OLD GLORY.

With a roar of guns, a grand military salute, and the cheers of a multitude, Old Glory was run up over the Executive building at midday, and announced, symbolically, to the whole world that the Hawaiian Islands have been incorporated as part of the United States and that from this time forth every Hawaiian can say, in the words of the proud motto of an old English family, "Nemo me impune leccesit," no one can bully me in future, Uncle Sam's strong arm and Uncle Sam's good navy are at my back.

With proper honors, also, the Hawaiian flag was lowered. The origin and history of that flag appear in another column. Of it one can say, that though representing a weak nation, it was never dishonored, and deserves the salute it received when it was furled. It may with perfect justice be made the flag of the territory when the proper people are elected to come to a decision upon the point.

The future is now before us. We enter upon a new period. We know that that period will bring us peace and prosperity. We can share now with every citizen of the United States in the glories of that advancing commonwealth. The boys in blue are our boys in blue. The white squadron is our squadron. We are part and parcel of one of the greatest powers upon the globe. Heartily does The Star endorse the cheers given today and say: Thank God! the work is finished. We are now American citizens.

THE GOLDEN KEY.

Washington is now a capital city that Hawaii can claim an interest in. Honolulu remains our territorial capital, and will, it is hoped, one day be the capital of the state. Small as these Islands are they are fertile enough to support a population ten times as large as now inhabit them, and with the boom that is coming the country will rapidly fill up.

Through American influence the Islands have been wonderfully developed during the last fifty years, but they have ever been regarded as a foreign country, and the laws and methods have been unknown to many. Now that the Islands are American, that American troops will always be stationed here, American ships be always in the harbor, American ways and methods be assured, when there is no longer need for change of citizenship, but every American who comes here finds himself at home, there will be a far greater influx of people than many now imagine.

The larger the population, the more will be the wants, and the greater the chances of earning a living by supplying them. The agricultural resources of the country are by no means fully developed. There are small industries which will spring up on every hand, of which we have no idea at the present time. There are large tracts of country which will yield an admirable living if only energy and capital are applied. And we shall get that energy and capital now. Formerly many people were afraid to venture capital, because they thought the place lacked stability.

This is a fact that a large number of people failed to realize in the past. It makes a vast amount of difference what the government of a country is. When the government of these Islands was weak, when it was possible to overthrow it with a few squads of men, capital from abroad was timid of investment. We had the reputation of being a turbulent community, little as we deserved it, but it had its effect upon keeping capital away. Of course men who were thoroughly acquainted with the place considered the investment good, reaped a magnificent harvest, but the ordinary investor fought shy.

Now, however, all is changed. The government in Hawaii is the same as the government of the United States. There can no more be any overthrow of this or of that monarch or little republic. We are planted, as it were, upon a rock and capital will recognize that sooner than anything else.

With the advent of more capital will come the power to develop varied industries. Not only will our agricultural resources be developed, but manufactures will spring up, and with manufactures will naturally come further increase of population, and further accumulation of national wealth.

It is a great thing that Hawaii can claim an interest in Washington. That interest will prove a golden key, that will open a richer casket than even those who have hoped and planned for this day ever dreamed of.

Old Glory floats from the government buildings, and there will be no Mr. Cleveland nor Mr. Blount to haul it down; it is there to stay as long as the Republic lasts.

All can become American citizens after today. It is a nationality to be proud of and has not only its own traditions, but those of its mother tongue and mother country.

THE FLAG RAISING

self to the sense of fairness and of justice of the representatives of the American people, but rather the burial of past prejudices, the obliteration of narrow divisions and the ultimate political advancement of the humblest citizen over whom this flag shall float.

But it is not for you to rest content in the enjoyment of free institutions. It is for you to help maintain them, to maintain them in the spirit they will be extended to you, in the spirit you have sought them, in the spirit of fraternity and equality, in the spirit of the constitution itself, now the supreme law of your land, to establish justice, to ensure your tranquility, to provide for the common defense, to promote your welfare, and to secure the blessings of liberty to yourselves and your posterity.

This is the work before you, my countrymen, and I bid you advance to it. Hand in hand may you go, you of the home race with those whose father's land this was, and whose generous virtues have won for them the regard of all mankind. Hand in hand may you go with them as they carry with them their unflinching love of country into the broad plane of American citizenship.

Advance to the uplifting and upbuilding of this land to prove it worthy to share the destiny of the Great Republic.

Empire may wait indeed, but no hand save His who holds in the hollow of His hand the fate of nations, can stay that destiny.

God bless you, my countrymen. God bless the United States of America.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies the National Guard was marched to the parade grounds, where Minister Cooper administered the oath of allegiance to Colonel Fisher. The colonel then administered it to his officers, and the captains to the men. The regiment then escorted the naval battalion to their boats and returned to the drill shed to sign the rolls.

The flag that now floats over the Judiciary building is the identical flag that was hauled down by Paramount Blount's orders.

The flag in front of the military headquarters is that used by Captain Wiltse when he was in command of the U. S. S. Boston in this harbor.

The mounted patrol turned out in full force, but it was deemed best that they should not go inside the Executive grounds, as the horses might become fractious.

A badge and a bouquet were presented to Miss Newlands, daughter of the author of the Newlands resolution. The presentation was made on behalf of the Annexation Club.

THE SOVEREIGNTY BALL.

Will Be Held in the Old Throne Room.

The ball tonight promises in its arrangements and character to bring to a fitting close the ceremonies of the day. In perhaps no other capital city in the world could an official ball be given as this is, with a plenary invitation to the public.

The old throne room of the monarchy, the hall of the House of Representatives of the Republic, will be the ball room. It has been decorated under the direction of Mrs. Afong. In the decoration the wealth of ferns and flowers and palms of this tropical climate have been lavishly drawn on. The new flag and the new colors furnish the color effect, but the old flag has not been forgotten. It holds an honored place in the festooning and draping, as it will hold a cherished place in the memory of those who have lived beneath it.

At the reception preceding the ball, President and Mrs. Dole will be assisted in receiving by Mr. and Mrs. Sewall, Admiral Miller and Colonel Barber.

The music for the reception will be furnished by the full Government band. For dancing Professor Berger's string orchestra will play.

Major Potter and A. St. M. Mackintosh will act as floor managers. There will be no grand march. The arrangement of dances is as follows: Waltz, Paradise of the Pacific; Deux Temps, Olympia; Lancers, American Airs; Waltz, Festival; Polka, Nuuanu Valley; Waltz, The Flowers; Lancers, Hawaiian Airs; Deux Temps, Maui; Waltz, In the Moonlight; Polka, Hilo Bay; Lancers, Popular Airs; Deux Temps, Philadelphia.

Carriage arrangements for the ball provide for entrance by the King street gate, the guests being deposited at the main entrance. In leaving carriages will take the Richards street gate.

There will be no supper, but light refreshments will be served on the verandas during the evening.

A CHRISTENING.

The little son of Minister and Mrs. Sewall is to be christened this afternoon at the Waikiki residence.

Admiral Dewey's fleet was lubricated with Vacuum Oils, obtained at Hongkong. At the same time Vacuum Oils were in use ashore in the sugar and jute mills of the Philippines.

The British Navy and the Japanese navy regularly use Vacuum Oils, and various battleships and cruisers of every other nation obtain them at various ports around the world where stocks are carried.

Vacuum Oils are so well known and highly thought of by the naval officer, the mill owner, and the machinery user everywhere, that one hundred and twelve foreign warehouses are required for their distribution. The reason is—they lubricate most. Other oils sell for less by the gallon, but Vacuum Oils cost least by the day.

THE PRINCIPAL ACTORS IN THE TRANSFER OF SOVEREIGNTY.

SANFORD B. DOLE.

Sanford Ballard Dole was born in Honolulu of American parents, in 1844. His father and mother were of the noble band of missionaries, and landed in Honolulu in the year 1840, after a long and tedious voyage from their home in the far away State of Maine. Upon his arrival in Honolulu Mr. Dole the elder, took charge of the Punahou College, which was then about to be started, and which is today an enduring monument to his intelligence and care, for it is the Alma Mater of many of the foremost men of Hawaii. Mr. Dole lived to see the good results of his early labor, passing away in 1878.

The subject of this sketch received his primary education at this institution, and remained there and at Kaula, with a year meanwhile spent at Punahou, until he had more than attained his majority. His father was in moderate financial circumstances, and young Dole having chosen the law as his profession, had employed himself in various capacities in order to acquire the necessary means to prosecute his studies. By industry and economy he succeeded in so doing, and at the age of twenty-two went to Williams College, in Massachusetts, and took the general course for a year; after which he entered the law office of William Brigham of Boston, whose son of the same name now lives in Honolulu. There he pursued his legal studies under that gentleman, and attended the different sessions of the courts. He applied himself closely, and after the end of a twelve-month was admitted, after a rigid examination, to practice in the courts of Suffolk county, Mass., which comprises the city of Boston. Soon after this he returned to his native islands, and was duly admitted to the bar of the Hawaiian Islands. He began a general practice, and followed his profession until 1887, when he was appointed to the supreme bench.

During all of this time Mr. Dole had been an interested observer of political events, and had endeavored to bring about a condition of affairs beneficial to the nation, and enhance the dignity of the legal profession in Hawaii. In the year 1884, he first became a member of the legislature, and during the campaigns which followed he took a lively interest. He was also a member of the legislature of 1886, and the duties of the position were faithfully performed, in accordance to the large amount of work which the interests of his clients demanded. He took a very prominent part in the reform movement which culminated in the revolution of 1897. He was a member of the Executive Committee of the Hawaiian League, and by his conservative course and counsel restrained much of the rash action advocated by some of its members. Mr. Dole was in favor of reform, but he would not participate in extreme measures. The peaceful ending of the movement is largely due to the conservatism of this gentleman, and others who believed as he did.

That by his political participation his legal business suffered is beyond question, while his health was seriously impaired by the labor involved. He was contemplating leaving the islands for a much needed rest, when he was tendered a position on the supreme bench, which office required less arduous labors and shorter hours than he had been accustomed to devote to his calling.

The President has not confined himself exclusively to law and politics, for he has contributed considerably to literature. Among several articles from his pen, one appearing in Johnson's New American Cyclopaedia on the Hawaiian Islands is remarkable for its brevity and perspicuity, requiring an intimate knowledge of the subject, which was handled with exceptional ability.

President Dole was married in 1873 to Miss Anna P. Cate, of Massachusetts, and lives quietly at his pretty residence on Emma street, and occasionally at his seaside residence, Aquamarino, near Diamond Head.

JOSEPH N. MILLER.

Rear Admiral Joseph N. Miller, the ranking officer in the navy, was born in the city of Springfield, Ohio, in 1836. He was appointed to the Naval Academy October 1, 1851, graduating in June, 1854, and standing No. 3 in his class, and first in mathematics.

It was forty-three years ago that he came round the Horn to San Francisco on the Independence, which ever since 1856 has been doing duty as a receiving ship and has been for many years located at Mare Island navy yard.

After the cruise Miller was ordered to duty at the Naval Academy. From November, 1858, to September, 1860, he served on the Preble, being in the Paraguay expedition and in the home squadron, assisting in the capture of the steamers General Miramon and Marquis de la Habana off Vera Cruz, Mexico, on March 6, 1860.

In 1861 he was ordered to the brig Perry, then fitting out in New York. This vessel was employed in blockade duty, and on June 3, 1861, captured off Charleston the privateer Savannah, which sailed under the first letter of marque issued by the Southern Confederacy. In November, 1861, Miller was transferred to the steamer Cambridge, and was in the action in which the Cumberland and the Congress were destroyed by the Merrimack, on March 12, 1862. In May he was transferred to the training ship John Adams, and in August he was assigned to the monitor Passaic, having been promoted to the rank of lieutenant commander.

He participated in the naval attack on Fort McAllister in March, 1863, and in the attack on Fort Sumter in April. In June he was assigned to duty with Admiral Gregory, superintending the construction of ironclads at New York, and in September he was sent on the ironclad Saugamon to assist in blockading Charleston.

Lieutenant Miller was given his first active war command, the monitor Nahant, in April, 1864, and the next month took part with that ship in an attack on Fort Sumter. Later, while on the monitor Monadnock, he was engaged in both attacks on Fort Fisher, in December, 1864, and January, 1865.

In September, 1867, he was ordered to the steamer Powhattan in the South Pacific squadron, and served on vessel in the Pacific and Gulf of Mexico until January, 1870, when he was promoted to commander.

In November, 1873, he was ordered to the command of the Ajax, which was sent to Key West in anticipation of trouble with Spain.

In August, 1876, he was given the command of the United States steamer Tuscarora, and ordered to run a line of deep sea soundings from the Hawaiian Islands to the Fijis and Australia.

His promotion to captain came in 1881, and since that time he has commanded the receiving ships Wabash and Vermont, the flagship Tennessee of the North Atlantic squadron, the flagship Chicago of the squadron of evolution, and as captain of the New York navy yard and member of the Jeannette court of inquiry.

After his promotion to commodore, Miller was given the command of the Boston navy yard, and on his promotion to the grade of rear admiral in March, 1897, on the retirement of Admiral Walker, he was ordered to England as the naval representative of the United States, he was present in London at the Queen's Jubilee as naval representative, and at the naval review at Spithead.

Upon completion of his duty he was given command of the Pacific squadron, assuming command at Honolulu, August 14, 1897, relieving Admiral Beardslee. He remained at Honolulu until last May.

Rear Admiral Miller since his return to the United States, has been in charge of the naval defenses of this coast and of the auxiliary force. By the retirement of Rear Admiral Kirkland on July 4, Miller is now the senior admiral of the navy on the active list.

HAROLD M. SEWALL.

Harold M. Sewall was born in Bath, Maine, in 1860; entered Harvard College in the class of 1882; was a member of the Institute of 1770; the Hasty Pudding Club; and was on the Board of Editors of the Harvard Advocate. He was one of the class to deliver a Commencement Part. Upon graduation he entered the Law School taking the full three years course, and receiving the degree of LL. B. In October, 1885, he was appointed Vice Consul at Liverpool, March, 1887, the Consulate at Samoa having been raised to the rank of Consulate General, he was appointed to the office.

Upon his arrival there the German government, notwithstanding there was a conference of the powers in treaty with Samoa in session at Washington, seized the Islands. Refusing to recognize the authority thus established, confining himself to protest and to efforts to prevent bloodshed, Mr. Sewall's course in the emergency with which he found himself confronted, was warmly approved by the Department of State. As a result of German action, and the consequent indignation in this country by this violation of good faith and the injury suffered by American citizens, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations summoned Mr. Sewall to testify and at the conclusion of the testimony an amendment to the Diplomatic Appropriation bill was reported, appropriating $500,000 for the protection of our interests in Samoa and the occupation of our harbor there. In supporting these amendments in an exhaustive speech on the floor of the Senate, January 29, 1889, Senator Sherman, chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations, gave Mr. Sewall the highest praise for his conduct and the personal qualities he had exhibited before the committee. The testimony given by Mr. Sewall was never made public, but it is known that he advocated a different policy in regard to the conduct of our relations with Samoa from that which had been pursued by Secretary Bayard, a view that was supported by Mr. Whitney, who was overruled by the President and Mr. Bayard. Upon the conclusion of the testimony, Secretary Bayard requested the resignation of Mr. Sewall, which was immediately tendered, but in April, 1889, the German government, having invited a renewal of the conference broken up at Washington, at Berlin, Secretary Blaine attached Mr. Sewall to the commission, and after returning from his service there, in February, 1890, he was re-appointed by President Harrison to his former post, to assist in the inauguration of the government established in Samoa by the general act of Berlin. This having been accomplished to the satisfaction of our government, Mr. Sewall returned home and resigned his commission to the President, who, in accepting it, expressed in an autograph letter, the highest appreciation of the service he had rendered.

In the fall of 1893, Mr. Sewall having married Miss Ashe of San Francisco, made a tour of the world, returning to Bath in the summer of 1894.

In the fall campaign of 1893, although Mr. Sewall had previously been a Democrat, the Republican committee requested him to address a large gathering in Augusta on the American interests in the Pacific. At this meeting Ex-Minister John L. Stevens presided and spoke. That was Mr. Stevens' last public appearance.

He immediately entered into the ensuing campaign and spoke in Massachusetts and New York and in his own state in behalf of the Republican ticket. He presided at the state convention at Bangor in June which nominated the present governor of the state, who was elected in September, by the unprecedented majority of nearly fifty thousand votes. Mr. Sewall was also a delegate from the Second district to the Republican National convention at St. Louis, where in common with his fellow delegates worked earnestly for the nomination of Mr. Reed, and in the national campaign spoke in fourteen of the sixteen counties in his state, but because of his relationship to the Democratic nominee for second place on the national ticket, declined to participate in the campaign beyond the limits of his own state. He was elected and served as representative in the last Legislature of Maine. His candidacy for the position of Minister to Hawaii was warmly endorsed by the entire delegation of his state, by all the Senators of New England with one exception, by Senators Thurston, Culom and Elkins, by the Chamber of Commerce of San Francisco, the Produce Exchange, and the leading commercial bodies of the Pacific slope.

LAST WEDDING UNDER THE HAWAIIAN FLAG.

A pretty wedding was that of Clarence H. Cooke and Miss Lily Love last evening. And it was probably the last wedding celebrated under the Hawaiian flag.

The wedding was at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Fanny Love. The ceremony was at 8 o'clock. The large grounds were beautifully illuminated. Double rows of Japanese lanterns extended down the carriage drive, giving a sprightliness to the stately royal palms which border it. The banal and the drawing room were strikingly decorated with maile sent from Kaula especially for the purpose by Mrs. Isenberg, together with great palm leaves and flowers. The bridal party stood under a great canopy of golden shower, the floor under it being carpeted with the same rich colored flower. The ribbons used in the decorations extended from the canopy to the corners of the room, harmonizing in color with it. About the room were banked marguerites in rich profusion.

With the Mendelssohn Wedding March, rendered by Mrs. E. A. Mott-Smith, the bridal party entered the room from the lanai, the bridesmaid, Miss Kate Kelley, and the groomsmen, J. P. Waterhouse, leading, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Stella Love and the bride on the arm of her brother. The groom with his best man, C. Montague Cooke, and the officiating clergyman, Rev. H. Isenberg, met the party under the canopy. The form of service used was the Episcopal service, including the giving and receiving of a ring, the bride being given in marriage by her brother, William A. Love.

The bride wore a gown of mousseline de soie over white silk, the conventional veil, and carried a bouquet of white roses and maiden hair ferns. The maid of honor wore burnt orange organdie over white, and carried California poppies. The bridesmaid wore white organdie over blue and carried a bouquet of white asters.

Following the congratulations of the guests refreshments were served, an orchestra meanwhile rendering an excellent program of music.

When the bride and groom left for Luakaha they were stormed with the usual shower of rice, and enough good wishes to insure lifelong happiness. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Cooke, C. Montague Cooke, Miss Alice Cooke, Richard Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Atherton, F. Atherton, Mr. and Mrs. C. H.

that he would wantonly desire to throw away money? We don't care what high-priced tailor has been making your clothes, but will guarantee that Stein-Bloch clothes are their equal in cloth-quality, style, workmanship and fit. A comparison of prices would make your tailor look foolish, and the best of it, that here you have to submit to no tiresome measurements, only one try-on and wear the garments the day you buy them, to say nothing of your money back for the asking.
