NOTICE.

Having leased the TRAINING STABLES
from H. J. Agnew, at Kapiolani Park, I am now prepared to take horses to train and prepare them for the coming Fair on the 11th of June next.

Breaking and Educating Young Horses
a specialty.

It is a point of importance to all owners of fine young colts not to have them jammed or hammered over the hard roads, and to get them properly handled for the first lessons are the ones that make the horse.

Also in connection with my Training Stables, I will serve a certain number of choice mares with my Young Hambeltonian Stallion "APTOS CHIEF."
He was sired by Electioneer, owned by Gov. Stanford. The sire of Electioneer was Risdeke's Hambletonian. The dam of Aptos Chief was sired by Speculation;
he by Risdeke's Hambletonian—so it will be seen that Aptos is an in-bred of Hambletonian.

Terms for service of Aptos Chief, $50 for the season, payable at the time of service; and all mares failing to be with foal will have the service of the horse the next season free of charge.

SLAVERY?

Scarcely an American mail fails to bring newspapers containing charges against Hawaiian planters, that they maintain a system of virtual slavery upon their estates. One of these articles is before us now, clipped from the Chicago Times of March 28th. It says the "poor wretches" — contract laborers — are herded together like cattle, whole families being given a cabin of one room for their accommodation. Wages are stated to be $8 a month for men and $5 for women, but even these paltry amounts are doctored for time lost in rainy days and sickness. Necessaries have to be bought at the plantation stores, enormous rates being charged for them. "The South Sea Islanders and the Chinese," the article says, "manage to live because their wants are few; but no European laborer, accustomed to ordinary comforts, can ever do more than keep out of debt under this ingeniously devised system." A comparison that we believe to be grossly invidious is made between a certain section of the planters and one large concern. If the charge is true with regard to a portion of the section in question, we know that it is not so regarding the whole of it. However, these repeated charges of slavery in this kingdom cannot be much longer ignored with credit to the country. There are many people here who, when questioned upon the matter, say that there is enough truth in them to prevent their being successfully contradicted as a whole. The Government owes it to the good name of the country to make a searching investigation into the matter and put an end to the abuses if found to exist. Moreover, there is danger of the best sources of our labor supply being dried up by inhuman treatment of contract laborers, if the Kingdom does not even get into serious foreign complications from that cause. Those planters, we trust comprising a large majority, who treat their laborers well, are very much wronged by these wholesale and almost indiscriminate denunciations of the guild which are going abroad, it seems, with increasing number. It is therefore incumbent upon them, in sheer self-defense, to assist in the redress of whatever serious grievances contract laborers are subject to in any part of the Islands.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The trouble about publishing the names of disturbers at the Music Hall, as suggested by a gentle correspondent, is that the punishment would be felt less by the scapegraces than by their innocent relatives.

In to-day's issue we give, by request, a story about flogging by a shipmaster. The friend who handed it in suggested that there was a grand moral in it which might not miss its mark if it struck somewhere in this latitude.

Is there no limit of the age at which young boys are allowed to drive horses through the streets? This morning a break drawn by a spirited horse careered at a startling rate along a main thoroughfare. It was driven by a mere babe of a native, in whose eyes there was a precocious gleam of happy excitement as pedestrians dodged out of the horse's zigzag course. Many children going to school were on that street at the time, to the peril of their lives.

THE NOISY BOYS.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—I shall be grateful if you will allow one of the weaker sex a little space to express indignation at the conduct of a certain class of theatre-goers. You have on previous occasions done your best to remedy the evil of which I complain, therefore I feel sure you will not deny me an opportunity for a word or two on the same matter. I take pleasure in rendering my mite towards the support of theatricals that visit us from time to time, and generally feel that I get full value for my money. Especially do I consider the San Francisco Dramatic Company, at present playing in the Music Hall, deserving of support. The plays they select are chaste, good, and instructive. The most fastidious have no cause to complain on this ground. The acting is also good, on the whole, very good. I have often seen worse even in London and New York. But what I have to complain of is the conduct of a portion of the audience. The whistling, screaming, and other noises are sometimes horrible, and completely destroy the pleasures of the performance. Last night the conduct of some hoodlums in the gallery was unbearable. Such conduct certainly has the effect of keeping decent people at home, when they prefer paying their dollar and getting its value in an evening's amusement. Why don't the police maintain order, and expel those who conduct themselves in such a disgraceful manner? Is it not their duty to do so? I have seen policemen here sit by and never think of using their authority to quell the atrocious uproar. Why so? I, for one, certainly think they neglect their duty. If the police cannot be induced to interfere, would it not, Mr. Editor, be a good thing to publish the names of the gallery culprits? There are several of us who would very gladly furnish a list, authenticated by our own signatures. A WOMAN.

A USEFUL MAN.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—To me, one of your regular readers, it is pleasing to see a gentleman of Mr. Marques' originality and ability taking sufficient interest in public matters to express his views in the newspapers. Although he has resided here quite a number of years, only those who were his personal friends have had the benefit of his intelligent ideas and an unusually large fund of general information until recently. He now comes out of his seclusion, and talks to hundreds and thousands of individuals who are not personally acquainted with him, and gives them the benefit of his reflections, observations, and experience. By this course he is doing good service to his adopted country, and many of your readers thank him for it. Now, I do not wish to imply that Mr. Marques is, in my opinion, invariably right in his conclusions. On the contrary, I am of opinion that he is sometimes wrong. Nevertheless, I am glad to read his views, whether they accord with my own or not, and consider them on their merits. Opinions calmly and logically expressed command my respect and attention, even if they clash with mine. Absolute unanimity of opinion cannot exist as long it is beyond the power of man to determine with absolute certainty between truth and error, right and wrong. But everybody is in a better position to pass judgment on any question after hearing the different sides and viewing its various aspects, and for this reason I and others like to see intelligent men's views communicated to the newspapers. A SHIPMASTER'S STORY ABOUT FLOGGING.

When I was about forty years of age I took command of the ship "Petersham." She was an old craft, and had seen full as much service as she was capable of seeing with safety. But her owners were willing to trust a valuable cargo in her, so I would not refuse to trust myself. We were bound to Liverpool, and nothing unusual happened until about the eighth day out, when we ran foul of a small iceberg. It was early in the morning, before sunrise, and not above six or eight feet of ice was above the water, it having nearly all been melted in the warm waters of the Gulf Stream. I did not think we had sustained much injury, for the shock was light; but I was very angry, and gave the look-out a severe punishment, without stopping to inquire whether he could have seen the berg in time to escape it.

My cabin boy was named Jack Withers. He was fourteen years of age, and this was his first voyage. I had taken him from his widowed mother, and promised her that I would see him well treated—that is, if he behaved himself. He was a bright, quick, intelligent lad. I soon made myself believe he had an awful disposition. I fancied that he was the most stubborn piece of humanity I had ever come across. I had made up my mind he had never been properly governed, and resolved to break him in. I told him I'd curb his temper before I'd done with him. In reply he told me I might kill him if I liked; and I flogged him with the end of the mizzen-top-gallant halliards till he could hardly stand. I asked him if he'd got enough, and he told me I might flog him more if I wished to. I felt a strong inclination to throw the boy overboard, but at that moment he staggered back against the mizzen-mast from absolute weakness, and I left him to himself. When I reasoned calmly about the boy's disposition, I was forced to acknowledge that he was one of the smartest and most intelligent and faithful lads I had ever seen. When I asked him to do anything he would be off like a rocket; but when I roughly ordered him to do it, then came the disposition with which I found fault.

One day, when it was very near noon, I spoke to him to bring up my quadrant. He was looking over the quarter-rail, and I knew he did not hear me; the next time I spoke I ripped out an oath, and intimated if he did not move I'd help him.

"I didn't hear ye," he said with an independent tone.

"No words," said I.

"I suppose I can speak," he retorted, moving slowly towards the companion way.

His looks, words, and the slow, careless manner in which he moved, fired me in a moment, and I grasped him by the collar.

"Speak to me again like that, and I'll flog you within an inch of your life," said I.

"You can flog away," he replied, firm as a rock.

And I did flog him. I caught up the end of a rope and beat him till my arm fairly ached; but he never winced.

"How's that?" said I.

"There's a little more life in me—you'd better flog it out," was the reply.

And I beat him again. I beat him till he sank from my hand against the rail; and I sent one of my other men for my quadrant. When it came and I had adjusted it for observation, I found that the sun had already passed the meridian, and that I was too late. This added fuel to the fire of my madness, and, quickly seizing the lad by the collar, I led him to the main hatchway and had the hatch taken off. I then thrust him down and swore I would keep him there till his stubbornness was broken. The hatch was then put on, and I went into the cabin. I suffered a good deal that afternoon, not with any compunctions of conscience for what I had done, but with my own temper and bitterness.

It made me mad to think that I could not conquer that boy—that I could not break down his cool, stern opposition.

"But I will do it," I said to myself, "by the heavens above me, I will starve him into it, or he shall die under the operation!"

After supper I went to the hatchway and called to him, but he returned me no answer. So I closed the hatch and went away. At ten o'clock I went again, and again got no answer. I might have thought that the flogging had taken away his senses, had not some of the men assured me that they had heard him, not an hour before, talking to himself. I did not trouble him again until morning. After breakfast I went to the hatchway, and called to him once more. I heard nothing from him, nor could I see him—I had not seen him since I put him down there. I called out several times, but he would make no reply—yet the very same men told me they had heard him talking that very morning. He seemed to be calling on them for help, but he would not ask for me. I meant to break him into it. "He'll beg before he'll starve," I thought, and so determined to let him stay there. I supposed he had crawled forward to the fore-castle bulkhead, in order to make the sailors hear him. Some of the men asked leave to go down and look for him, but I refused, and threatened to punish the first man that dared to go down.

At noon I went again, and as he did not answer me this time, I resolved that he should come to the hatchway and ask for me ere I went any more. The day passed away, and when evening came I began to be startled. I thought of the many good qualities the boy had, and of his widowed mother. He had been in the hold thirty-six hours, and all of forty hours without food or drink. He must be too weak to cry out now. It was hard for me to give up, but if he died there from actual starvation, it might go harder with me still. So at length I made up my mind to go and see him. It was not quite sundown when I had the hatch taken off and I jumped down upon the boxes alone.

A little way forward I saw a space where Jack might easily have gone down, and to this point I crawled on my hands and knees. I called out there, but could get no answer. A short distance further was a wide space, which I had entirely forgotten, but which I now remembered had been left open on account of a break in the flooring of the hold, which would let anything that might have been stored there rest directly on the thin planking of the ship.

To this place I made my way, and looking down, I heard the splashing of water, and thought I could detect a sound like the incoming of a tiny jet or stream. At first I could see nothing, but as soon as I became used to the dim light, I could distinguish the faint outlines of the boy at some distance below me. He seemed to be sitting on the broken floor, with his feet stretched out against a cask. I called out to him, and thought he looked up.

"Jack, are you there?"

And he answered me in a faint, weary tone:

"Yes, help me! For heaven's sake help me! Bring men and bring a lantern—the ship has sprung a leak!"

I hesitated, and he added, in a more eager tone:

"Make haste! I will try and hold it till you come back."

I waited to hear no more, but hurried on deck as soon as possible, and returned with a lantern and three men. I leaped down beside the boy and could scarcely believe my own senses. Three of the timbers were completely worm-eaten to the very heart, and one of the outer planks had been broken, and would burst in any moment the boy might leave it, whose feet were braced against the plank before him. Half a dozen little jets of water were streaming in about him, and he was wet to the skin. I saw the plank must burst the moment the strain was removed from it, so I made the men brace themselves against it before I lifted him up. Other men were called down, with planks, spikes, and adzes, and with much care and trouble we finally succeeded in stopping the leak and averting the danger.

The plank which had been stove in was six feet long by eight inches wide, and would let in a stream of water of that capacity. It would have been beyond our reach long before we could have discovered it, and would have sunk us in a very short time. I knew it must be where the iceberg struck us.

Jack Withers was taken to the cabin, and there he managed to tell his story. Shortly after I put him in the hold he crawled forward, and when he became used to the dim glimmer that came through the dead-lights, he looked around for a snug place in which to lie, for his limbs were very sore. He went to sleep, and when he awoke he heard a faint sound, like water streaming through a small hole. He went to the open place in the cargo and looked down, and was sure that he saw a small jet of water springing up through the ship's bottom. He leaped down, and in a few moments found that the timbers had given wholly away, and that the stream was increasing in size. He placed his hand upon the plank, and found it broken, and discovered that the pressure of the water without was forcing it inward. He had sense enough to see that if it gained an inch more it must all go, and the ship be lost and perhaps all hands perish. And he saw, too, that if he could keep the broken plank in its place he might stop the incoming flood. So he sat himself upon it and braced his feet against the cask, and then called for help. But he was too far away—so low down, with such a mass of cargo about him, that his voice scarcely reached other ears than his own. Some of the men heard him, but thought he was talking to himself.

And there he sat, with his feet braced, for four-and-twenty dreary hours, with the water spurting all over him, and drenching him to the very skin. He had several times thought of going to the hatchway and calling for help; but he knew that the broken plank would be forced in if he left it, for he could feel it heavy beneath him; his limbs were racked with pain, but he would not give up. I asked him if he would not have given up if I had not come as I did. He answered that he would not have done it while there was life in him. He said he thought of himself—he was ready to die—but he would save the rest if he could; and he had saved us, surely—saved us all—from a watery grave.

The boy lay sick almost unto death; but I nursed him with my own hands—nursed him all through his delirium; and when his reason returned and he could sit up and talk, I bowed myself before him, and humbly asked his pardon for all the wrong I had done him. He threw his arms around my neck and told me if I would be good to him he would never give cause of offense; he added as he sat up again, "I am not a coward—I could not be a dog."

I never forgot those words; and from that hour I never struck a blow on board my ship. I make my men feel that they are men, that I so regard them, and that I wish to make them as comfortable and happy as possible; and I have not failed to gain their respect and confidence. I give no undue license, but make my crews feel that they have a friend and superior in the same person. For nine years I have sailed in three different ships with the same crew. A man could not be hired to leave me, save for an officer's berth. And Jack Withers remained with me thirteen years. He was my cabin boy; one of my foremost hands; my second mate; and the last time he sailed with me he refused the command of a new bark.—Sailors' and Seamen's Friend.

The Fast Trotting Stallion

VENTURE

RECORD, 2:27 1/4.

Having purchased this celebrated Stallion from MR. JAMES CAMPBELL, I hereby notify the public that he will stand the present season at my headquarters, corner of Punchbowl and Queen Streets (Captain Cluney's). Terms for the season, $50; to insure, $100.

Description.

Venture is a rich chestnut color, 16 hands high, and weighs about 1,100 lbs. In structure he is the picture of great muscular power, and in appearance, temperament and disposition, he is faultless. Full of fire and gentleness, he is without speck or blemish. As a stock horse he is having extraordinary success; his numerous progeny, both in California and in this country, attest this fact, several of them being able to trot low down, and one of his daughters (Venus) can trot in 2:25. Venus is also the dam of Transit, which is said to be the most promising two-year-old in California. He trotted a mile last season, as a yearling, in 2:45.

Pedigree.

Venture, chestnut horse, foaled in 1863, bred by Henry Williamson, Esq., Oakland, California; by Belmont, he by American boy, he by Seagull, he by Imported Expedition.

1st dam, Miss Mostyn, by American Boy, Jr.
2nd dam, by Kenner's Gray Medoc.
3rd dam, Imported Lady Mostyn, by Teniers.
4th dam, Invalid, by Whisker.
5th dam, Helen, by Hambletonian.
6th dam, Susan, by Overton.
7th dam, Drowsy, by Drone.
8th dam, by Old England.
9th dam, by Cullen Arabian.
10th dam, Miss Cade, by Cade.
11th dam, Miss Makeless, son of Greyhound.
12th dam, Belmont, by American Boy.
13th dam, Imported Prunella, by Comus.

In offering the services of this horse to the public I make one claim for him, which is that he is the highest bred trotting stallion in the world, living or dead, and in support of this claim I am willing to submit it to any authority that can be obtained, and if he is not, then I will forfeit all my claims to horse knowledge. It will be seen that his pedigree represents a union of the purest blood of the English and American thoroughbred racer, one of his grand dams, as also one of his great grand dams, being imported from England to the United States. When Venture was on the turf, about eight years ago, he was at that time the sensational horse of the Pacific Coast, and the sporting papers in the East, that were always so much opposed to running blood in the trotter, commenced picking away at his pedigree, trying to find a cold cross in it, at the same time declaring that it was simply impossible for a strictly thoroughbred horse to trot as fast as he was then trotting; but at last they had to give it up, and admitted the fact that he was a strictly thoroughbred horse, but declared him a phenomenon, and were unable to account for his great speed at the trotting gait. But the fame of his sire, old Belmont, is almost world-wide, and it is a well-known fact his blood nicked better with the trotting families than that of any other thoroughbred horse ever known, as, in addition to Venture, two other thoroughbred sons of his, Capt. Webster and Owen Dale, were said to have possessed great speed at the trot. Besides these, he sired the dams of Belle Echo, 2:30; Flora Shepherd, 2:30; Monarch, 2:28; Nelly Patchen, 2:27 1/4; Rustic, 2:30; which is showing that a great many of the best trotting bred horses cannot equal Mr. Patrick Farrell, who is one of the most experienced drivers on the Pacific Coast, told me the last time that I saw him, that Venture was the fastest trotter that he ever pulled a line over, and that if his temper had not been soured in his youth by bad handling, he believed that he would have equaled, if not surpassed, all the records ever made, and that he could show a two-minute gait with him to a wagon, but in company he would become wild, on account of his hot blood, and was often beaten by horses that could hardly run as fast as he could trot. His record of 2:27 1/4 which was no measure of his speed, was made at the Oakland track in 1877, in a race which he won, beating Alexander, Gus, General Reno and Billy Hayward, this being his last public performance.

It is thought by some people that an aged horse is not as good a producer as a young one, but no greater mistake could possibly be made. Indeed, the opposite is claimed by many large breeders, and instances are so numerous of horses siring their best foals at an advanced age that the above theory has long ago been exploded. Imported Dionea was twenty-seven years old when he sired Sir Archy, his best son; Bonnie Scotland, who died only a few years ago, sired Luke Blackburn and George Kinney, by far the best of his get, after he was twenty-five; Imported Leamington sired Iroquois, his best son, the last year that he lived, at twenty-five. Among trotters may be mentioned Volunteer, the sire of St. Julien, who is thirty-one years old this spring, and is said to be as lively and vigorous as he ever was, and his young foals as promising as any that he ever got. Old Hamiltonian died in March, 1876, aged twenty-seven years, but sired two foals the last days of his life, and one of them, called Hamiltonian's last, made a trotting record of 2:25 1/4 the past season, and the other one is said to be equally as fast.

With these facts before us, it is plain that the age of a horse has nothing to do with his success as a sire. I think myself that there is a great deal in the condition that a horse is kept, for an animal that is well-fed and cared for, with plenty of exercise, will beget better foals than one that is turned loose and never stabled or fed grain.

Venture is twenty-two years old this spring, and with the care that I intend to give him, I expect him to sire better foals than he ever has before. He is a remarkably sure breeder. Mr. Campbell assures me that he has never bred a mare to him yet that did not produce a foal, and his many beautiful colts, now on Mr. C's ranch, are worth a long journey to see; and now as he is to be kept so convenient to the general public, no one owning a good mare should be so blind to their own interest as to neglect the opportunity of obtaining his blood while they have the chance.

For any additional particulars apply at Punchbowl and Queen streets.
