The Guardian of Princess Kaiulani Speaks Strongly Against It—Says the United States Cannot Conscientiously Absorb the Islands

The guardian of Princess Kaiulani during her stay in England, Theophilus H. Davies, accompanied by his son, George H. Davies, reached the city yesterday and is staying at the Palace.

When seen by a Call reporter last evening he denied that the Princess, who is expected here the first part of the week, is coming for any political purpose. He said: "If I had thought there was any political significance in the visit of the Princess and her father to Honolulu I should have advised against it."

"The Princess has no thought of politics in this trip. She is simply going back to her home, which she has not seen for eight years. At the time of the revolution a residence for her was in the course of construction, and it is now finished. This she will occupy during her stay in the islands."

"She, with her father, A. S. Cleghorn, reached New York on the 16th, on which day, by the way, the Princess was 22 years of age. They spent two or three days in New York and then went to Washington. When they will reach here I do not know."

"I am not here to meet the Princess, but on my regular trip to the islands to look after my sugar business. While I am not in any way interested in the politics of Hawaii and the present officers of the Government are my personal friends. I am opposed to annexation as I have always been. I don't think it would be good for the United States or the Hawaiians, and I can't see how the United States has the moral right to annex the islands. In face of the appeal of the natives I don't see how it can be done conscientiously without further investigation."

"I believe it would be a serious step for the United States and don't see how American statesmen with American principles could think of it. The natives want their own flag and the English in Hawaii are for the most part opposed to annexation. Those who desire it are chiefly those engaged in commercial and agricultural pursuits. The movement was started on account of a revulsion of feeling against the corruption of the Government, which, I regret to say, was great, as it is in all governments. However, I feel that the remedy sought for the evil is the wrong one. If it is done, and the United States has power to do it, in my opinion it will be for political purposes and not from reason."—S. F. Call.

Princess Kaiulani and the Crown Lands of Hawaii.

Princess Kaiulani, who arrived here late Tuesday night en route from England to her native land of Hawaii, would not personally discuss her general plans or her aspirations yesterday, but left the statement of her position to her father, Mr. Cleghorn.

In response to various inquiries he said, when interviewed in his apartments at the Occidental Hotel: "My daughter and myself are not going to take any part in politics. No, we shall not go to Washington to oppose annexation. The Princess entered her protest several years ago. It is of record and was pretty generally published at the time."

"We are on our way to Honolulu to reside at our old home on a place of about eighty acres, four miles from town."

"My daughter was a child when she left Hawaii eight and a half years ago. She is now a young woman. The people wish to see her."

"The reason for having been taken to England to be educated has been misconstrued. She is no more English in spirit to day than is a Californian. It was thought best to have her education progress in a country governed as a constitutional monarchy that in time she might be better fitted to rule Hawaii. It was with the advice of Mr. Dole and others of the present Government of Hawaii that she was sent to England to be educated.

"As to the extent of the Hawaiian crown lands I cannot speak with certainty. All the lands of the islands belonged originally to King Kamehameha. He and his immediate successors to the throne gave certain tracts away for different purposes. I know that when King Kalakaua wanted to raise money by selling some of the crown lands he always had to obtain the signature of the heir apparent before the deed of sale was considered complete."

"At the time of the overthrow the crown lands were bringing in only about $50,000 a year, because they were poorly and incompetently managed. I do not know if there are over 1,000,000 acres, but I know that much of the land is rich and is very productive, if properly handled."

"Since the overthrow the Dole Government has assumed control of these lands. Where the title lies you may judge for yourself."

"Certainly I am opposed to annexation. I am in spirit a Hawaiian, for I went there as a boy of 15. All the Hawaiians, the natives, object to annexation. It would be bad for the Hawaiian and bad for the Americans."

"This country would gain nothing by it. The United States already owns Pearl Harbor, an unequalled haven for a coaling station, and this country has 95 percent of the trade with the islands. I cannot see what the United States would gain."

"If the country should come into possession of the islands the expenditure of millions and millions of dollars would be required to build necessary fortifications on each of the seven islands with their extensive seaboard."

Princess Kaiulani and her father will sail from here next Tuesday in the steamship Australia. The Princess will occupy one of the bridal chambers.—S. F. Call, October 28.

SATURDAY, NOV. 6, 1897.

Hon. S. Perry Smith, a great authority in Polynesian languages will arrive here during the month from New Zealand. We are glad he is coming; the language of Mr. Dole's official organs is getting too much for us and a competent interpreter is needed. Our readers will appreciate the samples of Dole's polynesian:

HE STEERS THE SHIP.

Mr. S. B. Dole has tried to steer the ship of the Hawaiian State through the breakers of dissatisfaction, hatred and the general opposition of the Hawaiian people. He has tackled the Japanese and Chinese questions and has succeeded in avoiding an issue through procrastination. He has been unable to settle the Hawaiian question, and in spite of his efforts to conciliate the people from whom he and his participants in crime stole a country, he still finds himself face to face with an opposition composed of men, women and children of the soil and of those whose principles and ideas of honor prevented them from joining him in his selfish nefarious game.

But why should a man be expected to steer a ship of State who cannot manage the helm of a vessel, bound for the "safe" Pearl Harbor, which has been described as suitable for the largest fleet of the United States by every annexationist.

The white squadron hasn't tried yet to enter Pearl Harbor and for very good reasons. The great admirals stationed here are not anxious to run the American navy ashore on the reefs guarding the magnificent harbor, which the jingoes claim will be the stronghold of America, and incidentally a source of promotion and higher wages to naval officers at the expenses of the American taxpayers.

Dole, however, braved the dangers and a few days ago he sailed to Pearl Harbor in his yacht the Bonnie Dundee. His skipper was not on board but there were yachtsmen, like the "boss" of the Yorktown and others who ought to know how to handle a boat.

A fair breeze was blowing and playing—"la-di-dah"—with the Dole whisks. The Bonnie Dundee had a move on, and after a small difficulty she left the harbor and carried the party of navigators towards Puuloa. It is fortunate that the course from the harbor to the entrance of Pearl Harbor is not inconvenienced by rocks or shallow grounds. That fact saved the yacht from touching bottom until she got into the lochs of the great harbor, which the naval officers who have inspected it from the bar rooms of the town have declared the finest harbor in the world.

"Captain" Dole passed the entrance and then his yacht ran ashore. The sails were flopping and an executive council was called to decide whether the canvass should be pulled down or whether it should be left to the wind to do the business. The meeting lasted about 25 minutes and then poor old Dole was just as puzzled as he is after listening to his Cabinet councils when annexation or a new typewriter for a department are discussed.

The sails went down, however, and after some distress signals the Bennington launch, stationed at Pearl Harbor was obtained and the presidential yacht was floated once more, by the assistance of the little steamer.

The president sailed back. His party would have preferred to walk or take the train for home, but the hour was late and no naval officer will ever go back on Dole, the man who was placed in position by Wiltze, the Captain of the Boston, the "daisy" of the U. S. navy. All stayed with Dole, but on the return trip someone else did the steering. At the entrance to Honolulu harbor the festive yachtsmen were met by the Yorktown launch, which had been sent out to fish up the remains, at least, of her "boss," and eventually all were landed safe and sound.

The "opposition" is glad to see "friend" Dole, the "enemy," out of the reach of danger, but we hope that the brave old revolutionist in the future will take his skipper along when he goes out a-yachting and run no more risks—to his invited guests. To steer a State to Sheol is bad enough; the result, however, means general disaster. To run a yachting party ashore and into the water is quite different. It may end in a job for the undertakers. Remember that U. S. warships are not always on hand to pull Dole's establishment out of deep water.

HENRY GEORGE DEAD.

Henry George, the author of "Progress and Poverty," and one of the nominees for the mayoralty of Greater New York, calmly passed away seated in his arm chair at 4 o'clock on the morning of October 29th, of cerebral apoplexy, engendered by the strenuous labors of the contest.

His death thins the ranks of one of the most notable and influential thinking men of the century, and in token of this his political opponents vie with his myriad friends in paying homage to his memory and fame.

Almost his last words showed the true creed of his heart and brain: "I am for men, the equal rights of all men. Let us be done with asking privileges for the laboring men."

The writer knew him intimately in the earlier days of his struggles in San Francisco, during the period that he was preparing his famous work which gave him international fame, "Progress and Poverty," and after he had achieved his honors. Not endowed with beauty of person, he was gifted with so loveable a character that he endeared all who met him to him in a manner almost magnetical and—fanatical. "To know him was to love him." His manly traits and indomitable perseverance under difficulties that would have crushed men of smaller genius won for him the esteem and respect of those who could not agree with his political opinions. He was the prophet and leader of the poor and by them will his memory and labors be especially cherished.

In the S. F. Call of October 30, ex-Senator Patrick J. Murphy, one of his earliest and closest friends, associates and pupils, pays an interesting and fitting tribute to his memory.

ANOTHER ANNEXATION LIE.

Who was the author of this one? The Boston Transcript and other eastern papers contain the following:

ANTI ANNEXATION MEETING A FAILURE.

HONOLULU, Oct. 12, via San Francisco, Oct. 20.—The mass meeting of Hawaiians to protest against annexation was a fizzle. Though the crowd numbered fully 1500, the greater part left as soon as the speakers began to deal with figures. The speakers were the heads of the native societies and J. O. Carter, a white man, the former cabinet officer under the ex queen. The Portuguese committee called on Senator Morgan and assured him of the strong desire of their countrymen for annexation.

The meeting alluded to was the largest and most enthusiastic ever held in Hawaii. Palace Square was filled as never before. Mr. Carter never was a cabinet officer under King or Queen. The crowd increased from the time the meeting opened to its close. Try again.

Death of Aldrich.

Wm. H. Aldrich, for many years a well-known citizen of Honolulu, died in San Francisco on the 23d of last month. The cause of death was dropsy.

Aldrich was born here 40 years ago, and was a son of W. H. Aldrich, who at one time was a partner in the banking house of C. R. Bishop and who amassed considerable wealth.

Poor old "Billy" was one of the "boys" who had many friends when he was "flush" and a few when he was a "broker." Years ago he inaugurated the Honolulu Rifles through his cousin, Governor Dominis, and was the first captain of that celebrated organization. He was engaged in business here but was not successful. His liberality and "big" heart did not agree with the cold calculations of Hawaii's business men and he finally left for California. There he tried to test the validity of his father's will under which one fourth of the estate—valued $1,000,000—was placed in trust for him. He abandoned the attempt, and his share of the vast property will now go unconditionally to his four young children, now residing in Honolulu with their mother, Mrs. Minnie Aldrich, eldest daughter of the late Captain John Brown.

The first regular standing army was established in Egypt about 3800 years ago.

Record Breakers

It is announced that the French will attempt to build steamers to break all Atlantic records. If the French are as fast on the sea as they are said to be on land, the records probably will have to go.—Chicago Time-Herald.

CONSTANT HEADACHE.

Miss S. Mollie Percy, Gives Her Experience of Her Lifelong Suffering and Cure.
 The following communication has just been received from Miss S. Mollie Percy, of Searsport, Maine, where she is well and favorably known:
 "I was a sufferer from constant headache all my life, frequently accompanied with nausea and sick stomach, especially before and during severe attacks. I am now thirty years old, and as far back as I can remember I was never free from these depressing and distressing attacks, and did not know what it was to feel well, until last winter, when having seen so much written, and heard so much spoken, about Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, made up my mind to see if they would do me any good. I therefore bought some of them and began to take them according to directions.
 "I soon began to experience relief, and have improved ever since. I am still taking them, and shall continue so to do until I am free of the slightest symptom of my old enemy. I am a firm believer in the efficiency of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I shall never be without them as they have done me so much good."
 (Signed) S. M. PERCY.
 Witness: Mrs. J. E. NICHOLL.
 Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Sold by all dealers in medicine.
 The Argument of Tyranny.
 Speaking of the memorial which the Hawaiian people have addressed to the President, the Congress and the people of the United States, protesting against the proposed annexation of Hawaii to this country by treaty with the Dole Government, and demanding, in accordance with the Declaration of Independence, that the people of Hawaii shall have a voice in determining the Government that shall rule over them, the Chronicle says:
 "Questions about new territory have never been referred by our Government or any other to a vote of aboriginal natives. If that had not been the rule the greater part of America and all of Africa would now be uncivilized. As for the kanakas, they do not know what is best for them, least of all what is best for the United States and for progress, and so will have to be treated about as children are when they refuse to attend school. They must be gently but firmly put in the right track."
 This is the argument George III. used in his war against the American colonies; it is the argument Spain is using now against Cuba; it is the argument Great Britain would have used against Venezuela had not the United States interposed and suggested arbitration. It has been used in every war of spoliation by a strong power against a weak one since the world began. It is an argument the United States is destined not to maintain, but to overthrow.
 The people of Hawaii are not barbarians; they are not unfitted for self-government. They have for years maintained a Government of such just laws that Americans have gone there to live and to invest money. It is a land of schools and churches, a land of free speech and newspapers. It is in vain we will seek to justify ourselves in our own minds if we impose upon such a people a Government without their consent.
 Only a despotic Government can justify to itself a despotic act of aggression, and the United States is not a despotism. The Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States, the Gettysburg address—every sacred document of our history, declares against the wrong the Chronicle now advocates. To annex Hawaii without the consent of her people will be to stultify the past, stain the present and endanger the future of our own great republic.—S. F. Call.

CORRESPONDENCE.

A Minute From the Past.

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:—

In looking over some memoranda made some 25 years ago I found some recorded points of a conversation had in Chicago with a gentleman who has since made his name internationally known as a great statesman, and one especially prominent in his knowledge by personal observation of the governments of the leading nations of the world. The topic was the United States and its future, and curiously enough it touched somewhat upon the Sandwich Islands. His opinion then was that the United States possessed within its own borders the seeds of its own disintegration, and among these "seeds" he enumerated labor, religious and socialistic troubles; the vast area and unwieldiness of the territory to be controlled and administered by a central government situated in a hole and corner, as it were, of that country, with the divers and often conflicting interests of States widely differing in climatic and radical conditions; the immense cumulative power of wealth in the hands of trusts and corporations, then only in their infancy, and the increasing lust of power and luxurious display which in time would lead to the desire and paraphernalia of war and conquest with their attendant ambitions and disappointments and necessarily in time not only to the attempted absorption of the whole of the American continent but gradually by the annexation of Hawaii, Samoa, Tahiti and the other islands of the Pacific, to an attempted domination of the Orient by the power of wealth and commerce in the first instance applied to China and Japan. In these struggles for power she might in the conflicts which would necessarily arise between herself and European powers be aided by the colossus of the North for a time, but then even if she successfully passed through these terrible struggles, would come the hour when with corruption and trouble rampant at home she would be brought to terms and collapse like a punctured bubble by her formally who would become the world's ruler. Europe would some day, he thought, fear the United States as too strong a power to attack unless she broke through her sea-coast lines and entered upon the old world's policy of colonization, in which event she would so materially weaken herself that she need no longer be feared. Europe, he thought, would never ask for the Sandwich Islands so long as they were independently and properly governed in pursuance of the Articles of 1843; but after they had once become a colony or possession of the United States then they must follow the fate of all colonial or outlying possessions and be controlled by the power that could obtain and hold them. FENIAN.

Rampant Anarchy.

ED. THE INDEPENDENT:—

"Really some of the comments upon the future of these Islands after annexation are most amusing. According to these writers one would believe that the United States bred anarchy and every form of evil. Those misguided Americans who still cling to the royalist cause must be very much pleased to see the United States thus described. A course of Emerson, Washington Irving, Howells, Mahan, Longfellow and other shining lights in many styles, will clear away the cobwebs of prejudices," etc. Thus again wails the much befogged Star. During the time those honored men graced the land of Uncle Sam, where were the thousands upon thousands of lawless tramps that are now scattered broadcast through every State in the Union, as they are at present? And has not "anarchy" for sometime past, been growing in the United States? Who caused the great riot in Chicago some few years ago but Anarchist's? What was Coxey's army, was it a band of Saints? And again, during the lives of Emerson, Washington Irving, etc., was there such a thing known as a rotten

United States sugar trust Senate, as there is to day? And furthermore, during the lives of the above honored men, was there ever such a disgraceful scene as the last closing of Congress, with it turned into a brothel by drunken Senators and fast women, with two damnable rascally old Senators, debauching a beautiful young maiden of sixteen years with whiskey, as exposed by the New York Herald? And again, is it not a disgrace to elect a man to fill the presidential chair, who can be controlled by an unscrupulous Mark Hanna? I defy the Star or any of its friends, to point out in years gone by, or at present, a more disgraceful rotten state of affairs, than is the political policy of the United States this very day. In the years of Emerson, Washington Irving, etc., such characters as John L. Stevens, and Captain Wiltse, would have been hung to a lamp post without ceremony. But in these years of our Lord, the almighty dollar rules, with character at a discount. The Star closes its harangue thus: "We had strings of adventurers enough under the monarchy." I again defy the Star to point out one single adventurer during long years under the monarchy, outside of the Star and its connections.

"Through tattered clothes small vices do appear—
Robes and furred gowns hide all.
Plate sin with gold,
And the strong lance of justice hurtless breaks—
Arm it in rage; a pigmy's straw doth pierce it."
