A WORD FOR WORKING ANIMALS.

A merciful man is merciful to his beast, and a man who is not merciful to his beast is not merciful to his own kind. The man who overloads his dray and then by the application of whip and imprecations forces a poor dumb horse or mule to draw it, is not a merciful man.

SANTA CLAUS AT THE BETHEL.

On Thursday evening, at 6:30 o'clock, the children of the Sunday School assembled in the Church. In a little while the available seats were filled with their parents and friends.

EMMA SQUARE CONCERT.

The Band will give a concert at Emma Square, this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Following is the programme:

FATAL ACCIDENT.

Yesterday about half past 1 P.M., Mr. William Austin left his home at Palama on horse-back to return to town. Shortly after the horse returned alone, and on going out he was found in the road insensible. Drs. McKibbin and McGrew were sent for and found no marks on him save blood from the nose. He remained insensible till his death at 7:45 P.M. He leaves a wife and a large circle of friends to deplore his untimely death.

A GEM.

We have received from Mr. T. G. Thrum the handsomest and most appropriate memento of the season we have yet seen. It is a small volume of poems on the islands, entitled "Tribute of Hawaiian Verse."

The book is securely bound in the modern fashion with a crimson card and tassel. Inside the book is equally good in workmanship. The whole is on tinted paper, and its get-up would reflect credit on an Eastern publisher. Now for the bonne bouche—the contents. The first is a beautifully weird poem entitled "Kipapa," by W. C. Jones, which recounts Umi's mystic adventure in that darksome glen and its consequence.

Next in order is Lahaina, "Where the wave tumbles," beautifully and poetically described by Chas. Warren Stoddard, who is not unknown to fame in these islands or the States.

Then "Waianae," by T. R. Walker, enchants the reader into a day dream of "Misty twilight shadows."

Last comes "Hawaii Nei," by the gifted editor of the Press, Geo. W. Stewart, of which we can only quote the last stanza, "Thy life is music,—Fate, the notes prolong!— Each isle a stanza and the whole a song."

Then a few explanatory notes are given, which are evidently intended for foreign readers.

This will form one of the most beautiful and appropriate gifts for friends at home or abroad that we have seen.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence is solicited on the topics of the day, or what may become so. We reserve the right to excise purely personal matter. We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents.—Ed.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—From time to time you have referred to the inhuman treatment of animals. There is a law on our statute books that provides for the punishment of those who inflict acts of cruelty on their neighbor's beast as well as a very mild punishment on those who inflict suffering on their own animals; but the oldest inhabitant never heard of a case of arrest or punishment under it so far as I am aware of. This matter has been brought to the notice of the authorities time and again, but was allowed to pass. They say "bring your charges" and we will prosecute. But this is not carrying out the law, lame as it is.

I heartily agree with you that a society for the "Prevention of Cruelty to Animals" should be formed. There are certainly men in our community ready and willing to take hold and blot out one of the relics of barbarism yet extant in this country.

The people in this country cannot hold up their heads and claim intelligence and refinement as long as they see (which they do daily) the poor dumb animals treated as they are by a large portion of our community. See the poor bullock being driven to market—the treatment sheep receive in being handled! Take a look round our Fish Market on a Saturday afternoon, remove a few saddles from the backs of the horses and see a sight that would make an African negro pale! See the poultry brought to market dashed by the legs to the saddle, the skin torn from their legs, being hung in that condition for hours! See the poor ox standing at a stump ham-stringed, and waiting the convenience of the slaughterer! And yet the public say that is not our affair. Yet we claim to be fairly educated, intelligent, and a Christian people governed, we hope, or should be, by men of culture. Yet we do nothing to remove this stain from us as a nation.

It is true societies of this kind are formed to aid and assist in carrying out the laws, and surely such are needed here, for the great mass of our people are no further advanced in this respect than they were one hundred years ago. It is one part of the education of our people that has been sadly neglected.

It speaks well for a paper that advocates such views—yours seems to be the only one who does it. The cause is a good one, and I hope you will keep the matter before the public until something is done. You will have my assistance at any and all times in such a cause.

HUMANITY.

LOCAL AND GENERAL ITEMS.

READ OUR Supplement gratis with to-day's issue.

THE Mission Children's Society will meet this day week instead of to-night.

QUITE an excitement yesterday among the young folks over J. T. Waterhouse's balloons.

HACKFELD & Co. have just received some excellent Rhine and Champagne and other wines.

The Band will give a Christmas Concert on Monday afternoon Dec. 25, in Emma Square, commencing at 3 o'clock.

To-morrow morning at Fort St. Church, there will be a Children's service and in the evening a Christmas praise service.

Messrs. Dillingham & Co. will, by request, keep their store open this evening. See advertisement in to-day's supplement.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock, a Christmas tree will be unveiled for the children of the Fort St. Sunday school. The parents and friends are cordially invited to attend the gathering which will be held in the vestry.

Mr. S. EHLICH formerly with M. Phillips & Co., left yesterday on the steamer Suez for San Francisco and the Eastern States. He will return in April and will open business on his own account.

To-morrow morning at 10 o'clock the Right Rev. Bishop of Oaha will preach an English sermon in the Catholic Church. The building has undergone great improvement during this week by opening the windows upstairs for ventilation.

We would remind our readers that Mr. D. W. Clarke's offer of watches, jewellery, &c., will close next Thursday. The sale is a genuine one as Mr. Clark is going to leave the business. The prices too are remarkably low as Mr. Clark is selling them at San Francisco wholesale prices.

We have had placed on our Editorial Table, a very pretty Christmas book, containing valuable local information, viz:—the postal rates, the world's time, the date and departure of Ocean Steamers and inter-Island mails, the fire alarm signals, fire districts, carriage rates and fares, places and meetings of the various lodges in the city and the calendar for 1883.

The cover is ornamented with a cut representing our flag and liberty. A beautiful natural fern is placed between the season's wishes, "A Merry Christmas" and "Happy New Year." This book is issued by Mr. J. E. Wiseman, Real Estate Broker and General Business Agent, who has taken much pains in presenting so valuable a gem to our community.

Mr. Wiseman sets forth his business in the inside pages, and thanks the public very kindly for their patronage in the past and of course trusts for a continuance in the future. We believe Mr. Wiseman is justly entitled to his success for his enterprising and business abilities, being prompt reliable and energetic in all his undertakings.

These books are for distribution and Mr. Wiseman will furnish all a copy on application.

LOST, on Friday afternoon, near Fort street Church, a small PURSE, containing a sum of money. The finder will be rewarded on returning same to Mrs. J. G. DICKSON. 279 3t

NOTICE Owing to the unusual demand that we have had for REED & BARTON'S

ELEGANT SILVER PLATED WARE

And, notwithstanding the lot that we opened a few weeks ago, was the largest we have ever received, we find ourselves quite out of many articles. We have decided to make a liberal discount to all purchasers of these goods and of our GORHAM SILVER WARE until after the Christmas Holidays. We are obliged to order a new supply immediately, in order to be prepared for those weddings which are to come off soon.

KALOKE

HIS PA IS "NISHIATED."

"Say, are you a Mason, or a nod-fellow, or anything," asked the bad boy of the grocery man, as he went to the cinnamon bag on the shelf and took out a long stick of cinnamon bark to chew.

"Why, yes, of course I am, but what set you to thinking of that," asked the grocery man, as he went to the desk and charged the boy's father with a half a pound of cinnamon.

"Well, do the goats hunt when you nishiate a fresh candidate?"

"No, of course not. The goats are cheap ones; that have no life, and we muzzle them, and put pillows over their heads, so they can't hurt anybody," says the grocery man, as he winked at a brother Old Fellow who was seated on a sugar barrel, looking mysterious. "But why do you ask?"

"O, nuthin, only I wish me and my chum had muzzled our goat with a pillow. Pa would have enjoyed his becoming a member of our lodge better. You see, pa had been telling us how much good the Masous and Odd Fellows did, and said we ought to try and grow up good so we could fine the lodges when we got big, and I asked pa if it would do any hurt for us to have a play lodge in my room, and pretend to nishiate, and pa said it wouldn't do any hurt. He said it would improve our minds, and learn us to be men. So my chum and me borried a goat that lives in a livery stable. Say, did you know they keep a goat in a livery stable so the horses won't get sick? They get used to the smell the goat, and after that nothing can make them sick but a glue factory. I wish my girl boarded in a livery stable, then she would get used to the smell. I went home with her from church Sunday night, and the smell of the goat on my clothes made her sick to her stummick, and she acted just like an excursion on the lake, and said if I didn't go and bury myself and take the smell out of me she wouldn't never go with me again. She was just as pale as a ghost, and the perspiration on her lip was just zif she had been hit by a street sprinkler. You see my chum and me had to carry the goat up to my room when pa and ma was out riding, and he blatted so we had to tie a handkerchief around his nose, and his feet made such a noise on the floor that we put some baby's socks on his feet. Gosh, how frowy a goat smells, don't it? I should think you Masons must have strong stummix. Why don't you have a skunk or a mule for a trade mark. Take a mule, and amoint it with limburgcheese and you could initiate and make a candidate smell just as bad as with a gosh darn mildewed goat. Well, sir, my chum and me practiced with that goat until he could hunt a picture of a goat every time. We borried a buck beer sign from a saloon man, and hung it on the back of a chair, and the goat would hit it every time. That night pa wanted to know what we were doing up in my room, and I told him we were playing lodge, and improving our minds, and pa said that was right, there was nothing that did boys of our age half so much good as to imitate men, and store by useful nollidge. Then my chum asked pa if he didn't want to come up and take the grand bumper degree, and pa luffed and said he didn't care if he did, just to encourage us boys in innocent pastime, that was so improving to our intellex. We had shut the goat up in a closet in my room, and he had got over blating, so we took off the handkerchief, and he was eating some of my paper collars, and skate straps. We went up stairs, and told pa to come up pretty soon and give three distinct raps, and when we asked him who comes there he must say, ca pilgarric who wants to join your ancient order and ride the goat." Ma wanted to come up too, but we told her if she come in it would break up the lodge, cause a woman couldn't keep a secret, and we didn't have any side saddle for the goat. Say, if you never tried it, the next time you nitiate a man in your Mason's lodge, you sprinkle a little kyan pepper on the goat's beard just afore you turn him loose. You can get three times as much fun to the square inch of goat. You wouldn't think it was the same goat. Well, we got all fixed and pa rapped, and we let him in and told him he must be blindfolded, and he got on his knees a luffing, and I tied a towel around his eyes, and then I turned him around and made him get down on his hands also, and then his back was right towards the closet door, and I put the buck beer sign right against pa's clothes. He was a luffing all the time, and said we boys were full of fun as they made 'em, and we told him it was a solemn occasion, and we wouldn't permit no levity, and if he didn't stop luffing we couldn't give him the grand bumper degree. Then everything was ready, and my chum had his hand on the closet door, and some kyan pepper in his other hand, and I asked pa in low bass tones, if he felt as though he wanted to turn back, or if he had nerve enough to go ahead and take the degree. I warned him that it was of full dangers, as the goat was loaded for bear, and told him he yet had time to retrace his steps if he wanted to. He said he wanted the whole business, and we could go ahead with the menagerie. Then I said to pa that if he had decide to go ahead, and not blame us for the consequences, to repeat after me the following: "Bring forth the Royal Bumper, and let him Bump!" Pa repeated the words, and my chum sprinkled the kyan pepper on the goat's moustache, and he sneezed once and looked sassy, and then he see the lager beer goat raring up, and he started for it, just like a cow catcher, and blatted. Pa is real fat, but he knew he had got hit, and he grunted, and said, "Hell's fire, what're you boys doin'?" and then the goat gave him an-other degree, and pa pulled off the towel and got up and started for the stairs, and so did the goat, and ma was at the bottom of the stairs listening and when I looked over the bannisters pa and ma and the goat were all in a heap, and pa was yelling murder, and ma was screaming fire, and the goat was blating, and sneezing, and bunting, and the hired girl came into the hall and the goat took after her and she crossed herself just as the goat struck her and said, "Howly mothert protect me!" and went down stairs the way we boys slide down hill, with her hands on herself, and the goat rared up and blatted, and pa and ma went into their room and shut the door, and then my chum and me opened the front door and drove the goat out. The minister, who comes to see ma every three times a week, was just ringing the bell and the goat thought he wanted to be nishiated, too, and gave him one, for luck, and then went down the sidewalk, blating and sneezing, and the minister came in the parlor and said he was stabbed, and then pa came out of his room with his suspenders hanging down, and he didn't know the minister was there, and he said cuss words, and ma cried and told pa he would go to hell sure, and pa said he didn't care, he would kill that kussid goat afore he went, and I told pa the minister was in the parlor, and he and ma went down and said the weather was propitious for a revival, and it seemed as though an outpouring of the spirit was about to be vouchsafed to His people, and none of them sot down but ma, cause the goat didn't hit her, and while they was talkin redidgin, with their mouths, and kussin the goat inwardly, my chum and me adjourned the lodge, and I went and stayed with him all night, and I hain't been home since. But I don't believe pa will lick me, cause he said he would not hold us responsible for the consequences. He ordered the goat hisself, and we filled the order, don't you see? Well, I guess I will go and sneak in the back way and find out from the hired girl how the land lays. She won't go back on me, cause the goat was not loaded for hired girls. She just happened to get in at the wrong time. Good bye, sir. Remember and give your goat kyan pepper in your lodge."

As the boy went away, and skipped over the back fence, the grocery man said to his brother old fellow, "If that boy don't beat the devil then I never saw one that did. The old man ought to have him sent to a lunatic asylum."

Crosses of Oceania.

A letter from Sydney, N. S. W., dated September 7th, says: Some years ago the New Bedford whalers who visited the South Pacific—and doubtless one or two of them are still living—found an island nearly midway between what was then known as New Holland and New Zealand. In climate, in flora, and in fauna it differed from both, and presents many of the paradoxes not uncommon at the antipodes. Hearing that the government of New South Wales had decided that it was the best possible position for observing the next transit of Venus, your correspondent visited the place 1st month. Nearly an hour before the government officials put in an appearance our vessel was boarded by a whale-boat's crew, steered over the reef by an ancient mariner, whose dialect was so familiar that I at once asked him what part of the states he hailed from. "New Bedford, sir," was the response. "How long have you been here?" was the next query, and the reply was, "Wall, nigh on forty years, I guess."

During a stay of ten days, on what is the nearest approach to a pressman's idea of the land of the lotus eaters, I learned of the man who, for well-nigh half a century, has not heard from his friends at home. Nathan Chase Thompson is a native of Somerset, Mass., and virtually does all the work of this island. Henry Wilson, a native of Newburg, N. Y., was put ashore there from a whaler, twelve years ago, to die, but still lives and is hale. P. Johnson (colored), a native of Pennsylvania, is also located there, as was also a Bostonian named Leonard, whose relatives may not yet know that he was killed two years since in a brawl, by the father of a housekeeper of his who was left on the island by the whaler Alabama of New Bedford. There are not more than half a dozen adults on the island, outside the families of those I have mentioned, and those look upon Thompson as a sort of Santa Claus.

The whole place is only six miles in length by about one and a half wide, and of this fully two miles is taken up by Mount Gower, which rises sheer from the sea on the southern side to an altitude of 2,850 feet, and Mount Lidghird to a height of 2,500 feet. For about four miles north of the latter the soil and foliage are something approaching the miraculous, the former consisting of decomposed vegetable matter, intermingled with guano partially denuded of its strength by tropical rains; palms and ferns, such as no portion of Australia can boast of, and banian trees only equalled in India, together with eighteen other species of shrubs and trees which have been classied by visiting scientists. Thompson has a garden in which he is now cultivating coffee plants covering three acres of ground, and the whole of this is surrounded by a single banian tree. The wonders of this strange land have recently been so impressed upon the government of New South Wales that orders have been issued interdicting the destruction or removal of the plants, trees or seeds, and the tenure of the residents limited to yearly leases at the pleasure of the executive of this colony.

CURIOUS RHYMES.

To get a rhyme in England for the word month was quite a matter of interest with curious people years ago, and somebody made it out or forced it by making a quatrain, in which a lipping little girl is described as saying—

—I can get a rhyme for a month.

I can thay it now, I thied it wunth!

Another plan was to twist the numeral one into an ordinal. For instance:—

Search through the works of Thackeray —you'll find a rhyme to month; He tells us of Phil Fogarthy, of the fighting onety-oneth?

A parallel lisp is as follows:—

"You can't," says Tom to lipping Bill,

"Find any rhyme to month."

"A great miltitake," was Bill's reply;

"I'll find a rhyme at onth."

And—

Among our numerous English rhymes, They say there's none to month; I tried and failed a hundred time, But succeeded the hundred and onth.

But these are hardly fair. The rhyme is good, but the English bats.

Sign for a corset house—stay lady stay.

A fool and an accordion are both easily drawn out.

Temporary insanity—Time "out of mind."—Montreal Witness.

Which is the largest room in the world? The "room for improvement."

THE DAILY BULLETIN SUPPLEMENT.

HONOLULU, H. I., SATURDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1882.

TURVEYDROP'S CHRISTMAS EVE; OR, THE GHOSTLY EXPRESS.

Yes, it was the 24th. All day it had blown and rained incessantly. The streets had been like rivers but, now that the rain had ceased for a moment, the water lay in pools instead of draining away. The oldest inhabitant had never seen such a kona before. The waves had dashed over the edges of the wharves casting up spray over the shelter sheds.

The only schooner in the harbour was stove in against the end of the old Custom House wharf by the violence of the first blast. The few ships from foreign ports had all suffered more or less damage.

For hours it had been impossible to go out of doors: business had utterly ceased. But the ceaseless pour of the rain had lulled and only the fitful sobbing of the wind was to be heard echoing round the corners.

I did not care to go out but I could not stay all night in my office. I must get home some way. At last I blew out the lamps that all day had cast a fitful radiance over the scene of my labours and having seen that every thing was secure I shut the door and locked it.

It was frightfully dark and the lamp at the Bank corner gave a misty light that seemed to say "Rely on yourself and not on me." The foot-path and the centre of the street were alike seas of mud I found. At every step I sank ankle-deep. Stepping across the road, I went into the saloon and took a fid. A few friends were inside but hastily bidding them a Merry Christmas I went out. I reached the corner of the street without meeting any body. But just before me I saw with joy and surprise an express standing by the foot-path. I walked up and asked if it were disengaged, hearing no reply I jumped in, calling out at the same time "Drive home quickly. I'm in a hurry." I lay back without looking around and, pulling out a cigar, lit it. In doing this I became aware of the presence of another person in the express. Thinking it might be some friend who was courteously sharing his express with me I proffered him a cigar. He rejected it without speaking and seemed to settle himself further back in his corner to avoid being seen.

I thought to myself "well, here's a pretty go" and puffed vigorously away. Laying back as I smoked I thought that I would find out who this queer stick was and so I essayed to break the ice by remarking, "It's been an awful day." Still no answer. Well, I thought, if you are going to be so gruff I'll be the same and I lay back and puffed more vigorously than before.

Suddenly there was an awful roll of thunder and the rain came dashing pitilessly down in torrents. The lightning flashed in sheets of dazzling brilliance and made the murky darkness blacker by its sharp contrast. My thoughts had been preoccupied with my silent companion and I had not noticed where we were going, when a less vivid flash than usual showed me that we were proceeding up the valley towards the Pali. We had almost reached the top of the eminence where Judd street now runs off and although it was much out of my road and I was anxious to get home, I said nothing as I knew there were but a few more houses and I was still curious to know who my silent companion was. All this time he had never spoken a word or moved from his original position but when we reached the top of the eminence he suddenly sat up and in an intense, sepulchral whisper said to the driver, "On! on! faster! we'll never get there." The driver seem suddenly galvanized and the horse broke into a trot. "Faster! Faster," again he whispered. The trot became a canter and the canter a gallop. I could scarce believe my senses. The wind whistled round us with the speed we were going and the rain still fell in heavy dripping. Never in my experience had a horse gone up that road faster than a gentle trot and here was a horse galloping with a load on such a night as this. I grew frightened and shouted to the driver to stop, but he seemed not to hear me, and still that strange mystery sat at my elbow, whispering with a peculiar grave-yard intensity of tone "Faster yet, faster." The ground seemed to fly under us, the sparks from the stones were like a chain of fire. And still the elements warred around. My hair began to stand on end, I could feel my skin in a cold quiver of fear, my limbs troubled and my teeth chattered as if I had been suddenly seized with the ague. The Half way house was soon passed. The mass of mail was seen by the light of a vivid flash. All its fantastic shapes seemed endowed with life, pointing with lean fingers at us and gibbering in the weird light. Still no signs of stopping. Gradually loomed up before us in the ever nearer-drawing distance the cleft through which the road winds down across the Pali.

A horrid fear began to fill me, carriage. I seemed glued to the cushion and I shook more and more tremulously with each peal of laughter that broke from his lips. It was the most demoniac exclamation I ever heard. More and more madly did the vehicle seem to fly. We scarcely seemed to touch the ground. We were now flying up the last rise and at the top of it was the precipice. I tried to lift myself from my seat. I was fascinated—not a limb could I move: I only lived in thought. I knew the fearful doom with one despairing cry I sprang madly out towards the cliff. I felt something in my hand. I clutched it madly, and clung to it with the despair of death, and heard, while I clung, a wild, hopeless yell, that makes my blood shudder now to think of it, almost drowning the thunder peal.

I had clasped the iron railing that guards the precipice. As I realized the fact I knew that the slightest slip would be fatal: there I was hanging by my hands over a precipice my wife. "A Merry Christmas." And to this day she doesn't believe that I ever left the saloon till I was put out of it, and that the mud, &c., is accounted for by the state, I came home in. That doesn't matter for I have since discovered that every Christmas eve that ghostly express with its demon occupant waits at the corner of the street for the unwary passenger who may be tempted to ride with them. That is my one noteworthy Christmas eve, and I shall never forget my ride in the ghostly express.

IRE MUA.

SUDDEN WHITENING OF THE HAIR.

There are few topics among what may be called the curiosities of Physiology, which have a greater fascination for the popular mind than the sudden bleaching of the hair, which is asserted to sometimes occur under the influence of strong emotion as intense grief or fear. The possibility of such an occurrence has been strongly denied by many, including some who have a right to be considered as authorities in such matters. Among those who have declared themselves incredulous is Dr. Erasmus Wilson, whose standing is too well known to need enlarging upon. His unbelief, however, was considerably shaken by the case of a young lady who, on receiving news of the shipwreck and death of her husband elect, fell into a swoon, lasting five hours, during which her dark brown hair became as white as a cambric handkerchief. Though convinced of the reality of the occurrence, Dr. Wilson seems to be in a state of considerable doubt and uncertainty as to the way in which the change is brought about. "If" says he, "it be established that the hair is susceptible of permeation by fluids derived from the blood—a transmission of fluids from the vessels of the skin into the substance of the hair really occurs, the quantity and nature being modified by the peculiarity of constitution or state of health of the individual—it follows that such fluids, being altered in their chemical qualities, may possess the power of impressing new conditions on the structure into which they enter. Thus, if they contain an excess of salts of lime, they may deposit salts of lime in the tissue of the hair, and so produce a change in its appearance from dark to grey." So far, therefore, as Prof. Wilson understands the matter, it resolves into a question of "may be's." Some of the older stories of this sudden change in the color of the hair are probably mythical: at any rate they are not well authenticated. A few more modern instances, however, may be mentioned which have come under the observations of persons now or recently living. One of the most remarkable of these occurred in the experience of Staff-Surgeon Parry, who was serving in India during the mutiny. Among the prisoners taken in a skirmish at Chamda was a sepoy of the Bengal Army. He was brought before the authorities and examined. Fully alive to his position the Bengalee stood almost stupefied with fear, trembling greatly, with horror and despair plainly depicted on his countenance. Suddenly, in the midst of the examination, the by-standers were startled by the sergeant in charge of the prisoner exclaiming, "He is turning grey!" All eyes were turned on the unfortunate man, watching, with wondering interest, the change coming upon his glossy, jet black locks. In half an hour they were of a uniform grey hue. A similar change has sometimes taken place in the course of a single night. One of the witnesses in the Tichborne case testified that, the night after hearing of his father's death, he dreamed that he saw him killed before his eyes, and found, on awakening, that his hair had turned quite white. The writer of this once knew a venerable clergyman, who related that when quite a young man, his hair turned grey so rapidly that some of his flock waited on him to remonstrate against what they considered undue frivolity in adopting the then fashionable custom of powdering the hair. The two following cases are especially curious. The first was that of a young lady who first heard of her lover's treachery by reading an account of his marriage in a newspaper. After a night's brooding over the traitor's baseness, her looking glass disclosed the astonishing fact that the hair on one side of her head had bleached to a color more becoming a grand-mother, while the other half of her tresses retained their natural golden-brown. Even this was not so bad as the case

Were we going to stop, or were we going to drive down the Pali at this rate? I knew there were no houses between us and it. Whither were we going? I mustered up courage to break the monotonous chant from my companions lips, of "Faster: faster," and as where we going.

A sardonic "ha! ha!" that shook the carriage was the only answer. The sound of his laugh filled me with such trembling that I could not rise from my seat though my impulse was to throw myself from the

that awaited me if we went over but I was rooted to the spot. We had reached the top but not an instant did we pause in our wild career. We turned under the bluff to go down when a more vivid flash of lightning than had occurred before showed me as one vast panorama the whole of the beautiful scene beneath me. Alas! I thought I shall never see it more. At the same time I noticed that the horse was just clearing the road and apparently going down the precipice. The sight seemed to nerve me, and more than a thousand feet down. I had learnt gymnastics when a boy, so, holding firmly, I swung to and fro till my feet touched terra firma when by a sudden upward movement, I raised them over the bar and soon crawled along 'till I could plant my legs on solid ground again. Then overcome by terror, I swooned. How I reached my home, I shall never know, but it was 4 o'clock in the morning, when I staggered into my bedroom covered with mud from head to foot, and soaking wet, to wish

The lightning flashed in sheets of dazzling brilliance and made the murky darkness blacker by its sharp contrast. My thoughts had been preoccupied with my silent companion and I had not noticed where we were going, when a less vivid flash than usual showed me that we were proceeding up the valley towards the Pali. We had almost reached the top of the eminence where Judd street now runs off and although it was much out of my road and I was anxious to get home, I said nothing as I knew there were but a few more houses and I was still curious to know who my silent companion was. All this time he had never spoken a word or moved from his original position but when we reached the top of the eminence he suddenly sat up and in an intense, sepulchral whisper said to the driver, "On! on! faster! we'll never get there." The driver seem suddenly galvanized and the horse broke into a trot. "Faster! Faster," again he whispered. The trot became a canter and the canter a gallop. I could scarce believe my senses. The wind whistled round us with the speed we were going and the rain still fell in heavy dripping. Never in my experience had a horse gone up that road faster than a gentle trot and here was a horse galloping with a load on such a night as this. I grew frightened and shouted to the driver to stop, but he seemed not to hear me, and still that strange mystery sat at my elbow, whispering with a peculiar grave-yard intensity of tone "Faster yet, faster." The ground seemed to fly under us, the sparks from the stones were like a chain of fire. And still the elements warred around. My hair began to stand on end, I could feel my skin in a cold quiver of fear, my limbs trembled and my teeth chattered as if I had been suddenly seized with the ague. The Half way house was soon passed. The mass of mail was seen by the light of a vivid flash. All its fantastic shapes seemed endowed with life, pointing with lean fingers at us and gibbering in the weird light. Still no signs of stopping. Gradually loomed up before us in the ever nearer-drawing distance the cleft through which the road winds down across the Pali.

A horrid fear began to fill me,

carriage. I seemed glued to the cushion and I shook more and more tremulously with each peal of laughter that broke from his lips. It was the most demoniac exclamation I ever heard. More and more madly did the vehicle seem to fly. We scarcely seemed to touch the ground. We were now flying up the last rise and at the top of it was the precipice. I tried to lift my self from my seat. I was fascinated—not a limb could I move: I only lived in thought. I knew the fearful doom with madly some it mad despair clung, makes think thund I guard the fa slip w ing by

We respectfully invite our friends and the public generally to examine our stock, which is almost all new, and selected from the best goods manufactured in our line; and to note our prices.

A constantly increasing demand for our special line of goods is substantial evidence that good judges of merchandise know where they are well served.

We have so often called your attention, in detail, to the numberless, necessary, useful, and beautiful articles comprising our stock—that we will, on this occasion, simply assure you of our appreciation for past favors, and solicit your future patronage.

Very truly yours,

DILLINGHAM & CO.

Were we going to stop, or were we going to drive down the Pali at this rate? I knew there were no houses between us and it. Whither were we going? I mustered up courage to break the monotonous chant from my companions lips, of "Faster! faster," and as where we going.

A sardonic "ha! ha!" that shook the carriage was the only answer. The sound of his laugh filled me with such trembling that I could not rise from my seat though my impulse was to throw myself from the

that awaited me if we went over but I was rooted to the spot. We had reached the top but not an instant did we pause in our wild career. We turned under the bluff to go down when a more vivid flash of lightning than had occurred before showed me as one vast panorama the whole of the beautiful scene beneath me. Alas! I thought I shall never see it more. At the same time I noticed that the horse was just clearing the road and apparently going down the precipice. The sight seemed to nerve me, and more than a thousand feet down. I had learnt gymnastics when a boy, so, holding firmly, I swung to and fro till my feet touched terra firma when by a sudden upward movement, I raised them over the bar and soon crawled along till I could plant my legs on solid ground again. Then overcome by terror, I swooned. How I reached my home, I shall never know, but it was 4 o'clock in the morning, when I staggered into my bedroom covered with mud from head to foot, and soaking wet, to wish fluids derived from the blood—a transmission of fluids from the vessels of the skin into the substance of the hair really occurs, the quantity and nature being modified by the peculiarity of constitution or state of health of the individual—it follows that such fluids, being altered in their chemical qualities, may possess the power of impressing new conditions on the structure into which they enter. Thus, if they contain an excess of salts of lime, they may deposit salts of lime in the tissue of the hair, and so produce a change in its appearance from dark to grey." So far, therefore, as Prof. Wilson understands the matter, it resolves into a question of "may be's." Some of the older stories of this sudden change in the color of the hair are probably mythical; at any rate they are not well authenticated. A few more modern instances, however, may be mentioned which have come under the observations of persons now or recently living. One of the most remarkable of these occurred in the experience of Staff-Surgeon Parry, who was serving in India during the mutiny. Among the prisoners taken in a skirmish at Chamda was a sepoy of the Bengal Army. He was brought before the authorities and examined. Fully alive to his position the Bengalee stood almost stupefied with fear, trembling greatly, with horror and despair plainly depicted on his countenance. Suddenly, in the midst of the examination, the by-standers were startled by the sergeant in charge of the prisoner exclaiming, "He is turning grey!" All eyes were turned on the unfortunate man, watching, with wondering interest, the change coming upon his glossy, jet black locks. In half an hour they were of a uniform grey hue. A similar change has sometimes taken place in the course of a single night. One of the witnesses in the Tichborne case testified that, the night after hearing of his father's death, he dreamed that he saw him killed before his eyes, and found, on awakening, that his hair had turned quite white. The writer of this once knew a venerable clergyman, who related that when quite a young man, his hair turned grey so rapidly that some of his flock waited on him to remonstrate against what they considered undue frivolity in adopting the then fashionable custom of powdering the hair. The two following cases are especially curious. The first was that of a young lady who first heard of her lover's treachery by reading an account of his marriage in a newspaper. After a night's brooding over the traitor's baseness, her looking glass disclosed the astonishing fact that the hair on one side of her head had bleached to a color more becoming a grand-mother, while the other half of her tresses retained their natural golden brown. Even this was not so bad as the case

THE EVILS OF PAINTING

And their Remedy.

"It has been said with much truth, too, that house painting might, with study and acquirement of taste, resume its rank as a liberal art."—Painters' Manual.

Believing the above to be true, A. B. KERR has now re-organized his system of working the business in Honolulu. In the first place he has secured the services of that celebrated artist, Mr. MAX KONX, formerly of San Francisco, whose work in the line of plain, and decorative paper-hanging, frescoing, &c., is up to the present time unsurpassed, and on these Islands has never been equalled. For house painting jobs first-class mechanics only will be employed. In future patrons can depend upon my filling every order on the most scientific basis known to the trade.

The Sign Painting and Lettering department will be permanently presided over by Mr. GEO. STRATMEYER, (further comment unnecessary.)

P.S.—Send for designs of frescos for ceiling and cornices. Something new; and if you want any glass put in call at

"Tiger" Paint Store,

247 1y 78-King Street.

Notice.

DURING the temporary absence of Mr. W. G. Irwin from this Kingdom, Mr. W. M. GIFFARD will attend to the business of our house.
