EXIT SPRECKELS.

Mr. Spreckels has come and gone, and the Provisional Government holds the even tenor of its way. When he arrived here it was in the guise of friendship; when he left it was as an open enemy; but his friendship did nothing but harm to the annexation cause and his enmity wrought strong advantages. So long as it was believed in the United States that Claus Spreckels wanted annexation a powerful anti-monopoly element opposed the measure; but the moment it was known that he had turned against it, the friends of the reform increased in number a thousand fold. Thus we can but hope in the interests of union with the United States, that Mr. Spreckels will not let his open hostility lag.

This visit of the Sugar King is likely to become historical in that it involved his final disfigurement on this soil. He has often been beaten in his political efforts before, but those were "affairs of outposts." This was a last desperate struggle for individual primacy. Mr. Spreckels sought first to deprive the Government of the loyal support of the planters. In this he met a Waterloo. He then tried to embarrass the Government by demanding payment of the money he had loaned its royal predecessor. Promptly his bill was settled, and he could do no more than giant Pagan did in Bunyan's tale—sit at the mouth of his cave and gnash his crumbling teeth and shake his withered fist at the passers by. He has now been carried out of the country hors du combat and his last look at the receding shores of Oahu doubtless caught the glint of the stars and stripes over the housetops and of the emblem of Provisional authority waving unchallenged from the towers of the deroyalized house of government. What were his feelings then? Surely no man will envy him in their possession.

THE WATER QUESTION.

We again hear the annual complaint about a scarcity of water to supply the town. Orders are out to regulate and limit the use of "the needful" and serious views are taken as to the possible result of neglect to heed such injunctions. In the meantime every day sees plenty of rain in the mountains, and the streams that run down to the sea carry millions of gallons of the precious fluid to an irrevocable waste. It is obvious if this surplus could be impounded that Honolulu would have one of the most ample and satisfactory water supplies in the world.

The reservoirs we now possess are simply ponds in the earth, and an enormous volume of water is lost by evaporation and seepage. Long ago these ponds should have been enlarged and cemented, and storage reservoirs on a large scale ought to have been built on the high ranges where fresh water is never lacking. There has been no want of money in the past to meet the necessary expense, but the monarchy preferred to waste its substance on an "army" and "navy," embassies abroad and mountebank state entertainments which awoke the ridicule of every foreigner who witnessed them. Had some of this squandered gold been applied to a solution of the water question the monarchy might now be able to point to at least one great benefit it had been to this community. But the Royal party was not in business for the public good, and its connection with water—always somewhat tenuous—is chiefly recalled by the memory of the deficit it involved in the sum total of water rate collections.

With so many Royalist legacies of debt to meet, the Provisional Government cannot now undertake to secure a greater supply of water, but it can in time. Should annexation or a protectorate ensue the question would of course be properly solved in the shortest possible time. One of the objects of local investment under the Stars and Stripes would be water, and the Government would be able to dispose of its plant and system to some rich corporation that would build ample reservoirs and increase the scope and service of the property.

In the interim there is no doubt that strict economy in the use of water is very needful.

THE ASSASSINATION CANARD.

As we thought, the absurd and impossible tale of a shooting conspiracy in the Annexation Club has proved to be nuts to the Royalists. They are using the story for all it is worth—we might say a hundred times more than it is worth—and will doubtless parade it in the American press as evidence that the party of reform on these Islands is an ambushed banditti waiting to "pot" the Royalist leaders, the American Minister and anybody else who may come within range, at the first sign of public disorder.

Of course such a story is weird, blue bosh; and we trust that the gullible part of the American world will soon find it out. That other and larger and sensible portion has discredited and dismissed it already into the realms of fanciful conjecture where so many Hawaiian canards have preceded it.

No, there will be no assassination, no disorder, nobody killed! The Annexationists do not rely upon pot-hunting to hold their own, and the Bombastes Furiosos of the defunct monarchy do not fight with anything but their mouths.

Make room for the next canard!

JAPANESE RELATIONS.

The Japanese radicals, whoever they may be, are anxious to interfere in Hawaiian politics, and have asked their Government to demand the suffrage here and to encourage a larger efflux of Japanese, particularly men of means, in this direction. There is small likelihood, however, of the Mikado and his ministers taking this advice. If we are informed correctly, the chrysanthemum government had already made an attempt to get certain voting privileges for its contract laborers and was met by a prompt refusal. It then gave up the undertaking and—doubtless upon pointed suggestions from Washington—withdrew its naval force from these waters. Under such circumstances, and while the case of the Annexationists is in American hands, it is far from probable that Japan will add any strength to its present Hawaiian policy or meddle in any way with the political concerns of the Islands.

The capture or killing of the outlaw leper is now but a matter of time. Koolau cannot stay continuously in the crags; he must seek the lower levels for food. Wherever he goes he will find people whose cupidity will be excited by his presence and some one will earn the $1000 reward which has been offered for him. Perhaps he may hold out for a long time, as Sontag and Evans did, but a nemesis is on his trail.

The more crushing the defeat under which a Royalist agitator leaves these shores the more strenuous the send-off he gets from the gang he leaves behind him.

The rousing cheers for the Provisional Government at the start following the feeble outcry for Claus Spreckels might be called one of the signs of the times.

The tune of "Auld Lang Syne" played at the dock to-day was quite the thing, inasmuch as it is often fitted to the words "Old Grievances Dead."

PERSONAL.

The Duke of Newcastle will take the next steamer for Japan. President Hosmer and wife of Oahu College left to-day for the World's Fair. Col. Sir H. Collett, of the English army, left by the Hal for the volcano. Miss Herbert was heavily decorated with leis when she left on the steamer. Professor Hosmer and wife were prominent among the departing passengers.

The report that Minister Blount would leave on the Australia was incorrect. T. W. Hobron has resumed his duties as correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle. George Van Houten is on the Islands writing for several papers of the Middle West.

Theodore Richards succeeds Mr. Oleson as President of the Kamehameha School. It is J. H. Lovejoy who left on the Australia and not J. A. Lovejoy, as announced yesterday.

Mrs. Moore, wife of Lieut. E. K. Moore, of the U. S. S. Boston, left on the Australia to-day. Deputy Attorney General Gardner Wilder returned from Hamakua yesterday, and is at his desk as usual this morning.

Mr. George Van Houten, of Lenox, Iowa, is a visiting journalist. He represents the Omaha Bee and a number of other papers.

St. Andrew's Priory School. The closing exercises of the St. Andrew's Priory School for girls are taking place this afternoon at the school-room, having commenced at 1:30 p. m. The program consists of recitations, instrumental and vocal music, and character representations in costume. A large number of the parents and friends of the girls is in attendance.

HILO AND ITS HARBOR.

SOMETHING ABOUT A GOOD TOWN.

"A. B. L." Gives his Views About the Capital of the Island of Hawaii and its Future.

The intelligent American will readily comprehend the value of the acquisition of Hawaii, not only in respect to American commerce and American influence, but further the far-reaching importance of securing a foothold at its very gates on an ocean where already almost every other Government but ours has long since secured one. Given some such place where a large and growing navy could seek shelter, anchoring in its own bays and mooring in its own harbors, and any enemy intent on deprecating on our shores could easily be repelled. Let this station moreover be located at some intermediate or terminal point of an ocean cable, a railroad rendering tributary to it, extensive tracts of land suitable to all the varied purposes of agriculture, and we have combined before us all the elements which not alone constitute a great naval station but form the nucleus of a great city.

Nature has endowed the several Islands of the group with great natural resources whose possibilities are only limited by their prescribed area. One drawback, however, among many others has been the limited number of harbors and anchorages throughout the group. Nearly all fall short in some way or another either as to location, size, accessibility or other reasons that render them practically unavailable at various seasons of the year. Honolulu, Pearl Harbor and Hilo Bay are about the only ones which stand out more in relief possessing more of the advantages and less of the disadvantages, but even Honolulu and Pearl Harbor considered in the sense of great harbors must recede in the discussion before the unquestionable precedence of Hilo Bay.

The harbor of Honolulu is altogether too restricted. It could hardly accommodate more than 60,000 tons of shipping; the harbor and bar would require constant dredging and deepening, and the so-called kona storms would frequently oblige vessels to remove from their moorings. The town is one of narrow environments, and there is little back country to feed upon. Its supremacy as a port has thus far been artificially maintained by the traffic from the other islands and the prestige of being the seat of government.

The claims and advantages of Pearl Harbor to consideration as a naval and coaling station have already been ably presented by Sereno Bishop in his interesting article in the Review of Reviews, to which the reader is referred, and it is with no desire to detract from his forcible arguments that we must acknowledge to a feeling of surprise at his total ignoring of the merits of Hilo Bay, which is as immeasurably superior to Pearl Harbor as the latter is to Honolulu.

Hilo, situated on the east coast of Hawaii and lapped by the waters of its bay, possesses without doubt the safest and largest harbor in the group, and with very little improvement could easily be made the best. It is capacious and deep enough to float all the shipping of the Pacific. Access to it is obtained through a wide and deep channel, across which there is no bar. The construction of a breakwater on the rock and coral reef, which extends north and west from Coconut Island, or a less expensive one extending west over and beyond the shoal which makes out from Coconut Island, could easily be accomplished, thereby creating a complete harbor, secure from any storm that could blow, and nullifying the effect of swells which now prevent vessels from laying alongside of a wharf. This latter objection, however, does not exist on the east side of the harbor, where, as a rule, there is little, if any, swell, and where for the stretch of half a mile vessels drawing from twelve to twenty-four feet of water could easily lay alongside the wharf within 300 feet of the present shore line. Hilo requires no dredging and never fills.

From a strategical point of view Hilo possesses the only harbor suitable for a naval rendezvous, and could easily be made the Key-West of the Pacific. It would make the typical naval and coaling station. The entrance is about three-quarters of a mile in width, and vessels to enter would be obliged to pass under the high bluffs to the west and north of the town, which, with the Halai hills to the back, could easily be converted into impregnable fortresses, protecting the harbor and repelling any invader. It can easily accommodate the largest war fleet. It is capacious enough to admit of squadron evolutions, and being open on one side, great gun practice could be carried on undisturbed and with safety. The harbor is entirely free from gales and the anchorages are excellent, vessels seeking shelter here when it is impossible elsewhere.

There is a considerable area of Government land adjoining deep water suitable for dock yards and a coaling wharf, barracks, etc., whereas in Honolulu and Pearl Harbor all the property is held by individuals and corporate bodies.

NATURAL RESOURCES OF HILO.—The old adage that cities are born and not made may be applied or reversed with equal force in the case of Hilo. By nature

It has been endowed with all the possibilities of a great city. It is healthfully situated on a natural slope, while the climate is delightful and invigorating. Irrigation is not carried on, as the rainfall, though not excessive, is ample. The drainage is good, and malarial marshes, such as exist in the vicinity of Honolulu and Pearl Harbor, are here unknown. The environments are exceedingly picturesque and vegetation thrives with a luxuriance unsurpassed elsewhere.

Immediately at its back and within easy distance, awaiting only the opening wedge of the pioneer with capital and energy, and good roads to make them accessible, are great tracts of land capable of the highest development. These lands, ranging in altitude from sea level to four and six thousand feet elevation, placing side by side, as it were, the tropical with the temperate zone, render possible the raising of all shades and varieties of agricultural products. An unbroken belt of forests, stretching back for fourteen miles, containing the varieties of hard and cabinet woods so highly prized in manufactures, an immense volume of water now running to waste from the many streams in the vicinity properly utilized could make of Hilo a great industrial and manufacturing center. Sugar, coffee, cocoa, tropical fruits of all kinds, ramie and other fibers used in the textile arts can be and are raised with little trouble.

The output of sugar from the Island of Hawaii amounts to about one-half of the crop of the whole group, and in figures approximates over sixty thousand tons. Nearly the whole of this amount finds its way to San Francisco by way of Honolulu. This arrangement is unnatural and artificial; the cost is doubled, the loss is great. Hilo should be the natural entrepot. The construction of a railroad skirting the coast for sixty miles would not alone gather in at least two-thirds of this tonnage, which should be shipped direct to the Coast, but assist in opening up further extensive areas of Government land, and it must not be forgotten that under annexation these tracts will or should become public lands, open to settlers.

Soundings undertaken at various times in behalf of different Governments have demonstrated that the terminal point for a cable from the Coast to the Islands should touch at Hilo, and in view of the fact that the trend of the group is from south east to north-west, Hilo, by its location, is undoubtedly the nearest to the Coast.

It is the direct pathway to that greatest of nature's wonders, the crater and volcano of Kilauea, over a road replete with gorgeous beauty of tropical verdure. It lies on the threshold and shuts in, as it were, the adjoining district of Puna, as yet a terra incognita, whose stupendous natural wonders and exhibits, its lava trees and warm springs, its deep fissures, lava pits and miles of underground caves, its groves of coccoloba and dense tropical jungle, side by side with barren, desolate waste of lava piled in all shapes of picturesque confusion, all forming an ever-shifting panorama of grandeur and beauty at which the tourist will gaze with admiration and delight.

But the limitations of space forbid a more than hasty summary. It is clear that Hilo possesses to a marked degree the elements that constitute a great shipping and commercial center, and its annexation as the harbinger of power and prosperity.

It welcomes the dawn of the new era and rejoices that the political helplessness and disgrace of the past few years are never to be recalled. It rejoices that a contemptible monarchy for which they may have been an apology at its initiation into the confederation of nations no longer exists. Whatever blame may exist for its decline and final overthrow must be laid to the band of unprincipled and unscrupulous advisers who were ever seeking to undermine the constitutional limitations set against the vile and dissolute despotism. It is because of the insidious attempts made by the kingly prerogative to again work its way to the fore after it had been checked and partly broken in the struggle of 1887 for the people's rights, that the different streams of tendency which for years have been converging towards annexation finally burst their barriers and overwhelmed all obstacles. A WAR-TIME PANIC.

How Smoky Henderson's Company of Desperate Men Ran for Dear Life.

The other day a group of Confederate veterans sat on the gallery of the Beach Hotel, and the conversation drifted from the interment of Jefferson Davis to reminiscences of the war between the States. One old fellow told of a regiment that became panic-stricken while the men were at dinner, and tore down tents and everything else in their frantic endeavors to get away, although there was not a Federal soldier within fifty miles of them at the time. "The men just got scared and broke. That was all there was to it," said the veteran. "Nobody knew what started it, and nobody stopped to ask what started it. It beat anything I ever saw."

"The worst panic I saw during the war was right here in Texas," exclaimed Dr. S. C. Young. "It was a panic about three miles long and about two miles wide, and it spread all over the prairie for the best part of five hours. It was none of your phantoms or ghost panics, either, for there was a good-sized Yankee blockader that had big guns to help it along. I must tell you

SPRECKEL'S SEND OFF.

THE EX-KING LEAVES FOR FRISCO.

The Proceedings Marked by a Flagrant Misuse of Minister Blount's Name.

The Australia sailed away at noon and there was the usual fanfare at the wharf, slightly accentuated by the departure of Claus Spreckels. The old Hawaiian band played farewell music and the average steamer-day throng of whites and natives idled about and took in the sights.

Ex-King Claus was the cynosure of all eyes. He paraded the deck absolutely embowered in leis and wreaths, his head rising amid the expanse of roses and posies like a pumpkin in a big flower patch. Not a sign of his clothing could be seen, so harnessed, sashed and surcined he was with flower offerings. He seemed to have been surveyed, platted and laid off by the goddess Flora herself. Miss Spreckels was also radiant with leis, having about a hundred of them on, and she made herself agreeable to her friends by waving a small silk Hawaiian flag. As for Mrs. Spreckels, she was hidden in bouquets.

It was a great day for the immaculate Order of Restorationists. That holy show was at its best. Among the throng about the ex-king was John Cummins, Major Seward, Editor Kenyon, Sam Parker, Antonio Rosa, Charles Wilson, Mr. Fernandez, A. S. Cleghorn, Prince David, J. E. Bush. The sight of them was all the assurance one could ask that Claus was out for pure government.

These friends of the good cause gathered about Claus in the captain's cabin and John E. Bush read him a short address, which added Bush's personal good opinion to the other laurels won by Spreckels in his Water-loom campaign. When this was done the ex-king was presented with a gold-headed cane, inscribed in this wise, the Latin being Bush's:

Ave, Claus, Morituri te Salutamus. In Memoriam. From Your Fellow Citizens, Doomed to Die At the hands of the Murder Society of the Annexation Club. "Threatened men live long." Leben sie hundert Jahre und niemals sterben.

The following names were inscribed with this silly and libellous dedication:

- Liliuokalani R., James Blount, Claus Spreckels, Samuel Parker, V. V. Ashford, C. W. Ashford, John Cummins, J. E. Bush, Chas. Creighton, Antonio Rosa, A. P. Peterson, Dr. Foote, C. B. Wilson, J. W. Robertson, John Bowler, C. O. Berger, E. B. Thomas, G. C. Kenyon, E. Norrie, W. H. Rickard, J. F. Colburn, W. H. Cornwell, James Campbell.

[The above list is supplied the STAR by T. Lindsay, the jeweler, who states that it is an exact copy of the inscription which he put on the cane. As will be seen elsewhere the name of United States Minister Blount was unauthorized.]

After the presentation, Mr. Spreckels bought wine for the crowd and champagne flowed freely. Later he came out on the deck and stood at the rail beaming on the crowd. He finally called John Bush to interpret for him, and, striking an attitude, began to talk. Just then the ship's gong sounded and the first words could not be heard. The concluding ones were: "Let me say that I and the whole Spreckels family have the warmest aloha for the natives."

Bush then translated and raised his hat with a hip, hip, hurrah; and a fire-cracker fusillade of responses came in which not more than twenty voices joined. Claus heard the feeble noise with visible disgust; but when President Hosmer of Oahu College, who stood on the deck above him, called for "three cheers for the Provisional Government" there was a sharp, resonant, ringing reply, before which the ex-king retreated to his cabin in high displeasure.

Then followed the usual scenes. The band played, some college boys by way of an innovation gave the Oahu yell, leis were thrown to friends on shore, the fog horn blew, the lines were cast off, and the Australia began her coast ward run.

MR. BLOUNT INCENSED. Upon being asked if he had signed his name to the list of donors to the Spreckels cane, Mr. Blount answered immediately: "What cane? I don't know of any cane. What are you talking about?"

The reporter then showed the Minister a copy of the inscription on the cane, and said, "The royalists are bragging on the streets that you signed your name to that inscription."

Mr. Blount answered: "It cannot be possible, for I know absolutely nothing about the cane. Never even heard that one was to be presented to Mr. Spreckels."

The reporter then convinced Mr. Blount on the authority of Mr. Lindsay that his name was really engraved on

HONOKAA COURT NOTES.

THE FIRST SESSION COMES TO A CLOSE.

A Light Civil Calendar But Plenty of Divorce Cases—A Number of Suits Dismissed.

Deputy Attorney-General Gardner Wilder returned yesterday from Hamakua, having spent two weeks in attendance at the first session of the Third Circuit Court. He reports a small calendar, both civil and criminal, the latter being finished early in the session, and the proceedings already published.

In the civil calendar the most important suit was that of Kuahepu (k) by Kauhiloia, his guardian, vs. Mrs. W. E. Scott. This was an action for $5000 damages for injuries sustained by the boy in being run over by a carriage driven by Mrs. Scott, in which the pole of the vehicle struck the boy on the head, destroying the sight of one eye. The testimony showed that the accident was the result of the boy's own carelessness and a mixed jury returned a unanimous verdict in favor of the defendant.

The case of Ken Kaw (k) vs. Akoi, for desertion, was dismissed, as was also the case of John Ennis vs. Carrie Ennis, for the same cause.

Proceedings in the case of the Honokaa Store vs. Kekukuewa (k), on appeal from the District Court, were discontinued and the case stricken from the calendar.

In the divorce suits Carrie Ennis was granted a divorce from John F. Ennis on Friday morning on the ground of desertion, and William Van Natta from Rosa Van Natta for the same cause. In the latter case the custody of the children was awarded to the father.

Two other cases went over to next term. The case of T. H. Hitchcock, as assignee in bankruptcy vs. Ku Long and Cheeki was settled out of Court.

SPRECKELS ABROAD.

What It Is Said He Will Do When He Gets Home.

The wifkin will indeed shriek when Claus Spreckels gets back to the coast and pours his woes into the capacious ear of the press. An intimate friend of the dethroned Sugar King said this afternoon that Claus meant to do up the Provisional people, the STAR and all concerned in a very small package when he got to California. Among other memoranda of the lively time he has been having here is the famous placard about gold and lead which some boy tacked up on his gate. This he has taken with him and will have it reproduced, we are told, in fac simile by the San Francisco journals. He will also parade it before the ho-trodden eyes of the President and Secretary of State.

Rumor also has it that Spreckels will reside on "the fringe" of Congressional society during the extra session and make his wishes known to the members on the subject of annexation. We also hear that, when he begins this sort of a campaign, our friends at the American capitol will reprint Claus' plea for annexation made in the Examiner last February. No one can tell, of course, what will be the effect of the subsequent explosion.

There are merry times ahead.

DIDN'T OFFER TO PAY.

The Duke Did Not Settle For the Hens His Cook Killed.

HONOLULU, H. I., July 18, 1893. EDITOR STAR: I see in today's issue that the Duke of Newcastle claims to have offered to pay to the lady who owns the chickens killed by his voracious pet (the cock killed four chickens) for the damage done. Now allow me to state that His Grace has not only omitted to pay for the dead chickens but has also failed to show his royal polish by not even sending to say lady a word of regret for the damage done her by his gross carelessness.

I am simply a roomer in the house and was requested to watch for the party who was killing the chickens, and it was in so doing that I discovered the cock as it killed its fourth victim. I shot it with a revolver, not knowing it belonged to His Grace of Newcastle, as it was too dark to distinguish the collar on its neck.

If you will kindly correct your item of to-day you will greatly oblige those most interested. Yours truly, ERNEST NABOT. Honolulu Iron Works.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with Wampole's Tasteless Preparation OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchial troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION

removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

the whole story. It makes me laugh to think of it now, although the affair happened thirty years ago.

"In 1863 the Hon. J. W. Henderson of Houston, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of Texas, and commonly called 'Smoky' Henderson, a prominent lawyer and something of a sport himself, organized the prize-fighting company of the Confederate army in the Trans-Mississippi department. He was popular with the sporting element, and aimed to get a company of 'blonds,' and he got them. Every man paid for his own outfit, horse and everything else, and as a result they were the best equipped soldiers I ever saw. Nearly every member had a 'gun' record ranging from one to three men, for they were almost without exception desperate characters.

"Well, the company started out on the warpath, and never stopped until it wound up down on Matagorda Peninsula. The only Yankees down there were out on the gunboats and blockaders. The company wanted to see Yankees any way, so it went down there and was rewarded for its pains, for a gunboat was seen out in the Gulf of Mexico, about five miles from shore.

"There was a long peninsula reaching out into the gulf and bay. It was very narrow near the shore end, but broadened out into a sort of island. The famous cavalry company marched out on this peninsula so as to get a better look at the Yankee gunboat. The boat remained stationary, and apparently paid no attention to the cavalrymen.

"After a little the men dismounted, and staking their horses, began strolling over the peninsula, and finally, forgetting all about the Yankee gunboat, began a game of two of poker and monte. Nothing occurred for an hour or so, when suddenly 'bang' went a big bombshell that had exploded between them and their horses. They jumped to their feet, and their hair fairly stood on end when they saw a cutter full of men about 300 yards from the beach between them and their horses. The cutter had a small gun mounted on the bow, and about the time the cavalrymen jumped up the Yankees turned loose about a bushel of grape-shot from it at them. That panic the captain there spoke of a while ago was nothing to what happened then. I know, because I was there and took a hand in it. The minute before we thought we wanted the horses out, but when the grape-shot tore up the sand and weeds around us we found we did not need them. If any man had had a horse he would have been left behind, for we made quick time, I tell you. Of course we headed away from the Yankees, and, fortunately, that was the proper direction for us to take, for it led toward the mainland.

"We had gone about a mile—and I reckon we made it in about half a minute—when 'bang' right in front of us the Yankees opened up from another cutter. There was a whole bunch of them, and they were pulling like fiends to reach the narrow neck of land and head us off, and if you ever saw good running it was done there, for we fairly flew. The Yankees saw there was no use competing with such fast flyers as we were, so they stopped firing and settled down to shooting. Fortunately for us the Gulf was rough and they could not shoot accurately.

"Finally we reached the main land, and then we scattered. You know it is all bald prairie down there, so there was no shelter for us. We scattered, and kept on scattering for ten or fifteen minutes.

Six of us, including the Captain, headed for the partridge as near as we could make out, thinking that was the furthest point in Texas from the Yankees, and after we had gone beyond the range of the confounded gun we stopped to breathe and 'size up' the situation. We had rested about half an hour, when 'bang! whiz!' and a great shell passed over our heads and struck a few hundred yards behind us. We got up out of the grass and saw that the big gunboat had steamed in near the shore and had opened fire with her guns. It was really ridiculous, but we did not laugh any at the time. The Yankees were having lots of fun. You'd see a stray gambler away out on the prairie, and the next minute a big shell as long as a piano would land near him, and then you would see some of the fastest running on record. Those Yankees amused themselves for an hour or two shelling every big bunch of grass they could see. Finally there was not a gambler in sight, and they stopped firing.

"The crowd I was with went to an old house about a quarter of a mile out of range of the guns and sat down to rest. The family was away, but we broke open the door, and, finding some fresh beef, we prepared to cook dinner. Just as we got the meat cooked, the captain said he would go up on the roof and see if he could find any of the boys on the prairie. He was a big man and weighed about 200 pounds. When he got up on the roof, he found he could not see well for the chimney, so he stepped on the cistern top. It was a flimsy affair, and just as a cannon from the ship was fired it gave way under him with a crash that shook the house and precipitated him into the depths below. Hearing the cannon and then the crash, we naturally concluded that the house had been struck by a shell, and it would explode the next minute, so we fled to a man, and were 200 yards away before we realized what had happened. Hearing no shell explosion, we returned, and it was some time before we found our captain—nearly drowned in the cistern. We fished him out, and, without stopping to eat or do anything else, we struck out for the next town.

"What became of our horses? I never knew, nor did I see any of the members of the company again until the war was over."—Galveston paper.
