MUNICIPAL INCORPORATION.

A conference of thoughtful gentlemen at the Club House dining room the other day did the HERALD the honor of addressing a letter to it, calling for a discussion of certain questions relative to the event of a scheme of municipal government being made a living issue. The first question propounded by our correspondents referred to the matter of the municipal suffrage. Who are to have the governing voice in the new city of Honolulu's affairs? They raise the point in that connection as to whether a dual franchise be involved, one for national and another for municipal affairs. Taking the latter point first, there would be nothing out of the way or unprecedented in a dual franchise, should it be decided that a comprehensive and practicable system of municipal government could not otherwise be attained. If municipal government be once determined upon by the property owners as essential to the adequate progress of the city, a scheme that would be generally satisfactory and workable would have to be devised. The franchise, like everything else involved, would have to be adapted to the circumstances of the case. As stated by the present writer, in the course of a series of articles in another local paper about eighteen months ago, there is no hope of the principal property owners looking for a betterment of civic administration, under any corporate system ruled by the electorate that now returns representatives to the national Legislature. A contemporary writer understood to be speaking for the Government jumped at the opportunity of making political capital out of the bare mention of anything of the kind, making a transparent appeal to native prejudices against the foreign element under the natural but mistaken notion that the idea opposed came from any party in national politics. Yet the journal referred to has not till this day replied to the question given it, as to whether it was prepared to advocate consigning municipal government apart from all national administration to the electors who control the return of representatives of Honolulu to the Legislature. To return to the point, dual or even triple suffrage is not unknown to other countries. Under some federal constitutions, there is one franchise for federal, a second for provincial and a third for municipal elections. In some parts of the United States even the municipal franchise is subdivided, women being allowed to vote for school trustees but not for officials. The writer has himself voted in federal and provincial elections in a city ward where he was disfranchised from voting for mayor and alderman, like thousands of other householders in the same city, on account of neglect to pay a small municipal tax that was left entirely optional. It was a curious law but there it was, although, after a great many years of submission to it, lately it has been resisted, we are not certain with what success, in the courts.

FOREIGN NEWS AND GOSSIP.

In New York some patriotic persons grateful for Bartholdi's gift, propose to present a statue of Washington to France. A draught of ink, taken in a spirit of mischief, by a 14-year old school boy, at Vandalia, Ill., killed the lad within a few hours. Mary Baker, the "fasting girl," of White county, Indiana, who is reported to have abstained from food for 109 days, is now recovering. The Spanish Government is trying to induce its Republican political exiles to return home, accept amnesty and stop revolutionary agitation. The land ceded by Chippewa Indians in Minnesota, by agreement with the Northwest Commission, are expected to realize nearly $15,000,000. A bill introduced in the Pennsylvania State Legislature allows criminals condemned to death to select hanging or death by electric shock. A Pennsylvania Dutch farmer died recently and $35,000 in coin and banknotes were found stowed away in odd places about the house in old tin cans and coffee pots. The Pope of Rome has ordered the Bavarian Franciscans to brew no more beer in their monasteries. Its manufacture was a very extensive and lucrative business. Richard Reabecker nine years ago took out naturalization papers at Shelbyville, Ill. On returning to Germany to secure an estate which he inherited he was arrested for having evaded military duty. The Duke of Orleans, born at Twickenham on the 6th of February, 1869, is now eighteen years old, the age at which French sovereigns dispense with a Regency. He has therefore attained his political majority. Most of the English political leaders are ailing. Mr. Gladstone has to be careful of his health, Lord Salisbury is delicate, Mr. Parnell's health is threatened and Lord Randolph Churchill is never out of the doctor's hands. The order which the German Emperor has just bestowed upon Verdi has been conferred upon only five other musicians. Of them, four—Mendelssohn, Meyerbeer, Rossini and Liszt—are dead, and one, Brahms, is living. On the 31st of May, 1883, Marguerita Bogenval of Origny, France, went to sleep, and has not wakened since, nor so much as stirred a finger. She has been kept alive by the administration of milk and highly concentrated beef tea. Steve Brodie, the man who last year leaped from the Brooklyn Bridge, was arrested the other day at Pittsburg to prevent him from jumping from the cupola of a museum to a net stretched seventy-five feet below, where vast crowds had gathered.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

No hand-book excels the Hawaiian Almanac and Annual for reliable statistical and general information relating to these Islands. Price 50 cents. If you want a good smoke for your money, patronize home industry and call at J. W. Hingley's, Crystal Soda Works, 69 Hotel street, next door to Horn's Bakery. Island orders solicited and promptly filled. There is no license required to sell these cigars.

ble, to have the Chinese taxed without representation. At the same time it would be absurd and promotive of untold harm in various ways, to have a common suffrage whereby all nationalities should vote for the same series of candidates in any one ward. To overcome the difficulties implied in the foregoing presentation of the case is the problem.

One way out of the difficulty has been mooted privately, meeting with a considerable degree of concession to its reasonableness and feasibility. It is to divide the representation of the city in municipal councils by nationalities instead of by districts. Give Hawaiian subjects of all origins and colors a certain number of representatives, American citizens their proportionate quota, say all other Caucasian residents combined their share, and Chinese theirs. Only keep national politics out, and the different groups of representatives might be expected to legislate on municipal affairs without any more development of sectionalism than is found in the civic councils of any large city abroad. That even Chinese would adapt themselves to such an economy has some measure of proof in the interested and intelligent part the Chinese members bear in the affairs of the Board of Representatives of the Honolulu Fire Department. At all events the idea is put forth for at least discussion, the only means by which any solution of the problem can ever be obtained. The remaining points raised by our Club House correspondents may be taken up at leisure. First we require to know what is wanted, and then the all important question will be how to bring about its consummation.

In the admiralty division of the Supreme Court, before Judge Preston yesterday, continued from Wednesday last, was heard the libel of one Thos. H. Patterson, the mate, against said bark Kalakaua, laying claim to the sum of $306.50 for wages due. As usual in such cases the vessel, tackle and apparel were attached by the Marshal on the 10th inst., as per his return on file. Before the case came on for hearing the following claims were filed: By John S. Walker, as the registered owner of the vessel; by Capt. G. N. Armstrong, master of the bark, claiming ownership to sundry pieces of furniture and other articles on board, for which he files an inventory; and by nine of the seamen, claims for wages amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $1,740.75. The following counsel appear in the matter: Messrs. Whiting & Creighton, proctors for libellant; Messrs. Rosa and Peterson, for Capt. Armstrong; F. M. Hatch for the registered owner; Wm. A. The Flow Still Glimmers—Kilauea Gaining in Activity.

A letter received by the steamer W. G. Hall from Mr. J. M. Lee, keeper of the Halfway House between Punaluu and the crater of Kilauea, contains the following information:— A native close by here told me this afternoon that he could see a little reflection from the Kahuku flow about four o'clock this morning. I felt a slight shock of earthquake Tuesday night at 11 o'clock, heavy enough to make me jump out of bed and see if anything alarming was going on outside; but everything looked to be all right. As I can hear, the same shock was felt at Honoauo and Kapapala. Kilauea seems to keep constantly increasing, blazing away and smoking.

A Menace to Parliament.

We view the gradual formation of groups in Parliament with positive dismay, as a symptom which threatens not this or that party, or even this or that security for national greatness, but parliamentary life itself. Beside the two great historic parties, there are the Parcellites; the Liberal Unionists, who follow Lord Hartington; the Ulster Unionists, who must always be considered in discussing any Irish project, and whose mouthpiece is Colonel Sanderson; the Radical Unionists, who gather around Mr. Chamberlain; the Tory Democrats, who will gather round Lord Randolph Churchill; the extreme Radicals, for whom Labour-chere tries to speak, and the Philanthropic Radicals, who have as yet no recognized leader, but whose chief, if he were a little stronger, would be Mr. Stansfield. Here are nine "parties," great and small, which form appreciable factions, sure upon certain grave occasions to differ from all others to such an extent as to render negotiation imperative, and with negotiation compromise.—London Spectator.

T rans Problem.

New York Post's special from London of March 3 says:—There is the beginning of very important, I should say vital, changes in the political situation to-day. The roundtable conference has taken a turn more favorable than the most sanguine politicians on either side could have imagined. Chamberlain is so impressed with the prospects of a Liberal reunion that he abstained from all support of the Government in the rather critical divisions on the Cloture which are going on. More than this, I have very good grounds for the statement that a Home Rule bill proposed by Lord Salisbury and accepted by all parties, is a contingency by no means improbable. Salisbury's change of front, if change it is to be, will result largely from the pressure of Unionists, who feel that Ireland is virtually in the condition of anarchy. Chamberlain has long felt this, and what is more important, Harrington is beginning to fill it. Home Rule presents itself at this moment as the only alternative of coercion.

An unsteady man, like an unsteady light, is apt to go out nights.

THE EQUITABLE Life Assurance Society

OF THE UNITED STATES. Total Assets, Dec. 31, '86, $75,510,472.76

Total Liabilities, including legal Reserve on all existing policies (4 per cent Standard) $59,154,597.000

Total Unutilized Surplus over Four per cent Reserve, $16,355,875.76

Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in general class, is $5,728,761.76

Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in Tontine class, is 10,627,114.00

Upon the New York State Standard of 4-1-2 per cent interest, the Surplus is as computed, $20,495,175.76

New Assurance written in 1886, $111,540,203 Total Outstanding Assurance, $411,779,098

Increase of Premium Income, $2,810,475.40 Increase of Surplus (Four per cent basis), $2,409,636.63 Increase of Assets, $8,957,085.26

In actual Surplus (namely the excess of accumulated funds over liabilities); in Premium Income; in the amount of Assurance in force on its books, the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States exceeds every other life assurance company, and may be justly regarded as the largest and strongest life assurance organization in the World.

EXAMPLE

Of Policy No. 67,389. Life. Issued Jan. 22, 1872, on the life of W. H. C. Date of expiration Jan. 22, 1887.

Amount of Policy, $10,000. Tontine Period, 15 years. Age 53. Annual Premium, $543.10.

Total premiums paid in 15 years, $8,146.50

1. CASH VALUE, Consisting of Reserve, $3,856.30 and Surplus, 4,199.80 $9,056.10

2. PAID-UP VALUE, $13,050.00

3. CASH SURPLUS, $5,199.80

Under this settlement, the policy holder withdraws the surplus in cash, and retains the original policy, continuing the payment of premiums, less annual dividends.

Three other options are available under this Policy.

The policies with 10-year Tontine periods do not show results as satisfactory as those above given. Policies with 20-year periods, on the other hand, will show much larger results than those with 15-year periods; but for purposes of illustration the 15-year policies—those of the intermediate period—are given as fair illustrations.

The longer period of accumulation which the 20-year policies enjoy renders them the most desirable for those who, seeking absolute protection at the lowest "Life" rate, desire also the largest returns in case they live:

Hence the Best Free Tontine "Ordinary Life" Policy is One with a TWENTY-YEARTONTINE PERIOD

The Free Tontine Policy of the Equitable Life Assurance Society is unrestricted after one year, incontestable after two years, and is then PAYABLE in the event of death, immediately upon the receipt of satisfactory proofs of death.

It guarantees a full share of the surplus earned, and being issued by a Society holding a Larger Surplus than any other Assurance Company,

May be expected to show larger profits than the policies of any other company.

IMPLANTING TEETH.

DESCRIPTION OF A REMARKABLE OPERATION IN DENTAL SURGERY.

A Doctor who has Great Faith in His Methods of Implantation—Some of the Mistakes which Experimenters have Made.

A few months ago we gave a report of what Dr. William J. Younger, San Francisco, Cal., had been doing in the way of implanting teeth into artificial sockets. At that time he considered it essential to preserve the vitality of the periodontal membrane by keeping the tooth in water of a temperature of about 130° F., or to implant the tooth, just after extraction, in the comb of a cock.

Since then he has discovered that the periodontal membrane will retain its vitality for 15 months, and how much longer has not been determined, without any care, being carried in the pocket, left on the dressing case, etc.

The report of this case, one of several, is given in a pamphlet of 14 pages, entitled "Implantation of Teeth and Periodontal Life," being a report made to the California State Dental Association, July 21, 1886. The doctor has great faith in the operation, has succeeded beyond his "most sanguine expectations," and believes "that in a short while it will become as firmly established in professional practice as any other operation requiring skill and judgment."

THE DOCTOR'S PRACTICE.

The doctor's practice is to lay the extracted teeth aside in a clean, cool, dry place, for future use. He forms the socket with graded trephines, finishing the walls with burs of various shapes. Previous to inserting the tooth in the socket he soaks it for half an hour in water containing bi-chloride of mercury one in a thousand, temperature 110° to 120° F.; during the operation of forming the socket he washes it out with cold water, containing the same percentage of bi-chloride mercury, trying the tooth from time to time, always returning the tooth to its bath. He forces the tooth finally to place with an instrument such as is used to force a pivot tooth into position, using no ligatures to retain the tooth unless absolutely necessary. In answering the objections to this operation by those who have met with failures in replantation and transplantation, he says:

"Now if they would but consider the conditions and circumstances under which these different operations are undertaken they would readily see that the premises upon which they ground their assumption are unsound and deceitful. For instance, in replantation, as this operation is usually performed, the parts, that is, the periodontal membrane, the apex of the root and the alveolar process immediately surrounding them, are highly inflamed, in a state of disease, with pus either already formed or forming at the end of the root, and the operation is undertaken with the view of relieving or aborting an alveolar abscess. A portion of the diseased apex is then cut off, and the tooth is forced back into the cavity. Here we have a diseased root thrust back into a diseased socket. The disease not removed, its conditions are simply modified, and while the congestion may subside, and the tooth becomes comparatively comfortable, the disintegration of the root substance—already begun—is likely to continue, and in the course of time the entire root becomes destroyed, or what is called absorbed; and the crown drops off. So much for replantation."

ANOTHER MISTAKE.

"Again, in transplantation there is a healthy tooth, but it is usually made to take the place of a miserable, old, diseased root that has been growing and festering in a diseased socket for years, to the discomfort of its unfortunate possessor. The diseased root is pulled out, but is the disease in the surrounding alveolus extracted with it? On the contrary, enough is usually left in the tissue to make war upon the new occupant, and either cause its expulsion or eat away its substance. You must remember that while the old root remained there was sufficient vent through its decayed or broken structure to permit the gases of decomposition and the pus to escape, and thus prevent active trouble. But when the new tooth is put in the vent is entirely occluded, and if there be sufficient disease in the alveolus, the retained gases and pus effect the exclusion or the painful elongation of the intruder. If not enough disease is left to do this, then the slow process of erosion is apt to ensue, and the root becomes in time absorbed."

"Now, in implantation we have a healthy root in a healthy socket, and, therefore, the factors that tend to the destruction of the root in replantation and transplantation are not present, and, therefore, not operative in implantation."

"As to the seeming violence to the bony structure of the jaw, I will state that there is no substance in the human body that seems so tolerant of abuse as this same alveolar process. And my experience is that union takes place more readily and sooner firm and serviceable in implantation than in either of the other operations."—Archives of Dentistry.

A Snail's Extra Eye.

A German professor spent twenty years in studying the habits and characteristics of a certain snail and learned this interesting fact concerning it. On the Pacific coast of America, where it is found in great abundance, it is preyed upon by a certain fish which abounds in the Pacific ocean. As an aid in escaping from its formidable enemy it has been provided with an eye on the back of its head. The same snail is found on the Atlantic coast exactly like its far western brother in every particular except that it has no posterior eye. And the reason for this is that there is no corresponding fish to prey upon it in the Atlantic ocean.—Boston Budget.

Sleeping Cars for Ladies.

A lady of the Sorosis club suggests that the railway companies should provide separate sleeping cars for ladies, so as to afford them the same degree of privacy when traveling by rail that they now have when in a steamboat. The idea has its merits and in connection with this subject I suggested to her that it would not be a bad scheme to get the elevated roads and street car companies to provide exclusive cars for gentlemen.—New York News.

FAR WORSE THAN A RAZOR.

The Weapon Carried by Modern Romans. Something About Revolvers.

"Just feel in that duck's blouse for a knife before you let go of his hands," quietly remarked Detective Shaw to a couple of policemen who were dragging an angry looking Italian into Central station. The policemen went through the Roman and pulled out a wicked looking knife with a blade at least eight inches long. The prisoner had been arrested for fighting up on Tunnel street and was discharged the next morning with a small fine. He didn't get his knife back, however, and it adorns the unique collection of police department archives.

"That," said the detective, "is one of the most dangerous 'concealed weapons' we have to deal with. That knife is made from a file, one of the half round kind, with the edges ground down till it is keen as a razor."

"In their own country these people all carry knives. It is the custom, and when they first come here, and until they learn to talk English and learn something of the police laws, they cling to the stiletto. And they are so quick tempered that it is a dangerous thing for them to carry a weapon. The Huns are another class of people who generally have knives on their persons, and they are very quick to use them."

"What concealed weapons do you most often find?"

"Revolvers, knives, handy-billies and knuckles. The last three will send a man up almost any time, but very reputable citizens sometimes carry revolvers. Still, by far the larger majority of all are carried by the tough element. People who have business that takes them into dangerous places, or who have to carry large sums of money, like bank messengers, carry revolvers, but they generally go to the chief of police and get a permit, but as a general rule your reputable citizen and business man doesn't carry a gun."

"We don't carry any more than a thief with a revolver in his pocket, unless he is getting out of town or it is at night. The reason is this: A man known as a thief is very often arrested on suspicion. The police think that he may be wanted for something. If there is no charge against him he gets away. Well, if a revolver is found on him he is charged with carrying concealed weapons, and held until it can be seen what he has been doing. Almost any kind of a knife with a blade over three inches long is looked upon with suspicion by police authorities when found on the person of a suspicious or doubtful character, and the presence of any weapon is always damaging to the case of any respectable or unknown prisoner."

"Now, I'll tell you something about revolvers. It's a good thing as well as a bad that there are so many bad revolvers. There is hardly a day goes by but what a case is reported to the mayor's office of somebody snapping a revolver at some one else. A really first class revolver doesn't snap but once, and then if it is pointed the right way somebody has to drop. But about two-thirds of the revolvers carried by the toughs are these cheap affairs, which are not to be depended on either to go off or not to go off."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Education of Dogs.

"Of course we educate our dogs," said a noted sportsman, "and there are different degrees and grades just as folks have in learning."

"What text books do you use?"

"A whip, and the master's voice. Those comprise our curriculum. Come out and see my dogs. I will show you what apt scholars they are."

There were seventy dogs in the enclosure, little and big, but all thorough-breds.

"Kennel!" cried the master, and every one disappeared, the little ones who were only playmates and not pupils scrambling on with the rest.

"The dog is an imitative animal," said the master; "one trained pupil will educate a class."

They were called out again and the master with a wave of his hand gave the command:

"Hi! on!"

They rushed a field yelping and barking, led by King Bow, a champion worth a cool thousand.

Then the master took out a whip that curled in his hand like a snake. It had a silver head and a musical throat. He blew it once and every dog stood with his head alert and fore foot poised.

"The whistle means 'attention'; two, 'come in.'"

He blew two whistles and the school came scampering in.

"Kennel!"

Reading to Russian Peasants.

The peasant is very fond of reading, that is, of hearing some one else read. A village teacher may be often seen in a hut, surrounded by a crowd of peasants of all ages, reading "Bova Korolevitch," or some other story about the adventures of some hero or other. Great care is generally exercised by the teacher in selecting stories for such purposes. They must be of a moral tone, elevating, and, what is more important, in popular language. I shall never forget the sight of a lively crowd of peasants surrounding a village school where one of the pupils, a young fellow of 14, was reading a story about the heroes of the last Crimean campaign. Both the little hero and his listeners were in their glory and I am sure many a peasant's ambition was at that moment to see his youngsters possess such knowledge.

Such schools are, however, the exception. There are parts of Russia where the population probably never saw a book in their life.—S. S. Skidelsky in Philadelphia Times.

A Cold Proceeding.

On one of the recent cold nights a man was hastening across the Common with his overcoat buttoned up to his neck. He was rather anxious to know what time it was but he was too lazy to unbutton his coat in order to get at his watch. Just then he saw a man of well dressed appearance coming in the distance. When he came up the man who wanted to know what time it was touched his hat politely and said: "Sir, do you know what time it is?" The stranger paused, removed his right glove, unbuttoned his overcoat from top to bottom, unbuttoned his under coat and finally pulled out his watch, while the cold wind beat against his unprotected chest. Holding up the watch so that the light would shine on it, he scrutinized it an instant and said "Yes." And then he passed on without another word.—Boston Record.

There have been sent to the Delaware peninsula 2,000,000 barrels to pack sweet potatoes.

MUNICIPAL INCORPORATION.

A conference of thoughtful gentlemen at the Club House dining rooms the other day did the HERALD the honor of addressing a letter to it, calling for a discussion of certain questions relative to the event of a scheme of municipal government being made a living issue. The first question propounded by our correspondents referred to the matter of the municipal suffrage. Who are to have the governing voice in the new city of Honolulu's affairs? They raise the point in that connection as to whether a dual franchise be involved, one for national and another for municipal affairs. Taking the latter point first, there would be nothing out of the way or unprecedented in a dual franchise, should it be decided that a comprehensive and practicable system of municipal government could not otherwise be attained. If municipal government be once determined upon by the property owners as essential to the adequate progress of the city, a scheme that would be generally satisfactory and workable would have to be devised. The franchise, like everything else involved, would have to be adapted to the circumstances of the case. As stated by the present writer, in the course of a series of articles in another local paper about eighteen months ago, there is no hope of the principal property owners looking for a betterment of civic administration, under any corporate system ruled by the electorate that now returns representatives to the national Legislature. A contemporary writer understood to be speaking for the Government jumped at the opportunity of making political capital out of the bare mention of anything of the kind, making a transparent appeal to native prejudices against the foreign element under the natural but mistaken notion that the idea opposed came from any party in national politics. Yet the journal referred to has not till this day replied to the question given it, as to whether it was prepared to advocate consigning municipal government apart from all national administration to the electors who control the return of representatives of Honolulu to the Legislature. To return to the point, dual or even triple suffrage is not unknown to other countries. Under some federal constitutions, there is one franchise for federal, a second for provincial and a third for municipal elections. In some parts of the United States even the municipal franchise is subdivided, women being allowed to vote for school trustees but not for officials. The writer has himself voted in federal and provincial elections in a city ward where he was disfranchised from voting for mayor and alderman, like thousands of other householders in the same city, on account of neglect to pay a small municipal tax that was left entirely optional. It was a curious law but there it was, although, after a great many years of submission to it, lately it has been resisted, we are not certain with what success, in the courts.

Most of the English political leaders are ailing. Mr. Gladstone has to be careful of his health, Lord Salisbury is delicate, Mr. Parnell's health is threatened and Lord Randolph Churchill is never out of the doctor's hands.

ble, to have the Chinese taxed without representation. At the same time it would be absurd and promotive of untold harm in various ways, to have a common suffrage whereby all nationalities should vote for the same series of candidates in any one ward. To overcome the difficulties implied in the foregoing presentation of the case is the problem.

One way out of the difficulty has been mooted privately, meeting with a considerable degree of concession to its reasonableness and feasibility. It is to divide the representation of the city in municipal councils by nationalities instead of by districts. Give Hawaiian subjects of all origins and colors a certain number of representatives, American citizens their proportionate quota, say all other Caucasian residents combined their share, and Chinese theirs. Only keep national politics out, and the different groups of representatives might be expected to legislate on municipal affairs without any more development of sectionalism than is found in the civic councils of any large city abroad. That even Chinese would adapt themselves to such an economy has some measure of proof in the interested and intelligent part the Chinese members bear in the affairs of the Board of Representatives of the Honolulu Fire Department. At all events the idea is put forth for at least discussion, the only means by which any solution of the problem can ever be obtained. The remaining points raised by our Club House correspondents may be taken up at leisure. First we require to know what is wanted, and then the all important question will be how to bring about its consummation.

The Flow Still Glimmers—Kilauea Gaining in Activity.

A letter received by the steamer W. G. Hall from Mr. J. M. Lee, keeper of the Halfway House between Punaluu and the crater of Kilauea, contains the following information:—

A native close by here told me this afternoon that he could see a little reflection from the Kahuku flow about four o'clock this morning. I felt a slight shock of earthquake Tuesday night at 11 o'clock, heavy enough to make me jump out of bed and see if anything alarming was going on outside; but everything looked to be all right. As I can hear, the same shock was felt at Honuapo and Kapapala. Kilauea seems to keep constantly increasing, blazing away and smoking.

A Menace to Parliament.

We view the gradual formation of groups in Parliament with positive dismay, as a symptom which threatens not this or that party, or even this or that security for national greatness, but parliamentary life itself.

Beside the two great historic parties, there are the Parcellites; the Liberal Unionists, who follow Lord Hartington; the Ulster Unionists, who must always be considered in discussing any Irish project, and whose mouthpiece is Colonel Sanderson; the Radical Unionists, who gather around Mr. Chamberlain; the Tory Democrats, who will gather round Lord Randolph Churchill; the extreme Radicals, for whom Labouchere tries to speak, and the Philanthropic Radicals, who have as yet no recognized leader, but whose chief, if he were a little stronger, would be Mr. Stansfield. Here are nine "parties," great and small, which form appreciable factions, sure upon certain grave occasions to differ from all others to such an extent as to render negotiation imperative, and with negotiation compromise.—London Spectator.

Tian Problem.

New York Post's special from London of March 3 says:—There is the beginning of very important, I should say vital, changes in the political situation to-day. The roundtable conference has taken a turn more favorable than the most sanguine politicians on either side could have imagined.

Chamberlain is so impressed with the prospects of a Liberal reunion that he abstained from all support of the Government in the rather critical divisions on the Cloture which are going on. More than this, I have very good grounds for the statement that a Home Rule bill proposed by Lord Salisbury and accepted by all parties, is a contingency by no means improbable.

Salisbury's change of front, if change it is to be, will result largely from the pressure of Unionists, who feel that Ireland is virtually in the condition of anarchy. Chamberlain has long felt this, and what is more important, Harrington is beginning to fill it. Home Rule presents itself at this moment as the only alternative of coercion.

An unsteady man, like an unsteady light, is apt to go out nights.

The Equitable Column.

THE EQUITABLE Life Assurance Society OF THE UNITED STATES.

Total Assets, Dec. 31, '86, $75,510,472.76

Total Liabilities, including legal Reserve on all existing policies (4 per cent Standard) $59,154,597.000

Total Undivided Surplus over Four per cent Reserve, $16,355,875.76

Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in general class, is $ 5,728,761.76

Of which the proportion contributed (as computed) by Policies in Tontine class, is 10,627,114.00

Upon the New York State Standard of 4 1/2 per cent interest, the Surplus is as computed, $20,495,175.76

New Assurance written in 1886, $111,540,203

Total Outstanding Assurance, $411,779,098

Increase of Premium Income, $2,810,475.40

Increase of Surplus (Four per cent basis), $2,409,636.63

Increase of Assets, $8,957,085.26

In actual Surplus (namely the excess of accumulated funds over liabilities); in Premium Income; in the amount of Assurance in force on its books, the Equitable Life Assurance Society of the United States exceeds every other life assurance company, and may be justly regarded as the largest and strongest life assurance organization in the World.

EXAMPLE. Of Policy No. 67,389. Life. Issued Jan. 22, 1872, on the life of W. H. C. Date of expiration Jan. 22, 1887.

Amount of Policy, $10,000. Tontine Period, 15 years. Age 53. Annual Premium, $543.10.

Total premiums paid in 15 years, $8,146.50

1. CASH VALUE, Consisting of Reserve, $3,856.30 and Surplus, 4,199.80 $9,056.10

2. PAID-UP VALUE, $13,050.00

3. CASH SURPLUS, $5,199.80

Under this settlement, the policy holder withdraws the surplus in cash, and retains the original policy, continuing the payment of premiums, less annual dividends.

Three other options are available under this Policy.

The policies with 10-year Tontine periods do not show results as satisfactory as those above given. Policies with 20-year periods, on the other hand, will show much larger results than those with 15-year periods; but for purposes of illustration the 15-year policies—those of the intermediate period—are given as fair illustrations.

The longer period of accumulation which the 20-year policies enjoy renders them the most desirable for those who, seeking absolute protection at the lowest "Life" rate, desire also the largest returns in case they live:

Hence the Best Free Tontine "Ordinary Life" Policy is One with a TWENTY-YEAR TONTINE PERIOD

The Free Tontine Policy of the Equitable Life Assurance Society is unrestricted after one year, incontestable after two years, and is then PAYABLE in the event of death, immediately upon the receipt of satisfactory proofs of death.

It guarantees a full share of the surplus earned, and being issued by a Society holding a Larger Surplus than any other Assurance Company,

May be expected to show larger profits than the policies of any other company.

IMPLANTING TEETH.

DESCRIPTION OF A REMARKABLE OPERATION IN DENTAL SURGERY.

A Doctor who Has Great Faith in His Methods of Implantation—Some of the Mistakes which Experimenters Have Made.

A few months ago we gave a report of what Dr. William J. Younger, San Francisco, Cal., had been doing in the way of implanting teeth into artificial sockets.

At that time he considered it essential to preserve the vitality of the pericemental membrane by keeping the tooth in water of a temperature of about 120° F., or to implant the tooth, just after extraction, in the comb of a cock.

Since then he has discovered that the pericemental membrane will retain its vitality for 13 months, and how much longer has not been determined, without any care, being carried in the pocket, left on the dressing case, etc.

The report in this case, one of several, is given in a pamphlet of 14 pages, entitled "Implantation of Teeth and Pericemental Life," being a report made to the California State Dental Association, July 21, 1886.

The doctor has great faith in the "most sanguine expectations," and believes "that in a short while it will become as firmly established in professional practice as any other operation requiring skill and judgment."

THE DOCTOR'S PRACTICE. The doctor's practice is to lay the extracted teeth aside in a clean, cool, dry place, for future use.

Previous to inserting the tooth in the socket he soaks it for half an hour in water containing bi-chloride of mercury one in a thousand, temperature 110° to 120° F., during the operation of forming the socket he washes it out with cold water, containing the same percentage of bi-chloride of mercury.

Now if they would but consider the conditions and circumstances under which these different operations are undertaken, they would readily see that the premises upon which they ground their assumption are unsound and deceitful.

In replantation, as this operation is usually performed, the parts that is the pericemental membrane, the apex of the root and the alveolar process immediately surrounding these, are highly inflamed, in a state of disease, with pus either already formed or forming at the end of the root, and the operation is undertaken with the view of relieving or aborting an alveolar abscess.

A portion of the diseased alveolus is then cut off, and the tooth is forced back into the cavity. Here we have a diseased root thrust back into a diseased socket. The disease not removed, its conditions are simply modified; and while the congestion may subside, and the tooth becomes comparatively comfortable, the disintegration of the root substance—already begun—is likely to continue, and in the course of time the entire root becomes destroyed, or what is called absorbed; and the crown drops off. So much for replantation.

ANOTHER MISTAKE. Again, in transplantation there is a healthy tooth, but it is usually made to take the place of a miserable, old, diseased root that has been growing and festering in a diseased socket for years, to the discomfort of its unfortunate possessor.

The diseased root is pulled out, but is the disease in the surrounding alveolus extracted with it? On the contrary, enough is usually left in the tissue to make war upon the new occupant, and either cause its expulsion or eat away its substance. You must remember that while the old root remained there was sufficient vent through its decayed or broken structure to permit the gases of decomposition and the pus to escape, and thus prevent active trouble.

But when the new tooth is put in the vent is entirely occluded, and if there be sufficient disease in the alveolus, the retained gases and pus effect the exclusion or the painful elongation of the intruder. If not enough disease is left to do this, then the slow process of erosion is apt to ensue, and the root becomes in time absorbed.

Now, in transplantation we have a healthy root in a healthy socket, and, therefore, the factors that tend to the destruction of the root in replantation and transplantation are not present, and, therefore, not operative in implantation.

As to the seeming violence to the bony structure of the jaw, I will state that there is no substance in the human body that seems so tolerant of abuse as this same alveolar process. And my experience is that union takes place more readily and kindly, and the teeth become much sooner firm and serviceable in implantation than in either of the other operations.

Archives of Dentistry.

A German professor spent twenty years in studying the habits and characteristics of a certain snail and learned this interesting fact concerning it. On the Pacific coast of America, where it is found in great abundance, it is preyed upon by a certain fish which abounds in the Pacific ocean. As an aid in escaping from its formidable enemy it has been provided with an eye on the back of its head. The same snail is found on the Atlantic coast exactly like its far western brother in every particular except that it has no posterior eye. And the reason for this is that there is no corresponding fish to prey upon it in the Atlantic ocean.—Boston Budget.

Sleeping Cars for Ladies. A lady of the Sorosis club suggests that the railway companies should provide separate sleeping cars for ladies, so as to afford them the same degree of privacy when traveling by rail that they now have when in a steamboat. The idea has its merits and in connection with this subject I suggested to her that it would not be a bad scheme to get the elevated road and street car companies to provide exclusive cars for gentlemen.—New York News.

FAR WORSE THAN A RAZOR.

The Weapon Carried by Modern Romans. Something About Revolvers.

"Just feel in that duck's blouse for a knife before you let go of his hands," quietly remarked Detective Shore to a couple of policemen who were dragging an angry looking Italian into Central station. The policemen went through the Roman and pulled out a wicked looking knife with a blade at least eight inches long. The prisoner had been arrested for fighting up on Tunnel street and was discharged the next morning with a small fine. He didn't get his knife back, however, and it adorns the unique collection of police department archives.

"That," said the detective, "is one of the most dangerous 'concealed weapons' we have to deal with. That knife is made from a file, one of the half grinds kind, with the edges ground down till it is keen as a razor.

"In their own country these people all carry knives. It is the custom, and when they first come here, and until they learn to talk English and learn something of the police laws, they cling to the stiletto. And they are so quick tempered that it is a dangerous thing for them to carry a weapon. The Huns are another class of people who generally have knives on their persons, and they are very quick to use them."

"What concealed weapons do you most often find?" "Revolvers, knives, handy-billies and knuckles. The last three will send a man up almost any time, but very reputable citizens sometimes carry revolvers. Still, by far the larger majority of guns are carried by the tough element. People who have business that takes them into dangerous places, or who have to carry large sums of money, like bank messengers, carry revolvers, but they generally go to the chief of police and get a permit, but as a general rule your reputable citizen and business man doesn't carry a gun.

"We don't very often find a thief with a revolver in his pocket, unless he is getting out of town or it is at night. The reason is this: A man known as a thief is very often arrested on suspicion. The police think that he may be wanted for something. If there is no charge against him he gets away. Well, if a revolver is found on him he is charged with carrying concealed weapons and held until it can be seen what he has been doing. Almost any kind of a knife with a blade over three inches long is looked upon with suspicion by police authorities when found on the person of a suspicious or doubtful character, and the presence of any weapon is always damaging to the case of any disreputable or unknown prisoner.

"Now, I'll tell you something about revolvers. It's a good thing as well as a bad that there are so many bad revolvers. There is hardly a day goes by but what a case is reported to the mayor's office of somebody snapping a revolver at some one else. A really first class revolver doesn't snap but once, and then if it is pointed the right way somebody has to drop. But about two-thirds of the revolvers carried by the toughs are these cheap affairs, which are not to be depended on either to go off or not to go off."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

The Education of Dogs. "Of course we educate our dogs," said a noted sportsman, "and there are different degrees and grades just as folks have in learning."

"What text books do you use?" "A whip, and the master's voice. Those comprise our curriculum. Come out and see my dogs. I will show you what apt scholars they are."

There were seventy dogs in the enclosure, little and big, but all thorough-breds.

"Kennel!" cried the master, and every one disappeared, the little ones who were only playmates and not pupils scrambling on with the rest.

"The dog is an imitative animal," said the master; "one trained pupil will educate a class."

They were called out again and the master with a wave of his hand gave the command: "Hi! on!"

They rushed a field yelping and barking, led by King Bow, a champion worth a cool thousand.

Then the master took out a whip that curled in his hand like a snake. It had a silver head and a musical throat. He blew it once and every dog stood with his head alert and fore foot poised.

"One whistle means 'attention,' two, 'come in.'"

He blew two whistles and the school came scampering in.

"Kennel!"

Every dog vanished. That is only part of the exercises which the president of the Detroit Kennel club gives daily to his intelligent pupils, the graduates of the bench shows of the future.—Detroit Free Press.

Reading to Russian Peasants. The peasant is very fond of reading, that is, of hearing some one else read. A village teacher may be often seen in a hut, surrounded by a crowd of peasants of all ages, reading "Boya Korolevitch," or some other story about the adventures of some hero or other. Great care is generally exercised by the teacher in selecting stories for such purposes. They must be of a moral tone, elevating, and, what is more important, in popular language. I shall never forget the sight of a lively crowd of peasants surrounding a village school where one of the pupils, a young fellow of 14, was reading a story about the heroes of the last Crimean campaign. Both the little hero and his hearers were in their glory and I am sure many a peasant's ambition was at that moment to see his youngsters possess such knowledge.

Such schools are, however, the exception. There are parts of Russia where the population probably never saw a book in their life.—S. S. Skidelsky in Philadelphia Times.

A Cold Proceeding. On one of the recent cold nights a man was hastening across the Common with his overcoat buttoned up to his neck. He was rather anxious to know what time it was but he was too lazy to unbutton his coat in order to get at his watch. Just then he saw a man of well dressed appearance coming in the distance. When he came up the man who wanted to know what time it was touched his hat politely and said: "Sir, do you know what time it is?" The stranger paused, removed his right glove, unbuttoned his overcoat from top to bottom, unbuttoned his under coat and finally pulled out his watch, while the cold wind beat against his unprotected chest. Holding up the watch so that the light would shine on it, he scrutinized it an instant and said "Yes." And then he passed on without another word.—Boston Record.
