WHY THE Equitable Life Assurance Society

of the United States is the Best company with which to Assure.

I.—Because of its Safety. Its surplus is larger than that of any other assurance company.

II.—Because of its Promptness. Of 1,043 death claims paid in 1885, nearly one-half were paid the very day proofs were received; while of the remainder, the majority were paid within the following three days. No other company can show such a record.

III.—Because of its Liberality and Reforms. All policies are INCONTTESTABLE after three years. All incontestable policies are payable immediately upon receipt of proofs of death. The Society's policy contract is clear and simple, and liberal in its conditions. Its Non-forfeiting Tontine (or Semi-Tontine) policy affords all the ultimate benefits of the full Tontine, and has during its earlier years the surrender value and other material advantages of ordinary life policies.

IV.—Profit. No other company is paying on its policies, as large profits as are shown under the Equitable's matured Tontine policies with fifteen-year periods. Persons desiring assurance may obtain estimates of the probable results of similar policies, and of policies with twenty-year terms, which are expected to show even larger profits.

V.—Prospective Advantages. The unexampled progress of the Equitable in the past is the best guarantee of the increasing future value of assurance with the Equitable.

The Daily Bulletin.

Fledged to neither Sect nor Party.
But established for the benefit of all.
SATURDAY, OCT. 30, 1886.

AUTHORITY.

The Advertiser's first leader yesterday opens with a sort of mild sneer at the BULLETIN's remarks of the previous day relative to recent "By Authority" notices. What is somewhat curious about our contemporary's article is that the first lines raise expectations of a vigorous attack upon the BULLETIN for its presumption in daring to review a "By Authority" notice, but the interested reader has no sooner entered upon, as he supposes, a piece of fighting literature, than he is doomed to disappointment. The Advertiser drops immediately into the line of our argument, and not only endorses our mild strictures upon the unconstitutional practices of the Government, but carries the argument a step further—a step which we would have taken, but hesitated, owing to the far reaching and tremendous issues involved, and says: "If the law can be dispensed with in respect of the appointment of Marshal, it can also be dispensed with in the matter of laws which the office of Marshal has been created to enforce." There is nothing to amend in the sentence just quoted except to strike out the word "if." The situation is then perfectly clear. Had this plain statement been uttered in the columns of the BULLETIN, it might have been open to the objection that it emanated from an "Opposition" source. But appearing in the editorial columns of the paper through which acts of the legislature are promulgated, it is very significant. It becomes practically a semi-official intimation that the acts published from time to time, "may" be rendered null and void, at the caprice of the Executive. That the statement, as amended, is an axiomatic truth, no one can question. The same power that overrides the laws regulating the appointment of public officers may next be invoked to override the laws relating to the titles to property. Open violations of the constitution having been already proclaimed more than once through our contemporary's columns, it becomes an interesting question to capitalists having millions of dollars invested in sugar planting and other enterprises on the various Islands, how far their interests are really secured in the constitution and laws of the Kingdom. If an article of the constitution can be made null and void by the stroke of a Minister's pen and the promulgation of a "By Authority" notice, it must follow as a perfectly legitimate and reasonable conclusion that the proprietary rights of planters and property holders are worth less than the paper they are written on, except in so far as the King's Ministers may see fit to recognize their validity. That these are no imaginary possibilities was fully proven during the last session of the Legislative Assembly, in which it was boldly announced by the First Minister of the Crown that "the King was the larger part of this Legislature." It was pointed out in the BULLETIN, at the time, that the Minister's words were more than true to the letter. It may be added that the words quoted are mathematically true, as well, inasmuch as two-thirds of the members are the King's stipendiaries. This being the case, the majority of the people are practically without representation in the Legislature, and the rights supposed to be served through their representatives, may be set aside with as little ceremony as were the rights of the voters in the Kona and Kaanapali election cases. The rights of property holders rest on the same foundation as the right to be represented in the enactment of laws and the imposition of taxes—the Constitution of the Kingdom. But acts were passed at the last session for which the smallest fragment of reason has yet to be presented. Of the most useful of all the measures over which many weary days were spent, some are now on the vetoed list. The Legislature of 1886 was to all intents and purposes a power wielded by authority, instead of a body exercising authority. The close of the session left among tax payers and people an all but unanimous opinion that during the last two or three months of its existence, their rights and interests were made to play second fiddle to the demands of the stage manager, the member for Hilo and his confederates, the King's Ministers. This is a sentiment which finds free expression at every street corner and in every constituency, and it is a sentiment boding very serious consequences to the stability of the Government and the independence of the Kingdom. Tax-payers seeing in the Appropriation Bill, a prescribed expenditure of nearly $230 per head for the next biennial period, have come to the conclusion that if "the King is the larger part of the Legislature" the sooner it is brought about that the people shall be the larger part of that body, the better. The Kahunas act, the Loan Act, the Army and Navy Act, and the Economy Farce are universally recognized and understood as the doings of the Legislature of which "the King was the larger part." No one is verdant enough to think for a moment that the acts named could have survived a first reading in any independent representative body on this planet. As to the Army and Navy Bill, the House was assured, on its second reading that no further appropriation of money was contemplated in the passage of the bill, that it was a perfectly harmless measure providing for the better organization of the forces already existing. But, as the event proved, the Minister's intentions and opinions were in advance of his orders. Once the bill passed, an appropriation of $23,000 quickly followed for the carrying out of its provisions. The true intent and meaning of this Army and Navy Act is not fully understood, as yet. It is really the only piece of statesmanship which the Legislature "of which the King was the larger part" have to record. But to give the servile stipendiaries of the crown credit for any statesmanship in the matter would be absurd. The statesmanship of the occasion was unconscious on their part. There is no occasion to add to their demerits by accusing them of knowing what they were doing, or of the presuming to enquire into the ultimate objects of the bill. When, however, the violations of the constitution and laws which have become so conspicuous of late, advance to the stage of being further intolerable to the tax payers and people of the Kingdom, the Army and Navy bill of 1886 will be better understood all round. Again, the Economy Farce, in which the Legislature received and accepted the King's message to practise economy, and thereupon prepared a revised appropriation bill commensurate with the revenue and requirements of the nation, and for the carrying out of which every independent member of the House waged many a hard fought battle, but in which the dependents were outvoted by the King's stipendiaries who eventually complied with the Royal instructions by doubling the "Economy" appropriations—this was a Farce possible only in a Legislature of which "the King was the larger part."

matter of history that the veto was most liberally exercised towards those measures, in the line of progressive and enlightened civilization, introduced and advocated by independent members. This was, of course, calculated to impress upon independent members and their constituents that "the King was the larger part of the Legislature." The Representatives and Nobles are supposed to originate and pass laws, but in last session, the functions of a majority of the members were very perceptibly restricted to the passage of laws of a retrograde character, and which had not been enacted two years before because the people formed too large a part of the Legislature, at that time. The session of 1886, in which "the King was the larger part of the Legislature" has left a disgraceful record for the future historian of Hawaii. Not only is this the case, but it cannot fail to invite contempt and ridicule from abroad, an abundance of which it has already secured at home; the essential difference being that persons abroad can enjoy their excochinations at our expense, while at home the laugh will be on the wrong side of the face of the taxpayers who have to foot up the four and a half millions. A dislocated cabinet is but the necessary complement of dislocated laws, and the olarchical tripod upon which the present administration stands is evidently kept in position until the programme of misrule opened by the Legislature is carried out. A full cabinet with a microscopic quantity of ability and integrity might be expected to sit down on some of the most objectionable schemes on hand; but as the signs of the times have been pointing there is little reason to hope that even an all round change of Ministers and the instalment of a new and complete cabinet will bring any change for the better. The all important fact to which the eyes of the executive seem to be closed is that laws are weapons which may be wielded both ways, and if the laws relating to the Interior Department may be left to administer themselves while the Minister is playing the role of Attorney-General, and the Attorney-General's Department is a blank during the Attorney-General's incumbency of the Interior Office, the tax-payers may suddenly awake to the practicability of sitting down on the one percent taxation act. For it is reasonable to assume that if the King's Ministers occupy positions outside the statute book, the tax-payers are entitled to claim for themselves the like privileges and exemptions. The constitution and laws form the only fence erected between the Executive and anarchy, and the Executive is using the utmost possible diligence in throwing it down. ASSISTANT POSTMASTER-GENERAL. David Manaku is gazetted Assistant Postmaster-General—an announcement which the public will hail with satisfaction. Mr. Manaku is a young gentleman of good education and excellent character—steady, industrious and reliable—a credit to his people and his country. Besides, he has the additional qualification of a training for his present position, having been for several years engaged in the Post Office, and having risen by a gradual process. If every appointment to the public service were made so wisely there would be little ground for dissatisfaction. Yosemite Skating SCHOOL GRAND RUNNING RACE! ## We should Blot Out Disease in Its Early Stages.

The disease commences with a slight derangement of the stomach, but if neglected, it in time involves the whole frame, embracing the kidneys, liver, pancreas, and in fact the entire glandular system; and the afflicted drags out a miserable existence until death glides softly from suffering. The disease is often mistaken for other complaints; but if the reader will ask himself the following questions he will be able to determine whether he himself is one of the afflicted:—Have I distress, pain, or difficulty in breathing after eating? Is there a dull, heavy feeling, attended by drowsiness? Have the eyes a yellow tinge? Does a thick, sticky mucus gather about the gums and teeth in the mornings, accompanied by a disagreeable taste? Is the tongue coated? Is there pain in the sides and back? Is there a fullness about the right side as if the liver were enlarged? Is there vertigo or dizziness when rising suddenly from an horizontal position? Are the secretions from the kidneys highly colored, with a deposit after standing? Does food ferment soon after eating, accompanied by flatulence or belching of gas from the stomach? Is there frequent palpitation of the heart? These various symptoms may not be present at one time, but they torment the sufferer in turn as the dreadful disease progresses. If the case be one of long standing, there will be a dry, hacking cough, attended after a time by expectoration. In very advanced stages the skin assumes a dirty brown appearance, and the hands and feet are covered by a cold sticky perspiration. As the liver and kidneys become more and more diseased, rheumatic pains appear, and the usual treatment proves entirely unavailing against the latter agonising disorder. The origin of this malady is indigestion or dyspepsia, and a small quantity of the proper medicine will remove the disease if taken in its incipient stage. It is most important that the disease should be promptly and properly treated in its first stages, when a little medicine will effect a cure, and even when it has advanced to a point where correct remedy should be persevered in until every vestige of the disease is eradicated, until the appetite has returned, and the digestive organs restored to a healthy condition. The surest and most effectual remedy for this distressing complaint is "Seigel's Curative Syrup," a vegetable preparation sold by all chemists and medicine vendors throughout the world, and by the proprietors, A. J. White, Limited, London, E. C. This Syrup strikes at the very foundation of the disease, and drives it, root and branch, out of the system. Ask your chemist for Seigel's Curative Syrup.

"East-street Mills, Cambridge-Heath, London, E. C., July 24th, 1882.
"Sir,—It gives me great pleasure to be able to add my testimony in favour of your valuable Syrup as a curative agent. I had suffered for some length of time from a severe form of indigestion, and the long train of distressing symptoms following that disease. I had tried all possible means to get relief, by seeking the best medical advice. I had received sufficient of their staff to float a man-of-war, so to speak, but all to no avail. A friend of mine, coming on the scene in the midst of my sufferings, brought with him a bottle of your Seigel's Syrup; he advised me to try it, stating he felt confident it would benefit me. Being weary of trying so many drugs, I commenced it before trial, thinking it could not possibly do me any good, but ultimately determined to take the Syrup. After doing so for a short time it worked such a change in me that I continued taking it for nearly two months, and I then felt thoroughly cured, for I have discontinued its use. I now feel strong and feel in the best of health, and can partake any kind of food with ease and comfort. I am therefore thankful to you that, through the instrumentality of your valuable medicine, I am restored to the state of health I now enjoy.—Yours truly,
W. S. FORSTER.

"To Mr. A. J. White."
Those who are in the "Asthma Fur race" should lose no time in obtaining relief by the use of "The Rosinweed Tar Mixture," but do not use the medicine unless you will follow all the directions "to the letter."
Poor Asthma sufferers, who are strangers to "Hired Nature's" sweet restorer, lalmy sleep, and the use of "The Rosinweed Tar Mixture." Quiet refreshing sleep will follow its use.
"Waterloo House, London Stile, Chiswick,
"February 17th, 1882.
"Gentlemen,—I do not know how much pleasure it will add to my testimony to the wonderful effects of Seigel's Syrup. For years I had been suffering from bilious attacks, which began with giddiness; then a mist would come before my eyes, so that I should not be able to recognise any one or anything at the distance of a yard or two from my face. This would be followed by excessive trembling of my knees, so that I could not stand without support; after which a severe headache would occur, lasting often two or three days. I have tried various remedies for these distressing symptoms, but until I tried Seigel's Syrup I had no relief. Since I have taken the medicine in every respect, and if ever I feel a headache coming on I take one dose of the Syrup, which arrests it. Hoping that this testimonial may be the means of inducing others who suffer as I used to try the Syrup, as I feel sure they will receive speedy benefit and ultimately be cured, I beg to remain, yours faithfully,
"A. H. HORTON."

Seigel's Operating Pills prevent ill effects from excess in eating or drinking. A good dose at bed-time renders a person fit for business in the morning. If you have Asthma use "The Rosinweed Tar Mixture."
All matters entrusted to me will receive prompt attention, and returns quickly made.

PAINTING THE TOWN RED.

At this late day another origin for the expression, painting it red, is given. Back in the 60's racing was one of the exciting features of Mississippi river travel, and when an opportunity offered for a trial of speed all hands were breathless with excitement. The first command from the Captain would be: "Paint her red boys!" which was river slang for filling the fire-box with rosin in order to create a quick, hot fire, at which time the fire-boxes would be thrown open. Then, if the night were dark, the effect was simply grand. As far ahead as the eye could see the river would be a deep red from reflection, forming a most beautiful picture, which, once seen, could never be forgotten. It was at that time that the expression, "paint the town red," originated, as the old stevedeamen intended to convey the idea by its use that they would have a beautiful time on arrival at their destination.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

DEBT STATEMENT.

Washington, Oct. 1.—The public statement, issued this afternoon, shows the reduction of the public debt during September to be $10,627,013.17 and the total cash in the Treasury $465,375,713.93. The cash in the Treasury available for the reduction of the public debt is as follows: Gold held for gold certificates actually outstanding, $846,918.07; silver held for silver certificates actually outstanding, $953,871.12; United States notes held for certificates of deposit actually outstanding, $77,050; cash for matured debt and interest unpaid, $19,138,607.48; fractional currency, $3,017.15; total available for redemption of debt, $206,925,543.93; reserve fund held for redemption of United States notes January 11, 1875, and July 12, 1882, $100,000,000; unavailable for the reduction of the debt, fractional silver coin, $26,829,746.20; minor coin, $295,294.09; total $27,135,039.29; certificates held as cash, $63,360,310; net cash balance on hand, $67,896,321.01; total cash in the Treasury as shown by Treasurer's general account, $465,375,713.93.

The total gold coin and bullion in the Treasury September 30th was $242,609,018, as compared with $235,430,635, on the 31st of the previous month. The net gold in the Treasury after deducting gold certificates in the Treasury, cash and in circulation September 30th was $175,732,288 on the 31st of the previous month.—S. F. Bulletin.

HOW THE PHILADELPHIA "ZOO" LOST TWO OF ITS MONKEYS.

The monkey house at the Zoological Gardens has lost two of its greatest attractions. One, a little black animal called a night monkey because he only made his appearance at night and during the day lay covered up with straw, died yesterday of inflammation superinduced by what the keepers call "visitation cane-poke." The other, a little green monkey, came to an untimely end from the effect of too much kindness on the part of two baboons that occupied his former quarters, and each of which took it upon himself to nurse the little monkey. Both delighted in holding him for hours in their arms, but it sometimes happened that both wanted to nurse him at the same time, and then a fight ensued. This was the case yesterday. The largest of the baboons had the monkey in his arms when the other one tried to take him away. The big Simian took refuge on the topmost bar of the cage. The other followed him and tried to pull the little fellow from his arms. The struggle which followed was equal to the battle of the McIntyres and Maguires over the Widow Nolan's goat. The cause of the battle yelled lustily to his conclusion, when he dropped to the floor of the cage, gave a final squeak and was taken up dead.—Philadelphia Press.

THE FREAK OF A FELINE MATRON.

Clarendon, Ark.—A St. Louis commercial traveller who was in Clarendon yesterday, related to a Globe-Democrat reporter a rather queer but truthful freak of a feline matron, which was brought to his attention at Helena a few days since. It was at the house of Col. Cad Polk the strange example of benevolence on the part of a house cat was developed. The feline is the mother of an interesting family of three kittens, which were born about a week since, and which received all the attention generally bestowed by a mother on her progeny; the old lady leaving them alone, only for strictly business purposes, among which may be classed that of hunting birds, mice and an occasional young rabbit or squirrel. Last Thursday, Mme. Puss returned from one of her predatory excursions to the woods, near the house, bearing suspended between her teeth a live rabbit or hare, only a few days old. The leveret, it would be natural to suppose, was doomed, but such was not the case, for maternity seems to have aroused the gentle feeling of compassion for her young captive in pussy's bosom, and the rabbit was placed among the feline cherubs on an equal footing with them. The kittens and rabbit are now living in unity and concord, drawing from the same fountains of nature the life-sustaining fluid. The old cat makes no difference in the treatment of her own progeny, and the object of charity suckling the latter, and trying to cure by licking it, a wound on the rabbit's back made by the foster-mother's teeth in transporting it home.—Globe-Democrat.

Great Excitement in Wales about a Marvellous Cure.

Living Six Years Without Going to Bed.

Mr. Horton.—While spending a few days at the pleasant seaside town of Aberystwyth, Pembrokeshire, Wales, I heard related what seemed to me either a fabulous story or a marvellous cure. The story was that a poor sufferer who had not been able to lie down in bed for six long years, given up to die by all the Doctors, had been speedily cured by some Patent Medicine. It was related with the more implicit confidence from the circumstance, as was said, that the Vicar of Llanystrylid was familiar with facts, and could vouch for the truth of the report. Having a little curiosity to know how such stories grow in travelling, I took the liberty while at the village of Llanystrylid to call upon the Vicar, the Rev. T. Evans, and to enquire about this wonderful cure. Though a total stranger to him, both he and his wife most graciously entertained me in a half hour's conversation, minutely touching the case of Mr. Pugh, in which they seemed to take a deep and sympathetic interest, having been familiar with his sufferings, and now rejoiced in what seemed to them a most remarkable cure. The vicar remarked that the name of his name had been connected with the report from his having mentioned the case to Mr. John Thomas, a chemist of Llanon. He said Mr. Pugh was formerly a resident in the parish, but was now living in the parish of Llanidnoel. He strongly vouched Mr. Wm. Pugh's character as a respectable farmer and worthy of credit. I left the venerable Vicar with a heavier sense of the happy relation of a pastor and people, feeling that he was one who truly sympathized with all who are afflicted in mind, body, or estate.

On my return to Aberystwyth, I was impressed with a desire to see Mr. Pugh, whose reputation stood so high. His farm is called Panoem-Mawr, signifying "above the diagle," situated near the summit of a smooth round hill, overlooking a beautiful valley in which is situated the lovely ivymatted Church of Llanidnoel. I found Mr. Pugh, apparently about 40 years old, of medium height, rather slight, with a pleasant and intelligent face. I told him I had heard of his great affliction and of his remarkable and almost miraculous relief, and that I had come to learn from his own lips, what there was of truth in the report.

Mr. Pugh remarked that his neighbors had taken a kindly and sympathetic interest in his case for many years, but of late their interest had been greatly increased by a happy change in his condition. What you report as having heard abroad, said he, is substantially true, with one exception. I never understood that my case was ever given up as hopeless by any Physician. I have been treated by several Doctors hereabouts, as good as any in Wales, but unfortunately no prescription of theirs ever brought the desired relief.

Fifteen years ago, he said, I first became conscious of a sour and deranged stomach, and loss of appetite, which the Doctors told me was Dyspepsia. What food I could hold in my stomach seemed to do me no good and was often thrown up with painful retchings. This was followed after a time with a hoarseness and a raw soreness of the throat which the Doctors called bronchitis, and I was treated for that, but with little success. Then came shortness of breath and a sense of suffocation, especially at night, with clammy sweat, and I would have to get out of bed and sometimes open a door or window in winter weather to fill my lungs with the cold air.

About six years ago I became so bad that I could not sleep in bed, but had to take my uneasy rest and dreamy sleep sitting in an armchair. My affliction seemed to be working downward into my neck as well as upward into my lungs and throat. In the violent coughing spasms which grew more frequent, my abdomen would expand and collapse and at times it would seem that I should suffocate. All this time my strength in strength so that I could perform no hard labor and my spirits were consequently much depressed.

Early in this last spring I had a still more severe attack, and my family and neighbors became alarmed, believing that certainly I would not survive, when a neighbor, who had some knowledge, or had heard of the medicine, sent to Aberystwyth by the driver of the Omnibus Post, some seven miles distant, and fetched a bottle of Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup. This medicine they administered to me according to the directions, when to their surprise and delight no less than my own, the spasm ceased. I became at ease, and my stomach was calmed. My bowels were moved as by a gentle cathartic, and I felt a sense of quiet comfort all through such as I had not before realized in any years. I could walk around the house and breathe comfortably in a few hours after I had taken the medicine. I have continued to take the medicine daily now for something over two months, and I can lie down and sleep sweetly at nights and have not since had a recurrence of those terrible spasms and sweatings. I have been so long broken down and reduced in my state of health that I have not tried to perform any very hard outdoor labor, deeming it best to be prudent lest by over-exertion I may do myself injury before my strength is fully restored. I feel that my stomach and bowels have been and are being thoroughly renovated and renewed by the medicine. In fact I feel like a new man.

I have been much congratulated by my neighbors, especially by the good Vicar of Llanystrylid, who with his sympathetic wife have come three miles to shed tears of joy on my recovery. I bade Mr. Pugh good-bye, happy that even at least among thousands had found a remedy for an aggravating disease.

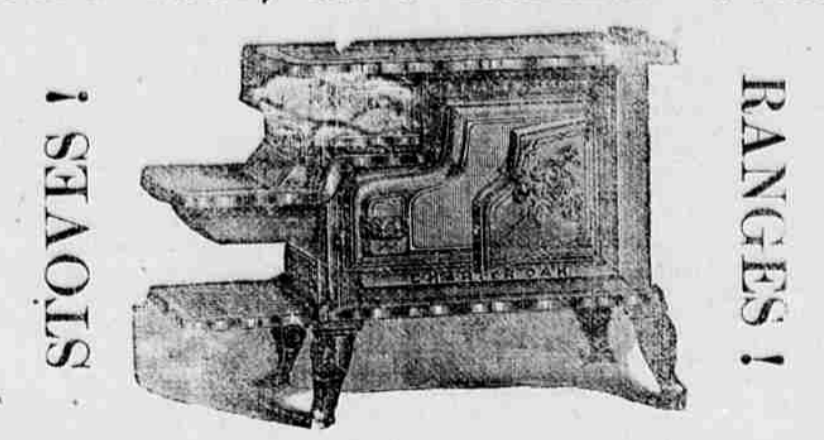

Believing this remarkable case of Dyspeptic Asthma should be known to the public, I beg to submit the above facts as they are related to me. (299 It wyl) E. T. W.
