NOT A SUGAR CONSPIRACY.

While Mr. Spreckels is devoting all the skill and ability which has made his life remarkable, to defeat the Annexationist cause, the Louisville Courier-Journal is using columns of editorial space to prove that he is the moving power in the "planters conspiracy" to bring these islands into the United States.

Quoting the STAR's statement that if Mr. Spreckels and the planters had really been back of a political conspiracy to get the sugar bounty through annexation they would not have deferred their revolution until all bounty prospects had been wiped out by the election of a Democratic President and Congress, the Courier-Journal says:

The STAR is edited too far away from home. Consider the situation. According to Mr. Thurston the "gangs" to be credited to the "Reciprocity Treaty" with Hawaii were:

Increase in the value of sugar property owned by Americans, $23,235,000. Profits made by Americans on sugar, $35,830,888. Commissions paid to American agents, $3,000,000. All these benefits, bounties and subsidies, paid by the American consumer to the American speculators in Hawaii, were abolished by putting sugar on the free list.

That scheme failed, but not because no effort was made for success. It failed because there was a revolt of American opinion.

There were few signs of a revolt or of the occasion for one until the Queen tried a coup d'etat. This was on January 14 and 15. When it became plain that she wanted to violate the constitution, and force a despotic charter upon the people, the intelligent, business, mercantile and property-owning classes rose and cast her out.

What evidence is there in these locally undisputed facts of a cane-growers' conspiracy? To sum up, sugar men did not organize the revolt, they did not lead it, they did not enter in any appreciable way the personnel of the new Government, and, except in the matter of isolated planters here and there, they did not join in the appeal for union with America.

of the city of Honolulu and they continue in such hands, to the intense displeasure and hostility of the Sugar King himself. The Courier Journal says that the STAR is published too far away from home.

The native Hawaiians will do themselves a service by turning a deaf ear to the tricksters who tell them, from time to time, that the ex-Queen is to be restored. The fact is, these politicians do not believe their own weird tales, getting them up merely to the end that natives may be kept, through fear, from joining the annexation party.

It may be that the bombs found a few days ago in close proximity to the center of Royalist intrigue, where they had been dropped by a fugitive native, had been made and buried by a man who is now dead. Certainly the man himself is not able to prove otherwise, and besides, the point is not material.

If all the officials under the old regime had come out of the Low Inquiry with as much credit as did Mr. Rothwell of the post office, there would have been no occasion now for uneasiness in the ex-Queen's camp.

THE STAR denies that Royalist firms have been boycotted by the Annexation people and it fails to find anything in Mr. Lillie's card to lead it to modify that view.

THE New York World's attack upon Minister Blount and its demand for his recall may be readily accounted for. Upon the staff of the World, along with the flesh and the devil, is the gifted William Shaw Bowen, who has not liked Mr. Blount since he was repudiated, at the latter's instance, by his "friend Cleveland."

CAPT. THOMAS SPENCER.

A UNIQUE CHARACTER IN HONOLULU.

Ex-Minister Daggett Writes About His Patriotism and Eccentricity—He Ducks a Duke.

Captain Thomas Spencer, who died in Honolulu nine or ten years ago, was one of the most enthusiastic and uncompromising Americans that ever maintained with voice and muscle the prowess and dignity of the great republic in a foreign land. And he possessed an abundance of both, for he was a man of grand proportions, with the strength of an ox and the lungs of a lion. In disposition he was eminently jovial, kind and peaceful; but any word in his bearing of intentional disparagement of the land of his birth promptly aroused his wrath, and a fight or an apology was the inevitable satisfaction demanded. His patriotism was boundless and unconditional, and extended not alone to a defence of the institutions of the republic, but to its prominent leaders as well, no matter to which of the political parties they belonged. Of course such a man could not always be reasonable in a championship so broad and unequivocal, but his hobby was understood and tolerated by his friends of other nationalities, not only because of his many good qualities, but for the further reason that he seldom spoke disrespectfully of other nations, or denied to their citizens patriotic instincts as intense as his own.

Nor was "Uncle Tom Spencer," as he was familiarly called, more noted for his sturdy loyalty to the land of his birth than for his reckless generosity and almost limitless hospitality. As the captain of a wrecked whaler from Cape Cod, where he was born and reared, I believe, he landed on the Hawaiian Islands more than forty years ago. The conditions pleased him and he sent for his family and remained there up to the time of his death. He took delight in noting the wonderful growth of the republic from his far-off home in the Pacific, and his love of country seemed to increase in full measure with the added years of his absence from it, until the sentiment in the end took the form of a blind and satisfied idolatry.

Engaging in a mercantile business in Honolulu, he soon amassed a comfortable fortune, which he invested in canefields on the island of Hawaii. His plantations were near Hilo, and he erected a large and commodious residence in that village, which he occupied during the remainder of his life and where he dispensed a hospitality so lavish and general as to render the Spencer mansion famous. But, for some reason, the captain did not meet with success as a sugar-maker. He lost the most of his money invested in the business and found it necessary to resume the occupation of a merchant, which he did in a small way at Hilo.

He spoke the Hawaiian language fluently and was a great favorite with the natives. He was held in esteem by the rulers and his advice was frequently invited and followed by them. Whenever he visited Honolulu a room was placed at his disposal in the royal palace, and in private he always addressed the sovereigns by their individual names. Many state secrets were entrusted to him, and he was the last person who held in his hand the heart of Kamehameha III before it was thrown into the crater of Kilauea as an offering to Pele. He stoutly assisted in the elevation of Kalakaua to the throne, declaring that he was a man of brains, and by far the most eligible candidate of royal blood on the Islands; in fact, as he casually mentioned to the English resident Commissioner, he was "almost good enough to be an American!"

Probably the most gratifying event in the long life of Uncle Tom Spencer was his appointment as United States Vice-Consul at Hilo, a position from which death alone removed him. The emoluments of the place were considerable; but that was of no consequence to Captain Tom. The appointment made him an acknowledged representative of the great republic, the land of his love, and he asked for nothing more. He had elaborate signs painted both for his residence and place of business, and from the tallest staff on the ten Hawaiian Islands threw to the breeze the stars and stripes. He also procured a bronze eagle, about twelve inches in height, mounted on a pedestal, which he always carried with him on his travels and placed on the table before him while taking his meals. This, on one occasion, he politely requested the American Minister to allow him to do while dining with him at the Royal Hawaiian Hotel in Honolulu. The latter would have avoided the display of course, but Captain Tom regarded it as perfectly proper, and the eagle was a silent witness of the repast.

As before intimated, the shelter of his roof and a seat at his table were freely offered to all who crossed his threshold, and distinguished tourists landing at Hilo were made his guests without regard to their nationality and entertained with a display and prodigality according to their character and deserts. The officers of all war vessels dropping anchor in the harbor of Hilo were invited to his table and received at his door with a welcome so hearty and a suavity so unique that they could never forget the circumstance.

The visit to Hilo of the Duke of Edinburgh while he was making a tour of the world and learning navigation, many years ago, was a notable event in the life of Captain Tom. He promptly

M. McINERNY.

Are we to be, or not to be, a part of the Great Republic, seems to be the burning question of the day, and one we had rather leave to wiser heads than ours to solve; and while great statesmen are wrestling with this momentous question, we want to have a little "how-wow" with you on some other subjects, that concern you as well as ourselves.

Has it not occurred to you that you've been wearing that old hat long enough! In these progressive times if you intend to be "in it," you've got to keep pace with fashion. No matter how otherwise well dressed you may be, unless your hat is the correct thing you bear a shabby appearance.

We have already laid in a stock of the Latest Hats of the coming Spring and Summer styles, in hard felts, soft felts and straws, and including a line of the celebrated "Fidora" Hats, at present all the rage in the United States. There is therefore, no necessity for you to hang on any longer to that old Tile that bears such a strong resemblance to the hat "your father wore."

Believing that business will be better in the near future, we have not hesitated to keep our stock full in all lines. Take collars for instance: We have almost everything you could wish for. If you wear a standing collar, just come in and take a look at our "Narenta" or "Ardonia;" or if you prefer a turn down collar, try the "Winnipeg" or "Goswell;" we have have lots of others, and can't fail to suit you. Cuffs in abundance, links or otherwise.

Neckwear in profusion, scarfs windsors 4-in-hands, and a special lot of "Boys' Bows;" suspenders in great variety, leather and woven ends, good strong, serviceable goods.

We might go on indefinitely, but space is valuable, and to enumerate everything we carry would fill a pretty fair sized Book. If there is anything you want in the men's line, just drop in and see us, and if we can't suit you, we don't believe any one can.

If you should want a pair of nice shoes, let us try a hand at fitting you. Did it ever occur to you

How much a man is like his shoes; For instance, both a soul may lose. Both have been tanned; Both are made tight by Cobblers; Both get left and right; Both need a mate to be complete; And both are made to go on feet.

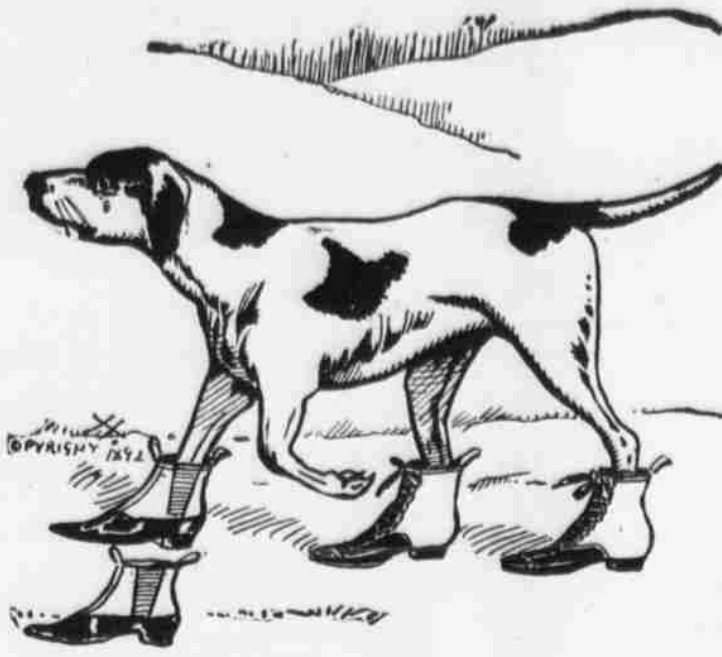

They both need healing; oft are sold, And both in time will turn to mould. With shoes the last is first; with men The first shall be the last; and when The shoes wear out, they're mended new;

When men wear out, they're men dead too.

They both are trod upon, and both Will tread on others nothing loth. Both have their ties, and both incline When polished, in the world to shine; And both get out. Now would you choose To be a man, or be his shoes.

POINTERS IN SHOES

Just three pointers will be enough for you:
1st—We have over 20,000 pairs of Shoes in stock to select from, embracing all leading lines.
2nd—We buy in larger quantities than any one in the country, only spot cash, consequently we buy cheaper.
3rd—We have no extraordinary inducements to offer; you would distrust a man who had gold dollars to sell for ninety cents. Look out for the shoe man with that kind of a story; his shoes may be Counterfeits.

placed his house and all it contained at the service of the young Duke and his friends so long as they remained ashore, and they gladly availed themselves of the hospitable tender. They made the house a pandemonium for a few days, and the captain substantially assisted in the uproar. They had evidently learned something of the character of their host, and the style in which they were received at his door satisfied them that they had made no mistake in accepting his hospitality.

Taking the Duke by the hand the captain bowed courteously and said: "Duke, I greet and welcome you and your friends to this humble habitation. Aloha nui! It is yours as long as you choose to honor it with your presence. You will be safe under its roof, for it is protected by the flag of the greatest nation on earth. I will add the English flag if you would provide me with one. Do what you please with the house and its contents. I only ask that you will not set them on fire, unless you find it difficult to enjoy yourselves in any other way. One of your uncles, Duke, hired a lot of Hessians to annoy some of my ancestors a while back. But that has been forgiven long ago. Walk right in and I'll show you your quarters."

Entering and sampling the captain's stimulants two or three times, which put them all in a rollicking good humor, the guests were escorted through the house and finally to a large room on the ground floor containing a sunken stone reservoir ten or fifteen feet square, filled with water to the depth of six or eight feet, which was kept pure and cool by the constant passage through it of a rivulet of water diverted from a mountain stream. The weather was hot and sultry and the great basin of cool water looked inviting.

"Gentlemen," said the captain, "here is a bath fit for a king. It is the only place in the house that I am not ashamed of."

"Lovely!" exclaimed the Duke, with enthusiasm. "As it is sometimes the custom of hosts to first drink from a vessel before offering it to their guests, as a guarantee against poison, it would not be out of place, captain, for you to take the first plunge." Then placing his hand on the huge shoulder of his host and turning to his comrades, he continued: "I propose, lads, that we all unite in giving him a British baptism."

The proposal was received with rollicking satisfaction, and four or five of the party advanced as if to seize and pitch the captain into the reservoir. The latter smiled grimly and politely said:

"Certainly, boys, it will assure you in the least, pick me right up and throw me in if you can. But as there would be no fun in it unless I made a little friendly resistance, you had better include in the scuffle the 200 or 300 marines and sailors you've got aboard to make the game somewhat nearer even."

Roars of laughter followed and young Beresford seized one of the captain's arms with the cry of, "Catch-as-you-can, lads."

"Hold a minute, boys," exclaimed Captain Tom, with a twinkle in his eye. "I intend to throw you all in, one after another, and as I've always wanted to duck one of Vic's boys I'll commence with this one. In the name of the great American eagle, here goes!" with which he seized the Duke under the arms and flung him into the reservoir. He then started for the others, but they laughingly scattered and the frolic ended.

The Duke took his involuntary plunge in the utmost good humor, and he and Captain Tom became the jolliest of friends. Nor did the Duke forget him after leaving the island. He sent him a magnificent watch and other valuable keepsakes from the nearest port at which they could be obtained, and in return received a photograph of the bath in which he had been baptized in the name of the American eagle.

The following circumstance was related to me by Captain Spencer himself, and is therefore substantially correct. It occurred immediately after the news of the fall of Vicksburg had reached the islands, and when his heart was rent with grief at the internal strife which threatened the very life of the republic. He was on his way from Honolulu to Hilo. Among the passengers of the little steamer were two Australian tourists. In the midst of others on deck they talked of the rebellion in the United States, and agreed in the opinion that General Grant was a drunkard who knew but little or nothing of military strategy, and that whatever successes he had achieved were mainly due to the cowardice of his opponents. The conversation was carried on in a loud tone, and Captain Tom could not help but hear the most of it as he walked the deck. Unable to control himself he finally stepped in front of the offending critics, and politely said:

"Gentlemen, you have just been speaking of General Grant in an insulting manner, and I could not help but overhear your conversation."

The persons addressed stared at the speaker without replying, and the Captain continued:

"You have referred to General Grant as a military fraud and drunkard, and to the people of a certain section of the American republic as cowards. General Grant is a countryman of mine and you must apologize."

"And what if we refuse?" inquired one of them defiantly.

"Then I shall throw both of you overboard," said the Captain's blunt reply, and drawing out his watch he added: "I will give you just five minutes to do it in."

The tourists began to grow uneasy. There was something about the Captain's bulk and demeanor that suggested trouble. One of them stepped briskly to the purser's window, and pointing to Captain Tom, told him of

A PALACE NO LONGER.

THE EXECUTIVE BUILDING DEDICATED.

Royalist Rumors Followed by Complete Control of the Old Monarchist Headquarters.

More than the usual number of of Royalist rumors were circulating last night and early this morning. One was to the effect that the ex-Queen was to be re-established on her throne; another that troops from the Boston were to be landed for the purpose of assisting at the ceremony; and still another that an Hawaiian republic was to be declared punctually at 10 o'clock this morning. These rumors failed to take account of the fact that there is no longer any throne existing in Hawaii or any semblance of one, the place where it stood being occupied, on official occasions, by Sanford B. Dole, President of the Provisional Government; the Boston is not in the harbor; and the proposition to establish a republic so far has only emanated from the imagination of a gentleman, said to be slightly interested in sugar.

These rumors arose from the simple announcement that at ten o'clock this morning the Government would formally assume control of the palace building, which has been done. Shortly after the hour named President Dole and the members of his cabinet, together with Auditor-General Ross and Major Potter, aide to the President, walked from the old government building to the palace, where they were received with official honors by Company E which was drawn up in line under the command of Captain Good.

On entering the building President Dole at once proceeded to the room set apart as the office of the Minister of Finance where he made the simple formal announcement that hereafter all Government business would be transacted in the new quarters set apart for the different officials, and that the change had been made as a matter of convenience and economy, at the same time tendering the thanks of the Government to Colonel Soper, Captain Good and the officers and men serving under them for the celerity with which the transfer of furniture, etc., had been accomplished. The Hawaiian band was present and played during the morning.

After the old building had been vacated a number of men were at once put to work clearing out the different rooms on the lower floor, preparatory to placing them at the disposal of the minor departments of the Government. It is expected that everything will be in perfect order in both buildings by to-morrow night, and that business in all departments of the Government will be much facilitated by the change. Pending these arrangements, Captain Zeigler's company have taken up their quarters in the old Government Building.

ON THE DIAMOND.

The Crescent's Game Won From Them by the Hawaii.

Baseball enthusiasts cannot complain at the quality of ball put up by the boys so far this season, even though it has resulted rather one-sided. Last Saturday's game was entered upon by the Crescents and Hawaii with usual spirit of fighters and blood in the eye of each batsman. The attendance was good, the fair sex predominating, and the band did its level best to draw the umpire and prevent the official scorer from noting all the fine points. This, however, did not deter the boys from their work. How much it is responsible for the several errors that gave spice to the game is for the boys to say, not the scribe.

Heavy batting was the order of the day, and now two and three base hits are probably noted on the official score book than any other game of the season. Some of these, especially in the last half of the eighth inning, when they came thick and fast, piled up the run amid wild excitement for the Hawaii's and unleashed the pent up feelings of their friends in the grand stand. Up to this time, about all the sky scrapers had been well cared for, Holt of the Crescents distinguishing himself finely.

For infield work, Willie Wilder, who was sufficiently recovered as to resume his place at second base, was as nimble as ever, and with Soper at first, made the nearest double play of the game in the third inning. George Lucas took his old Honolulu position at right field for the Crescents, through illness of one of the regulars, and enlivened the game by some good head work in stealing bases.

Angus pitched for the Crescents throughout the game, and Kaer for the Hawaii's relieved as usual in the seventh inning by Palmer Wood. Had the captain of the Crescents exercised the same wisdom and put Lemon in the box in this or the following inning the result would have been far different. As it is, the status of this club has promise of being sacrificed for individual preferences.

Up to the eighth inning the Crescents had the game in their own hands, and there was no evidence of this condition of affairs being "by permission" of the Hawaii, though the latter now boasts to that effect. Harry Whitney and Clarence Crabb umpired the game, and they did the week previous, and were called upon to decide on several nice points.

The following is the score by innings: Crescents... 1 0 0 1 2 0 0 0 1 - 6 Hawaii... 0 1 0 0 2 0 0 7 - 10 The Kamehamehas and Hawaii will cross bats next Saturday.

MASONIC LUNCHEONS.

They Are Already an Established Success.

The Dining room of the old Arlington House was literally besieged this afternoon between 12 and 2 by eager and hungry visitors, the occasion being the first of the lunches given by the ladies for the purpose of raising funds for furnishing the new Masonic Temple.

They came from every direction, in carriages and on foot, sometimes a stray banker, merchant or mechanic, again a whole family of seven or eight. And so it was all through the luncheon hours. While there was plenty to eat and the menu was excellent, the large dining-room was totally inadequate, as far as seating capacity went, to supply the wants of those present. To-day's luncheon was under the special supervision of Mrs. J. S. McGrew and Mrs. A. Fuller, and the following was the bill of fare: Fish chowder, cold tongue, chicken salad, potato salad and all kinds of bread, and rolls, pies and cakes, tea, coffee, etc., and the way these viands disappeared down hungry throats showed sufficient evidence of their toothsomeness. It is enough to say that the first of the series of lunches given for the laudable purpose was a grand success, and judging from the numbers in attendance to-day the expectations of the ladies in charge of the affair will be more than realized.

The following ladies compose the various committees: Flower girls—Miss Nolte and Miss Hassinger. Assistants—Mesdames P. C. Jones, N. Lewis, Dr. Day, Widdfield, T. J. King, J. N. Wright, G. Castle, E. A. Jones, B. Cartwright, Lansing, Makee, T. Foster and Lackland; Misses Judd, Lewers, Whitney, Afong (2), Roche, Fuller, McIntyre, Bolles, Bruns and Grey.

Fancy table—Mrs. Dr. Lundy.

BISHOP WILLIS REPLIES.

His Answer to the Second Congregation in Pamphlet Form.

Bishop Alfred Willis has finally replied to the resolutions of the Second Congregation. The reply appears in a pamphlet with this elaborate title: "The Essential Need of Unity in the Cathedral Church, or reasons why the expedient of a dual organization permitted in 1885 to meet a temporary emergency should now be discontinued, as being fatal to the peace and progress of the Church, set forth at length by the Bishop of Honolulu." The Bishop writes of the church trouble temperately, and has produced an interesting essay on the conditions of church government.

The ministerial entertainment, advertised to come off at the Opera House last Saturday, has been indefinitely postponed.

An interesting article from the pen of Ex Minister Duggett on Captain Thomas Spencer appears in this impression.

An arc light has recently been placed at the intersection at Victoria, and Green streets and Thurston avenue. It is a great accommodation to residents in that vicinity.

The services at the Episcopal Cathedral yesterday were not as attractive as usual owing to the fact that repairs now being made to the organ necessitated the use of an harmonium.

Professor Berger is as happy a boy with a new horn on the Fourth of July. He has reorganized his band and gotten about thirty good musicians together. The band will give a concert in Emma Square to-night.

Added to their already large and varied stock Messrs Theo. H. Davies & Co., have just received a shipment of silks, laces, prints, carpets, hats, neckwear, cutlery, etc., which they are selling at very low rates.

Information comes from Maui that Mr. Stevens' address, which was translated for the Ku'oaia, is doing great good among the natives. Many of its ideas are new to them and have served to warm them up on the matter of Annexation.

The suggestion comes from a leading Honolulu merchant that the STAR should prepare a weekly or monthly edition to be mailed to American newspapers as an antidote to the Royalist correspondence now being sent from these islands.

AMERICAN HAWAIIANS.

ENTERPRISING PIONEERS OF TRADE.

Their Long and Honorable Record—Men Who Have Been a Credit to Commerce and to the Nation.

To the Editor of the Herald: To current talk on the Hawaiian problem, let me add something that seems due in plain justice to the American Hawaiians, as we may call them, giving a brief look at what they have been, and are, and how they have reached their present trying position, basing observation on an experience with them that dates back in the old house here in 1817, when my late father first visited the Islands. Through the seventy-five succeeding years the file of correspondence has been unbroken, while for fifty years mercantile business was continuous.

Unlike much of the Western world, the Islands did not become subject to civilization in the course of the search for gold or colonies. An English marine explorer made them known to the active world; their admirable climate and their commercial advantages attracted white settlers, predominant among whom from the first were Americans.

It was during the greatest age of American commerce when a remarkable race of our countrymen took their lives, as well as their fortunes, in their hands and sought lands then little known, where they established themselves and American mercantile business. At the same time the missionary spirit was aroused in our country to an extent it had never yet been, and as preachers of religion and teachers of civilized life, its representatives went far and wide, also seeking lands then unknown.

Hawaii was one of these lands. Of course it was the day of small things when business there began. As it has been through business that existing conditions have largely been reached, we may follow that subject. At first, as is apt to be the case in undeveloped regions, trade was by barter. Productions and needs were few and simple. Gradually both increased. Then the great American whaling fleet made the Islands their place of supply. Over forty years ago it was thought that both soil and climate were well adapted to the growth of an important staple, and the production of sugar was attempted. The usual course of trial, disappointment and final success followed, until the largest industry and produce of the country was developed. The main business and reliance became agricultural rather than maritime.

The old days departed with their almost sole reliance on mercantile enterprise and new days came when the figuring had to be largely on what legislative acts permit, and that in regard to a single article. The foundation and establishment of sugar raising was by the Americans. And with none of the aids accorded elsewhere to infant and growing American industries. The men who did the work and bore the risk, faced the world and fought their way.

When this industry was fairly getting on its feet came the well known treaty with this country. By that, the great bulk of imports from the United States were admitted free to Hawaii, and products of the islands were free at our custom houses. Very few articles thus free in our country found their way east of the Rocky mountains.

Basing operations on the terms of his treaty, many Americans, by birth or immediate descent, largely developed plantations they had already established, or they equipped new ones. A very large amount of capital was thus invested in no less than 64 establishments, of which 42 are complete plantations. In them some of the canefields would reach a distance from Copp's hill to the Back Bay Fens.

It may be said that these Americans went to a foreign country, and must take their chances. But they are as good and worthy Americans as can be found anywhere. Sugar raising is not only honest work, it is a necessity. They did not make the soil and climate of the Pacific coasts. They went where nature obliged them to go to do that work. Very well, they have done it, and no Americans deserve more wise and fair treatment. By our former tariff they were protected; by our present they are left practically unprotected.

Their business, while of vital importance to them, is the great productive reliance of the country where they live and when a single industry has become a main support it cannot be seriously affected without, of course, serious results.

No special privileges are needed or wanted, but simply fair play. If protection is right for certain classes, it is right for others fully as deserving. If reduction is right, all recipients should also have their share—it should not be put suddenly, wholly on one class.

In this state of affairs we find some one talking about a "sugar conspiracy." Sweep away at once all protection from Lowell, Manchester and Lawrence, would it be a "conspiracy of cotton by cotton for cotton" if the mill owners tried to save themselves? We are also told that it is only a little group of mere traders. It is a pretty fair-sized group, and includes a great deal of the brains and enterprise, besides no small percentage of the money, of the "garden of the Pacific," of the Gibraltar of the mighty western ocean.

Hawaii takes from us nearly five-sevenths of her imports, and supplies customers to almost every sort of our manufacturers and producers. On the other hand she sends us rice, hides, bananas, sugar—275,000,000 pounds of the latter. Certainly, there is a business worth saving and worth developing, and there is something more and of greater importance, considered in the higher phases of commerce and in enlightened policy.

Neither states nor business houses run—and through generations—except by sound, fair conduct. How to apply this is now the problem with Hawaii, and important American interests, moral and political, as well as financial. Back of all is the sort of men controlling, and I may be allowed to use our record of sixty years to tell the sort we have found—trustworthy throughout.

Of the older days, take the American whaler, masters and owners, as keen and hardy a race as ever touched American business, and largely represented at the Islands in the years while their pursuits flourished. First to last, to our counting rooms came their drafts on pretty much every party in every town in the business, a great number of drafts in the aggregate, and a dishonored one hardly or never known.

Take the merchants—sixty years' run of them. They have proved honest, capable, with a mercantile education, with ship-schedule accounts. No few of their names are well worth being recalled; no few were in their time known world wide. Let me mention some who have in succession been managers of the still existing houses founded by James Hunnewell in 1826: Charles Brewer, with sixty years of active life and worth; Henry A. Pierce, for years American Minister to Hawaii; Gen. Marshall, patriot in our civil war, treasurer at Hampton school, and later in the Unitarian building; Hon. Henry A. P. Carter, with honor to himself and to Hawaii, her minister at Washington; Hon. Peter C. Jones, one of the most esteemed ministers of finance ever at the Islands; His excellency John O. Dominis, whose death was a public misfortune, for had he lived as he was, consort of the Queen, some serious matters might have been averted.

Lastly, now at the head of the directors of the house, is Hon. Charles R. Bishop, whose wealth, intelligence and beneficence could place him in the front ranks of the best in Boston. This is the sort of men who have given character to one commercial house in Honolulu.

There is another class of men, most of them now living and active. All of us have noted the ability and character of descendants of many of our earlier and later New England ministers. Also we can but note the career of many a son of many a New England missionary to Hawaii. Alexander, Brigham, Coon, Armstrong of Hampton, Castle, Judd, Damon, Cooke, Thurston and more represent religion, education, commerce and benevolence. Americans can well feel proud of their fellows who have cast their lot with Hawaii or whose ties are still there.

It is very unwise, to say the least, to treat any set of men unjustly. Certainly the class of Americans we have found these seventy years back, as well as to-day, in Hawaii, are the very last to begin an experiment. By circumstances for which they are by no means wholly responsible, they are in what is called a tight place. It is possible to sneer at them, to jump on them, or to leave them to their fate, and it is also possible to do just the opposite. We have no colony—we had best not have any—but Hawaii has, in the course of seventy years, grown practically into such a relationship, and as, perhaps, no other distant region has. In the long life of a great nation, it would be very bad policy to show a sad fate for Americans who, in ways as good as history is apt to show, have Americanized a distant and valuable region.

The case is now before the court, and we can very well trust it. We can, however, add a hearty good word for the good names and works of old friends and their successors whose fortunes are in the balance.

JAMES F. HUNNEWELL, 19 Green Street, Charlest wn.

Claus Spreckels is said to be busily engaged in organizing a Hawaiian Republic. If his republic would only stand alone, it might be an easy way out of the difficulty, but the trouble is that it would not stand for six months without outside assistance.—Boston Journal.

the threat against his life, and inquired what kind of a man he was.

"He is Captain Tom Spencer," was the reply, "and if he says he'll throw you overboard I guess he'll do it."

"But is there no protection for passengers on board?"

"Generally, yes," returned the purser, who seemed to enjoy the discomfiture of the tourist, "but rarely against the patriotic freaks of Captain Spencer. He's a hard man to handle, and would set fire to the steamer if he was interfered with. On the last trip down he threw a man overboard, and hewed off the ears of two others."

The tourist returned in trepidation to his companion. "There were a few whispered words between them, when Captain Tom announced that just one minute remained. Watching the dial for a few seconds longer, he replaced the watch in his pocket, loosened his shirt collar, and began to remove his coat.

"See here, stranger," said the bolder of the two, rising and throwing his arm around the deck pillar, "we don't want to have any difficulty with you, and since you seem to be so sensitive on the subject, we are willing to admit that we spoke hastily of General Grant and that we believe him to be an able and trustworthy leader."

"And that there is no such thing as cowardice on either side of Mason and Dixon's line?" added the captain, relieving himself still further of his coat.

"Yes; we are even willing to admit that also," was the hasty response.

"Now, one thing more," concluded the captain. "If I hear either of you mentioning the name of General Grant while on board this steamer without taking off his hat, I'll feed you both to the sharks!"

The tourists were on their way to the volcano of Kilauea, but learning that Captain Tom resided at Hilo, they left the steamer at Lahaina.

An account of the affair got into the newspapers through some means, and a very friendly letter from General Grant made Captain Tom the proudest man in the Hawaiian Kingdom.

Thoroughly acquainted with his peculiarities, his friends were in the habit of dropping remarks especially designed to draw him out. Sitting on the veranda of the Royal Hawaiian Hotel one evening with a party of friends, the subject of the Southern rebellion was adroitly introduced and the question asked:

"Uncle Tom, how large an army of European soldiers do you think it would have taken to whip the 70,000 men who marched to the sea with Sherman?"

"That is not an intelligent question," replied the captain. "For you ought to know as well as I do that Sherman's army could not have been whipped. I have given the subject some thought, however, and am satisfied that it would have taken all the standing armies in Europe a week to kill that 70,000 men in a pitched battle. I have figured the thing down, and don't believe there is any mistake in the calculation."

Pauncefort, the actor, made the acquaintance of Captain Tom while visiting the Islands as a lecturer on English authors. He started with Dickens.

"Hold on!" roared the captain, who was a listener. "Not another word about that sounder who abused forty millions of God's people!" and Dickens was skipped.

At the age of about seventy the captain was brought to Honolulu with the final and almost only illness of his life, and cared for in one of the Hawaiian Hotel cottages. Circulation ceased in his lower limbs and could not be restored. He was visited by his old friends, including the members of the royal family, and to the last was full of quaint conceits and good humor. On a stand at his bedside perched his bronze eagle, and a small American flag hung over his door. The United States Minister called frequently, very greatly to the captain's satisfaction, and a few hours before his death asked him if he had any special requests to make. He said he had but one, and that was that his body might be wrapped in an American flag, with another around the casket, when he was laid away.

He was assured that his request would be complied with to the letter, and that he should be spoken of as he deserved in the announcement of his death to the State Department.

"God bless you!" said the Captain, with emotion, extending his great hand to the Minister; "and God bless our country and our flag! I shall now die happy."

Wrapped in American flags, with two or three knightly decorations upon the breast, the body of Captain Tom, preceded by the Royal Hawaiian band and followed by a large concourse of mourners, was borne to its last home in Nuuanu Cemetery. He was a rough, reckless, great hearted man of the world, and in life did not observe all the Christian commandments, perhaps, but patriotism was the religion of Captain Tom Spencer, and in no one could it find a more earnest or conscientious devotee. ROLLIN M. DAGGETT.

They Have Come!

Those Razor Stroops you have been waiting for several weeks, are here. They are so good that it has been said of them, that if you lay your razor, and one of these stroops down together on your washstand, the razor will keep a fine edge; still, we recommend following the directions printed on each stroop.

Anti-Rattlers.—We have a new kind which you can put on to the shafts of your buggy, without breaking four fingers and a thumb. They prevent two things—rattling and swearing.

Boardman's Pat. Wrench.—4 sizes, just the kind of combination wrench to have about the house.

Try the new Keystone Egg Beater, if you want a beater that will do quick, clean work.

Hose,—1/2-in. to 2-in., 3 and 4-ply plain or wired, just received; cheap and good quality; also carbolized. We have a large stock of "Hubbuck," "Pioneer," and cheaper brands of White Leads and Zinc. Also, Oil, Turpentine, and all painters' supplies, and you will do well to see our Stock and get our Prices before you paint your house.

American Flags,—6 to 18 feet long, came by the last steamer to us. They are a fine lot, sewed bunting.

Fire Arms and Ammunition.—A new lot of Sporting and Target Rifles, Colt's new Navy, Smith and Wesson, and cheaper Revolvers, came last week and can now be seen. We carry the most complete assortment of Cartridges in town, from 22 to 50 cal., and always have plenty of them.

Leather.—We have received within the past sixty days, by steamer and sail, 66 Rolls of Leather, containing 9088 lbs., and 5347 ft; also, 3 bales containing 142 doz. sheep skins, so it looks as if we meant to keep our Stock of Leather up, although by getting it in large lots, we are able to keep the prices down.

Salt.—We are headquarters for Hawaiian Salt, as we make it. That the quality is good, and Price Low, is easily shown by the large quantity we sell every week.

Blight Compound.—Five gallons will make 65 gallons of wash. You spray your Lime and Orange Trees with this wash, and the Blight will do the rest, die and drop off the trees. We have the compound at our store, or can give you an order on the Gov't Nursery for it, but don't forget to bring a 5-gallon can to put it in. We sell spraying outfits.
