New Poem by Teanyson.
The following poem for the first time in the edition of Teanyson's poems recently published. It is supposed to refer to events in the poet's own life—
THE LETTERS.
Still on the letter about the case,
A blank yet thoughtful eye,
I pondered o'er the riddle of fate,
And saw the altar and the vase.
A thought came to my mind,
A hand of mine was laid on mine,
"Billie, listen, Heaven and earth shall meet Before you bear my marriage vow."
I read and blushed a blushing glow,
That touched the maiden's cheek and brow,
And then we sat to write and read;
"We met, but only once we met."
"Full cold my greetings were, and dry;
The faintly smiling, the faintly wry;
I saw with meek and wondering eyes,
She wore the crown of my desires."
She took the letter from my hand,
With half a sigh she turned the key,
Then read her love with lips compressed,
And gave my letter back to me,
"I wish you were the other way,
My life, my love, my joy, my pain,
My looks, my gift of mind and soul,
My life a letter on the things
Of his dear soul, I looked on said:
She hid my all her friends had said;
I read again, the public fair;
The subject as if I had not read,
But in my words were words of fire,
"No more of love; your lot is known;
I never will be yours again."
She hid my all her friends had said;
I read again, the public fair;
The subject as if I had not read,
But in my words were words of fire,
"No more of love; your lot is known;
I never will be yours again."
She hid my all her friends had said;
I read again, the public fair;
The subject as if I had not read,
But in my words were words of fire,
"No more of love; your lot is known;
I never will be yours again."

Useful and Interesting.
The latest invention is a pen that writes without ink; the pen has merely to be dipped in cold water.
All the countries in Europe are to be competitors in the Centennial Exhibition to be held in Philadelphia in 1876.
Some scientific states that ants produce vocal sounds, but their pitch is so low as to be inaudible to man. How does he know?
A woman in Louisville has sued a Lodge of the Knights of Pythias for $50,000 for fatally injuring her husband during the initiation ceremony.
Vendors of photographs in Paris, and the principal towns have been officially ordered to remove portraits of the Prince Imperial from their shop windows.
The property left by Edwin Foster to form a home for orphans will amount to one million of dollars at the time fixed for its use—twenty one years after his death.
The chairman of Messrs Moody and Sankey's committee writes to the Times to say that neither of these gentlemen receives any money from the London committee, and that the royalty upon the sale of hymns and tune books (1875) is, by their request, to be paid a trustee (a London merchant), to be devoted to Christian work when they shall have returned to America.
A WHITE ROSE ON AN APPLE-TREE.—The Reading Eagle says: "On the premises of N. F. Booth, Pertham avenue and Franklin street, is to be seen one of the most remarkable curiosities ever heard of. A large crab apple-tree is growing in the yard and on the top of the tree is blooming a pure white rose. The rose stem, which is growing from the apple-tree, is over two years old, so it has already bloomed two years.
The losses sustained by the south in the civil war are estimated by a correspondent of the New York Evening Post to have been $1,254,000,000, independent of the slave property, which amounted to $2,400,000,000, making a total of $3,654,000,000. But this is below the mark, for the correspondent estimates that had not the war occurred the wealth of the south, taking the ratio of the decade ending 1860 as a test, would in 1870 have reached $10,531,000,000, instead of which it falls to only $3,667,000,000—a difference of nearly $7,000,000,000.

Scene in a Chicago restaurant: "Chawles, Chawles, bring me a small—very small piece of beef—about the size of a half a dollar. Do you understand, Chawles?" said a delicate youth to a waiter. "Yes, sah, in a moment, sah," said the waiter. As he started off a great raw-boned fellow sitting near by yelled after him, "Waitaw, waitaw!" "Yes, sah; what will you have, sah?" The eyes of all in the room were on the muscular country-man as he drew forth. "Chawles, Chawles, bring me a small—very small piece of pork—ah—and one of those you understand, Chawles?"
Count Ezenberg, formerly Resident of Hesse at Paris, is collector of autographs, and his album contains, among others, the following, signed by M. Guizot:—"In the course of my long life I have learned two wise things—one is to forgive much; the other is never to forget." M. Thiers wrote under the second:—"A little of forgetfulness does not injure the sincerity of the forgiveness." Prince Bismarck wrote below these two sentences the following:—"I have learned in my life to forget much and to make myself much forgiven."

SWEAR NOT AT ALL.—An oath is the wrath of a perjured spirit. It is more. A man of high moral character would never utter an oath, for with contempt than show his indignation by uttering an oath. It is vulgar; altogether too low for a decent man. It is cowardly; implying a fear of either not being believed or obeyed. It is ungentlemanly. A gentleman, according to the dictionary, is a gentleman—well bred and refined. It is indecent, offensive to delicacy, and extremely unfit for human ears. It is foolish. Want of decency is want of sense. It is abusive—to the man who utters the oath, to the tongue which utters it, and to whom it is uttered. It is contemptible, forfeiting the respect of the wise and good.
INCOURTMENT.—We do not care to intrust the cutting of a coat to an untrained tailor. A barber must have practice with scissors and razor, and even a coachman must have experience with horses before we will trust him to handle our blooded stock. But governing the country, this business, larger, and infinitely more complicated than any other, and on which all others depend, any good-natured farmer, or second-rate lawyer, or successful soldier, or party worker, can take care of this. What would you think of entrusting an incompetent pilot for running a vessel on the rocks by saying that he was a kind neighbor, a good provider for his family, kind to the poor, or an excellent omnibus driver? But I have heard as wise commendations bestowed on ignorant and blundering government officials within a six month.

LOOK AFTER THE EYES.—Multitudes of men and women have their eyes weak for life by the too free use of eyeglass, reading small print and the sewing.
In view of these things, it is well to observe the following rules in the case of the eyes—
Avoid all sudden changes between light and darkness.
Never read by twilight on a very cloudy day.
Never sleep so that on waking the eyes shall open on the light of the window.
Do not use eyeglass by light so meant that it requires an effort to discriminate.
Never read or sew directly in front of the light of a window.
It is best to have the light from above, or obliquely, or over the right shoulder.
Too much light creates a glare, and pains and confuses the sight. The moment you are sensible of an effort to distinguish, that moment stop and talk, walk or ride.
As the sky is blue and the earth green, it would seem that the cooling should be a bluish tinge, the carpet green, and walls of some mellow tint.
The moment you are instinctively inclined to rub the eyes, that moment cease to use them.
If the eyelids are glued together on waking, do not forcibly open them, but apply saliva with the finger, and then wash your eyes and face with warm water.
DISTANCE OF THE EYE.—Professor David Kirkwood, professor of mathematics in Indiana University, contributes the following to the Indianapolis Journal: "The earth's mean distance from the sun, as deduced from Bessel's observations of the parallax made on the transit of Venus in 1761 and 1769, was 91,295,000 miles. Till within a few years past the accuracy of this determination was not called in question. So lately as 1854, Dr. Lassalle, in his Handbook of Astronomy, affirmed that Bessel's value of the distance could not vary from the truth by more than its three-hundredth part. Quite recently, however, astronomers have been led, as various considerations, to regard the distance as somewhat too great, and hence the results of the observations in December, 1874, with the improved instruments of modern construction, have been looked for with a lively interest. The dimension of these observations has not yet been completed. It is known, however, that the resulting value of the sun's horizontal parallax cannot differ materially from eight seconds and eighty-two hundredths of a second. This corresponds to a mean distance of 91,875,000 miles. We are, therefore, closer to the sun by 579,000 miles than was believed but a few years since. The distances of the other planets are to be diminished in a corresponding ratio—the reduction in the case of Neptune, the most remote, amounting to no less than 166,000,000 miles.

Variety.
Academy of Design—A young lady's boarding school.
With most men life is like back-gammon, half skill and half luck.
Most people are like eggs—too full of themselves to hold anything else.
Epithet—"Here lies W. W. Who never more will trouble you, trouble you."
Cognates are like weathercocks, only fixed when they become rusty.
When do the teeth utter the tongue's prerogative? When are they chattering.
"How much did he leave?" said an Aborigine lady, on being told of the death of a wealthy citizen.
"Everything," responded the lawyer; "he didn't take a shilling with him."
"Where a woman," said Mrs. Partridge, "has been married with a congealing heart, and one that beats depending to her own, she will never want to enter the marriage state again."
Some people complain about their children being non-observant, but we'd like to see the child who won't observe how the family pie is cut, and who has the biggest piece.
Some women get up a clever reputation for amiability by taking a little boy into the embraces with them, and making him stand up and give his seat to somebody about twenty times during the trip.
A young man who knows all about it states that his experience has taught him that a girl is a fool who delights in feeling fools, and the fool who is fooled by such a fool is the fooliest kind of a fool.
A rustic youngster, being asked out to tea with a friend, was admonished to prepare the table. Presently the latter perceived him, and when he remarked, "Try and remember that there's of it," and observing a smile, "And plenty of it—such as it is."
Three little boys in Montreal have been sentenced to three years in the Reformatory School for stealing pigeons and plucking all the feathers of the birds while living. Their excuse for indulging in such cruelty was that they liked to see the birds "hobble about naked."
An unfortunate girl fatally shot by a jealous Russian in a house of ill-fame kept by her sister in Constantinople, plantfully missed, as her sister kneeling at her dying bedside, asked if she had anything to say: "O sister! I hope you'll do better. This is my parting gift to you. This ain't no place for me to go."
Mr. Yeast has just been admitted to the Cincinnati bar. With a jury composed of seven men, and a dough-ty crumb he'd be 1—N. Y. Case No. 4. He is doubtless a rising man, and if he has led to the law will make light of any ordinary case. In the trial of any fourcase he will be much needed.—Boston Advertiser.
An instance of shoddy aristocracy meanness is reported from the South End, Boston, where a wealthy woman hired for a servant her own sister, treated her in all respects as a mortal and, though she and her husband, having no children, died, when she was in the house, they never permitted the sister to sit at the table.
The Christianian falls in reply to the protest of a correspondent who complains of a minister for omitting several verses of the hymns, "All hail! the power of Jesus' name," says very truly: "It would be better as a general rule, to curtail the sermon and make the prayers shorter, rather than mutilate the hymns which are the wings of worshippers' souls."
They have a rather queer way of dealing with criminals up at Rome, New York. The Fort Star National Bank, which was looted by the forgeries of C. P. Washburn, has settled up with him, and he has gone back to his old business of speculating in grain. "It is now thought that the amount of the bad paper held by the bank is only $20,000."
There is scarcely any case to which children are subject so hard to hear and difficult to cure as the ear-ache. But there is a remedy, never known to fail. Take a bit of cotton batting, put upon it a piece of black paper, gather it up and dip it in sweet oil and insert into the ear. Put a flannel bandage over the head to keep it warm. It will give immediate relief.
Old Keyser found Cooley's boy standing in a very suspicious position under his bean apple tree, with a stick in his hand, and certain bulky appearance about his pockets. Having secured him firmly by the collar, Keyser shook him up a bit, and then asked him, "What are you doing with that stick?" "Ain't a dot's worth of it," said Cooley, "I came over yer to study."
"That's entirely 'too thin,'" exclaimed Keyser. "Yes I did! I come over yer to study about Sir Isaac. We had it in our lesson. He was in an orchard and saw an apple fall, and that made him invent the 'frustration of gravitation' and come yer to see it was so?" "It wasn't do, senny," said Keyser. "You're too enthusiastic about Sir Isaac; and, besides, what were you going to do with that stick?" "Why, I got me this stick to hold for him while he went on an errand for his aunt." "And where did that apple come from this on the ground?" "That's another case! That one lying there? The birds to eat it up this mornin'. I saw a blackbird drop it there, and I says to myself, then birds are just wakin' Mr. Keyser's apples."

HAWAIIAN GAZETTE

AN INDEPENDENT JOURNAL,

DEVOTED TO HAWAIIAN PROGRESS.

Death of Commander Morris, the Hero of the "Cumberland."

There was a little item in the telegraphic news

recently that ought to be enough to lower to half-mast every flag from the Atlantic to the Pacific; that ought to cause a pang of sorrow to every heart in the land. Commander G. M. Morris is dead. The man who gave to his country an example of devotion unparalleled—who gave the world a new idea of American citizenship—has passed away. He was in command of the Cum- berland on that memorable day when the Merrim- ack, called by the Confederates the Virginia, appeared in Hampton Roads. His ship, like the victim chosen to the stake, was hard aground

when the plated monster drew near and demanded its surrender. The demand was answered by a broadside, and when, rent from deck to keel

and last settling down, the demand was renewed with a threat that if not complied with the Cum- berland should be sunk. Morris answered back:

"Sink away!" and, when torn through and through by the iron monster, the brave old ship went down; with a fall broadside she rained defiance at once to the foe and to death. It was the

Thermopylae of the sea, the grand picture ever presented on the face of the deep, and the wreck that there settled beneath the waves was the most splendid that ever old ocean engulfed.

On the Cumberland! the wreck

No'er before such sorrow passed;

No'er an ocean's waves pursued;

Was so fair a bride carried back.

Morris went down with his ship, but his life was saved, and now, after a dozen years, amid the calm of peace and where no murmur of sobbing sea could break upon his ears, he has died. His memory will not be honored in this generation as it deserves, but his is a glory that will enlarge through the years, until at last, in the imaginations of men, he will be pictured as a demi-god,

one of those Titans who lived in the earlier world, who loved nothing so well as his native land, who feared nothing but dishonor. But this generation should not let his death go unnoticed.

Some flags should be draped; some funeral hymns chanted; some solemn processions should be formed, and guns fired in solemn salute to his dormant soul should echo from that sea where he fought to this other sea which laves our

Western shores, that the youth of our nation might catch the inspiration which filled the soul of Morris and made his acts immortal; that the world

might see we remembered gratefully and reverently the hero who stood stoic and calm, beneath his flag when warping ship and shots assailed him, and when the lightning sea opened its insatiable waves to engulf him.—Virginia Enter-

Memorial of Sir John Franklin.

The London Times of July 31st says: "A memorial in marble of Sir John Franklin, graced with lines by the Poet Laureate, will be to-day unveiled in Westminster Abbey. Intended by the faithful, loving widow, who has lately departed, to remind a nation of the heroic dis-covener whom she loved with unselfish devotion,

the memorial is now made to tell the story of that never-failing affection, while presenting a fitting picture of the Arctic explorer's life and death. The sculptured picture stands in what is now known as the 'Nightingale Chapel,' a place formerly screened off into three chapels—

those of St. Andrew, St. Michael, and St. John the Evangelist. It is now called the 'Nightingale' from the monument to which death is depicted as having issued from a cell and in self. I had not to do to maintain them during my life, and I'm sure I'll not trouble my head

about them now I am dead.

My son and pigs, and my crochets along with my hats, my tobacco, too hats, and my mass book I have to Fadder McDonough, for a good by-something—I fire hard, he's a good soul and at the bottom.

Meo oak saplin, my dog, my woolen night-cap

and my razor I give to honest Toby Hoorgan,

the best crafter that ever dra breath. I have him also me good shirt. As to the one I have on now it is not worth anybody's taking, and so I have it to my wife, that she may have on reason to complain.

DEKXIS TOOK.

February 27, 1875.

ODDITIES.

I forgive all the world except meo wife, and I forgive her too; but it's against meo will, and I do it to please Fadder McDonough and kape me own soul out of purgatory. I don't ritely know where I shall go to, but I'm pretty aisy about that, as I got abolition coming to-day without the preater's knowin' what I had got in meo bod.—

Lawson, (Pa.) Express.

Meetings of Moody and Sankey in London.

At one of the meetings, Mr. Moody said some remarkable incidents had occurred in connection with his London mission. One was that of a man who had come all the way from Scotland.

He had been reading of the great work going on in London in the vast hall in which they were now assembled. That man from the far North felt that he must come too, and ask what he must do to be saved. He came to the services that had been held during the week, and was so impressed with what he heard, and with the solemnity of the great and impressive scene, that he came to him and said, "Well, I am all right now, and having laid hold of the truth, I am off back to Scotland again." He said to the man, "Do you mean to say that you have come all the way
