KAKAOKO'S GREATEST DAY

A HULA FOR MEMBERS OF THE GRAND JURY.

Inquisitors Look Into a Building Where Swipes and Dice Make Business for the Police.

The Grand Jury created a sensation in Kakaoko yesterday afternoon. The jurors paid a visit to the district. The object of the visit is said to have been to investigate the condition of a big lodging house on Queen street, from which have come many police court cases.

The several hundred inhabitants of the lodging house were decidedly impressed with such a visit from a lot of prominent citizens, and there was a great scurrying to and fro to prepare rooms when the jurors were seen coming.

The thickly populated district where the building stands seldom receives a visit from the business men of Honolulu, and looks like a bit of foreign community.

The Grand Jury will report on what was seen and make recommendations, if it finds that any are needed, as to the improvement of the district.

Tonight and Monday are positively the last two nights of the Poliard Lilliputian opera company in Honolulu.

NEW WATER SUPPLY FOUND

TRUE SOURCE WAIPIO STREAM DISCOVERED.

Surveyors for the Bishop Estate Make Valuable Discoveries—Will Furnish 8,000,000 Gallons Daily.

HILO, October 4.—A. S. Tuttle and Harold Cruzan, surveyors for the Bishop Estate in the Waipio Valley have succeeded in reaching the source of Waipio stream from three to five miles higher than is shown by any maps published.

The source of Waipio cannot be seen except after days of great toil and persistent exertion and can only be reached at certain seasons, when the waters in the great chasm at the head of Waipio are low, permitting the explorer to pass two miles along the bed of the chasm by jumping from rock to rock.

The surveying party encountered very cool weather. Sleeping at night on the rocks with a blanket and a rain coat for a covering, they found it necessary to burn fires all the night to keep off the chill.

At the extreme upper source of Waipio stream they find a daily supply of 8,000,000 gallons, which might be flung straight to the sea without the intervention of a pump.

Some of the educational classes are full to the limit, others can accommodate a few more.

SCHLEY COURT OF INQUIRY

THE TEXAS AND BROOKLYN IN THE FIGHT.

Officers of the Former Tell of the Famous "Loop" and its Effect on Their Vessel.

WASHINGTON, September 22.—At this morning's session of the Schley court the deck log book of the Brooklyn, Texas, Iowa, Castine, Marblehead, Massachusetts, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Oregon, St. Paul, Scorpion, Yale, Vixen, Eagle, Dupont, Hawk and Merrimack were presented.

This he placed at from 25 to 30 tons a day, and that he thought 150 to 175 tons would have sufficed to go to Key West.

Lieutenant-Commander L. C. Hellner of the Texas during the Spanish war, was next called. He said he had heard no guns fired when the squadron approached Cienfuegos.

"Under good weather fresh wind and a sea that was moderate to rough," he stated, "the battle of July 3rd, he stated that the Texas had been heading about east when the enemy was seen coming out of Santiago and described how he reported to the captain how nicely the Brooklyn was standing up to fight.

DEFENSE OF THE YELLOW

THE EXAMINER'S ANSWER TO ITS CRITICS.

Claims to Represent the "Common People" and Says an Assassination Cannot Act to Suppress Criticism.

While the newspapers and weeklies of the United States are joining in denunciation of the Hearst newspapers, as responsible for the development of such characters as Czolgoz by reason of their inflammatory sentiments, the San Francisco Examiner has an equally vigorous defense.

"There are things that need to be said and that can be said NOW with propriety, as to which good taste has hitherto demanded silence."

"Who are they against whom 'The Examiner' has fought, and those who have been hurt in the newspaper business by a success which is at once a rebuke to incapacity and an infuriating provocation to envy and jealousy."

"What good institution, what good cause, has 'The Examiner' injured? Has it assailed the State? Has it attacked the church? Has it antagonized any reform movement, or hurt at any time any legitimate business interest?"

"Dishonest bankers shall wreck banks and be spoken of with urbanity lest some ruined depositor, learning from the press instead of personal experience what ruin means, shall be goaded to rage vengeance."

"Because a villain or a madman has murdered a President of the United States we are to have no more political controversies."

"Suppose Mr. Bryan had been elected and assassinated as was Mr. McKinley, how would the editorials and cartoons of the republican press sound and look?"

"The poor are no longer to be told that poverty is not due to God's decree but to man's social maladjustments and therefore curable, lest some victim of poverty be turned into an assassin."

"The trusts ought to escape all criticism, all curb, lest some among their crushed competitors or pillaged victims be goaded to crime by the knowledge that some ruin means, shall be goaded to rage vengeance."

KALUA OBJECTS TO PAYING A FEE.

A Spendthrift Who Doesn't Want to Spend $500 on Attorneys' Fees in a Lost Cause.

Kalua Kapukini, spendthrift, took the stand in Judge Little's court this morning, to say whether or not she wanted to pay the fee asked for by the firm of Humphreys and Gear, for professional services. Attorney Magoon said he had not consulted with her.

"Why?" asked Magoon. "Because the lawyers lost the case," was the reply.

"It that any reason? Are not attorneys to be paid for their services performed, even if they lose?" "Yes, I suppose so."

"Well, why not pay these attorneys?" "Aole."

Judge Little wanted to know if the attorneys had been asked by Kalua to draw up the papers and bring an action in court. She stated that they had.

"The case was resumed this afternoon, Magoon replying to the argument of Fitch."

A WEDDING AT WAIALUA

MRS ATKINSON MARRIED TO R. C. L. PERKINS.

A Host of Friends Will Extend Good Wishes—Was a Very Quiet Affair. The Bride and Groom.

WAIALUA, Oahu, October 5.—Miss Zoe L. S. A. Atkinson, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alatau T. Atkinson, was married last evening at 6 o'clock to R. C. L. Perkins.

The marriage took place at the Wai-alua Hotel in the presence of Colonel and Mrs. Curtis P. Lauka and the father and mother of the bride. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Olli of the Wai-alua church.

Few couples will receive heartier good wishes or from a wider circle of friends than Mr. and Mrs. Perkins. The bride has lived almost all her life in Honolulu and has always been a favorite among her large circle of friends, and an active spirit in the social life of the community.

The winter athletic season opens with great promise. There are few parts of the union where climatic conditions admit of outdoor athletics the year round.

The discoveries in regard to the sources of the water of Waipio gulch just made by the surveyors for the Bishop Estate, show how imperfectly the geography of these islands has yet been described. These discoveries in connection with the sounding of the lake on the summit of Mauna Kea made earlier in the season, proves that there is still opportunity in these islands for the adventurous and gritty explorer.

A misapplication of statements of fact made at the annual meeting of the Free Kindergarten and Children's Aid Society yesterday has crept into the published reports of the meeting. There was no deficit in the Kindergarten funds last year. Instead there was a balance of about $500 or more carried over. Mrs. Harriet Castle Coleman's statements in regard to next year seem to have been misapprehended. She stated that the pledges for next year already in hand were about $5,600, while the estimate of expenses was about $6,000. She added that she had no doubt that the difference required to make the pledges equal the estimates, would, as they had been in the past, be generously met. So well has public generosity come up to her belief in it, that already about $600 of the necessary additional $1,000, has been pledged. The Kindergarten Association is doing a worthy and growing work, and it is satisfactory to all to know that it is being generously supported.

The death of John George Nicolay in Washington, lately severs another link between the present and that past, not so distant in time, but distant in conditions, when the nation was in the midst of civil war. Mr. Nicolay was one of President Lincoln's private secretaries. He was private secretary at a time when that position did not have the dignity and prominence which Daniel Lamont gave it and his successors have maintained, a prominence and importance almost equal to that of a cabinet minister. But Nicolay served Lincoln and the country well as private secretary, and he served Lincoln and the country well in his "Life of Lincoln" prepared in collaboration with John Hay who was also one of Lincoln's private secretaries, and now Secretary of State. This life of Lincoln is in many ways a masterpiece. Cumbersome in its mass of material, it is yet clear, concise, well proportioned and excellent in its perspective. It is one of the proofs of Lincoln's greatness that he surrounded himself with great men in his councils, and the careers of his two private secretaries adds additional emphasis to this characteristic for both of them have shown themselves able men and one of them has some claims to greatness.

PREACHING.

The advent in Honolulu of what in the Catholic church are known as "mission priests" suggests reference to the place preaching has had in the propaganda of faith. St. Paul, who was a profound philosopher said, "By the foolishness of preaching, God had chosen to call all men unto him."

The history of Christianity has shown that its extension everywhere has been the result of preaching; that the greatest and most profound religious movements have been preaching movements, and this in both the Catholic and the Protestant communions. Yet in spite of nineteen centuries of evidence on this point, every great preaching movement has been allowed to become paralyzed by its own success; to be changed from a movement to an institution; from dynamic to static force.

The church herself is the profoundest illustration of this. Originally a movement and a preaching movement, going into all the world and preaching the gospel to every creature, within an incredibly short time Christianity had spread in every direction in Europe, Asia and Africa. But following the success of preaching the movement became an institution, losing its active force and becoming rigid and inflexible in its organization. So much so that as one result of the activity of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, some of those early established churches have been rediscovered where they were left when they changed from the name of faith to the monuments of faith.

And right through the centuries the process has been the same. In the Catholic church men profoundly impressed with the sterility of the church as an institution, have risen to make it a preaching movement. In the Catholic church it was natural that the machinery of such a movement should be a monastic order. Hence the succession of what were known as "preaching monks." Of these the Dominicans were in many respects the most typical. To the age in which the order originated it was what the Salvation Army is to ours. Like the Salvation Army it was unconventional in its methods. Its members declared its purpose to be to take the gospel to every creature. If the people would not come to the churches, to hear the gospel, the members of the order would take the gospel to them. They would go out into the highways and by-ways and compel the people to hear. The members of the order led on by a burning zeal for souls were everywhere, preaching in the fields, in the streets, wherever anyone could be got to hear. Like the Salvation Army it was derided, abused, laughed at. Its methods were said to be unseemly and such as would bring contumely and disrespect on the church and the gospel. But it was not long before the Dominicans became respectable and effective. The notoriety they achieved attracted to their ranks men not fired with a zeal for preaching the gospel, but anxious to get into good and respectable company. Men took the obligations of the Dominican order not because they felt called to the work as a vocation, but because it furnished an avocation. Converts dying left bequests to the order and its fate as a moving force was sealed. With the ownership of property it became conservative. Having something to lose it began to fear any change of conditions. Before, it would have turned the world upside down to save souls. Now it began to be very careful about anything too radical. And so from a movement the order of Dominicans became an institution. It ossified from an activity that knew no rest into the paralyzing influence it is found in the Philippines.

The history of a score of preaching orders in the Catholic church is but a repetition of the history of the Dominicans. In the Protestant churches where preaching movements have usually taken the form not of a new order but of a new denomination the same processes have followed each other. Methodism had its beginnings in a preaching movement. It had its growth in its "protracted meetings," its lay preaching, its revivals and its experience meetings. And Methodism in very large degree for nearly a century maintained its preaching fervor and its growth. But as its energies became diverted from preaching to building fine churches and establishing universities, growth decreased. Bishop Fowler of the Methodist church in one of the early sermons of his episcopate predicted the final conversion of the world by the beginning of this century, basing his prediction on the growth of Methodism. With the beginning of the century came a world still unconverted, and Methodism at a standstill in growth. The Methodist church had changed from a great preaching movement to a great ecclesiastical institution; an institution great in the extent of its benevolences, great in its literary and publishing interests, great in its church edifices and in the schools and colleges it maintains, great as a static force.

The Young Men's Christian Association began as a vitalizing, evangelizing, preaching force. Wherever it sprang into existence its yoke fellows were to be seen holding out of door services, preaching, spreading the gospel. Its early reports were of conversions, of souls saved. It was predicted of it that it was the agency which would save the world because it was utilizing the services of young men in preaching the gospel. The Young Men's Christian Association has just celebrated its golden jubilee. It has become a great institution. Its property in Y. M. C. A. buildings and real estate amounts to millions. It carries on immense athletic and educational enterprises. In its reports gymnasium and evening class statistics take the place of conversions and open air meetings of the earlier days. The same change has come over it that has come over other things. It is an institution not a preaching movement.

The great wave of evangelical preaching set in motion by Dwight L. Moody, which fired hundreds of other hearts with preaching zeal has largely succumbed to the same seemingly inevitable process and has become institutionalized into bible schools of which the one at Northfield, Mass., is the type and flower, institutions of great god-no doubt but without the dynamic, the moving force of the great preaching propaganda that gave them birth. Even the Salvation Army, originally a preaching movement, comparable only to the Dominican movement and the movement under the Wesleys and Whitfield, is beginning to show signs of the same process towards the institutional. Devoted in its early days to preaching, to carrying the gospel to those who would not otherwise hear it, it has in later years taken up work which must of necessity divert energy from the primary object of General Booth's great movement. Rescue homes, shelter sheds, food distribution depots, land colonization schemes and even life insurance schemes, have absorbed attention and divided energy. The Salvation Army has lost much of the power of its earlier years. It is becoming an institution, respectable, trusted to distribute funds for charity and benevolence, tolerated everywhere, abundant in good works, but not the great preaching propaganda of its earlier years.

It is indeed hard to keep up a preaching propaganda. It requires that burning zeal which is inborn and cannot be put on and off as a garment. Such zeal is not readily handed on to successors. And yet the centuries have proved both in secular and religious progress the soundness of St. Paul's philosophy. Truth is propagated by the foolishness of preaching. Error, like noxious weeds, propagate themselves.

Was Tried on Charge of Having Committed Assault and Battery by Vaccinating a Little School Girl.

Mrs. Dr. L. S. Cleveland was tried this morning before Judge Dickey on a charge of assault and battery upon Annie Kanibo, the six year old step-daughter of Herbert Mossman. The arrest of Dr. Cleveland grew out of her action in vaccinating the little girl contrary to the wishes of its parents.

The child has been attending school. Last February Mrs. Mossman was informed that the child would have to be vaccinated. The mother preferred having her private family physician vaccinate the child, rather than the regular physician employed by the government to go about the schools, so she had Dr. Walter Hoffman perform the operation, a certificate being given.

At the first part of this term Mrs. Mossman was informed that the child would have to be vaccinated. She informed the teacher, Miss Garvin that the little girl had been vaccinated before and said that she did not desire the vaccination to be repeated.

In spite of the child's protests however Dr. Cleveland the government doctor for this school work vaccinated her. In her defence, Dr. Cleveland said she had not been able to determine whether the first mark on the child's arm, was a vaccination mark or not. The child's arm was exhibited, both of the marks being quite apparent. The court said he did not consider the defendant guilty of assault and battery and discharged her. He also said that vaccination was not much more than washing a child's face, anyhow.

Semi-Annual

Sale of Remnants
 September 30 to
 October 5

Remnant week again.
 It never occurs but twice a year here. Never make Remnant week till we're ready—then we do it carefully,—forcefully—make it an event to be talked about and remembered.

For three weeks we have been busy measuring up every remnant and cross length—Silks to Calicoes, Laces, Lawns, Batistes, Organdies, Cambrics, Ginghams, Sheetings, Shirts, Table Linens, Ribbons to Linings—nothing but what's carefully measured—yards and price on each in plain figuring; so that you can practically wait on yourself.

There have been no dull times in this store. The last half-year's business amounted to many thousands more than in the corresponding period last year—hence more remnants; and as to price—well, those of you who attended our sale six months ago know what kind of prices we put on remnants. Those who didn't will be well paid to come in during this week.
