DEAR LAND.

There is no denying the statements of our daily contemporaries regarding the high prices and rents of land. Yet the fact of dear land ought not to discourage effort for the promotion of land settlement. The tract of land mentioned in this paper the other day, as having been offered for sale and eagerly sought in small holdings by Portuguese, does not appear to have been put at an unreasonable figure, for it was the holder who withdrew from the bargain, and that not because he could not get his price. Other tracts of land have been made available for settlement on this island, but the difficulty in the way of results has been the same as in the above case, namely, the capital was not forthcoming to make the lands ready for settlers of moderate or small means. One reason why rents are so exorbitant is doubtless the comparatively small amount of land that has a water supply. If eight or ten hundred Chinamen are anxious to secure garden or plantation plots, where there is not watered land enough for half of them, it is the most natural thing in the world for rents to go up and remain high. But the very fact that high rents are paid, and kept up right in the teeth of depressed prices of produce, ought to stimulate capital to investment in land improvement enterprises. When land that was worthless before wells were sunk on it brings in rentals of from fifty to a hundred dollars an acre, there should not be much land capable of irrigation in the Kingdom left lying very long without development. Local capitalists, however, with other investments to look after, will probably be slow to take up with movements for the improvement and settlement of land. Some of them, who receive heavy rents for the limited amount of land under cultivation, perhaps would prefer to have things remain as they are, for land improvement schemes on a reasonable basis would bring down their rents. For these reasons nothing but a large influx of foreign capital will effect speedy results of great extent in colonization. Yet there is no reason to wait for grand schemes. Gradual development is sometimes the surest and most permanent, and the success of small ventures, in a given line of enterprise, is often the necessary prelude to larger ones. It would be a pity if the press were to drop the agitation because it has been without great apparent results even for years. In a matter involving such vast issues for the future, as internal colonization does, impatience of results should not be exercised, while anything calculated to incite despair of ultimate success should be avoided. Keeping the subject continually before the public shall be the aim of the HERALD, in the hope that, if no comprehensive scheme is suddenly consummated, some land owners may be induced to lead the way to grand results by preparing small plots for settlement and sale at moderate prices. There are indications that much will be done in moderate schemes of this sort before very long.

THE LABOR FACTOR.

The commercial metropolis of the United States and that of the Dominion of Canada have each furnished a striking sign of the times, a sign that gives the politicians of the fossilized parties in both countries much concern. That Henry George, the Labor candidate for the mayoralty of New York, should have polled a third of the votes against tremendous odds is a startling revelation to the engineers of the old machines. It has attracted world-wide attention and discussion, as a development of the rapidly increasing interest the working classes are everywhere taking in their relations to government. In Montreal a Labor party was organized shortly before the recent elections for the Provincial Legislature of Quebec, putting forward candidates in the three divisions of the city. They had as heavy odds to contend with, relatively, the Labor party in New York. Party feeling had always run high in the constituencies. The Labor candidates gave the blusterers over Riel's execution no promise of avenging that act, and doubtless many who would otherwise be attracted to the Labor banner were carried away by the cry of that faction. Although clever and of irrefragable character, the Labor candidates were comparatively obscure citizens. Against them were pitted candidates of the old parties, including a millionaire, with a fine record in the Legislature and the City Council; the Attorney General of the Province, experienced and talented in politics; one of the most consummate demagogues, who sat for many years previously in both the City Council and the Legislature, and, for the other three, all smart men of influence and good repute. Yet in the face of all the prestige, power, influence and talent arrayed against them, the Labor candidates polled remarkably large votes. In Montreal West the Labor candidate had 1,020 votes, to 1,894 for the Liberal and 2,041 for the Conservative. In Montreal Centre the Labor candidate had 1,214, to 1,178 for the Conservative and 1,875 for the Liberal. In Montreal East the Labor candidate had 2,413 to 2,869 for the Conservative Attorney General and 3,072 for the Liberal candidate. The result in every division shows the balance of power to be in the hands of the Labor party, and that politicians must in future take that party into serious account in their calculations. Both in the United States and Canada the best security for the permanence of the old parties will soon come to be that they shall produce measures of justice to the working classes. There are reforms required in the labor and sanitary laws of each country which have been prevented hitherto by the allegiance of legislators to capitalists and monopolists.

MUNICIPAL REFORM.

Whenever Honolulu is ready to adopt municipal government, its citizens should examine the new system in that regard adopted by the cities of Nashville and Memphis, Tennessee. In the former the electors vote for a Council of Ten, which appoints a Board of Public Works at salaries of $4,000 a year each. The civic institution is run on commercial instead of political principles. Results of the system appear in the reduction of taxes, the streets converted from mud holes into paved ways, the fire department improved in equipment, and the credit of the city strengthened. Memphis, under a similar change of municipal administration, has like improvement to show, civil service reform principles having been adopted and the city transmogrified from one of the filthiest to one of the cleanest and healthiest on the continent.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Everybody says the imported Candies at the Elite are yum-yum. Go and try some!
Miss Tuck, at Miss Barry's, Punchbowl street, has received by last steamer a large assortment of Stamping Patterns for fancy work.
No hand-book excels the Hawaiian Almanac and Annual for reliable statistical and general information relating to these Islands. Price 50 cents.
Now is the time to get your Christmas Cards. We have just received a large and well selected stock, all new, and of the latest designs. Call and get one, King Bros., Art Store, Hotel street.
If you want a good smoke for your money, patronize home industry and call at J. W. Hingley's, Crystal Soda Works, 69 Hotel street. Island orders solicited and promptly filled. There is no license required to sell these cigars. Do not forget the name, J. W. Hingley, nor the place, Crystal Soda Works, Hotel street.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

When the Attorney-General tackles a subtle question of law, it must necessarily be sub Rosa.

If one sees a bad depression in the street, he should call out, "A hole, a hole," and the Minister of the Interior will send the Road Supervisor to mend it—perhaps.

An idea of the rapid growth of the American Northwest may be gained from the fact that three thousand dwellings were erected in Minneapolis, Minnesota, in the year 1885.

German exports to America last year showed the enormous increase of $17,000,000, including $4,000,000 worth of sugar. This is not a consolatory fact for producers of cane sugar.

A second Suez canal is to be constructed, exclusively under English auspices and control. As the present ditch must be neutral in case of war, it does not serve all England's requirements.

San Francisco papers right after the elections had Carlisle defeated without doubt, so that we did not look up later despatches for his fate. It appears, however, that he was elected by 500 or 600 majority. Morrison was defeated in Illinois. He does not think the event is a blow to tariff reform, and says he detected no sign of dissatisfaction with Cleveland's administration.

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper has an item stating that the power of the electric railroad in Toronto, Canada, costs only two dollars a day. The equipment for one and a half miles of road cost $9,000, the receipts are $500 a month and after all expenses are paid a profit of 75 per cent. is realized. Information of this nature should be investigated by the holders of the franchise for the Honolulu street railroad.

The extraordinary resistance developed by recent national subscription lists in New York perhaps has caused scepticism as to metropolitan liberality. Much of this must be dispelled by the information that the Young Women's Christian Association of that city have moved into their new building costing $125,000, every dollar of which has been subscribed. Free instruction is one of the most important parts of the association's work.

The New York State Woman's Suffrage Association applied for a place in the ceremonies connected with the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty, but were denied. They forthwith got a boat for themselves and took up one of the most favorable positions on Bedloe's Island. Afterward they held a meeting and after denouncing the ceremonies as a farce passed resolutions, declaring, "that in erecting a Statue of Liberty embodied as a woman in a land where no woman has political liberty, the men have shown a delightful inconsistency which excites the wonder and admiration of the opposite sex."

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

Mayor Smith of Philadelphia is to be impeached.

An eight-year-old lad is under arrest at Louisville, Ky., on a charge of wrecking a train.

The city of Washington has a scourge of caterpillars which are denuding all the shade trees.

A lot of youngsters in Peterboro, Canada, ranging in age from four to twelve years, have formed themselves into a Salvation Army.

Father Sherman of New York, who some months ago shocked his parishioners by marrying, has sent his wife to her parents and entered a monastery.

Some one entered the Court House at Des Moines, Iowa, and stole all the confiscated liquors stored there, thus destroying the evidence against numerous saloons.

A syndicate of Philadelphia capitalists who bought up the St. Louis Gaslight Company, have made $750,000 by a consolidation of that with other similar properties.

A witness in a court in Rhode Island testified that she was fourteen years old and had been married five years. She could neither read nor write.

Mrs. Mary Peddington of Long Branch fell over a dog in a dry goods store in that place recently and broke her arm. She has now sued the owner of the dog for $1,000 damages.

The Hebrews of the Province of Quebec have been practically disfranchised by the selection of an important Jewish festival as the day of election, on which day the Israelites were unable to vote.

Mr. William Miller was reported yesterday as being no better from his recent fall, but last evening Dr. Gray said he was somewhat improving.

The Oceanic steamship Mariposa will be due from San Francisco for the Colonies to-morrow, but the likelihood is that she will not arrive before the next day, as the English mail is usually a day late at this season of the year.

The room of a lodger in a house on King street was lately entered, his trunk forced open and about thirty dollars stolen therefrom. A sewing machine has also been stolen from the schoolroom of St. Andrew's Priory.

A young man equipped for the ball, but who had evidently tarried by the way, was stopping people on Palace Square at 11 o'clock last night, asking for a blank card. "I lost my invitation," he lamented, "and want to get in' th' festivities."

The heavy coral fence on Punchbowl street, fronting the premises leased by Mr. John Angus from the estate of the late Mrs. Bishop, has for a good while been very obviously out of plumb. On Tuesday at noon about forty feet of the structure tumbled into the street, but fortunately nobody was in the way at the time.

Police Court.

Yesterday Ah Sing was convicted of having opium in possession, and was fined $50 with 20 days' hard labor. Four Chinese were acquitted on the same charge, and a sixth remanded. On the civil docket, George and Annie Holt, by their guardian, A. J. Cartwright, obtained judgment in an action for summary possession against Alam and Acheu.

Thanksgiving Day.

Business among foreigners was to a considerable extent suspended yesterday, out of respect to Thanksgiving Day. Appropriate sermons were preached, in Fort-street Church, by Rev. S. E. Bishop, and in St. Andrew's Cathedral, by Rev. Geo. Wallace, the edifices being decorated as usual in a suggestive manner. Thanksgiving dinner in many homes revived recollections of the pleasant and grateful festival in other climes and former years.

Mongolian Disputa.

Two Chinamen argued a case on the Station sidewalk with great eloquence in the Hawaiian vernacular yesterday afternoon. A fellow-countryman was present apparently as referee. The case was tersely summed up in profane English without citing Blackstone. It beat the Deputy Marshal and the whole watch to get at the merits, so that the case was continued out of sight into Chinatown, with the appearance of coming back again in the shape of assault and battery.

As Monroe Goodyear of Scranton, Iowa, was recently feeding his horses, one switched his tail, and to keep it from striking his face Monroe seized it. Just at that moment lightning struck the barn, killed this horse and another, knocked down two others, threw Mr. Goodyear some distance and set fire to the barn. Goodyear regained consciousness in time to extinguish the fire.

The city of Savannah has gone into artesian well boring with the object of procuring its whole supply of water from wells. It has bored several, and has decided to bore more. They cost less than $1,000, are about three hundred feet deep and the water spouts from them to a height of twenty feet above the surface.

THE OPIUM LAW.

Its Leading Provisions and Crudities.

The "Act to Regulate the Importation and Sale of Opium in this Kingdom" was published yesterday. Therefore in ten days it will be law all over the Islands. It authorizes the granting to "some one" of a license to import and sell opium or any preparation of opium, for a fee of thirty thousand dollars with one good surety. A condition of the license is that the "party or parties" obtaining the license will not sell or give opium to any native Hawaiian or Japanese, or to any other person who has not received a certificate from "some physician" stating that opium is the proper remedy for the disease from which the bearer is suffering. Besides this certificate, "it shall be incumbent upon any person or persons desiring to purchase or use opium or any preparation thereof that they obtain a license from the Marshal or his Deputy as hereinafter provided, authorizing the intending purchaser to use opium or any preparation thereof."

The framers of the Act, however, forgot to "hereinafter" provide for the issuance of licenses to purchase or use the drug. The penalty for any person having possession of, or selling or furnishing opium, without a license, is that he shall be fined not less than one thousand nor more than five thousand dollars, and be imprisoned at hard labor for any term not more than ten years nor less than two years. For the licensee breaking any conditions of the law, or regulations to be issued under it by the Minister of the Interior, the penalty comprises cancellation of his license, enforcement of the penalty of his bond, imprisonment at hard labor for a term not more than ten years nor less than two years, and a fine of not more than five thousand nor less than one thousand dollars. Until a license is granted, the old law remains in force.

Among other crudities of this measure may be cited the following, "Before the license provided for in this Act is issued the person or persons who have obtained the same shall make and execute and deliver to the Minister of the Interior a good and sufficient bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars," etc. In the first place, it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to understand how the "some one" to whom the license is issued can become the "person or persons" above mentioned; and, secondly, it would take a pair of those legal luminaries of the "City of Brotherly Love" to define how, why, wherefore and in what manner the "some one" alias "person or persons" can "have obtained" the license "before" it is issued.

Building Material.

By the bark Forest Queen from San Francisco Mr. E. B. Thomas received 400 barrels lime, $3,240 hard brick, together with iron and wood mill work in large quantity, the whole amounting, with freight and charges, to a value of about $3,000. Such heavy orders for building material will make San Franciscans think Honolulu is rapidly becoming great in architectural appearance. It is certainly coming along fairly in that way. Apart from the improvements consequent on the great fire of seven months ago, the notable new buildings of the past two or three years make a very great difference on the side of handsome and substantial architecture.

Billiard Match.

This evening at 7:30 Morris and McClery will play a match of cushion carom, the former 300 points to the latter's 250, the contest to be at the Commercial billiard rooms. To-morrow night the same players will have a match of 600 points even, balk line game, at the Hawaiian Hotel. On Monday night they will play 1,000 points even, straight billiards, at the Commercial. Admission free to all the games. There will be a purse of $100 on each game and an additional $100 for the winner of the series.

In 1855 the British colonists in South Africa exported 12,000,000 pounds of wool, then came the ostrich craze and the sheep were neglected for the new source of wealth. The production of ostrich feathers has been pushed to such an extent that the market is overdone and ostriches are now being turned loose, because many find it unprofitable to keep them. Attention is accordingly being again turned to wool-growing.

A correspondent says that Geremio and his braves played cards all day Sunday. They are evidently acquiring a knowledge of modern military science very rapidly.

THE DAILY HERALD, 50 cents per month delivered.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

Receiving a telephone message last evening that the headquarters of Santa Claus would be open at nine o'clock this morning, the HERALD reporter followed the message back over the wires to the store of Mr. T. G. Thurm, Fort street. On opening the door shutter a resplendent view of the benevolent Saint's headquarters with their varied and variegated stores burst on the vision. There was an endless array of toys for children of all ages—white wood menageries warranted not to poison the suckling; all sorts of land and water conveyances in miniature, including real steamboats and carriages for live dog power; games and puzzles, amusing and instructive; juvenile books and bound periodicals, playthings and every conceivable species of dolls, dressed in all the ancient and modern fashion. For children of a larger growth there are gift goods in variety impossible to enumerate. Particularly worthy of mention are the art volumes in heavy paper and rich bindings, with illustrations of the latest artistic processes, among others "Keats' Lamia," Mrs. Meredith's "Earl's Return," and "Heroines of the Poets." There is also Mrs. Sinclair's "Indigenous Flowers of the Hawaiian Islands," a more elegant present than which to resident, visiting or distant friend could hardly be selected. Another thing to be mentioned, not to anticipate the customer's inspection too much, is a novelty in the shape of ivory art plates, various subjects, with handpainted pictures, extremely beautiful accessories to the drawing room table. Any time from nine o'clock this morning until nine o'clock on New Year's Eve, remember, Santa Claus will have polite representatives at his headquarters, but the early bird takes the cake.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duff's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duff's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."

THE JUBILEE BALL.

The grand ball which was originally intended to take place on the 19th inst. at the Palace was brought to a very successful issue last evening, having been postponed until that date on account of the inclement weather prevailing on the time previously set. The guests present included, besides His Majesty, their Royal Highnesses Princesses Liliuokalani, Likelike, and Pomaikelani; members of the Ministry, Diplomatic corps, Government officials and a large delegation of the elite of the city, the ladies showing by their brilliant costumes that the event had been looked forward with considerable interest.

H. R. H. Princess Liliuokalani wore decorations of the Royal orders of Kalakaua and Kapiolani. H. R. H. Likelike wore the decoration of Kalakaua, and H. R. H. Pomaikelani wore the decorations of Kalakaua and Kapiolani.

Berger's band supplied the music to over a dozen dances, which latter were seemingly engaged in a joyous manner by all present. A little before midnight the guests sat down to an excellent lunch prepared by the prince of caterers, Mr. Hart.

At 3 p. m. the last dance was danced and the party separated having spent a most enjoyable evening under the auspices of a royal host.

HIS PRIZE STORY.

It was a winter's evening, bleak and cold. Snow had been falling all day in London, and the streets were consequently covered with mud and slush.

A pedestrian tramped along the wet, slippery pavement without feeling any inclination to grumble at the weather. His blue eyes were shining with delight, and his hard, round hat was pushed back on his curly brown hair, as though, in the excitement of some pleasant thought he had found its weight oppressive.

He walked along the Strand until he came to Wellington street, when he crossed Waterloo bridge, and eventually, turning down a poor little street beyond Waterloo station, he stopped at the third house in a row of dilapidated buildings, and, letting himself in with a latchkey, dashed up the stairs and burst impetuously into a room on the third floor, crying out:

"Good news, Muriel—the best of good news! My story has been accepted."

"Oh, Jack, is it true? How thankful I am."

"We shall get along swimmingly now, darling! You shall go to Brighton or Hastings for a week with Lulu, and get some color into those poor, pale cheeks," and John Taylor stooped to kiss his wife's delicate face and caress the golden hair of which he was so proud. They were lovers still—those two, although they had been husband and wife for nearly three years.

"Tiss me too, daddy—tiss Lulu," interrupted a sweet, childish voice, and a small maiden toddled across the room.

Jack caught her up in his arms, seated her on his shoulder, and galloped and pranced round the room, in imitation of some warlike steed, until he was out of breath.

"Jack, darling, when will you get the prize? Is it really eighty pounds? How wonderful that you should have won it when there are so many competitors," Muriel said, presently.

"Don't decry my literary powers, Muriel. I am afraid my repeated failures have made you distrustful," laughed Jack. "Let us hope this is the beginning of better times. I may yet become a 'shining light' in the literary world. As to the prize, of course, it is £80. I will read you the advertisement again."

It was a well-worn scrap of paper which Jack took from his pocket-book, and from which he read aloud:

"The directors of the North London Temperance society offer a prize of £80 for the best temperance story, showing the value of personal abstinence, and the misery and crime caused by intoxicating drinks. The competition is open to all. For further particulars apply at the society's office, Strand, W. C. In the ordinary course of events, I should have had to wait until to-morrow to know my fate," went on Jack, "but Harry Balfour, my old college chum, is secretary to the society, and knowing how anxious I was, he managed to ascertain yesterday the name of the prize-winner. You can imagine my delight, darling, when he told me that I was the lucky man."

"By-the-by, Jack, you have not told me yet what all these parcels contain," said Muriel presently, "and my curiosity will not be controlled any longer. I have not seen so many up here for a long time."

"Well, Muriel," and Jack laughed gayly, "I thought as I had earned £80 we could afford to be 'gay and festive' for once. Here you see," promptly indicating the parcels, "all the materials for a night of revelry—pork sausages, floury potatoes; two bottles of Bass—I wonder what the directors would say to that—a Vienna loaf, and lastly, some grapes for that troublesome cough of yours."

Muriel was preparing supper, and the shabby room looked quite cozy by the light of the lamp. The faded red curtains were drawn across the window, a white cloth was laid on the table, and the common plates and glasses were arranged with a dainty precision which did Muriel credit.

What a happy supper it was! Surely since pork sausages were invented none have been fried so beautifully brown; no gravy ever so deliciously made; no potatoes been so white and floury! Such a supper is fit for the gods—at least, when the sauce of happiness and hunger accompanies it.

The £80 had come most opportunely, for Jack's little patrimony was exhausted; he had only an uncertain engagement on the staff of a third-rate evening paper, and no help could be expected from Muriel's father, who disowned his daughter when she ran away with—to repeat the old gentleman's words—"that good-for-nothing scribbling fellow, who was brought up in such an extravagant style, sir, and then left with a few paltry hundreds." Jack says that now he will be able to devote some time to his novel, upon which he has been engaged for some months, instead of being driven by stern necessity to write nothing but "pot-boilers." When the clock struck 11, the light was put out, and soon no sound was heard in the room but the quiet breathing of the happy sleeper.

Breakfast over, Jack hurried away, for he was anxious to receive his prize money as soon as possible.

"Sit down, Jack, and have a look at The Times for five minutes," said Harry Balfour when the two friends had shaken hands. "I have one or two little matters that must be attended to at once."

It did not appear as if Balfour could attend much to the business he mentioned, for his glance wandered continually to his friend's bright face, and he pushed his papers about with a nervous, impatient hand.

"Is this eighty-pound prize a great matter to you, old fellow?" he asked Jack at last.

"I should think it is, Harry! My wife has been awfully seedy lately—London never agrees with her, but I could not afford to send her away, and now she can go to Hastings for a week with Lulu, and have everything the doctor orders. Yes, indeed, it is a godsend to me in every way."

Balfour uttered an unintelligible ejaculation, and, after a moment's gloomy silence, roughly pushed back his chair exclaiming:

"It is of no use; if I think till doomsday I shall never find an easy way of telling you."

"What is there to tell, Harry? Don't make a fellow nervous," said Jack, trying to laugh. "You don't expect me to believe that the society is bankrupt, and that I may whistle for my money?"

"I have been a confounded fool, Jack! I don't know whether you will ever forgive me, but I can never forgive myself. When one of the directors told me that 'Taylor' had won the prize, of course I thought you were the lucky man, and told you so; instead of that—instead of that—"

And here Balfour stammered and hesitated.

"Well, out with it, for heaven's sake!" cried Jack harshly, and all the life and brightness died out of his face.

"There is another 'Taylor' among the competitors, and he is the winner of the prize. I did not know of this until late at night, when the directors gave me a check for £80 in favor of 'George Taylor.' No one could be more grieved than I am, old fellow. I would have given £30 for it not to have happened. I ought to have been more careful."

Jack answered nothing. The blow had fallen so unexpectedly that, for the moment, it stunned him. He tried to pull himself together, but there was a dazed look on his white face, and his limbs trembled under him as he rose to his feet, anxious to get away.

"Don't go like this, old man. You have had a nasty shock. Sit down a little while and steady yourself. I wish I could walk home with you; but there will be so many people in and out this morning that I can not possibly leave. Let me send for a cab! No? Well, if you would rather go"—as Jack moved impatiently towards the door—"I won't detain you; only—stop a moment, Jack. I am afraid of offending your confounded pride—but won't you—can't I?—and Balfour waxed eager and incoherent—"Be your banker for a time! You would be doing me a kindness, as I might not feel such a brute then as I do now."

"Many thanks, old fellow; but that cannot be. Let me keep my independence as long as I can. Don't blame yourself for what has happened," and Jack held out his hand; "it was only a mistake."

Out in the Strand again; but how changed everything seemed since an hour ago! The world is a dreary place when the sunshine is gone from our heart and hand and brain are weary of striving and striving, when all seems of no avail. As in a dream, Jack turned, his footsteps homeward. He looked so white and broken down that a few pitying and curious glances were directed at him; but no one had time, or, perhaps, inclination, to bestow much sympathy on a stranger. In this world, the race is to the swift and the battle to the strong, and our weak and unfortunate brethren meet with scant pity.

Half way over Waterloo bridge Jack felt he must rest awhile, for he was faint and tired. His breakfast had been a small one, for he was eager to get away, and now want of food and the excitement he had gone through were telling upon him. He seated himself in one of the recesses of the bridge, and crossing his arms on the stone balustrade, looked down on the cold, gray river. No money; no chance of work that would bring in more than a few shillings; a delicate wife and child to provide for—what was he to do?

How quietly the barges were floating down the river! A little bright sunshine dispersed the early morning fog, and Jack gazed down and listened to the wooing notes of the river, whispering of rest, peace and forgetfulness; and as he listened, shadowy arms seemed to rise out of the water and to beckon him down.

Would it not be best for his dear ones that he should slip quietly out of the world? Muriel's friends would care for her and the child, if he were out of the way. Ah, but would anything comfort Muriel for his loss? Jack could not pretend to think that she would be lightly consoled. The tender heart which had clung to him through good and evil, could he bear to break it? No, however hard life may be, for her sake he must work and struggle on; perhaps some day he will see light in the darkness.

Jack turned from the river, ashamed that he could have thought for one instant of flinging his life away like a coward. His limbs were aching and trembling from the cold; for nearly an hour he had sat exposed to the bitter weather. He longed to get home now. Muriel's arms would enfold him the more closely in his desolation, and Muriel's warm kisses would fall on his face, and lighten somewhat the heavy load that was pressing on his heart. And Lulu—the little Lulu, and the shabby, homely room! What a desire he had to get back to them all; and they seemed so far off still, for only slowly and painfully could he drag himself along.

He reached Waterloo station. He was nearly home now. He attempted to cross the road; at the same time a hansom cab dashed out of the station. Jack heard a warning cry, but stood helpless and confused, not comprehending his danger. There was a loud exclamation of horror, and then a little crowd gathered round a motionless figure which was lifted gently on a stretcher and carried to the nearest surgery. The doctor was at home, and after a keen glance at the deathly face and careful examination of the crushed, mangled body, he turned to the bystanders and said:

"I can do nothing here. The poor fellow is dead."—Philadelphia Call.

Circumventing the Hat Fiend.

A new member of the New York stock exchange who has to pass the ordeal of initiation never knows what is to happen to him. He is just as likely to be stood upon his head without a moment's warning, or to have his clothes torn into ribbons, or to be carried bodily into the closet under the stairs, and left there until half suffocated. Usually the first intimation that the ceremonies have begun is when the victim's hat is either sent flying toward the ventilator or crushed over his ears.

In the history of the exchange W. R. Whitmore is the only man who successfully circumvented the hat fiend. His bold demeanor on entering the room on his first day almost paralyzed the wags. They did not know what he meant. "Give him one," suggested John Bloodgood. "Mash the floor!" whispered Dick Murphy, and sitting the action to the word he brought a big brawny fist down on the top of Whitmore's plug. He immediately repeated. The novice had neatly arranged a battery of inverted tacks in his hat, and the venturesome hazer thought he had tackled a porcupine. Whitmore was let severely alone for the rest of the day, and his sobriquet is now "Tacks."—New York Star.

A New Rope-Making Machine.

A Manchester (Eng.) firm has just completed a new rope-making machine, which, whilst enabling any lengths of ropes to be manufactured, dispenses entirely with any necessity for a rope-walk. The complete machinery does not occupy a floor space of more than three yards square, and is very simple both in construction and working. The yarn is wound on a series of bobbins, and the whole process of manufacture is finished on the machine, the rope being transferred direct to a drum, on which it is wound in coils ready for delivery. The machine can be readily regulated to give any twist or hardness to the rope that may be required.—Boston Transcript.

DEAR LAND.

There is no denying the statements of our daily contemporaries regarding the high prices and rents of land. Yet the fact of dear land ought not to discourage effort for the promotion of land settlement. The tract of land mentioned in this paper the other day, as having been offered for sale and eagerly sought in small holdings by Portuguese, does not appear to have been put at an unreasonable figure, for it was the holder who withdrew from the bargain, and that not because he could not get his price. Other tracts of land have been made available for settlement on this island, but the difficulty in the way of results has been the same as in the above case, namely, the capital was not forthcoming to make the lands ready for settlers of moderate or small means. One reason why rents are so exorbitant is doubtless the comparatively small amount of land that has a water supply. If eight or ten hundred Chinamen are anxious to secure garden or plantation plots, where there is not watered land enough for half of them, it is the most natural thing in the world for rents to go up and remain high. But the very fact that high rents are paid, and kept up right in the teeth of depressed prices of produce, ought to stimulate capital to investment in land improvement enterprises. When land that was worthless before wells were sunk on it brings in rentals of from fifty to a hundred dollars an acre, there should not be much land capable of irrigation in the Kingdom left lying very long without development. Local capitalists, however, with other investments to look after, will probably be slow to take up with movements for the improvement and settlement of land. Some of them, who receive heavy rents for the limited amount of land under cultivation, perhaps would prefer to have things remain as they are, for land improvement schemes on a reasonable basis would bring down their rents. For these reasons nothing but a large influx of foreign capital will effect speedy results of great extent in colonization. Yet there is no reason to wait for grand schemes. Gradual development is sometimes the surest and most permanent, and the success of small ventures, in a given line of enterprise, is often the necessary prelude to larger ones. It would be a pity if the press were to drop the agitation because it has been without great apparent results even for years. In a matter involving such vast issues for the future, as internal colonization does, impatience of results should not be exercised, while anything calculated to incite despair of ultimate success should be avoided. Keeping the subject continually before the public shall be the aim of the HERALD, in the hope that, if no comprehensive scheme is suddenly consummated, some land owners may be induced to lead the way to grand results by preparing small plots for settlement and sale at moderate prices. There are indications that much will be done in moderate schemes of this sort before very long.

THE LABOR FACTOR.

The commercial metropolis of the United States and that of the Dominion of Canada have each furnished a striking

sign of the times, a sign that gives the politicians of the fossilized parties in both countries much concern. That Henry George, the Labor candidate for the mayoralty of New York, should have polled a third of the votes against tremendous odds is a startling revelation to the engineers of the old machines. It has attracted world-wide attention and discussion, as a development of the rapidly increasing interest the working classes are everywhere taking in their relations to government. In Montreal a Labor party was organized shortly before the recent elections for the Provincial Legislature of Quebec, putting forward candidates in the three divisions of the city. They had as heavy odds to contend with, relatively, the Labor party in New York. Party feeling had always run high in the con- stituencies. The Labor candidates gave the blusters over Riel's execution no promise of avenging that act, and doubtless many who would otherwise be attracted to the Labor banner were carried away by the cry of that faction. Although clever and of irreproachable character, the Labor candidates were comparatively obscure citizens. Against them were pitted candidates of the old parties, including a millionaire, with a fine record in the Legislature and the City Council; the Attorney General of the Province, experienced and talented in politics; one of the most consummate demagogues, who sat for many years previously in both the City Council and the Legislature, and, for the other three, all smart men of influence and good repute. Yet in the face of all the prestige, power, influence and talent arrayed against them, the Labor candidates polled remarkably large votes. In Montreal West the Labor candidate had 1,020 votes, to 1,894 for the Liberal and 2,041 for the Conservative. In Montreal Centre the Labor candidate had 1,214, to 1,178 for the Conservative and 1,835 for the Liberal. In Montreal East the Labor candidate had 2,413 to 2,869 for the Conservative Attorney General and 3,072 for the Liberal candidate. The result in every division shows the balance of power to be in the hands of the Labor party, and that politicians must in future take that party into serious account in their calculations. Both in the United States and Canada the best security for the permanence of the old parties will soon come to be that they shall produce measures of justice to the working classes. There are reforms required in the labor and sanitary laws of each country which have been prevented hitherto by the allegiance of legislators to capitalists and monopolists.

MUNICIPAL REFORM.

Whenever Honolulu is ready to adopt municipal government, its citizens should examine the new system in that regard adopted by the cities of Nashville and Memphis, Tennessee. In the former the electors vote for a Council of Ten, which appoints a Board of Public Works at salaries of $4,000 a year each. The civic institution is run on commercial instead of political principles. Results of the system appear in the reduction of taxes, the streets converted from mud holes into paved ways, the fire department improved in equipment, and the credit of the city strengthened. Memphis, under a similar change of municipal administration, has like improvement to show, civil service reform principles having been adopted and the city transmogrified from one of the filthiest to one of the cleanest and healthiest on the continent.

BUSINESS ITEMS.

Everybody says the imported Candies at the Elite are yum-yum. Go and try some!
Miss Tuck, at Miss Barry's, Punchbowl street, has received by last steamer a large assortment of Stamping Patterns for fancy work.
No hand-book excels the Hawaiian Almanac and Annual for reliable statistical and general information relating to these Islands. Price 50 cents.
Now is the time to get your Christmas Cards. We have just received a large and well selected stock, all new, and of the latest designs. Call and get one, King Bros., Art Store, Hotel street.
If you want a good smoke for your money, patronize home industry and call at J. W. Hingley's, Crystal Soda Works, 69 Hotel street. Island orders solicited and promptly filled. There is no license required to sell these cigars. Do not forget the name, J. W. Hingley, nor the place, Crystal Soda Works, Hotel street.

NOTES AND COMMENTS.

When the Attorney-General tackles a subtle question of law, it must necessarily be sub Rosa.

If one sees a bad depression in the street, he should call out, "A hole, in," and the Minister of the Interior will send the Road Supervisor to mend it—perhaps.

An idea of the rapid growth of the American Northwest may be gained from the fact that three thousand dwellings were erected in Minneapolis, Minnesota, in the year 1885.

German exports to America last year showed the enormous increase of $17,000,000, including $4,000,000 worth of sugar. This is not a consolatory fact for producers of cane sugar.

A second Suez canal is to be constructed, exclusively under English auspices and control. As the present ditch must be neutral in case of war, it does not serve all England's requirements.

San Francisco papers right after the elections had Carlisle defeated without doubt, so that we did not look up later despatches for his fate. It appears, however, that he was elected by 500 or 600 majority. Morrison was defeated in Illinois. He does not think the event is a blow to tariff reform, and says he detected no sign of dissatisfaction with Cleveland's administration.

Frank Leslie's Illustrated Newspaper has an item stating that the power of the electric railroad in Toronto, Canada, costs only two dollars a day. The equipment for one and a half miles of road cost $9,000, the receipts are $500 a month and after all expenses are paid a profit of 75 per cent. is realized. Information of this nature should be investigated by the holders of the franchise for the Honolulu street railroad.

The extraordinary resistance developed by recent national subscription lists in New York perhaps has caused scepticism as to metropolitan liberality. Much of this must be dispelled by the information that the Young Women's Christian Association of that city have moved into their new building costing $125,000, every dollar of which has been subscribed. Free instruction is one of the most important parts of the association's work.

The New York State Woman's Suffrage Association applied for a place in the ceremonies connected with the unveiling of the Statue of Liberty, but were denied. They forthwith got a boat for themselves and took up one of the most favorable positions on Bedloe's Island. Afterward they held a meeting and after denouncing the ceremonies as a farce passed resolutions, declaring, "that in erecting a Statue of Liberty embodied as a woman in a land where no woman has political liberty, the men have shown a delightful inconsistency which excites the wonder and admiration of the opposite sex."

LOCAL NEWS.

It is said that the athletic sports will take place at Makiki this afternoon.

The barkentine Mary Winkelman is going on the Marine Railway to-day.

A powerful electric light was going in the Hotel billiard room last night.

The Queen of England has congratulated the King of Hawaii on his fiftieth birthday.

Messrs. E. P. Adams & Co. sell household furniture of Mr. W. W. Wright at ten this morning.

Pahala mill, Hawaii, is making sugar while the water runs. The rainfall has been abundant there of late.

Mr. Jas. R. Holt, jr., is going to have a $12,000, two-story brick house built for him by Mr. Lucas on Nuuanu street.

Mr. William Miller was reported yesterday as being no better from his recent fall, but last evening Dr. Gray said he was somewhat improving.

The Oceanic steamship Mariposa will be due from San Francisco for the Colonies to-morrow, but the likelihood is that she will not arrive before the next day, as the English mail is usually a day late at this season of the year.

The room of a lodger in a house on King street was lately entered, his trunk forced open and about thirty dollars stolen therefrom. A sewing machine has also been stolen from the schoolroom of St. Andrew's Priory.

A young man equipped for the ball, but who had evidently tarried by the way, was stopping people on Palace Square at 11 o'clock last night, asking for a blank card. "I lost my invitation," he lamented, "and want to get in'th' festivities."

The heavy coral fence on Punchbowl street, fronting the premises leased by Mr. John Angus from the estate of the late Mrs. Bishop, has for a good while been very obviously out of plumb. On Tuesday at noon about forty feet of the structure tumbled into the street, but fortunately nobody was in the way at the time.

Police Court.

Yesterday Ah Sing was convicted of having opium in possession, and was fined $50 with 20 days' hard labor. Four Chinese were acquitted on the same charge, and a sixth remanded. On the civil docket, George and Annie Holt, by their guardian, A. J. Cartwright, obtained judgment in an action for summary possession against Alam and Acheu.

Thanksgiving Day.

Business among foreigners was to a considerable extent suspended yesterday, out of respect to Thanksgiving Day. Appropriate sermons were preached, in Fort-street Church, by Rev. S. E. Bishop, and in St. Andrew's Cathedral, by Rev. Geo. Wallace, the edifices being decorated as usual in a suggestive manner. Thanksgiving dinner in many homes revived recollections of the pleasant and grateful festival in other climes and former years.

Mongolian Disputant.

Two Chinamen argued a case on the Station sidewalk with great eloquence in the Hawaiian vernacular yesterday afternoon. A fellow-countryman was present apparently as referee. The case was tersely summed up in profane English without citing Blackstone. It beat the Deputy Marshal and the whole watch to get at the merits, so that the case was continued out of sight into Chinatown, with the appearance of coming back again in the shape of assault and battery.

As Monroe Goodyear of Scranton, Iowa, was recently feeding his horses, one switched his tail, and to keep it from striking his face Monroe seized it. Just at that moment lightning struck the barn, killed this horse and another, knocked down two others, threw Mr. Goodyear some distance and set fire to the barn. Goodyear regained consciousness in time to extinguish the fire.

The city of Savannah has gone into artesian well boring with the object of procuring its whole supply of water from wells. It has bored several, and has decided to bore more. They cost less than $1,000, are about three hundred feet deep and the water spouts from them to a height of twenty feet above the surface.

THE OPIUM LAW.

Its Leading Provisions and Crudities.

The "Act to Regulate the Importation and Sale of Opium in this Kingdom" was published yesterday. Therefore in ten days it will be law all over the Islands. It authorizes the granting to "some one" of a license to import and sell opium or any preparation of opium, for a fee of thirty thousand dollars with one good surety. A condition of the license is that the "party or parties" obtaining the license will not sell or give opium to any native Hawaiian or Japanese, or to any other person who has not received a certificate from "some physician" stating that opium is the proper remedy for the disease from which the bearer is suffering. Besides this certificate, "it shall be incumbent upon any person or persons desiring to purchase or use opium or any preparation thereof that they obtain a license from the Marshal or his Deputy as hereinafter provided, authorizing the intending purchaser to use opium or any preparation thereof." The framers of the Act, however, forgot to "hereinafter" provide for the issuance of licenses to purchase or use the drug.

The penalty for any person having possession of, or selling or furnishing opium, without a license, is that he shall be fined not less than one thousand and nor more than five thousand dollars, and be imprisoned at hard labor for any term not more than ten years nor less than two years. For the license breaking any conditions of the law, or regulations to be issued under it by the Minister of the Interior, the penalty comprises cancellation of his license, enforcement of the penalty of his bond, imprisonment at hard labor for a term not more than ten years nor less than two years, and a fine of not more than five thousand nor less than one thousand dollars. Until a license is granted, the old law remains in force.

Among other crudities of this measure may be cited the following, "Before the license provided for in this Act is issued the person or persons who have obtained the same shall make and execute and deliver to the Minister of the Interior a good and sufficient bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars," etc. In the first place, it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to understand how the "some one" to whom the license is issued can become the "person or persons" above mentioned; and, secondly, it would take a pair of those legal luminaries of the "City of Brotherly Love" to define how, why, wherefore and in what manner the "some one" alias "person or persons" can "have obtained" the license "before" it is issued.

Building Material.

By the bark Forest Queen from San Francisco Mr. E. B. Thomas received 400 barrels lime, $3,240 hard brick, together with iron and wood mill work in large quantity, the whole amounting, with freight and charges, to a value of about $5,000. Such heavy orders for building material will make San Franciscans think Honolulu is rapidly becoming great in architectural appearance. It is certainly coming along fairly in that way. Apart from the improvements consequent on the great fire of seven months ago, the notable new buildings of the past two or three years make a very great difference on the side of handsome and substantial architecture.

Billiard Match.

This evening at 7:30 Morris and McCleery will play a match of cushion carom, the former 300 points to the latter's 250, the contest to be at the Commercial billiard rooms. To-morrow night the same players will have a match of 600 points even, balk line game, at the Hawaiian Hotel. On Monday night they will play 1,000 points even, straight billiards, at the Commercial. Admission free to all the games. There will be a purse of $100 on each game and an additional $100 for the winner of the series.

In 1855 the British colonists in South Africa exported 12,000,000 pounds of wool, then came the ostrich craze and the sheep were neglected for the new source of wealth. The production of ostrich feathers has been pushed to such an extent that the market is overdone and ostriches are now being turned loose, because many find it unprofitable to keep them. Attention is accordingly being again turned to wool-growing.

A correspondent says that Geremo and his braves played cards all day Sunday. They are evidently acquiring a knowledge of modern military science very rapidly.

THE DAILY HERALD, 50 cents per month delivered.

Santa Claus' Headquarters.

Receiving a telephone message last evening that the headquarters of Santa Claus would be open at nine o'clock this morning, the HERALD reporter followed the message back over the wires to the store of Mr. T. G. Thrum, Fort street. On opening the door shutter a resplendent view of the benevolent Saint's headquarters with their varied and variegated stores burst on the vision. There was an endless array of toys for children of all ages—white wood menageries warranted not to poison the suckling; all sorts of land and water conveyances in miniature, including real steamboats and carriages for live dog power; games and puzzles, amusing and instructive; juvenile books and bound periodicals, playthings and every conceivable species of dolls, dressed in all the ancient and modern fashion. For children of a larger growth there are gift goods in variety impossible to enumerate. Particularly worthy of mention are the art volumes in heavy paper and rich bindings, with illustrations of the latest artistic processes, among others "Keats' Lamia," Mrs. Meredith's "Earl's Return," and "Heroines of the Poets." There is also Mrs. Sinclair's "Indigenous Flowers of the Hawaiian Islands," a more elegant present than which to resident, visiting or distant friend could hardly be selected. Another thing to be mentioned, not to anticipate the customer's inspection too much, is a novelty in the shape of ivory art plates, various subjects, with handpainted pictures, extremely beautiful accessories to the drawing room table. Any time from nine o'clock this morning until nine o'clock on New Year's Eve, remember, Santa Claus will have polite representatives at his headquarters, but the early bird takes the cake.

The Best Tonic.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unexcelled."

THE JUBILEE BALL.

The grand ball which was originally intended to take place on the 19th inst. at the Palace was brought to a very successful issue last evening, having been postponed until that date on account of the inclement weather prevailing on the time previously set. The guests present included, besides His Majesty, their Royal Highnesses Princesses Liliuokalani, Likelike, and Pomaikelani; members of the Ministry, Diplomatic corps, Government officials and a large delegation of the elite of the city, the ladies showing by their brilliant costumes that the event had been looked forward with considerable interest.

H. R. H. Princess Liliuokalani wore decorations of the Royal orders of Kalakaua and Kapiolani. H. R. H. Likelike wore the decoration of Kalakaua, and H. R. H. Pomaikelani wore the decorations of Kalakaua and Kapiolani.

Berger's band supplied the music to over a dozen dances, which latter were seemingly engaged in in a joyous manner by all present. A little before midnight the guests sat down to an excellent lunch prepared by the prince of caterers, Mr. Hart.

At 3 p. m. the last dance was danced and the party separated having spent a most enjoyable evening under the auspices of a royal host.

HIS PRIZE STORY.

It was a winter's evening, bleak and cold. Snow had been falling all day in London, and the streets were consequently covered with mud and slush.

A pedestrian tramped along the wet, slippery pavement without feeling any inclination to grumble at the weather. His blue eyes were shining with delight, and his hard, round hat was pushed back on his curly brown hair, as though, in the excitement of some pleasant thought he had found its weight oppressive.

He walked along the Strand until he came to Wellington street, when he crossed Waterloo bridge, and eventually, turning down a poor little street beyond Waterloo station, he stopped at the third house in a row of dilapidated buildings, and, letting himself in with a latchkey, dashed up the stairs and burst impetuously into a room on the third floor, crying out:

"Good news, Muriel—the best of good news! My story has been accepted."

"Oh, Jack, is it true? How thankful I am."
"We shall get along swimmingly now, darling! You shall go to Brighton or Hastings for a week with Lulu, and get some color into these poor, pale cheeks," said John Taylor stooped to kiss his wife's delicate face and caress the golden hair of which he was so proud. They were lovers still—those two, although they had been husband and wife for nearly three years.

"Tiss me too, daddy—tiss Lulu," interrupted a sweet, childish voice, and a small maiden toddled across the room.

"Jack, darling, when will you get the prize? Is it really eighty pounds? How wonderful that you should have won it when there are so many competitors," Muriel said, presently.

"Don't doubt my literary powers, Muriel. I am afraid my repeated failures have made you distrustful," laughed Jack. "Let us hope this is the beginning of better times. I may yet become a 'shining light' in the literary world. As to the prize, of course, it is £80. I will read you the advertisement again."

It was a well-worn scrap of paper which Jack took from his pocket-book, and from which he read aloud:

"The directors of the North London Temperance society offer a prize of £80 for the best temperance story, showing the value of personal abstinence, and the misery and crime caused by intoxicating drinks. The competition is open to all. For further particulars apply at the society's office, Strand, W. C. In the ordinary course of events, I should have had to wait until to-morrow to know my fate," went on Jack, "but Harry Balfour, my old college chum, is secretary to the society; and knowing how anxious I was, he managed to ascertain yesterday the name of the prize-winner. You can imagine my delight, darling, when he told me that I was the lucky man."

"By-the-by, Jack, you have not told me yet what all these parcels contain," said Muriel presently, "and my curiosity will not be controlled any longer. I have not seen so many up here for a long time."

"Well, Muriel," and Jack laughed gaily, "I thought as I had earned £80 I could afford to be 'gay and festive' for once. Here you see," proudly indicating the parcels, "all the materials for a night of revelry—pork sausages, floury potatoes; two bottles of Bass—I wonder what the directors would say to that—a Vienna loaf, and lastly, some grapes for that troublesome cough of yours."

Muriel was preparing supper, and the shabby room looked quite cozy by the light of the lamp. The faded red curtains were drawn across the window, a white cloth was laid on the table, and the common plates and glasses were arranged with a dainty precision which did Muriel credit.

What a happy supper it was! Surely since pork sausages were invented none have been fried so beautifully brown; no gravy ever so deliciously made; no potatoes been so white and floury! Such a supper is fit for the gods—at least, when the sauce of happiness and hunger accompanies it.

The £80 had come most opportunely, for Jack's little patrimony was exhausted; he had only an uncertain engagement on the staff of a third-rate evening paper, and no help could be expected from Muriel's father, who disowned his daughter when she ran away with—to repeat the old gentleman's words—"that good-for-nothing scribbling fellow, who was brought up in such an extravagant style, and then left with a few paitry hundred."

Jack says that now he will be able to devote some time to his novel, upon which he has been engaged for some months, instead of being driven by stern necessity to write nothing but "pot-boilers." When the clock struck 11, the light was put out, and soon no sound was heard in the room but the quiet breathing of the happy sleeper.

Breakfast over, Jack hurried away, for he was anxious to receive his prize money as soon as possible.

"Sit down, Jack, and have a look at The Times for five minutes," said Harry Balfour when the two friends had shaken hands. "I have one or two little matters that must be attended to at once."

It did not appear as if Balfour could attend much to the business he mentioned, for his glance wandered continually to his friend's right face, and he pushed his papers about with a nervous, impatient hand.

"Is this eighty-pound prize a great matter to you, old fellow?" he asked Jack at last.

"I should think it is, Harry! My wife has been awfully seedy lately—London never agrees with her, but I could not afford to send her away, and now she can go to Hastings for a week with Lulu, and have everything the doctor orders. Yes, indeed, it is a godsend to me in every way."

Balfour uttered an unintelligible ejaculation, and, after a moment's gloomy silence, roughly pushed back his chair exclaiming:

"It is of no use; if I think till doomsday I shall never find an easy way of telling you."

"What is there to tell, Harry? Don't make a fellow nervous," said Jack, trying to laugh. "You don't expect me to believe that the society is bankrupt, and that I may whistle for my money?"

"I have been a confounded fool, Jack! I don't know whether you will ever forgive me, but I can never forgive myself. When one of the directors told me that 'Taylor' had won the prize, of course I thought you were the lucky man, and told you so; instead of that—instead of that—"

And here Balfour stammered and hesitated.

"Well, out with it, for heaven's sake!" cried Jack harshly, and all the life and brightness died out of his face.

"There is another 'Taylor' among the competitors, and he is the winner of the prize. I did not know of this until late at night, when the directors gave me a check for £80 in favor of 'George Taylor.' No one could be more grieved than I am, old fellow. I would have given £20 for it not to have happened. I ought to have been more careful."

Jack answered nothing. The blow had fallen so unexpectedly that, for the moment, it stunned him. He tried to pull himself together, but there was a dazed look on his white face, and his limbs trembled under him as he rose to his feet, anxious to get away.

"Don't go like this, old man. You have had a nasty shock. Sit down a little while and steady yourself. I wish I could walk home with you; but there will be so many people in and out this morning that I can not possibly leave. Let me send for a cab! No! Well, if you would rather go"—as Jack moved impatiently towards the door—"I won't detain you; only—stop a moment, Jack. I am afraid of offending your confounded pride—but won't you—can't I"—and Balfour waxed eager and incoherent—"be your banker for a time? You would be doing me a kindness, as I might not feel such a brute then as I do now."

"Many thanks, old fellow; but that cannot be. Let me keep my independence as long as I can. Don't blame yourself for what has happened," and Jack held out his hands "it was really a mistake."

Out in the Strand again; but how changed everything seemed since an hour ago! The world is a dreary place when the sunshine is gone from our heart and hand and brain are weary of striving and pining, when all seems of no avail. As in a dream, Jack turned his footsteps homeward. He looked so white and broken down that a few pitying and curious glances were directed at him; but no one had time, or, perhaps, inclination, to bestow much sympathy on a stranger. In this world, the race is to the swift and the battle to the strong, and our weak and unfortunate brethren meet with scant pity.

Half way over Waterloo bridge Jack felt he must rest awhile, for he was faint and tired. His breakfast had been a small one, for he was eager to get away; and now want of food and the excitement he had gone through were telling upon him. He seated himself in one of the recesses of the bridge, and crossing his arms on the stone balustrade, looked down on the cold, gray river. No money; no chance of work that would bring in more than a few shillings; a delicate wife and child to provide for—what was he to do?

How quietly the barges were floating down the river! A little bright sunshine dispersed the early morning fog, and Jack gazed down and listened to the wooing voices of the river, whispering of rest, peace and forgetfulness; and as he listened, shadowy arms seemed to rise out of the water and to beckon him down.

Would it not be best, for his dear ones that he should slip quietly out of the world? Muriel's friends would care for her and the child, if he were out of the way. Ah, but would anything comfort Muriel for his loss? Jack could not pretend to think that she would be lightly consoled. The tender heart which had clung to him through good and evil, could he bear to break it? No, however hard life may be, for her sake he must work and struggle on; perhaps some day he will see light in the darkness.

Jack turned from the river, ashamed that he could have thought for one instant of flinging his life away like a coward. His limbs were aching and trembling from the cold; for nearly an hour he had sat exposed to the bitter weather. He longed to get home now. Muriel's arms would enfold him the more closely in his desolation, and Muriel's warm kisses would fall on his face, and lighten somewhat the heavy lead that was pressing on his heart. And Lulu—dear little Lulu, and the shabby, homely room! What a desire he had to get back to them all; and they seemed so far off still, for only slowly and painfully could he drag himself along.

He reached Waterloo station. He was nearly home now. He attempted to cross the road; at the same time a hansom cab dashed out of the station. Jack heard a warning cry, but stood helpless and confused, not comprehending his danger. There was a loud exclamation of horror, and then a little crowd gathered round a motionless figure which was lifted gently on a stretcher and carried to the nearest surgery. The doctor was at home, and after a keen glance at the deathly face and careful examination of the crushed, impassive body, he turned to the bystanders and said:

"I can do nothing here. The poor fellow is dead."—Philadelphia Call.

Circumventing the Hat Fiend.
A new member of the New York stock exchange who has to pass the ordeal of initiation never knows what is to happen to him. He is just as likely to be stood upon his head without a moment's warning, or to have his clothes torn into ribbons or to be carried bodily into the closet under the stairs, and left there until half suffocated. Usually the first intimation that the ceremonies have begun is when the victim's hat is either sent flying toward the ventilator or crushed over his ears.

In the history of the exchange W. R. Whitmore is the only man who successfully circumvented the hat fiend. His bold demeanor on entering the room on his first day almost paralyzed the wags. They did not know what he meant. "Give him one," suggested John Bloodgood. "Mash the deer!" whispered Dick Murphy, and suiting the action to the word he brought a big brawny fist down on the top of Whitmore's plug. He immediately repented. The novice had neatly arranged a battery of iron rods tacks in his hat, and the venturesome hazer thought he had tackled a porcupine. Whitmore was let severely alone for the rest of the day, and his sobriquet is now "Tacks."—New York Star.

A New Rope-Making Machine.

A Manchester (Eng.) firm has just completed a new rope-making machine, which, whilst enabling any lengths of ropes to be manufactured, dispenses entirely with any necessity for a rope-walk. The complete machinery does not occupy a floor space of more than three yards square, and is very simple both in construction and working. The yarn is wound on a series of bobbins, and the whole process of manufacture is finished on the machine, the rope being transferred direct to a drum, on which it is wound in coils ready for delivery. The machine can be readily regulated to give any twist or hardness to the rope that may be required.—Boston Transcript.
