a little water actually mixed with the whiskey before drinking might be attended that way, but water is one of the sources of danger unless it is at least boiled.

"The use of vegetables of fruits raised in this city should be eaten. There is no danger of contamination from any source. It may have fallen to the ground and have been taken there from instead of being taken directly from the tree. Thoroughly washed vegetables are all right. Absolutely sterile raw should be eaten.

"Fish is particularly dangerous when coming from waters about infected districts, and it is a wise precaution to prohibit the use of fish caught in the waters from or near, between Diamond Head and Kaula, located in Honolulu.

"The cause of cholera so far have been traced to Hawaii, and those living in the Kakaako district just the sea, and it is a well known fact that the Hawaiians eat a great deal of raw fish, shell fish and fruit or vegetables. This should be absolutely prohibited, as there is grave danger therefrom. Patients should watch this matter carefully and anybody caught collecting from or selling fish for eating fish between the Kaula and Diamond Head should be reported and made to suffer. The prohibition is for great to allow any fish, and the most careful watch and thorough policing is necessary.

"The newspapers can accomplish a great deal of good by making public those precautions which should be taken, those things which should not be eaten and what should be done in the way of cleaning up the city. Those cautions should be printed in the newspapers of every language used here. The papers can do an immense amount of good to help prevent the spread of this disease by teaching the ignorant.

"In refraining from the eating of Honolulu-grown fruit, I might say that the banana is likely the least harmful, for it is a high grower and is protected somewhat by its peel. The pineapple is not a safe fruit in cholera, unless the pineapple be canned, which means that it has been sterilized. If you buy pineapples in Honolulu you have no means of being sure whether they were grown in Wahiawa or in the infected district of Honolulu proper.

"Superintendent Rath of the Palms Settlement said a good word when he drew attention to the disgraceful garbage conditions in Palms. The city must be cleaned and must be kept clean. Nothing should prevent a sustained cleaning up of garbage, whether it be politics or lack of funds or because some people don't pay for the removal of their garbage. It should be removed under any consideration. The fishmarket should be closely watched to see that no fish from the harbor or between Diamond Head or Kaula are sold.

"Fish is one of the greatest opportunities for the spread of cholera on account of the infection through the water used or through the containers in which the fish is delivered. The proposition of the Waterhouse Kaula pot factory to hand their plant over to constant Board of Health supervision is a good one, but a lot of the small places where fish is manufactured and which cannot well be watched, should be closed down.

"Education is the most important matter. The people have to be taught to keep clean and not to eat foods likely to spread the disease. Where they will not use common sense they should be forced to obey the regulations."

To Have Magistrates Appointed by the Boards of Supervisors

Representative Sheldon of Kaula wants to have district magistrates appointed by the boards of supervisors of the respective counties. They are now appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. On the face of it, the Kaula man's bill on the subject looks radical in the last degree short of having the small judiciary made elective by popular vote. Yet Governor Frear, a former U. S. judge, says the measure probably arises from Chief Justice Hartwell's recommendation that a return be made to the appointment of the district magistracy by the Governor.

Sheldon's bill introduced yesterday afternoon provides that every magistrate shall have passed an examination for admission to practice in the district courts. As the "woods are full" of such petty practitioners, there will at any rate be no lack of material for the magistracy bench.

A term of two years, as at present, is given their honors, provided, however, that any of them may be summarily removed from office whenever the Board of Supervisors "shall deem such removal necessary for the public good."

Governor Frear was asked by a Star

"CHINESE WOMEN NOT RESTRICTED," SAYS FEMALE DOCTOR FROM CHINA

Out of China, the land of woman's bondage, the land where the bound and maimed foot is a symbol of woman's restricted sphere, there came to America last week Dr. Yanel Kin.

Dr. Kin is a woman. She admits that she is a progressive. And yet all that she wants to take from the West back to her native land is technical knowledge and that fraternal philanthropy which is usually spoken of as "social service."

Talk with this quiet-voiced, shrewd-eyed little woman and you soon learn to your surprise that in reality China is not a land of woman's bondage; you learn that Dr. Kin does not envy the position that women hold in America, still less does she sympathize with the ambitions of the "progressive" American and English women.

You could never imagine Dr. Kin—this "progressive" Chinese woman—making a cart-tail speech, peddling suffragette broadsides in city streets or threatening to ruin by rowdiness an English coronation. "In China medical knowledge is centuries behind the times. Infant mortality there is about 50 per cent," said Dr. Kin to a Ledger reporter in New York last week. She has charge of the women's hospital work for Northern China, of the Imperial Infant Asylum in Tien-tsin, the Widows' Home, and the Girls' Refuge. She has seen her work and taken hold of it manfully. In this is her progressiveness.

Dr. Kin was born in Ningpo, a city situated about a hundred miles from Shanghai. Both her parents died when she was very young, and she was practically adopted by a missionary doctor and his wife. When she was five years old she came with them to this country on a year's visit. It was very likely this early visit which accounts for the doctor's excellent pronunciation of English. She talks without the slightest foreign accent. It is only her soft-keyed, well-modulated voice that would cause a casual listener to turn in curiosity.

After the year in America she returned to her native country. When she was nine years old she went to Japan and remained there for five years. During that time she saw the Suva Herald: Captain D. Calder returned to Fiji in the steamer Suva, and is accompanied by Mrs. and Miss Calder. Whilst in Sydney the skipper made extensive enquiries into the banana trade. An endeavor is being made in Melbourne to foster the Queensland banana trade, but he thinks Fiji has very little to fear from that quarter. The bananas are very poor, miserable specimens, and are hawked round Sydney at 3d per dozen.

THE WORLD OF THE PACIFIC

The Chinese fruit merchants say that it cannot compare with the Fiji product, and will put their money in this Colony's plantations in preference to Sydney. The Solomon Islands Development Co., Ltd., of which Burns, Philp & Co., Ltd., are the principal people, are planting up bananas in those islands. They sent a shipment of fine Gros Michel bananas from the Solomons recently, and 300 bunches in the lot realized 14s per bunch. Mr. Joyce, formerly with the Fiji Banana Syndicate, had been in the Solomons for six months under engagement to the Company, instructing the growers in the mode of cultivation, especially with regard to cleaning the bunches with the powder. Mr. Joyce had purchased 50 acres at 2s per acre, and when Captain Calder saw him in Sydney he stated his intention to return and plant it up with bananas. The voyage from the Solomons to Sydney occupies eight days and the fruit is carried in ordinary cargo boats. Captain Calder informs us that he went all over his company's new steamer, the Levuka, and cannot praise her too highly. He had office informed him that she would be put on the Fiji trade as soon as there was sufficient cargo to pay expenses. He thinks that she will be in Fiji waters in April next.

MASSACRE BY NATIVES. West Pacific Herald: The German Government yacht Dolphin, which came from Rabaul to Brisbane for general overhaul, was towed in tonight, and brought news that recently the natives on Rye Coast, New Guinea, between Friedrichs Wilhelmshaven and Stehenhaven, attacked a trading station, murdering some native boys. Native troops with marine guns destroyed the villages, the natives having fled on the approach of the punitive expedition.

ONE BILL TAKEN, THE OTHER LEFT

Representative Fowles made a name for himself yesterday afternoon for his bill to facilitate the requirement of private property for public purposes. He was introduced on the floor by Atkinson and supported by Sheldon and Kaula. It is an important bill, and it is a well known fact that the Hawaiians eat a great deal of raw fish, shell fish and fruit or vegetables. This should be absolutely prohibited, as there is grave danger therefrom. Patients should watch this matter carefully and anybody caught collecting from or selling fish for eating fish between the Kaula and Diamond Head should be reported and made to suffer. The prohibition is for great to allow any fish, and the most careful watch and thorough policing is necessary.

PRINTED RULES AGAINST CHOLERA

Rev. W. B. Westervelt thinks that printed rules of what to do in cholera times should be prepared in the current languages here. In discussing the matter Mr. Westervelt said:

"My idea is simply this: Dr. Curry, who is one of the best informed of anyone, and is a splendid physician, might draw up a simple set of rules which any poor family could observe. Have them printed for distribution among the people of the public schools, and then they could be taken home to the parents. They should be printed in English, Hawaiian, Portuguese and possibly in Chinese and Japanese. Now, funds could very easily be raised for paying for that.

"The idea is to tell the public what to do in these cases—a leaflet would be sufficient. Every home would thus be provided with a simple set of rules with regard to the boiling of water, eating cooked food, etc. This is just a suggestion that the physician could follow.

"The money could be arranged right off. With very little cost the whole thing could be put through. Let it be taken up as a public matter. The money would be paid by two or three people. Take an average of 300 or 400 to each school, there would be only necessary to print about 3000 leaflets. Print plenty of them because the expense would be very light."

RHINOCEROS BEETLES. TUBERCULOSIS IN HERDS.

Samoanische Zeitung: It is reported that the supply of Rhinoceros Beetles is now very small, and few people are encouraged to look for them. It is entirely certain that even if there is one pair of beetles left, these will breed perhaps thousands more, and put us to very heavy charges. Would it not now be a good time to once more raise the purchasing price of beetles, so as to encourage very strict search? If we could buy the last pair of beetles for $1, 10,000 we could consider them cheaply bought.

Western Pacific Herald: At the Session of the Congress in Sydney on the 12th inst. Professor Stewart read a paper on the "Prevalence of Tuberculosis in Dairy Herds." He said that the ordinary exposure of milk to a temperature of 100 degrees Fahrenheit was not Pasteurization, but merely a com-

SOLONS SEND HOME FOR POL

Before the session of the legislature commenced this morning the one subject of interest was the restrictions placed on the manufacture of pol by the board of health and in several cases members from the outside islands sent wireless messages to their homes with instructions to send down a good supply at once. Speaker Holstein was among those to follow this course and when the Mauna Kea arrives on Saturday morning he will be the proud and happy owner of a full supply of the principal article of diet of Hawaii.

It would be a good thing if some simple directions were published in the Samoan language and hung up conspicuously in the Paletete's, so that in an event of this sort the people would know what to do to come best out of their troubles.

LINCOLN AS REID KNEW HIM. He was not "perpetually telling his mousie and sometimes risqué stories in the White House," he had no such conception of the duties of a statesman in exalted position and in a time of extreme peril. On the contrary, he probably told fewer stories during his whole stay in the White House than in any previous year of his adult life, and for every one he did tell a hundred poorer and coarser ones were fathered on him. Now did his stories call for the unctuous and superfluous excuse that they afforded him a needed relief from the sadness of the time. No doubt he was sad in the White House, but he had been sad all his life. The wit and humor with which his stories overflowed was an essential part of his

BILL TO HOIST PAY OF JURORS

A second bill for this session to raise the pay of jurors to three dollars a day, and count all the time except on Sunday they are absent from their homes, was introduced in the House by Makekau. It further allows to jurors mileage of five cents a mile going and coming.

His melancholy, his ready sympathies or his ambition. He had no dissipations and no other amusements; instead of those he told stories, from boyhood to admiring comrades. He told them uncommonly well, and in public they always illustrated his argument and helped him carry his point. Nothing, for instance, could have made plainer his view about the unfitness of the Free Soldiers to assume the place of a great national party and, with their one idea, undertake the complex duties of carrying on the government of the country than his story, at Worcester, Mass., as early as 1845, about the Yankee peddler who had but one pair of trousers in his stock and commented it to every customer as "large enough to fit any man—and small enough to fit any boy."

CANE SAVED FROM INSECTS BY STARLING

The following correspondence appears in the paper at Apia: To the Editor of the Samoanische Zeitung. Sir:—The two subjects principally interesting the public at the present time are those of the rhinoceros beetle and the cane canker disease. The latter has been exhaustively treated by Dr. Gehrman, who recently left for Europe, in lectures and articles which have appeared in your valuable columns. The former has been well taken in hand by the Government so far with the greatest success, for which it deserves our best thanks. In your last issue a most instructive letter regarding the keeping of this pest appeared from the pen of Mr. Mason Mitchell, the American consul. Probably further information on the point will come to us presently from Mr. Woodford, the British Resident at the Solomon Islands, where, Mr. Mahaffy stated, (when lately passing through this group) his efforts, respecting the extermination of the beetle, have been singularly fortunate. My own opinion is that it would be a good plan to introduce here, of course in large numbers, insect-destroying birds. For in Fiji, where certain insects were ruining the sugar cane, just as they have been doing here for many months past (at present, on this account, so that can be got here for love or money) the introduction of that useful member of the feathered tribe, the starling, completely did away with that evil in Fiji. In fact, I am informed that the Government there imposes a fine of £1 on any person who destroys a bird of this species on each bird shot. But the general opinion seems to be opposed to such a measure, and perhaps, according to the old proverb, "vox populi est vox Dei." The planting of shade trees along the main street is progressing; a meeting of the Verkehrsverein will be held in a few days to further this in an active way. It is generally supposed that at the end of March the duties on general merchandise imports will be increased from 10 per cent to 12 1/2 per cent on the invoice value. This, no doubt, considering the many expenses to which the Government is subject at the present time, is wise; indeed, some persons think that a duty of 15 per cent, or even 20 per cent on imports will be ultimately necessary. Yours, etc. SPECTATOR.

BLIND BOY PRIZE SCHOLAR.

City Superintendent Maxwell of New York announced recently that the prize graduate of public school 29 was a blind boy, William Schenck, 14 years old. The examinations for the graduation which is to take place next week have been completed, and the work done by the Schenck boy has been so remarkable that it has attracted the attention of the school authorities. Public school 29 is at Rivington and Forsyth streets. The principal is I. E. Goldwasser. Several years ago Superintendent Maxwell organized a class for blind children there under the supervision of Miss Blingham, Miss Burns, the teacher, made use of the Braille system of raised characters in teaching the blind.

The Schenck boy entered the school in October, 1909, before the city had organized its school for the blind. He showed marked ability from the beginning. Being admitted to the 4B grade on his entrance, he made rapid progress up to 8B, the graduating class. He achieved the honor of being No. 1 in the graduating class, beating out the boys and girls who are not blind.

Not only does young Schenck stand at the head of the graduates of this particular school, but he won a greater distinction in competition with the pupils of all the public schools that comprise school districts 5 and 7. This was a competition in English literature. Master Schenck obtained 92.7 per cent for the examination. The manner in which the examination was conducted was: Miss Horn would read the questions, and Schenck would immediately write his answers on the typewriter. He had no chance to correct or revise. The typewriter was the ordinary machine used by those who can see the keyboard. The blind pupils in school 29 live in various parts of the city, and are not confined to a school district, as in the case with the other pupils.—New York Sun.

THE KINGDOM OF DUST.
Vast is the kingdom of dust! Unlike terrestrial kingdoms, it knows no limits. No oceans mark its boundaries, no mountains hem it in. No parallels of latitude and longitude define its boundless area, nor can the farthermost stars in the infinitudes of space serve other than as twinkling outposts of a kingdom as vast as the universe itself. And what shall we say as to the component subjects of this kingdom? In number, form and variety, they transcend all conceptions of the human mind. In shape, they comprise every possible form. In position, they include every substance that is material. In condition, they are solid, liquid, vaporous and gaseous. They are with us in the quiet seclusion of our homes, in the busy streets and marts of commerce, on the sunlit crests of the snowy Himalayas, out on the silent prairies, mingled with the desert's shifting sands, amid the ice of the frozen Arctic. They fall as ambassadors from space on the clouds of canvas—the wings of the flying ships, thousands of miles from land. They come to us enshrined in the beautiful snow crystals, and every drop of rain carries with it from the upper reaches of the atmosphere some of these tiny subjects of the mighty kingdom of dust. Dust would not be possible were it not for the fact that matter is almost infinitely divisible. It has been estimated that an average puff of smoke from a cigarette contains about four thousand millions of particles of dust. A single grain of indigo will give color to a ton of water; of course, every drop of this water must contain an immense number of ultra-microscopic particles of indigo. A few grains of fluorescein, a substance derived from coal tar, will produce a distinct fluorescence, shining with a yellowish green light when strongly illuminated, in a hundred tons of water.

AT THE THEATERS

TWO COMEDIES AT THE BIJOU.
Tonight starts an entirely new show at the Bijou. The Columbians are going to put on two sketches which will surpass most enthusiastic dreams in the way of fun. A farce comedy, entitled "Winning a Girl" will get just rippable first of all, and then will come "The Wax Doll," in which beautiful Claire Miller will be the star. Claire in this part is delightful to an extreme. Such a doll never deceived the kiddies or made the old folks laugh before. Then her pianistic performance is such as to bring down the house. She plays her own accompaniment to some choice vocal selections. All the Columbians will appear in these two big stunts tonight.—Mr. and Mrs. Caro Miller, a handsome and artistic couple, the one tall and stately, the other chic and charming, and Claire and Ruth and captivating Mary Lynn and Lew Pistol and Tom Monte. You can't beat the combination. All moving pictures are new tonight.

PERCY HUNTER IN "MOVING TALK"

Percy Hunter made a success last night of his running conversational description of Australian scenes as they were shot on the screen at the Empire theater. He put on a film showing scenes in many places of importance and interest in the big southern continent. His talk, explanatory of the pictures, while the film lasted, was intensely interesting. He will repeat this feature tonight at the Empire. Other-wise everything at the Empire this evening will be new. There will be new pictures. Dulliver and Rogers will entertain in entirely new melodious and terpsichorean feats. Walsor and Walsor will put on new laughable and exciting turns.

ONE MORE WEEK OF THE DORIC.

One week more and the Doric Trio will chase themselves to San Francisco, much to the regret of all Honolulu. These young men have won more friends here than they like to leave. Not only have they gained admiration for their unusually excellent singing and the general attractiveness of their stunts, but they have come to be an institution that Honolulu people hate to part with. Winnie Haldwin is also going to kick her tootles and warble her voice a bit. New pictures throughout on the moving line at the Bijou. To produce this result, the sunbeams must be divided into countless billions of particles. Every conceivable substance enters into the composition of dust. In street dust may be found bits of iron and steel from the tires of wagons, horse shoes, and the nails of our own shoes; bits of leather from harness, fragments of wood, cotton, silk, stone, gold, silver, clothing, hair, animal excreta, various ores, tin, paper, clay, sand, molds, bacteria, and last, everything under the sun.—J. Gordon Duffin, Ph.D., in the March number of Popular Mechanics Magazine.

CHINESE WOMEN

and good in the civilizations of the Caucasians.

"Oh, yes," said Dr. Kim, in answer to the reporter's expressed surprise, "I wear the Chinese dress, even here in America. But you will notice that it is not the dress of old China. All our institutions, all our customs, are undergoing a transition. The example of the West is having a tremendous effect. What I fear is that China will go too far in its adoption of these foreign ideas. Take this subject of dress, for instance. Women's clothes formerly were very flowing, very cumbersome, very much ornamented by rich embroidery.

"In the American and European shops that deal in oriental goods the Caucasian boys these ornamented gowns, but he or she is simply buying our cast-off clothes. Excepting the actors on the stage, no one in China now wears them. Our gowns are severely plain. The only ornamentation allowed are passementeries.

"The full sleeves and the ample folds in the skirt have also been discarded. We have learned a lesson in simplicity from the West, but as pupils we have been almost too apt. We have carried the simplicity so far that it has become a nuisance. The extreme tightness is simply painful; one can hardly bend her elbow.

"No," said the doctor, laughing, "we haven't imitated the hobble skirt. We were really ahead of the hobble. This style of straight, close-fitting dresses has been the fashion in China for some five or six years. It was simply the result of our desire to attain simplicity.

"What I fear is that the Chinese women will do as so many of the Japanese women have done—adopt Western clothes. Now, the Japanese woman in her kimono and obi makes a picture to delight the eye. But when she puts on a European waist and skirt she becomes—"

Dr. Kim gave a little deprecatory shrug of the shoulders which spoke condensed volumes.

"Some Chinese shoemakers are now announcing on their sign boards that they make American shoes. But you ought to see them." Again that deprecatory shrug. "Such awful shapes! But the craze for foreign things is so strong that some people actually wear them."

And that, of course, suggested to the reporter a question about the prevalence of foot-binding.

"I'm sorry that I must admit that there is still a great deal of it done. But the old, cast-iron convention has been broken. You know that it was only a few years ago that every Chinese woman of any social standing had to have those abnormally small feet. At the present time it is the conservatives—who, of course, are in the majority—who have the bound foot. Those who are keenest to take up the very latest are allowing their feet to retain their natural size. With this start, I have every expectation that foot-binding will become a thing of the past in China.

"Just one more word on fashions. The style of hair dressing has changed wonderfully, and this is one of the changes of which I thoroughly approve. Formerly hair-dressing was a formidable operation. The hair had to be oiled and combed and brushed and woven into wonderful structures. Now the women give it a brush and a comb and the coiffure is done. It's the modern idea—to save time.

"But you know," continued Dr. Kim, "on this matter of Chinese fashions there is a tremendous deal of misunderstanding in Europe and America. Foreigners speak of China as the land of unchanging fashion. That's all nonsense. Our fashions have changed through the years just as yours have changed. Show an old costume to a Chinaman well versed in the history of his country and he can tell you to what dynasty it belonged.

"And so, too, there is a great deal of misunderstanding as to the condition of woman in China. As a matter of fact women are allowed a great deal of liberty. Technically speaking the law allows a man to sell his daughter or even his wife. But the whole sentiment of the country is against it. "But it is all nonsense to say that China has kept her women in ignorance. China has always been proud to have her women educated. For centuries and centuries we have had women scholars, artists, and poets.

"Take the late Empress Dowager. She could run over a batch of dispatches, dictate replies, handle the domestic and foreign affairs of an Empire, and find time for painting and poetry. You may be sure that she did not suddenly spring from a race of uneducated women.

"Chinese women do not boast of these things. They would rather play and embroider, so far as the public sees.

women is far from one of cruelty or abuse. In the past he has treated her, so far as her relation to the public or the state is concerned, as a child. In her own home, his attitude toward her is far different. But of this home-life I will speak in a moment.

"Just to show you how woman in her public relation used to be regarded in China, I will tell you a little story. A new prison was built in Tien-tsin, and in accordance with the new ideas which had been imported from abroad, it had a department for women. For five or six years this department stood vacant.

"One day I asked the jailer: 'How is it that you never have any prisoners in here? Is it that our women are so marvelous?'

"Oh," said he, "you see, it is very difficult to punish women."

"But what do you do with them when they do wrong? Suppose one were to commit murder?"

"Oh, then we'd have to kill her. But for the other things it is very difficult to punish them; it is hard to take them out of their homes."

"But what do you do?"

"Well the other day there was a woman who stole from a shop and so we punished the father of her husband."

"That story illustrates the old Chinese point of view. Women were treated as children and the male relatives were held responsible for their misdeeds.

"But China is changing in this regard. Women are now held responsible in their own person for their misdeeds.

"But this idea, that woman is only a child, only holds so far as her relation with the state or public is concerned. The women manage their households. The men are masters of business and things outside the home; but when they enter the house, they enter the wife's domain.

"I think that the mother occupies a greater position in China than she does here. I have been surprised to hear rough and hardened coolies—men in whom you would expect to find none of the finer feelings—cry out when they are badly injured: 'A-ya! Nyang!' This means: 'Oh! Mother!'

"Our women hear all kinds of stories from the West. Tons and tons of European and American matter are being translated and printed. It is marvelous what the Chinese are reading. Just as an example: In Peking there is The Woman's Paper. It is edited and owned by women.

"It gives much advice gathered from the Caucasian world. But its information is sometimes peculiar. A short time before I left it printed an article urging the advantages of vaccination. After telling at some length what a good thing vaccination is, it wound up by advising that mothers have their children vaccinated every year. When I read that, I said to myself: 'Oh, you poor children!'

"Our women marvel very much about the stories that reach them of the activities of the suffragettes. They wonder what it is all about. You see they believe that women in America and Europe hold a very glorious position. They believe that men look up to them as their superiors. They draw this inference from the fact that men always give women the precedence in entering a room, or yield them a seat.

"What things do I think we should adopt? Why, your technical knowledge, of course—that goes without saying. And with this goes your efficient organization. Our methods are loose, just as your were when you had nothing but hand labor. When your civilization is built up on machinery, your social organization must of necessity get a machine-like efficiency and regularity.

"The other thing that China needs is your social service. That, too, is a comparatively new growth in America and Europe. Look at the Child's Welfare Exhibition now being held in New York. Would your grandfathers have thought of such a thing? Not that they were not good people, not that they did not love their children. But this world has progressed. And in this, as in technical knowledge, the West has moved faster than the East."

FURNITURE OF 2000 A. D.

What style of furniture is likely to be popular in the near future? Will it be based on historical tradition, or on purely structural lines, of foreign or native woods? Will it, in case our supply of timber is nearly exhausted, be of concrete, and, if so, of Greek, Roman or Egyptian design?

If the house of the future be concrete, is it not logical to believe that chairs, tables and bedsteads will be of like material? It is quite possible that the day will arrive when all the wooden furniture in the world will be in museums, and people will regard it with the same curiosity that we now feel toward mummy cases. But that far-distant day need not now disturb us.

Our Future Attitude.
 The furniture makers of the late 20th century will doubtless take the best that designers of all time have handed down to them. If the progress in furniture is as marked in the next 50 years as in the last 50, great things may be expected. Possibly by comparison, our own times will seem as benighted as does the haircloth and black walnut period now to us.

Will the future attitude toward furniture be as our own toward those ponderous bedsteads, those ungainly sideboards, those chilly marble-top tables of the early seventies?
 In studying the best furniture of today, we are impressed by certain characteristics which were unknown 20 years ago: First, a greater respect for the surface of the wood; second, a better hold on historic design as applied to practical purposes, and, third, a greater skill in workmanship.

Modern furniture in its actual making has made a great advance. These improvements were necessary in order to meet new conditions. The seasoning of wood to prepare it for steam-heated houses is one of the most important phases of present-day furniture making. It is one of the new demands in cabinet work well met by the best furniture makers. The old designers, whom we so greatly hold in esteem, knew nothing of the kilns, the drying rooms and the months of treatment which are a part of the best modern methods.

The old cabinet makers prepared their materials with every art then known, but they did not have to take into consideration steam or furnace heat. The preservation of a great deal of furniture is due quite as much to the fact that it has never known the dry heat of a modern house as to good work.

Here is where the maker of faithful copies of old furniture has a powerful argument to advance in favor of reproductions. The latter do not warp, fall to pieces, or slowly disintegrate. Glue was used more liberally at that time than in the eighteenth century. Veneering seems to be especially affected by the "above seventy" temperature of the average house. It is not the heat so much as a lack of moisture that is trying for old furniture, also for plants, goldfish, birds and human beings.

Types Dying.
 There are radiator appliances now on the market to supply moisture, and they are well worth investigation. Not only does the reproduction stand a high temperature better than the original, but it is less affected by dampness and sudden cold. All these conditions will be well controlled by the furniture makers of the late twentieth century, although it is more probable that by that time methods of heating and cooling houses will have made such progress that the present precautions will be unnecessary.

The variety of styles will undoubtedly be greater than today, although several types which are now with us will be eliminated. They are dying a long-drawn-out death, and will be decently buried long before the century reaches the fifty mark. Machine pressed ornament will have disappeared; glued-on carving will have met a well-merited oblivion.

RESEARCH IN A UNIFORM.

If you should be in Berlin next summer and encounter men in light green uniforms, with coat collars and cuffs of red velvet you must not suppose that they are members of a brass band or employees of a circus. They will be members of the Kaiser Wilhelm Society for Scientific Research.

The Emperor organized this society, selected the members of the Senate which will govern it and designed its chaste and refined costume. Nothing could be more quiet or in better taste, or more suitable for scientific research, than a costume of light green with red velvet collars and cuffs.

Scientific research has been practiced in many countries, and in no other country so successfully as in Germany, but always with the great disadvantage of no distinctive costume. What do microbes, unseen asteroids, undiscovered minerals, and the airy creations of one's subliminal consciousness during his sleeping hours care for pursuit by researchers who go around in common clothes?

Of course, the secrets of nature get caught occasionally. Several things have been found out that were not known a century ago; many of the things that were found out twenty years ago have since been found out not to be so and many of the most startling discoveries of the present will be exploded in the next twenty years, even with the crude methods and the discordant dress now in vogue.

But just imagine how nature will be startled into telling everything she knows when the Kaiser Wilhelm Society for Scientific Research, garbed in light green with red velvet collars and cuffs, armed with retorts, microscopes and powers of observation and induction, shall bear down on her and demand that all the idle curiosity of the human race shall be satisfied! The history of civilization and the fate toward which it is hastening, the elements that have so far concealed their existence, and the emotions of a regular Republican contemplating Canadian reciprocity will all be uncovered when the methods of scientific research shall be applied by indefatigable Germans in light green uniforms, with red velvet collars and cuffs.—Philadelphia Record.

TOO NEGATIVE.

"How tall am I, Miss Smith?" A little girl asked her governess.
 "Not quite forty-five inches, dear."
 "But how tall am I?"
 "I told you, dear, not quite forty-five inches."
 "Really, Miss Smith, you don't seem to grasp what I'm saying. I didn't ask how tall I wasn't."—Bystander.
