Another Big Strike.

PITTSBURG, June 29.—The joint conference committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Work Company and the American Steel Hoop Company, which has been in session here, was unable to reach an agreement on the wage scale for the ensuing year and adjourned finally after a session of less than twenty minutes. The Amalgamated Association officials asked that the scale be signed for the union mills and the manufacturers presented a counter proposition not only refusing to sign for all the union mills, but stipulating that two plants that were included last year be exempt from the scale this year. These mills are the Old Meadows plant at Scott Dale and the Saltburg, Pa., works. The conference then broke up and President Shafer at once issued a strike order. The strike will involve all the Union Sheet Mills in the country and about 20,000 skilled workmen.

Hay's Son Killed.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 2.—Adelbert S. Hay, son of the United States consul at Pretoria, dropped from a window in the third story of the New Haven House shortly before 2:30 o'clock this morning. He was killed instantly. The details of the accident will never be known, but it is thought that he was sitting on the windowsill, dozed off, and lost his balance. He fell sixty feet. The young man was a graduate of 1898.

At the Mint.

On March 16, there will be a meeting of the directors of the Mint, to discuss the question of coinage, and the size of the equivalent to be poured out for a quarter. The stockholders are requested to meet later on in the new beer garden, back of the Mint, and there express their views on dividends and reserve funds. The President hopes that there will be a full attendance.

Dear Sir:—
In my innocence I purchased here in Hilo a jar of your

PIN-MONEY PICKLES

(Put up by Mrs. E. G. Kidd, Richmond, Va.)

It brought me great trouble, and one of three things must occur:

1. You must stop making them; or,
2. I must get them at less expense; or
3. I'm a ruined man.

Since my first venture I've had many "jars." My family from early morn cry "Pickles;" neighbors ring the door bell and about "Pickles;" relatives visit me in expectation of "Pickles." Your pickles are my Nemesis. Please, Dear Sir, quote them by the Keg, Barrel, Hoghead, Ton or Shipload, and "preserve" me. Yours very truly,

HAWAII'S SCHOOLS

There is one thing Hawaii can justly feel proud of, and that is the excellent school system prevailing here, which has earned the admiration and praise from Paris to Buffalo.

Several months ago two prominent and brilliant professors of a great University in Europe passed through Honolulu on a trip around the world. They had letters of introduction to the writer and on a drive around the place they saw our High School, the Kaulani School, the Kamehameha Schools, and so on. It was Sunday and they did not enter the buildings but for a while they actually believed that they were being deceived until they became convinced that in this little unknown spot of the globe some of the finest school buildings could be found.

It was a pity that they could not see the work done in those schools, or they would have been amazed to see the high degree of civilization which we have reached through the educational department of the government.

We hear from Buffalo of the astonishment of the visitors to the Pan American exposition at the exhibit from the Public Instruction Bureau of Hawaii. Miss Rose Davison receives the most flattering compliments on account of the work done in our school.

We see Mr. Henry Waterhouse elected Vice President at the international meeting of Delegates from every Y. M. C. A. in the world. While not directly connected with our school system the Y. M. C. A. has always been a great helper in education of our young people. Mr. Waterhouse says:

"The convention is something that can never be described adequately in words. It was the grandest gathering of the kind that has ever been held. It marked, as you know, the fiftieth year of the existence of the work for the betterment of the young men of the world, according to the methods of the organization. One of the most interesting things connected with the great meeting was the work that was being carried on by each of the local associations. It was truly most interesting. Some associations made exhibitions of architectural drawings; others showed what their members could do at the carpenter's bench, and so on. The display was truly most marvellous, showing as it did that the Christian association has not alone the spiritual welfare of the young men at heart but their mental and manual discipline at interest as well."

To the Board of Education and to the faithful teachers are due the credit for the noble work and successful results. And specially to the hard working patient teachers we quote the words of Superintendent Atkinson from his address delivered yesterday at the opening of the Summer School:

"First let me ask, why are you here? Primarily there can be only one answer, because you must eat. That seems a very bald way of putting the matter. The proper thing to say is, that you have come together in the hope that you may uplift your fellow men and women of the future. Nothing of the kind. You have chosen a means of livelihood, or have drifted towards a means of livelihood, just as a carpenter, an engineer, a butcher, an artist, or a sailor does. We will come to other points later on, but primarily you simply come here because of the announcement which was made in the dim past, 'in the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread.' Work is the tenure upon which we hold life, and happily work is the blessing of life. Work comes to you as it comes to all, by immutable law, and work can be ennobled or it can be degraded, as the person who undertakes it chooses. We can work ill or we can work well, but work we must. If we work well people say of us that we rise, but the so-called rising is only the recognition of our own honest application. If we work badly, people say we sink, but this is only the natural result of bad work, slovenly work.

"You have, then, come here because you know that to keep your place in the world you must work, but in coming here you have shown that you know more. You have shown that you understand that to do your work well you must be properly trained for it. You cannot jump into the arena of life all armed like the fabled goddess Athene from the head of Zeus. Training is more important in the profession of teaching than in any profession, because we have so much delicate material to manipulate, but it has been almost the last profession in which we have given proper care and consideration to training."

"If the law of nature sends us all, and you among them, to work in order that we may eat, the law of civilization gives us many avenues in which we can work, and adds something higher; the satisfaction of work well done. We can choose our course. There are for us countless paths which we can hew out through the ever teeming perennial forest of life, and we can take a just pride in seeing that our little path is smoothly made, the sides properly trimmed, the direction true, so that when the Master receives the report of our little effort, we may bear the words 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant.'"

"What can be grander than the idea that the work done now is going to be impressed upon the generation that follows. The teacher is no worker in metal who stamps out with his hammer and chisel a beautiful statuette or a graceful gawd for some fair lady's neck. These last sometimes for centuries, but they are dead things,—they are beautiful, they show human skill but they have not life. The teachers' precepts live, if not in one mind, still in another. There is a divine essence in teaching, if we can only get hold of it. The teacher holds the torch of knowledge to guide the faltering footsteps of childhood and youth into the full light of the day of manhood and womanhood. And the teachings go on. The teacher may be dead but his spirit shall live among some of his pupils.

"Yes, it is a grand profession this teaching, and all who enter upon it should do so with earnestness and all who enter upon it should do so with earnestness and with purpose. Skill in mechanics, skill in the arts of music, sculpture and painting may all be admirable, are admirable, but the skill which can open the human mind, the skill which can lead the budding intellect and set it at work seeking after the high ideals, the skill which deals with life here, and stamps upon it what may influence life hereafter, is worthy of our highest commendation. It is a light thing to be a teacher. Few realize how much good and how much harm they can do as teachers.

"Teaching is no dry-as-dust profession. It is a living profession. It is the noblest profession in the world. If it is degraded, it is the human beings who essay it that degrade it. But we are aiming at its ideal heights. We may not reach those heights, but we can make a valiant struggle to reach them, and we can look from this poor school room and see the walls dissolve giving us a vista of the great future when mankind will be better and grander and happier and say we did our little mite to help forward the general good of this world and fit it for the world to come, where there shall be no more want or sorrow or misery or sin, but where there shall be everlasting happiness."

Those wise and noble words were said by the man who is at the head of Hawaii's educational department and who has spent years in bringing our school system to its present wonderfully high standing.

Chinese Are Happy.

Ah See, the Chinese girl who was held to answer before Judge Eatee on the grounds that she had no registration certificate, was allowed to go with her parents by his honor yesterday, the court finding that while she had no certificate in her possession, at the same time she was privileged to go and come from the Islands as she chose, as her father was a citizen of the United States.

In 1892, Chu Quon, the father of the girl who was the cause of so much legal quibbling, was naturalized under the monarchy. The court found that since he was a subject of the King of Hawaii, it followed that he was also a citizen of the United States. His child is therefore entitled to all the privileges which were granted him, she being a minor, at the time he became a subject of the Hawaiian monarchy.

There are several other cases of a similar nature that will be called before the same tribunal in the immediate future.

Support of Physicians

Each physician in the United States has 655 persons to look to for his support, for 1 to 655 is the proportion, according to the latest governmental statistics. California stands at the bottom—or top, depending on the view—of the list, for there are only 416 actual and prospective patients for each M. D., while in Alaska 2,349 persons have to depend on, or take chances with, one doctor. New York is near the average, with 603 persons for each physician to look after, and Pennsylvania comes nearer the average than any other State, with 662. Lying partially between these great States comes New Jersey, where the number of medical practitioners falls off until one has to care for 856 persons.

Nigel Jackson resigns his position as a special officer with the police department today, having bought out the Brunswick oyster and chop house, on Fort street.

LAUNDRYMEN STRIKE

Chinese Washmen Attempt to Create a Riot.

There is trouble between the bosses of the Chinese laundries and their employees who demand higher wages and insist in the bosses charging higher rates to the customers.

It is also a feud between the clans which it is expected is needing an airing and yesterday afternoon several hundred Chinese came to the police station and made a hostile demonstration. The mob was going to take a "scab," who was under the protection of the police away. They didn't do it nor did they make a rush when the "scab" together with the Deputy Sheriff appeared on the street and was escorted to a place where he would be safe.

Last evening at the See Yup Club a meeting was held by committees from employers and employees, and apparently there is peace for the present. Future trouble, however, is anticipated.

They Were Discovered.

When they went into the hotel he was determined to do nothing to betray the fact that they were newly married. He took up the pen, for his first registration under the new conditions, and with an old married man look and sweep of indifference, wrote:—"Mr. and Mrs. Mary Thompkins."

"Will you have the bridal chamber, Mr. Thompkins?" asked the clerk.

Well Mated.

Scrapp Ee Chang and Alice Kong were married at the Kawaihae Seminary last evening by Rev. Mr. Thwing.

The bride has been residing at the Kawaihae Seminary for upwards of four years. Previously she was one of the brightest students of the Kohala Seminary which place she left to come to Honolulu in order to engage in Kindergarten work. Recently she has been teaching in the Kindergarten of Camp No. 2.

S. Ee Chang was born in Honolulu and was formerly a student at Oahu College. He is at present employed as clerk in the office of his brother, Chang Kim.

An Interesting Suit.

Attorney Geo. A. Davis has brought a suit for damages in the federal court against Chief Justice Frear. Davis asks for $50,000 damages because the Chief Justice sent him to jail for contempt of court. He will probably get it—where the chicken got the axe.

Just Like a Man.

Widow—It is too bad that my husband should have died now, when he knew that I had just bought a blue and a pink dress and four new fancy shirt waists. But he always was so inconsiderate.

How Fortunate.

Owing to a quarantine blockade at New Orleans, it will be several months before Hawaii can get any more Porto Ricans through that port.

WE HAVE THEM HERE.

One of Ads's Modern-Fables from the N. Y. Herald.

Once there was a Man who lived out where the Soft Maples grow. The Silence never was broken except by the Noon Whistle at the Grain Elevator. The Man was Planning every Week so as to be Strong when it came time for his Vacation. He smoked a Pipe in order to cut down Cigar Bills, and he never went against the travelling Troupes or had any Dealings with the Livery Man. Every Sunday he took in at least one Service, and if he could sort out any small Coins that were Shiny or Plugged he dropped them in the Basket. He watched the Laundry List like a Lynx, and every time he missed a meal at the Home for the Friendless he either got a Rebate or there was War. He had the Name of being as Close as the Bark on a Tree, for when he made a small Loan he figured Interest down to the last Minute and then went after it like a Siberian Bloodhound.

By pursuing these Tactics he succeeded in getting together a Bundle so large that he had to keep a Rubber Band around it. When he thought he had enough he started on his annual Hurrah. He paid a Boy a Nickel to lug his Suit Case down to the Station. When the Train pulled in he entered the Parlor Car and told the dusky Minion to pick out for him the best Chair in the Car and then bring him something Three for a Half. Before the Locomotive whistled for the next Stop he bought two Books and a Pocket Atlas and was wiring for a Room with Bath.

That Evening he landed in the Big Town, where he leased a Victoria and drove to the Hotel, reclining on the puffed Cushions with that Unconscious Air of Indolence so often observed in those who are used to Luxuries. His Pulse had moved up from 55 to 110 and he carried the Bit of Currency in his left hand, so as to get at it in a Hurry.

Within an Hour after he struck the Hotel he was a Central Figure in the First Floor Promenade. He was wearing his Tux and a silk Lid and his Shirt had a shellac Glisten. No amount of Talk would have convinced him that he was not a Howling Swell. He was standing around on one Foot, catching Flashes of himself in the gilded Mirrors and whistling a last year's Coon Opus to let every one know that he was perfectly at Ease. The Main Chute of the Hotel was full of other Prosperity Pilgrims in their latest and best, all trying to let on that they had been brought up on this same kind of Splendor. They loved to lean up against fourteen thousand dollar Paintings and have the Incandescent Lights blind them.

Twenty-four Hours previously the Man had sat down to his Chipped Beef and Soda Biscuit, but now he needed Terrapin and Golden Pheasant and Artichokes a la something in Italics. He wanted to hear the Corks pop and watch the Bubbles come up, for he was out to lead a Double Life.

The Man stayed in Town three days before he struck Bottom. During all that Time he was Lit Up like the Big Tower of the Pan-American. He had his Shoes shined every Hour and wore Violets and hired Cabs by the Day. Every time he could not get a Box at the Theatre he seemed Provoked, and said, "Pshaw!" But one Morning he got up and found that the Rubber Band was hanging loose on the Bundle, so he called for his Bill and took one Look at it and telegraphed for more. He went to the Station on a Car. As the Train rolled through the Yard he put his burning Forehead against the cool Glass in the Window of the Day Coach and said:—"They have Cleaned me, but I flatter myself that I turned over a very deep Furrow while I lasted. I wonder what becomes of People who live here all the time."

Moral:—The Round-Tripper is the only one who really knows City Life.

THOSE AUTOMOBILE.

All is Well When it Ends Well.

At two o'clock Harry arrived with it. He had selected a very plain pattern, fitted with two seats, each of which would hold two persons, including the driver. The old gentleman examined everything critically and listened to Harry's lectures upon the mechanical features with many non committal grunts.

"And it will never run away with you," concluded the young man, with confidence.

The eyes of Mr Graves brightened hopefully. "These runaways are dreadful things," he admitted. "I have often said that Old Stager would some day run away with me."

The horse had been known to go to sleep while being cautiously driven up Fifth Avenue by his aged owner, nevertheless Esther chimed in with enthusiasm, shamelessly picturing Old Stager dashing madly through crowded thoroughfares, crashing through plate glass windows and straying havoc wherever he went. Harry grew crimson listening to her; his business was selling automobiles, and they were taking desperate chances to gain parental favor.

Mr. Graves seemed to be impressed. He climbed in. The young people sat alone in the front seat, where they could compare notes secretly.

Similar vehicles were passing them with ease. "Why don't you let it go?" demanded Mr. Graves impatiently.

Harry complied with his tongue in his cheek, while Esther nudged with joy. They let the vehicle go wild, and in the park Harry gave illustrations of his absolute power over the mechanism by bunts of speed abruptly checked by queer turns and serpentine plunges.

"I'll buy it," declared the old gentleman.

He was converted. The covert signals of the young people waxed hilarious. Not until they were returning home did they know the meaning of despair. Entering Gramercy square the automobile, solemnly and mysteriously rolled past the Graves house—and could not be stopped.

"What is the matter Harry?"—this from Esther, in alarm.

"Hush."

"But—" "We will pretend to ride around the square if he doesn't say anything. He doesn't know it yet."

"Know what?"

"It's running away."

"Running away—why, Harry!"—her eyes bulging. "It's going faster!"

"I know it."

"Can't you stop it somehow?"

"If I had an axe." He smothered some profanity.

They turned the corners going like a comet. A policeman shook his mace. A small boy yelled. Some ladies stared. In desperation Harry reversed the current, and the machine sped backward with a bewildering sweep—and then sped forward again just in time to escape the lumbering bulk of a moving van.

"Apparently it will do anything but stand still!" gasped Esther.

"The string will stop when the current is exhausted," said Harry.

"When will that be?"

"These go several hundred miles!" he wailed. "We can dine en passant from the curb, in the meantime, if anybody thinks of it!"

"Does it always do this?"

"Not always," he growled. "Only when a fellow wants to be something and win the woman he loves."

Their motion now was steadily back and forth, like a shuttle. Humiliating advice was yelled to them by grinning strangers and many acquaintances seen in the neighborhood smiled maliciously.

Suddenly something snapped inside the motor and the impossible machine miraculously stopped at Esther's very door, and there remained.

Harry helped her father from the vehicle after Esther had fled. The old gentleman, frowning, noted her absence.

"Pardon me, young man," said he, strangely benignant, and as though wishing to touch delicate subject lightly. "If I find Esther really cares for you—um, well, I have nothing to say." He yawned again. "Dear me, I've been asleep," he explained. A few weeks later occurred the wedding—and those who knew attended in horseless vehicles.

A Luna Drowned.

On Monday morning James Smith, team luna at Wailuku plantation, was found drowned in the slough which crosses the road between Maalaea Bay and Kihai. Late on Sunday night he went to Kihai to get some medicine from Dr. Dinggar for his wife, who is quite ill. About 2 o'clock on Monday morning he left the residence of Capt. Toomey at Kihai and was not again seen alive. Captain Toomey testified at the coroner's inquest that Mr. Smith was sober when he left his house.

It is believed that in crossing the slough Mr. Smith was either thrown or fell from his horse, and was stunned by the fall. The water was about two feet deep where he was found.

At the inquest Dr. Weddick testified as follows: "According to the history of the case and post-mortem appearance of the body, I state that he came to his death by drowning."

The coroner's jury found that "James Smith came to his death by accidentally falling from his horse and drowning at Kea'ia, District of Wailuku, Maui, about 2:30 a.m. July 1, 1901."

Mr. Smith was 52 years of age and came to the Islands about twenty years ago from California. He was born at Galena, Illinois. He leaves a wife and one child. He was an industrious, hardworking man and was highly esteemed not only by his employers, but also by all who knew him. The remains were buried in the Catholic cemetery in the presence of many loving friends.

A horse ridden by the captain of a vessel at Kihai stumbled and fell with his rider at the identical spot where James Smith was drowned on last Wednesday evening, and had not John Brown, a Hawaiian, been present, the captain would have probably lost his life in the same manner that James Smith lost his—Maui News.

1200 LOTS

— IN —

KAPIOLANI TRACT FOR SALE.

The Kapiolani Tract extends from King street to the Beach. A road 60 feet wide will be opened on the east side of the property adjoining the Kamehameha Girls' School; said road will extend to the sea.

Cross-roads will be opened between blocks. Every lot will have a frontage on a road. The elevation varies from forty feet high to ten feet high above sea level.

No swamps around the premises. No freshet will enter the property.

There is an offer to buy a part of the property by a great manufacturing company. The chances are the offer may be accepted. There is every reason to believe that the prices of lots will increase in a short time. The owner of the property will give all chances to purchasers to make money on their investments.

The ground is superior to any tract in the market.

The premises are situated within one mile and a half of the Post Office.

The Government water pipes are laid along the upper portion of the property.

The prices are the cheapest of any tract within two miles from the center of the city.

The terms which will be given to purchasers will be the best ever given by any real estate dealer or broker during the last twenty years in Honolulu.

For terms or more particulars, apply to

S. M. Kakanui,
