Beloved Jurist Passed Away This Morning

United States Judge Morris M. Estee passed away at 8:55 o'clock this morning at Miss Johnson's sanatorium on Kewalo street. He was unconscious for several hours before death came and no suffering attended his last moments.

The stricken wife was at the bedside until the last. Others who witnessed the departure were Miss Ryan, who has for years been the Judge's private secretary, Justice and Mrs. C. A. Galbraith, U. S. District Attorney R. W. Breckons, Assistant U. S. District Attorney J. J. Dunne, U. S. Marshal E. R. Hendry, U. S. District Court Clerk W. B. Maling, Hon. E. P. Dole and Doctor C. B. Wood.

The news of Judge Estee's passing away, although it was generally known that he was seriously ill, came as a great shock to the community.

Shortly after 9 o'clock the flag, which always flew from the tower of the Judiciary building when Judge Estee was on the bench in Federal Court, was half-masted. A minute or so later, when the news had reached the Capitol the colors were set accordingly. Then, all over town, flags flew at half mast and the word was passed from mouth to mouth, with sadness and deep regret, that the universally admired and respected Federal jurist was no more.

For over two weeks Judge Estee had been seriously ill. Prior to that time he was not enjoying good health.

On Saturday last it was realized that an operation was necessary to save the patient's life. A derangement of the kidneys necessitated immediate action. Doctors Wood, Mays and Day performed the operation at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon. After the operation the Judge appeared much better and it was hoped that after a few months' of careful nursing, he would be able to be about again.

Last night, however, it was seen that there was no longer any room for hope. Shortly after midnight there was a decided turn for the worse and the doctors stated that the Judge had at the most but a few hours to live.

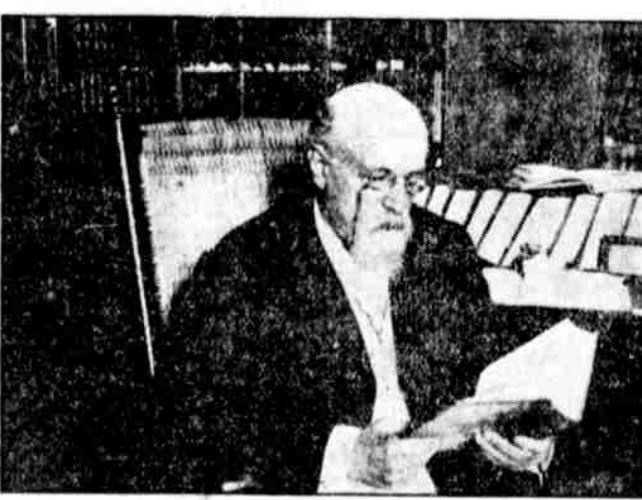

With his devoted wife close by and friends gathered around, the end came peacefully this morning.

When Judges Gear, DeBolt and Robinson opened court this morning they adjourned out of respect to the memory of the departed.

Judge Gear ordered court adjourned for one week, speaking from the bench of the blow the news of Judge Estee's death had been to him.

"A man like Judge Estee should never die!" said Judge Gear, with emotion. "Such a man should live forever. It will be a difficult matter to replace him."

Attorney General Andrews spoke of the great loss to the community and

BULLET FLIES IN VICINITY OF SAM LESLIE

Sam Leslie, the popular lieutenant of the mounted police, seems to have been the object for an attempted assassination last night. Until about two weeks ago Leslie used to sleep in a bedroom facing the front lanai of his house in Houghtaling lane in Kahlia. Last night he was sleeping in another bedroom just behind the one mentioned. At about 4 o'clock this morning Leslie was awakened by the sound of a shot. Thinking that it was a Chinaman shooting rice birds in the fields in the neighborhood Leslie at first paid no further attention to it. A few moments later he detected the smell of gun powder.

Leslie's suspicions were aroused. He got up and went into his old bedroom, where he made the surprising discovery that someone had taken a shot through the window. The window was open, but is covered with wire mosquito-proofing. The bullet had torn a hole through the wire gauze and had entered the back piece of the bed just about two inches above the pillow. Traversing the back of the bed and the wall behind it the bullet entered the bedroom in which Leslie was sleeping. Here it's force was spent and it fell on the floor, where Leslie found it.

READY TO GO

"If the clock strikes, I am ready to go. I would like to live of course, but I am not afraid to die." This remark was made by the late Judge Estee to a friend who was at his bedside yesterday. Judge Estee throughout his short illness was the soul of calm courage. He talked with his friends in the bright hopeful way that always made his conversations a pleasure.

The shot had evidently been fired by someone standing on the front veranda. The muzzle of the pistol must have been pressed against the mosquito-proofing, since the curtains just inside of the wire were singed by the powder. Had Leslie been sleeping in the bed he would in all probability have been killed since the bullet passed only about two inches above the pillow.

Detective McDuffee visited the premises this forenoon but could find no clue which could lead to identifying the person who fired the shot.

The police seem to be as much in danger of assassination as the crowned heads of Europe. A short time ago Hack Inspector Sam Macy had a similar experience to that of Leslie. Leslie's friends on the police force are of the opinion that the Lieutenant's popularity with the ladies has actuated some jealous rival to make an attempt on his life.

ESTEE'S HONORED CAREER

Judge Morris M. Estee was born in November 1836, coming from that good old sturdy Pennsylvania stock which has achieved so high a reputation all over the country. The little township of Freshold, Warren County, Pennsylvania, was his birthplace. When a mere child his parents moved to Concord, Erie county, in the same State, where his early life was that of the farmer boy of that period. There he imbibed the habits of industry and earnest, straightforward conduct which have always characterized his course in life. He attended the public schools and finally went to Waterford Academy, leaving there in 1853 to go to California when he was in his nineteenth year.

Early in the Spring of 1853 he set out for the west and in September of the same year his party, after the usual hardships and delays, reached California, where he commenced mining at Cold Springs, El Dorado County. From there he went to Volcano, Amador county. For two and a half years he pursued mining, but, having higher ambitions, in 1855 he began the study of law, entering the office of Judge F. M. Paulding, a fellow Pennsylvanian, and there he laid the foundation of his future.

THE WATCHRUNS COURT

DEAD SEAMAN'S EFFECT HAS EARNED A REPUTATION

BY THIS THE COURT ROOM CLOCK IS SET—AN EXAMPLE TO THE JUDICIARY TIME-PIECES.

One can rarely find two clocks in the Judiciary building which are of one mind as to the time of day. To begin with, the big clock in the tower is often off, requiring constant coaxing and encouragement. Even its four faces don't always agree, and then the old time-piece is at outs with itself like a two-faced man confronted unexpectedly with his bi-faciality.

Causes of irregularity in the tower clock are numerous, more numerous than the minute marks on its face. Once a mynah bird perched on the minute hand as it recorded the quarter-hour, and set it on seven minutes. Once a cheerful idiot, of the species which writes nonsense on white walls in jany rooms, let a string with a loop and a weight over the top of the tower and, catching the point of the minute hand after much industrious fishing, drew it taut and made it fast, causing the big hand to be held stationary for hours, until the string was removed. Usually, however, the large ticker's mistakes are due to very commonplace causes.

In the Supreme Court room an honest-looking, open-faced clock loafs by the hour—having nothing to do but "kill time". When Supreme Court is in session this clock is set to rights before the Justices take the bench. Now that the Territorial grand jury is holding sessions in this apartment it has to keep fairly straight, for the grand jurors are not wasting time.

Halliff Ellis is the guardian of the handsome mural time-recorder in Judge Gear's criminal court. He sets it every morning by his own pocket chronometer. By the way, why is it that a witness so often glances unconsciously at the court room clock when being questioned in regard to dates, days of the month, seasons, years? A prisoner, just sentenced, will sometimes stare, dazed, at the clock.

The clock in the United States Marshal's office has registered 9:52, whether a. m. or p. m., it is of course impossible to tell, for several days.

It is evidently out of order. U. S. Marshal E. R. Hendry and Deputy Winter have been so rushed with important work lately they probably have little time to spare settling clocks. Besides, they both carry handsome pocket pieces and invariably consult them when the question of the hour is concerned.

The time-piece of greatest reliability in the city (private gold watches and fobs here not considered as figuring in the competition), is a large, plain, silver-cased, old-fashioned watch in the office of the Clerk of the United States District Court. This watch was once the property of a sailor. Jack has no use for it now for he is where time is no more. "Jack has gone aloft."

When the owner was alive this faithful old time-piece, probably the only reminder of home and loved ones which he carried with him to sea, traveled thousands of miles with him over the oceans of the world. Then he set it by the sun. When the brave sailor went to his watery grave in the discharge of his perilous duties, his few effects were taken care of and later came into the hands of the Federal Court.

When the clerk's office is opened up in the morning the dead seaman's old silver watch, with identifying tag attached, is the first thing taken from the big safe. It is placed on the desk of Clerk W. B. Maling, open, and there remains all day, to be consulted by all in the office, to regulate the large clock on the wall, to correct the watches of many lawyers and others who, having business there, incidentally inquire as to the correct time.

It is required that all such articles in the keeping of the court shall be locked in the safe when the office is closed. Occasionally Mr. Maling will close the safe in the evening inadvertently leaving out the time-piece of the departed mariner. Then he remembers and needs must open the great steel box to put away the property of him who has exchanged time for eternity.

This faithful time-keeper controls the setting of the Federal court room clock, so that the time of the sitting of the United States Court is guided by an unhandsome but reliable old exhibit in the case of one who followed the sea and whom the sea has claimed. This modest watch is an example for the many big clocks in the Judiciary building which are always requiring attention and which never agree.

And so has the one faithful companion of a deep-sea sailor become the true friend of Justice.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you, anyway. If it fails it is free.

DEPUTY REGISTRAR BOYD WANTS SALARY

Having been refused his salary as deputy registrar of the land court, Robert N. Boyd appeals to the Supreme Court to settle between himself and Auditor Fisher, the latter basing his refusal on the ground that the appropriation of $22,500 is not available before January 1.

Lorria Andrews represents Boyd and W. O. Smith appears for the Auditor. Says the Auditor in a letter: "I regret to inform you that I cannot comply with your demand for the reason that the Legislature at its present session failed to make an appropriation out of which the same could be paid."

Boyd's statement to the Supreme Court is, in part, as follows: "Your appellant has become aggrieved by a decision of the Auditor refusing to allow a demand presented by the said R. N. Boyd, for salary, from July 29 to September 30, A. D. 1902. That he is and has been since the 29th day of July, A. D. 1903, the duly commissioned, qualified and acting deputy registrar of the Court of Land Registration.

That His Excellency, Sanford B. Dole, Governor, duly fixed the salary of said office to be fifteen hundred dollars per annum.

That said J. H. Fisher refused to deliver to said R. N. Boyd a salary warrant to cover said period or at all.

That R. N. Boyd again on October 15, demanded of Fisher as Auditor, salary warrants to cover the period of his employment from July 29 to 31, and from August 1 to September 30, and that J. H. Fisher refused to deliver to said R. N. Boyd or to any one warrants to cover said salary, claiming that there was and is no appropriation out of which the salary of the deputy registrar under the registrar of the court of land registration may be paid; that Act 19 of the extra session of 1903 makes no appropriation for the expenses of the land court; that Act 13 of said extra session appropriates $22,500 for such expenses under the Treasury Department; and says that said last named appropriation for expenses of said court of land registration is not available until January 1, 1904.

Your appellant alleges and claims that the said sums so appropriated are and become immediately available as appropriations for the payment of expenses of the said court from the time of the approval of the Act, July 11, 1903, and so continue during the full biennial period or until June 30, 1905, inclusive.

Wherefore your appellant takes this appeal, and prays that said appellee be commanded by their Honors the Justices aforesaid, to audit and allow the salary of appellant, as provided by law, for and during the period above set forth.

Dr. Shoop's RHEUMATIC CURE

COST NOTHING IF IT FAILS.

Any honest person who suffers from Rheumatism is welcome to this offer. I am a specialist in Rheumatism, and have treated more cases than any other physician, I think. For 15 years I made 2,000 experiments with different drugs, testing all known remedies while searching the world for something better. Nine years ago I found a costly chemical in Germany which, with my previous discoveries, gives me a certain cure.

I don't mean that it can turn bony joints into flesh again; but it can cure the disease at any stage, completely and forever. I have done it fully 100,000 times.

I know this so well that I will furnish my remedy on trial. Simply write me a postal for my book on Rheumatism, and I will mail you an order on your druggist for six bottles Dr. Shoop's Rheumatic Cure. Take it for a month at my risk. If it succeeds, the cost is only $5.50. If it fails, I will pay the druggist myself—and your mere word shall decide it.

I mean that exactly. If you say the results are not what I claim, I don't expect a penny from you.

I have no samples. Any mere sample that can affect chronic Rheumatism must be drugged to the verge of danger. I use no such drugs, and it is folly to take them. You must get the disease out of the blood.

My remedy does that even in the most difficult, obstinate cases. It has cured the oldest cases that I ever met. And in all my experience—in all my 2,000 tests—I never found another remedy that would cure one chronic case in ten.

Write me and I will send you the order. Try my remedy for a month, as it can't harm you, anyway. If it fails it is free.

GOVERNOR'S REPORT

FACTS AND FIGURES SENT TO SECRETARY OF INTERIOR

INCREASE IN THE VALUE OF SHIPMENTS OUT OF THE TERRITORY OVER PREVIOUS YEAR.

In his report to the Secretary of the Interior, Washington, Governor Dole gives the following information relative to Hawaii:

"There has been an increase in the value of shipments out of the Territory, not including specie, over last year of $1,481,703. The main part of this increase is in the one item of sugar, its increase in value over the shipments of the last period being $1,399,571. This is a decided improvement over the comparative statistics of the years ending June 30, 1901, and June 30, 1902, which show a falling off in the value of sugar shipped in the latter as compared with the former of $3,172,819.41, although the weight of sugar shipped in the latter year was greater than that shipped in the former by 29,574,125 pounds.

"The statistics for the last three periods show a steady increase in the production of sugar, the increase in the year ending June 30, 1903, of sugar shipped being 34,272,603 pounds over that of the previous year, and 89,291,186 pounds over that of the year ending June 30, 1901.

"The shipments of coffee show an increase of 729,456 pounds over the shipments of the previous period and a falling off of 689,615 pounds from the shipments of the year ending June 30, 1901. The shipments of coffee the past year were worth $119,216 more than the shipments of the year before, and $75,937 less than the shipments of the year ending June 30, 1901; all of which would indicate a partial recovery in this product from the depression of the year to June 30, 1902.

"Rice is inevitably a diminishing product, both from the competition of the new rice fields in Texas and Louisiana and the decreasing numbers of Chinese in the Territory."

The Governor's report shows that the total value of shipments received from the mainland for the year ending June 30, 1903, was $12,675,926, and the total value of imports from foreign countries was $3,142,913, making the total value of merchandise brought into Hawaii $15,818,839. The total value of articles exported from Hawaii to the mainland for the same year was $26,242,869, and to foreign countries $32,569, making the grand total $58,812,438.

Total value of Hawaiian products shipped to the mainland and foreign countries during the fiscal year is shown as follows: Sugar, raw, 774,825,429 lbs., $25,319,684; coffee, 1,939,554 lbs., $236,860; rice, 234,980 lbs., $19,220; fresh fruits, $66,398; honey, $15,424; hides, 917,603 lbs., $80,199; wool, raw, 364,794 lbs., $43,552; other articles, $464,876. Total value, $26,228,294.

The value of the carrying trade to and from Hawaii for the year mentioned was as follows:

Imports—American, $985,694; British, $1,114,988; French, $24,389; German, $351,328; Norwegian, $86,789; other, $578,200. Total, $3,142,913.

Exports—American, $26,261,663; British, $11,542; other, $2,793. Total, $26,275,438.

JUDGE MORRIS M. ESTEE.

Judge Estee is dead. The Territory of Hawaii has lost its greatest, most influential, most widely beloved citizen and official. No message to this community, to this Territory, could arouse more sincere, more heartfelt, sorrow than that which came from the bedside of the suffering Judge announcing that he had answered the call, that his life's work was finished.

Judge Morris M. Estee was a typical American, and to the people of this Territory, irrespective of class, personal or political affiliation, the ideal American. Coming to the Territory to fill one of its highest, if not the most important, offices in its administration, his first announcement to the people, the text of his official career, was "that American law is common justice". That this was true was not impressed upon the people by frequent repetition. It was exemplified in every line of his career. Judge Estee was loyal to his country; he was liberal; he was kind. He drew men to him not by seeking them but by the magnetism of justice in his dealings with every fellow-man. On the bench, in his public utterances, and in personal conversation the same spirit prevailed. He preached loyalty to our common country and its highest principles—and he lived it.

Coming to this Territory practically unknown except as he was known to all Americans as a national figure, Judge Estee won the hearts of the people by his kindly common sense. Children of every walk in life went to him for counsel and advice. The old resident, the native-born and the new-comer found in him a true friend and calm advisor. A new-comer himself, he was a keen, far-seeing observer, even-tempered and just in his judgments. Judge Estee once expressed the sentiment of his influence in these islands as regards the relation of the citizen to general affairs, when he said: "I believe a man is a kamaaina when he loves his neighbor."

Judge Estee had fought the battle of politics. He knew men. He sought out that which he believed was best in all men and judged and advised accordingly. He believed in independent, honest citizenship. He believed in Americanism.

Judge Estee has passed from earthly activity, but he will live in the life of this Territory as long as history is written and men look to the wise men of the past for the lessons to guide them in the future. Judge Estee has left an indelible imprint upon the character of this new American possession, which time can never dim. He has laid a foundation that is the corner-

JUDGE ESTEE'S REPORTS.

The first volume of United States Judge M. M. Estee's reports has just been issued, and by reason of the extent and variety of the matters discussed therein, and the evident care bestowed upon the investigations made, it is not too much to say that this volume constitutes a very valuable addition to legal and judicial literature. The most casual inspection of this book will show the wide range of Judge Estee's judicial work. Admiralty, bankruptcy, immigration, the rights and duties of aliens, the Chinese Exclusion Acts, intricate questions of Constitutional law, criminal law, customs controversies, damages, eminent domain, equity matters, the law of evidence, habeas corpus proceedings, matters affecting both Territorial and Federal courts, Hawaiian legislation, internal revenue cases, negligence cases, matters of pleading and practice, salvage, seamen, shipping, etc.—these are but some of the subjects to which attention was directed, and the degree of conscientious care with which they have been examined and treated establishes the permanent value of the views expressed.

The decisions reached in these cases are of the greatest interest. Many of them involve principles of the highest importance. Some turn upon the application of settled principles to the facts developed; while others bear out new paths through manifold and sometimes perplexing intricacies. Through them all, however, one cannot help but perceive that the learned author is something more than a mere bookworm—something broader than a legal pedant—for Judge Estee's saving common sense, coupled with his wide experience of the world of men and things, so permeates his professional learning that it is a most efficient instrument for getting at the center of things and doing there what ought to be done.

Few Judges can boast of the judicial record which is but partially exhibited here. During the three years' time represented by this book, case after case has gone up to the Court of Appeals, but in every instance, save one, Judge Estee's views have been approved. One case went to the Supreme Court at Washington, and, by the narrow margin possible, a different view was taken, but among the dissenting Judges are to be found the most weighty names of the court, while among the profession at large the consensus of opinion is with Judge Estee.

To have been a judicial pioneer, to have come to a new acquisition with an established jurisprudence of its own, to have there administered with signal success a somewhat novel body of law, and to have won the confidence, respect and esteem of the community by the manifest righteousness and sound learning of the decrees pronounced—surely all this is no small accomplishment. And yet, to his credit, he did it all this has been done within this Territory by its first Federal Judge Morris M. Estee.

GOOD WORK ON KAUALI

REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGNERS ARE TOURING THE COUNTY

JUDGE KAHELE IS MAKING FINE SPEECHES—CONEY'S ORCHESTRA—NEXT WEEK HANALEI.

Libue, Kauai, Oct. 21.—The Republican campaigners consisting of Coney's orchestra of ten pieces, the entire list of candidates on the Republican ticket and Judge Kahele and W. H. Rice, Jr., of Libue, and Mr. Ferry of Koloa, on Monday last went to Kekaha, holding a meeting there in the afternoon of Monday, at Waimea in the Social Hall in the evening; at Senator Nakapahu's residence on Tuesday afternoon; at Hanapepe school house on Tuesday evening; at Koloa on Wednesday evening, and at Libue Social Hall on Saturday evening. At all of these places the largest gathering of voters ever called together to listen to political speeches on this island, were assembled to hear Republican arguments by the various candidates and others, Mr. W. H. Sheldon of Waimea is the Republican interpreter and Mr. Ferry interprets the speeches into Portuguese. Rousing, effective speeches were made by all the candidates and by Judge Kahele of Libue, and by Senator Nakapahu and Mr. Crowell of Waimea at that place, and by Judge Kapahele at Koloa. Special mention of Judge Kahele's speeches should be made, as he makes perhaps the finest native speeches ever listened to on Kauai. Coney's orchestra adds greatly to the attractiveness of the campaign, assisting in attracting audiences and entertaining them before and between speeches.

Next week the campaigners go to Hanalei, from which place they will work their way around to Libue.

The Supervisors and the County attorney candidates are the only ones having opposition in this island.

IROQUOIS FOR MIDWAY

The U. S. S. Iroquois arrived last night after the cruise in search of the missing boat from the Connetable de Richmond. As these men were picked up by the Mikahala her search was of course fruitless.

The Iroquois will sail for Midway Island Thursday to bring back the shipwrecked crew of the schooner Julia E. Whalen. The Iroquois will also take Prof. Morse of the U. S. Coast and Geodetic Survey to Midway, where he is to do longshore work.

Detroit, Mich., will exhibit a papier mache reproduction of Belle Isle at the World's Fair. A display of large paintings of many of the city's leading manufacturing plants will also be made.

The Ivory chair and footstool presented to Queen Victoria by the Maharajah of Travancore will be among the royal jubilee presents exhibited at the World's Fair.

HILO FRUIT CANNERY. HILO POLITICAL WORK.

Hilo, Oct. 23.—Mr. C. H. Bentley of San Francisco, representing the California Fruit Cannery Association, is in the city canvassing the possibilities of the establishment of a fruit cannery in Hilo or vicinity. The association already has over thirty factories in the State of California and seeks a location in the islands, where pineapples, guavas and other tropical fruit can be successfully put up. They are prepared, provided they receive the proper encouragement and support, to build a cannery with an output of 50,000 cases. He finds the climate and soil adapted to growing pineapples and the pines grown here are as fine in flavor and quality as can be found anywhere. If he can make contracts with growers for a term of five or more years the association will feel warranted in going to the expense of erecting a factory. This is one of the fields open to the small farmer, and there are many individual growers of this and other island fruits whose products could be utilized if such a factory were established.

Mr. Bentley is brimming over with facts and figures in regard to the industry, which has been to a great extent neglected in the islands. A meeting of the Hilo Agricultural Society will be held at the office of Mr. Chas. Furneaux on Saturday at 1 p.m. when all members are invited to attend and meet Mr. Bentley.

An immense plaster model of the new union station in Washington, D. C. will be shown in the Transportation building at the World's Fair.

Hilo, Oct. 23.—Fully five hundred people gathered at the corner of Church and Front streets last Saturday evening to hear the principles of Republicanism expounded by the candidates for various county offices and other campaign speakers. The Hilo band, led by a flaming transparency bearing the party mottoes, paraded the main streets and played selections before and between speeches. Mr. W. C. Cook of Paipaku presided as chairman of the meeting and in turn introduced the several candidates and speakers, among whom were the following: Representative Jas. D. Lewis, George H. Williams, candidate for County Assessor; C. A. Stoble, candidate for County Treasurer; Jos. Viera, W. H. Lambert and S. L. Desha, candidates for Supervisors; all of whom spoke briefly and to the point. Mr. Chas. M. LeBlond made a telling speech, sparkling with wit and wisdom, acquired from long years of experience as a political stump speaker. As a Democrat, however, he said he felt it his duty to vote and support the ticket which stood for stability, honesty and integrity—which the Republican nominees in this campaign represented. His remarks were listened to closely and were received with a round of applause. Other speakers on the platform were Sheriff Andrews, E. N. Holmes, W. S. Wise, W. H. Smith and Ben Brown.

Virginia will make an extensive exhibit of tobacco at the World's Fair. The display will comprise Virginia tobacco in every form from the seed to the finished product, arranged in the most artistic manner possible and surrounded by all kinds of machinery and tools used in handling and working the weed.

SHORT STORY FOR EVENING HOURS

THE CHARGE OF PERKINS

(By Stephen Crane.)

He could not distinguish between a five-inch quick-firing gun and nickel-plated leopold, and so, naturally, he had been elected to fill the position of war correspondent. The responsible party was the editor of the Minnesota Herald. Perkins had no information of war and no particular rapidity of mind for acquiring it, but he had that kind and nervous quality of courage which springs from the thick soil of Western America.

It was morning in Guantanamo Bay. If the marines encamped in the hill had had time to turn their gaze seaward they might have seen a small newspaper dispatch boat wending its way toward the entrance of the harbor over the blue sunlit waters of the Caribbean. In the stern of this tug Perkins was seated upon some coil bags, while the breeze gently ruffled his greasy pajamas. He was staring at a brown line of entrenchments, surmounted by a flag, which was Camp McCalla. In the harbor were anchored two or three grim, gray cruisers and a transport. As the tug steamed up the radiant channel Perkins could see men moving on shore near the charred ruins of a village. Perkins was deeply moved; here already was more war than he had ever known in Minnesota. Presently he, clothed in the essential garments of a war correspondent, was rowed to the sandy beach. Marines in yellow linen were handling an ammunition supply. They paid no attention to the visitor, being morose from the inconvenience of two days and nights of fighting. Perkins toiled up the zig-zag path to the top of the hill and looked with eager eyes at the trenches, the field pieces, the funny little Colts, the flag, the grim marines lying wearily on their arms. And still more, he looked through the clear air over 1000 yards of mysterious woods from which emanated at inopportune times repeated rucks of Mauser bullets.

Perkins was delighted. He was filled with admiration for these jaded and smoky men who lay so quietly in the trenches waiting for a resumption of guerrilla enterprise. But he wished they would heed him. He wanted to talk about it. Save for sharp inquiring glances no one acknowledged his existence. Finally he approached two young Lieutenants and in his innocent Western way he asked them if they would like a drink. The effect on the two young Lieutenants was immediate and astonishing. With one voice they answered "Yes, we would." Perkins almost wept with joy at this amiable response, and he exclaimed that he would immediately board the tug and bring off a bottle of Scotch. This attracted the officers and in a burst of confidence one explained that there had not been a drop in camp. Perkins lugged down the hill and fled to his boat, where in his exuberance he engaged in a preliminary altercation with some whiskey. Consequently he toiled again up the hill in the blasting sun with his enthusiasm in no ways abated. The parched officers were very gracious and such was the state of mind of Perkins that he did not note properly how serious and solemn was his engagement with the whiskey. And because of this fact, and because of his antecedents, there happened the long charge of William B. Perkins.

Now, as Perkins went down the hill something happened. A private in those high trenches found that a cartridge was clogged in his rifle. It becomes necessary with most kinds of rifles to explode the cartridge. The private took the rifle to his captain and explained the case. But it would not do in that camp to fire a rifle for mechanical purposes and without warning because the eloquent sound of it would bring 600 tried marines to tension, and high expectancy. So the captain turned and in a loud voice announced to the camp that he found it necessary to shoot in the air. The communication rang sharply from voice to voice. Then the captain raised the weapon and fired. Whereupon—and whereupon—a large line of guerrillas lying in the bushes decided swiftly that their presence and position were discovered and swiftly they withdrew.

In a moment the woods and the hills were alive with the crack and sputter of rifles. Men on the warships in the harbor heard the old familiar flutter-flutter-flutter—flutter—flutter—flutter from the entrenchments. Incidentally the launch of the Marblehead, commanded by one of our headlong American ensigns, streaked from the strategic woods like a galloping marine dragoon, peppering away with its blunderbuss in the bow.

Perkins had arrived at the foot of the hill, where began the arrangement of 150 marines that protected the shore line of communication between the main body and the beach. These men had all swarmed into line behind fortifications improvised from the boxes of provisions. And to them were gathered naked men who had been bathing, naked men who arrayed themselves speedily in cartridge belts and rifles. The woods and the hills went flutter-flutter-flutter-flutter—flutter—flutter—flutter. Under the loughs of a beautiful tree lay five wounded men, thinking vividly.

And now it befell Perkins to discover a Spaniard in the bush. The distance was some 500 yards. In a loud voice he announced his perception. He also declared hoarsely that if he only had a rifle he would go and possess himself of that particular enemy. Immediately an amiable lad shot in the arm said: "Well, take mine." Perkins thus acquired a rifle and a clip of five cartridges.

"Come on!" he shouted. This part of the battalion was lying very tight, not yet being engaged, but not knowing when the business would whirl around to them.

To Perkins they replied with a roar: "Come back here, you fool. Do you want to be shot by your own crowd? Come back. —" As a detail it might be mentioned that the fire from a part of the hill swept the journey upon which Perkins had started.

Now, behold the solitary Perkins adrift in the storm of fighting, even as a champagne jacket of straw is lost in a great surf. He found it out quickly. Four seconds elapsed before he discovered that he was an almost-hopeless idiot plunging through hot, crackling thickets on a June morning in Cuba. Sss-sss-swinging-sing-pop went the lightning-swift metal grasshoppers over him and beside him. The lieutenant of rural Minnesota illuminated his conscience with the gold of lazy corn, with the cathedral green or meadows, with the cathedral gloom of pine forests. Sshshshshshsingpop! Perkins decided that if he cared to extract himself from a tangle of imbecility he must shoot. It was necessary that he must shoot. Nothing would save him but shooting. It is a law that men must decide when the waters of battles close over their minds. So with a prayer, that the Americans would not hit him in the back nor the left side and that the Spaniards would not hit him in the front he knelt like a supplicant alone in the desert of chaparral and emptied his magazine at his Spaniard before he discovered that his Spaniard was a bit of dried palm branch.

Then Perkins flurried like a fish. His reason for being was a Spaniard in the brush. When the Spaniard turned into a dried palm branch, he could no longer furnish himself with one adequate reason.

Then did he dream frantically of some anthracite hiding place, some profound dungeon of peace where blind mice lived placidly chewing the far-flung hay.

"Sss-swinging-win-pop. Prut - prut - prut." Then a field-gun spoke. Boom-ra-snow-ow-ow-ow-pum." Then a coil automatic began to bark. "Crack - crk-crck-crck" endlessly. Raked, enflamed, flanked, surrounded and overwhelmed, what hope was there for William B. Perkins of the Minnesota Herald?

But war is a spirit. War provides for those that it loves. It provides sometimes death and sometimes a singular and incredible safety. There were few ways in which it was possible to preserve Perkins. One way was by means of a steam boiler.

Perkins espied near him an old, rusty steam boiler lying in the bushes. War only knows how it was there, but there was, a temple shining resplendent with safety. With a moan of haste Perkins flung himself through that hole which expressed the absence of the steam-pipe.

Then encased in his boiler Perkins comfortably listened to the ring of a fight which seemed to be in the air above him. Sometimes bullets struck their strong, swift blow against the boiler's sides, but none entered to interfere with Perkins' rest.

Time passed. The fight, short anyhow, dwindled to prut, * * * prut * * * prut-prut * * * prut. And when the silence came Perkins might have been seen cautiously protruding from the boiler. Presently he stroled back toward the marines with his hat not able to fit his head for the new bumps of wisdom that were on it.

The marines, with an annoyed air, were settling down again when an apparitional figure came from the bushes. There was a great excitement. "It's that crazy man," he shouted, and as he drew near they gathered tumultuously about him and demanded to know how he had accomplished it. Perkins made a gesture, the gesture of a man escaping from an unintentional mud bath, the gesture of a man coming out of battle, and then he told them.

The incredulity was immediate and general. "Yes, you did. What? In an old boiler? An old boiler. Out in that brush? Well, we guess not." They did not believe him until two days later when a patrol happened to find the rusty boiler, relic of some

Trailing the Ladron In the Wild Regions of Luzon

Santa Cruz on The Laguna, via Calamba, Sept. 13.—"Ever trail Injun?" "No." "Thought not. First place, you're too young; second—well, 'twouldn't have been in your line, nowhow." "This is nothing like it, I imagine." "Not a patch—only the trailing. But, then, that the trailing brought you to something, whereas this?—no, it was fighting and no mistake in Mountaina twenty years ago." Lieutenant Robert M. Smith, Thirtieth Company of Philippine Scouts, has his eyes leveled over the barrel of his six-shooter as he tosses off the last comment. The weather-worn face of this leader of brown-hued Ilocanos is stamped by a "thought of the past" look. He is thinking of the campfires of three-and-a-score years ago, when he shook hands with his comrade, Clarke, for the last time. Then they have just "done up" the noble red man of the Little Big Horn. Now, they meet once more in a creaking hipa shack at Suplan, on the slope of Mount Sungal. Both are lieutenants of scouts, both on the trail—as of yore. Clarke is rolled up in a blanket, snoring, as only a dog-tired Scout can snore. He was busy with Montana in the morning at dawn, all through the warm Luzon day, and long after the sun had gone to bed, or somewhere else. Away on the eastern horizon the big orb is already throwing forward his advance guard of fiery flashes, clearing the cold gray and deep purple, easting off then nocturnal counterpane.

from the wakeful one. He was the last of Sitting Bull. "This isn't fighting," I wedged in. A shake of the head is the answer, and then: "No; it's a bit like fighting. Yer boots are worn out trailing 'em over rocks, an' through slime an' thorns; yer broiled out by the sun, boiled in the mud, an' bitten by skeeters,—for what? Only to get up with a pack of skulking hobos, which won't face a shot. When you come on 'em they blaze away an' run before you can see anything to empty even a revolver into." "But you have all the pleasure of the chase," I observe, with a laugh. "Think so?" He smiles grimly. "Yes; sore feet, dirty water, an' disappointment." He rolls over on his blanket and I take a look outside. The thatched huts of the little pueblo reecho the pulsating notes of fatigued sleepers, making the most of the precious moments of rest because all must "pull out" when the cock shakes his feathers clear of the dew and bids the sun good morning. The militant brownies sleep clasping their rifles. Under the hard, ready-made pillows of the whites—the officers—is either a revolver or a rifle. From the burning logs in front of the sentinels a low murmur comes. It is Greek to me—yet it tells me one thing—how alert, how reliable, these native troopers are; seldom are they found napping at their posts. The morning call has sounded, and rebellious eyes are rubbed into wakefulness. All are up. The logs sputter and sparkle in the still uncertain light; coffee is boiled and some broken biscuits, canned meats and chicken fragments which have a peculiar bouquet about them—a cross between the odor of a cheap Chinese restaurant and that of a fishing beach when the tide is out,—are served up on the towel, which is utilized as a tablecloth. Don't drink all the coffee in that tin! It has got to go around them all. And please be easy on the chicken. It is the creme de la creme of the menu. And now the order is given to "Fall in," and in Indian file. The column moves down the slope of Sungal, heading for the upland defiles of Gonzales. Clarke stays behind to look after the three trails which intercept at Suplan; but without him we are over 250 strong. Lieutenant Simms, with Governor Cailles, have fifty-five men, of Constabulary and Police from Santa Cruz and the posts along the south end of The Laguna. Simms is a "Mormon," or to be more exact, he hails from Utah. Lieutenant McCoy, a Minnesota stripling, walks at the head of forty Constabulary. Lieutenants Brooks and Hutchinson, the latter a big child of Chicago and a son of "Ole Virginny," lead sixty-five of the Seventh Company "Maes"; Lieutenant Pinlayson, who hails from Alabama, and who was at the death of San Miguel, has eighty of the First Company of Scouts, and Lieutenant Smith tramps with twenty-two Ilocanos, who, having walked the soles off their footgear, are still wearing for the trail.

Hudson, complete the outfit. A queer sight we make, following the winding path over the mountain chain, while the head of the long-drawn human line is scrambling up the face of the gross grown eminence, the middle almost buried in the long grasses of the hollow, stumbling through the prickly undergrowth of the ravine. The column stumbles on through the eddies of mountain stream bounding in the mud, or tripping over the long, playful twigs. But, look at the tail! It is a concatenation of brown faces and glistening rifle barrels, with here and there, the sallow "physog" of a weather-bronzed white man. Straw hats, campaign caps, headgear of all sorts and shapes—down the treacherous slope they come, rushing headlong, now and then tripping over one another; but "getting forward" steadily, all the time. In this fashion we climb Little and Big Gonzales—which the map defines as two mountains, whereas, in fact, they are not separate entities, but the minor and major points of one huge hill. I can only think of one of military maps equal in point of inaccuracy to those which the Scout and Constabulary have—for topographical guidance.—General Buller's remarkable outfit in Natal. Lieutenant Corliss, with Lieutenant Blanchard, and sixty-two Scouts, met us on the crest of Gonzales, and here a halt is called, and we enjoy a magnificent view. On the one side is spread out the hillside surface of Cavite with the checkerboard of rice paddies, and rich olive-hued copes; the now placid waters of Manila Bay, the little black puffs of smoke from the steamers (diminutive specks on a crystal field), the long shore-line of Bataan and the towering peak of Mari-veles—beyond all, the silver-green line on the horizon, the China Sea.—and on the other side, set in a sylvan frame of papaya, or almond, and the rose and azure-tinted Kala-Danah,—the deep semi-circular valley in which the mountain, on the top of which we stand, grids the borderland of three provinces, Laguna, Batangas, and Cavite. It is a wildly picturesque panorama—a veritable Garden of Eden. Between the lowland barrios and the verdure-clad Lake of Taal, with its volcano islet in the center, is a deep-set gorge—a yawning pit, clothed in long grass and clinging vine, with interesting tall trees (the bark of which when finely powdered, is used by the natives as a cure for asthma, chest affections and body pains and malarial fevers). The chasm and the rich virgin scenery beyond it point a moral. All through the disturbed region, from Santa Cruz to Dasmariñas, every inch of which I have traversed, I have been confronted by one solemn fact—the traces of once tolerably decent roads, the preserved or ruined remnants of public buildings, the still apparent partition of woodland and field, speak of a period of culture that has been. But the dank weeds which stifle and strange the lesser vegetable growth, running a wild, unguided course; the grass-hidden lines of the roadway; the faded stucco of the church and civil edifices; the vine-covered gable-end; the now refuge of bats and night birds; the overturned trees blocking the trail through the forest, the at-most complete absence of farming signs of any sort tell of the reign of barbarism which is. Nature blessed these hills and dales, giving of her store with a lavish grace but, for several generations, the hand of fertilizing, pruning man has lain idly by, declining to put in those utilitarian touches, without which any landscape in a country peopled by civilized beings, falls upon the sight of the thinking observer. I have had the good fortune to come across one or two Filipinos who converse in English with a certain amount of facility, and whose minds are broad in proportion. They tell me that when the monastic orders were in power here, the natives cultivated the lands generously and the fields that are now so many barren wastes, blossomed with crops in flower. But a rude change came with the era of friction between the clerical and the lay elements, and, during the years immediately preceding the American advent, no effort was made to save the pueblos from the rude hand of the spoiler. The ladron has been the scourge of Luzon, and of the other islands of the archipelago, for that matter. He has terrorized agriculture off a big slice of Luzon's richest soil. When he is run to earth, the veil of the pestilence will be lifted,—then, but not until then. At Outlet we met Lieutenants Corliss and Blanchard, and a force of sixty-two Scouts. Word was received through a native hawker that the outlaws were moving in the direction of Silang, so, leaving Governor Cailles, Lieutenant Simms and the Santa Cruz force to patrol the

STORY OF LEHUA'S TRIP AFTER BOATS

The steamer Lehua commenced the first portion of her intended cruise after the missing boat's crew of the French ship Connetable de Richemont, by taking her departure from Kaunakakai, Molokai, at 6:10 a. m. on the 22d inst.

In conformity with the expressed wish of Captain Rault of the wrecked vessel, who had the superintendence of the movements of the Lehua in her search cruise, an extended run, direct south, was made, this first leg being completed under light trade and smooth sea, a distance of about 102 miles being covered and which allowed a diametrical view of, estimated, forty miles.

Captain Rault was satisfied that the southerly run thus made would place the missing boat between the Lehua and the land if they had come to the eastward, and, by his instructions, Captain Hennings and Mate Christensen, the navigators for the cruise, changed direction to a northwest course. This run covered eight hours, distance covered being forty miles, when change was again made to a southwest course. During this latter run, which covered four hours in time and twenty miles, arrangements were made to provide for a sharp and constant lookout. Even Purser George Burningham and The Bulletin representative being detailed for watch duty.

On this first night out the elements became more boisterous, a heavy northeast swell with confused sea being apparent, while the light northeast air strengthened to moderate trade.

At 8 a. m. on the 23d, the course was again changed to northwest, and after a run of four hours was changed to west. Hope of rescuing the missing mariners gradually faded as the wind and sea became more evident in their turbulence, even the usually steady Lehua rolling and pitching in a most uncomfortable manner.

Shortly before noon of the 23d the little steamer encountered heavy rain squalls with accompanying heavier seas. Consultation was held by Captain Rault with the navigators and it was decided to shape a course for the island of Kauai with Waimea as the prospective point.

During most of the day and night of the 23d strong northerly winds, heavy swells and high, confused sea prevailed.

At 3:30 a. m. on the 24th, Kauai was seen and at 10 a. m. the steamer dropped anchor off Waimea. The latitude run down to was 19 degrees 32 minutes north, the longitude being that of Kaunakakai, viz.: 157 degrees 21 minutes 45 seconds west.

The hoped-for continuation of the trip of the Lehua to the Shoals was rudely broken by the information being conveyed to Captain Napala by, said to be, wireless message, that he was to return immediately to Honolulu. Orders were obeyed and at 1 p. m. departure was made from Waimea for Honolulu, arriving back at 5:45 a. m. Sunday. On arrival Captain Tom Clarke, superintendent of the Wilder Steamship Co. evinced surprise and stated that a wireless had been sent by the company to Waimea instructing the Lehua to continue her cruise to the northwest, as there was still a missing boat.

Consul Raas being communicated with gave added instructions for the Lehua to put to sea again, coursing the windward side of Oahu and proceeding to the northwest. Captain Rault was left on shore, his swollen limbs not being benefited by the bone-racking motion of the Lehua although he made no complaint, but Consul Raas deemed that the Captain had fully done his duty in the search voyage.

The Lehua started on a second cruise of search Sunday at 9:30 a. m. She was to go to Waimanalo, whence she is to zigzag to the westward and go around Kauai and Nihoa.

B. A. P. FLOODED WITH ANSWERS

Riding an ostrich and guessing at a puzzle are similar in some respects, you never know when you are "on," or "off."

But that is the object of a puzzle, to keep you guessing, and the more you guess the more proficient you become in the art of solving.

At the close of the B. A. P. contest the name of the winner will be published in the Bulletin together with his answer. If space permits some of the more clever interpretations will also be published. Any suggestions to B. A. P. on the ground of entertainment like his Prize Puzzle will be gladly received for future consideration.

There are only five days more in which to do your guessing. If you have guessed before you have another guess. There is no cost to you and you are rewarded, as is stated in the body of the puzzle, for your guess—if you win.

Let all who have not thus far meditated on the enigma sit down in the quiet of home tonight and "dig." It will do you no harm and perhaps lots of good. Send all replies to B. A. P., care the Bulletin.

KANIELA RESPONSIBLE CORONER'S JURY REPORTS ON PUULOA DEATH

DRUNKEN ROW THAT ENDED FATALITY—EVIDENCE GIVEN BEFORE JURY BY EYE-WITNESSES.

The coroner's inquest in the matter of the death of Kaniela, the native who killed in a fight at Puuloa last Sunday, was held at Puuloa yesterday, Deputy Sheriff Fernandez acting as coroner.

Dr. Chas. A. Davis, Territorial physician of Ewa District, stated that an examination of the body of Kaniela showed that several heavy blows had been inflicted upon his torso and back. He also found the face congested to blackness with blood running from mouth and ear on movement of the head. The left ear had been partly bitten or cut off. The lungs were dark and congested. The heart was full of coagulated blood. The general post-mortem conditions indicate strangulation.

Kahana Pinao, one of the women who were present when the row started, stated that it began when Daniel Nuanu grabbed Kaniela's hand and tried to hit it against the wall. Failing to do it he punched Kaniela, who asked what was the matter. Daniel said: "Come on, come on," and hit him in the face. This happened on the veranda of the house but they soon got outside the house where they went on fighting. This was all the witness saw as she became frightened and ran into the house.

Kanama, another of the women present, was the principal witness. She stated that coming out from her house she saw Kaniela lying on the ground, face down. Daniel was lying on top of him sitting on his back. He had his left hand around Kaniela's throat and was punching his head with his right. She also saw Daniel hit Kaniela's ear. Kaniela was crying out for help. He also called out to Daniel to stop. Daniel told witness that if she came near him she would get hit with him. Witness called out for help. Two girls, Loke and Marie, and a man, Awa, responded to her call. Awa lifted Daniel up from Kaniela. Daniel tried to push Awa away but Awa managed to put him outside the gate. Witness did not think that Daniel was drunk.

Loke and Marie, the two girls who came to the scene in answer to the call for help, both stated that while they saw Daniel on top of Kaniela they did not see any choking or punching, since they were afraid and immediately ran away. Awa testified that he had seen Daniel under the influence of liquor a few hours previous to the fight. When he was called to the scene of the trouble he saw Daniel sitting on Kaniela, who was lying on the ground face down. He did not see Daniel's hands. Awa took him away and managed to push him outside the gate. Here Daniel asked for a smoke and on being given one he went away. Witness picked up Kaniela and took him into the house placing him on a bed. As he turned him over he noticed that Kaniela was very still. On investigating Awa found that Kaniela was dead. He then notified the neighbors of this fact.

David Pitt stated that he came to the place where the fight was going on on hearing Kaniela's cries for help. Witness saw Daniel sitting on top of the deceased. He had his left hand on Kaniela's throat and was punching him with his right. Witness went to Daniel and told him: "Pau, pau." He answered: "If you come near me I will kill you right here and lay you both out dead." Awa then came and took Daniel away.

The jury returned the following verdict: "That Kaniela came to his death from the choking and punching received on his body by the hands of Kaniela (Daniel) at Puuloa on Oct. 25, 1903."
