THE SUGAR MARKET.

A Ray of Hope.

The weekly review of Willett & Hamlen, dated New York, November 4th, has the following concerning the statistical position and prospects of the Sugar trade: "As October 1st is the close of all crop years, it appears that the consumption of Sugar in the world for the twelve months—October, 1885, to October, 1886—was 114,302 tons more than the production of the world, plus a surplus of invisible stock which is conceded to have been in second hands on October 1, 1885, in excess of such surplus stock of October 1, 1886, of at least 200,000 tons; that is, the actual consumption of the year was 314,402 tons more than the production. The increased consumption of sugar for the coming twelve months should be at least 150,000 tons, which might be apparently increased by 100,000 to 150,000 tons if the sentiment of dealers changed to carrying larger actual requirements of the coming twelve months are at least 464,000 tons and possibly 600,000 tons more than the production of the past twelve months. Against this we have an estimated increase of the Beet crop of 350,000 tons, of the Cuba crop of 60,000 tons, of the British West India crop of 30,000 tons, of the Brazil crop of 50,000 tons, and deficiencies in Louisiana crop of 30,000 tons, and in Mauritius and some other crops of say 20,000 tons, and 30,000 tons of Philippines sugar less afloat for United States of last crop, but included in stocks on hand. The sum of these figures gives estimated increased production for twelve months of 440,000 tons against increased requirements of 464,000 tons and possible requirements of 600,000 tons. There is great doubt, also, about Russia allowing a bounty on exports, the absence of which will be equivalent to a reduction in production of 65,000 to 100,000 tons of sugar for the consuming countries. Under these conditions there would seem to be no good basis for the most extraordinary depression now existing in the sugar market, which has broken the price of Sugar to lower than the lowest prices of the century, and nearly 1c per pound below prices of a year ago, when the actual statistical position was much worse than the statistical outlook is at the present time. The improvement noticeable in general business, and affecting all articles of merchandise except sugar, cannot much longer withhold its influence upon the value of an article of such prime necessity, and an improvement of at least 1c per pound can be confidently looked for during the coming twelve months. The first half of 1887 will show a large increase in consumption of foreign sugar in the United States. There has been no further decline during the week, and sellers are generally rather firmer in their pretensions, in view of the depth to which prices have already been depressed. Home consumption is fairly satisfactory, in view of the marketing of the domestic crop now beginning. Export demand has virtually ceased with the enforcing of the new bounty conditions from November 1st. Stock in all hands is reduced 7,574 tons for the week. Beet crop estimates remain unchanged, by M. Licht, at 380,000 tons over last year's. The New York stock contains very little of high grade, being made up mostly of low grade sugar, which should rapidly diminish when the demand for it begins. Cost and freight business is neglected.

It is easier for an eye to go through the camel of a needle than for a woman who writes for the papers to get off a pun without italicizing it.

Personal.

Mr. Griffin, United States Consul at Sydney, was among those ashore from the mail steamer last evening, being on the way back to his post after a visit home.

His Excellency G. W. Merrill, American Minister Resident here, is reported at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, after a trip through the State.

Mr. Ballingall, who put up at the Hotel yesterday, is an Hon., a Col., a great hotel man and the main spring of a newspaper—that is, its banker. He is now on a tour of the world. To the writer he expressed himself as agreeably surprised at the size of Honolulu and the beauty of the suburbs and Kapiolani Park.

Mr. James McLean, a professor in Ballarat College, Australia, took a good view of the city during the stay of the steamer. He was an able contributor about ten years ago to a weekly paper conducted "down East" by the editor of the HERALD. The present trip is the "home stretch" for him from a vacation tour in Europe, Egypt and Palestine, with a visit to his old home.

Hotel Arrivals.

J. Macdonald Cameron, M. P., Edward Naves, Henry Studard, James Pain and Sydney G. Hinton, London, England; P. G. Ballingall, Ottumwa, Iowa; H. J. Gibson, Auburn, Minnesota; W. B. Chaffery, wife and three children, and B. C. Shepherd, Ontario, Cal.; Hugh Calder, Greymouth, N. Z.; J. W. Whitson, New Zealand; W. L. Cunningham, Andrew W. Nash, W. Walker Simpson, Stephen Mills, Grey J. Lamb O'Neill, Miss E. A. Lamb O'Neill, T. M. O'Neill, H. Buck, J. G. Edwards, David Davis and W. Lovel Davis, Sydney; T. J. Dibbin and wife, Australia; Julian Thomas, Melbourne Argus; Howard W. Berry, C. W. Halkyard and Geo. W. Francis, Melbourne; Wm. Kirk, Townsville, Queensland; N. T. Collins, Gunning, N. S. W.

Wailua Notes.

On Friday evening, 26th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Damon held a mission service for the Chinese in Mr. Halstead's mill. Between 30 and 40 Chinamen were present, besides a large number of Portuguese and white folks. The Chinese were very quiet and attentive, so we trust good results may ensue.

The grass, which had begun to grow rapidly after the late rain, seems likely to be all devoured by millions of caterpillars which are paying us a visit.

Mr. Churchill's friends will be glad to hear that he has sufficiently improved his health to allow of his return to work.

Owing to the rain and mud the Government school was closed Monday and Tuesday.

Fel! Among Thieves.

The Call has an account of an attempted murder and robbery committed on Thomas Wallace, a Hawaiian Islander, by a notorious convict, Jack Cooney, and an accomplice. They invited him to a room in the California Hotel, and after treating him liberally to beer fell upon him and robbed him of his watch and money. Wallace resisted and was seriously slashed about the face and throat in the struggle. The victim was sent to hospital, and Cooney arrested. Another paper says Wallace was mate of the whaler Northern Star.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1886.

LOCAL NEWS.

The festivities of the King's jubilee birthday are over.

Mr. H. E. Avery, barrister, has gone to San Francisco on the schooner Rosario from Kahului.

The O. S. S. Australia will sail from San Francisco for this port on December 8th, and be due here on the 15th.

A row of three two-story wooden tenements, all of a size and shape, is building on the new street below Maunakea, near the harbor.

The Mariposa's through passengers took advantage very generally and freely of the opportunity of seeing Honolulu and its environs.

The "chestnut bell" has reached Honolulu, and now shall the proverb be verified in the midst of us, "As the bell tinketh so the fool thinketh."

A supply of Smith's Planetary Almanac and Weather Guide for 1887 has arrived and will be found at the bookstores this afternoon. It contains calculations of the proper time for planting in the Hawaiian Islands, according to the theory of "Lunar Influence on Vegetation."

Captain Clark, of the King's Own, yesterday received one hundred dollars in gold coin from His Majesty, for that company, in recognition of the excellence of its performances at the competitive drill on Saturday. It is claimed, on behalf of the corps, that they went through more maneuvers and executed all much better than last year.

A Recent Sojourner.

Robert Crichton, a former book-keeper of the Odd Fellows' Bank, who was arrested recently for embezzlement on his return from a sojourn in Honolulu, failed to appear when his case was called by Judge Murphy to-day. His bonds were declared forfeited and a bench warrant for his arrest was issued. Simon Hamburg of 1708 Clay street, and Walter Neustadt of 646 Stevenson street have each promised to pay the State $3,000 in case of Crichton's permanent absence.—S. F. Bulletin.

State Dinner.

Last evening the State Dinner, last item on the programme of the Jubilee festivities, came off at Iolani Palace. Those present included, besides His Majesty and retinue, the Ministers of the Crown, members of the Judiciary, foreign representatives, legislators, etc. Mr. Bartlett, manager of the Hawaiian Hotel, was caterer on the occasion, attending personally to the service. After the dinner the night was spent in merry making of song and dance.

Last of the Series.

Last evening the last of the series of three billiard matches between Morris and McCleery was played at the Commercial billiard room, and resulted like the other two in victory for Morris, who thereby takes a purse of $100 in addition to the prizes for all the matches. There were several heavy runs, including the brilliant scores of 463 by Morris and 378 by McCleery. The latter was 898 when the game was lost. Following is the score of the 31 innings played by both:

Morris—2, 1, 1, 3, 463, 0, 3, 3, 2, 4, 0, 0, 0, 15, 185, 3, 0, 2, 5, 43, 2, 0, 10, 2, 31, 142, 2, 9, 0, 1, 66—1,000; average 32.57.

McCleery—0, 1, 7, 154, 1, 0, 4, 4, 9, 2, 0, 4, 23, 0, 18, 5, 0, 1, 0, 9, 1, 129, 0, 124, 5, 2, 378, 0, 16, 1, 0—898; average 25.74.

SIDE LIGHTS.

West, Dow & Co., whose large holiday announcement appeared in the HERALD yesterday for the first time, make a fine exhibition of furniture, musical instruments from pianos down, pictures, bric-a-brac, fancy goods for use and ornament, Christmas cards, toys, etc. The wonder is how they managed to display such a large and varied stock to such excellent advantage. Early callers will have the more ample choice in the order of their coming for purely holiday goods; as the wise merchant at this season wants to clear off that class of stock, leaving as little as possible to hold over till next year. Even in the line of this firm's regular trade, the public must be reminded that it is less than four weeks till Christmas, and fresh importations cannot be obtained in Honolulu at a week's notice.

Those Beauty's Bower Cigars of McCleery's cannot be beaten.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unequalled."

If you want to know all the news you must read the HERALD.

SUPREME COURT.

Before Judd, C. J., Monday, November 29th.

In re estate of Alina (Ch.) of Honolulu, deceased, application for probate of the will, continued from the 22nd inst. The Court heard the evidence of Kanalu, one of the subscribing witnesses, for whose testimony hearing was postponed. It was ordered, no one contesting, that the will be admitted to probate and that letters of administration with the will annexed issue to J. Alfred Magoon under bond of $250. Mr. Magoon appeared for the application.

Before Preston, J.

In re estate of Hiloone Konohiki, a minor. Application by S. Aukai, guardian, for order to sell real property of the ward situate in Auwailimu, Honolulu. Counsel for the petitioner gave the following reasons for making the application: That the ward is a leper without any hope of recovery; that he was in distress and want; that a piece of land in Kalawao, Molokai, could be bought for a trifle over $200, and a house there built for the reception of the ward if sent there; that the property in Auwailimu at present only brings in a rental of $30 per annum which could not be increased for nineteen months yet to come, and the ward probably would not live that long, and it is the desire of the ward to have the money for the remainder of his days, which are not many. Counsel for the mother, contestant, said, that although the sale might be an advantageous one, yet he could not approve of the proposed method of applying the proceeds; that it would require constant application to the Court for leave to expend out of the principal. The parents of the minor are not shown to be in destitute circumstances and it is their duty to care for and support him or give him up to be supported by Government. The Court declined to grant an order of sale. W. L. Holokahiki for petitioner, A. Rusa for contestant.

Hop Sing Co. vs. Kun On and John S. McGrew. Bill in equity to foreclose mortgage. This is an application praying for a temporary injunction (and is heard ex parte) to issue against defendants enjoining them from selling or otherwise disposing of the goods, chattels and effects, crops or other property named in the mortgage deed which is the subject of the suit. For the protection of the parties in interest the Court granted temporary relief as prayed for. Ashford & Ashford for plaintiffs.

In re bankruptcy of Leong To, of Honolulu, voluntary bankrupt. Hearing on petitioners' motion to vacate the order of bankruptcy granted on the 12th inst. The motion is based on the affidavit of the several creditors that they have seen fit to release him from their claims. Order vacating former judgment granted. Ashford & Ashford for petitioner.

In re bankruptcy of Lam Chock doing business in Honolulu under the firm name of Yee Ying Yuen as a dealer in general Chinese merchandise. Petitioner presented himself before the Court while in charge of a police officer, having been arrested and confined to jail since Friday last to answer the complaint of Wing Oa Wo & Co., of Honolulu creditors, which was filed the same day before the Chief Justice. Petitioner's liabilities as per schedule filed are $9,487.07, and his assets consist of book accounts due to petitioner to the amount of about $60,000, some liquor in bond in the Custom House and a share in the partnership of Yuen Wo. Co. worth about $400. The Court adjudged petitioner a bankrupt and appointed Monday, December 13th, for proof of claims and election of assignee. The Marshal was ordered to take charge of the property. Ashford & Ashford for petitioner.

Police Court.

Yesterday's drunk list was well up to the old time Monday standard, comprising T. Hopkins, W. O'Brien, Dick Edwards, John Campbell, John Silva, jr., Peter Lawrence, Keola and J. Cohn.

J. Ryan was tried for assault and battery on Puakalehua and M. Harvey on Saturday night. His Saturday night's rampage in the Cosmopolitan Saloon and on Nuuanu street was described by witnesses. He was remanded for judgment till the 30th inst.

Ben. Tenorio and Capt. Weir were charged with affray. The latter forfeited $15 bail, while Ben pleading not guilty was remanded till the 30th.

Ah Sang and Ah Tai Ang, charged with violating the Sabbath by playing dominoes, and eight other Chinamen charged with gaming on the same day, all defended by Hon. P. Neumann, were remanded until December 3rd.

Ah Chew alias Ah Hon, in whose room at the wash-house a tin of opium was found, regained his liberty on a nolle prosequi.

The Hawaiian flag floated over the Consulate of that country in this city yesterday in honor of King David's fiftieth birthday. The flag so much resembles that of England that its appearance provoked a rumor of a British protectorate.—Alta California.

FOREIGN NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Shocking Murder in San Francisco.

San Francisco was terribly agitated on Wednesday the 17th of November, by the deliberate shooting dead of Mamie Kelly, a school girl of about fifteen years, by Alexander Goldenson, a young hoodlum, who lay in wait for her at the corner of Polk street and Ash Avenue. Pursued by a crowd, headed by a laundry wagon driver who witnessed the crime, the murderer ran into the Police Station and gave himself up. It took the entire police force of 400 men to beat back the crowd, which evidently were going to take summary vengeance on the miscreant.

Death of Ex-President Arthur.

Chester A. Arthur, ex-President of the United States, died on the 18th inst., at his home in New York.

Death of Charles Francis Adams.

Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Sr., died at 8:30 o'clock Sunday, November 21. He was the third son of John Quincy Adams. Since he was made the victim of sharpers, who took advantage of his weakness four years ago, Mr. Adams had always been accompanied by an attendant. He had at no time been confined to his bed or rooms, but had taken gentle outdoor exercise, and often enjoyed a drive to the city. He was last out of doors about ten days before his death when he came according to his custom, from his home in Quincy to his winter residence in Boston.

Charles Francis Adams, L. L. D., D. C. L., son of John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States, was born in 1807. He was nominated by the Free Soil party for the office of Vice-President in 1848. He was elected a member of Congress in 1858-60 by the Republicans. From 1861 to 1868 he was Minister to England, and in 1870 he was one of the arbitrators of the Alabama claims. His position in England during the civil war was a most difficult one, but the duties were performed with tact and discretion. He was the Democrat candidate for Governor of Massachusetts in 1876. He was eminent in his day as a statesman and a political economist.

In 1829 Mr. Adams married the youngest daughter of Peter C. Brooks, a Boston millionaire, a connection which also made him a brother-in-law of Edward Everett.

The President's Message.

A Washington despatch of November 21, thus discusses the President's coming message: "It is the belief of all the influential men who have arrived here since the elections this month that although this session of Congress will be a very short one, it will, in all probability, develop the Presidential candidates for both political parties. Everywhere the remark is made that Cleveland is straining every nerve on his message, and that he expects to make this the document of his life. Cleveland; it is said, will try to solve the problem now presented in the threatened wreck of the national banking system; that he will make an attempt to point out to the National Legislature what should be done with the foreign issues arising; what disposition should be made of the public lands, and many other matters before the people and which are crowding Congress for action. It is predicted also that the labor question will be touched upon very forcibly, and the whole field of technicalities in statesmanship gone over. The message will be the best evidence of the fitness or unfitness of Cleveland to occupy the position he is in of anything he has shown since he came to the White House, and it will, several Congressmen say, make or break him for the struggle of 1888."

EUROPE.

Latest from Bulgaria.

A London cablegram says: It is felt here that the Bulgarian question is coming into more regular position, as General Kaulbars now withdraws, and there seems to be nothing to prevent the early assembling of the conference, as proposed by Lord Iddesleigh. The objects of the British Government at this conference will first be to establish such harmony as may be possible among the powers, and in maintaining the obligations of the Berlin treaty, subject to necessary modification, made necessary by the Bulgarian absorption of eastern Roumelia. Russia professes no serious objection to this plan of unification, but it may become a question with her whether she will assent to this after the recent statements at Buda Pesth, that she can be allowed no supremacy in that quarter. If Russia gives way on this point, there ought to be no difficulty in finding a candidate suitable to her, and Prince Waldemar is as promising a one as can be expected. While the Powers now labor for a conference, a great, though silent struggle, is sure to arise between the peace and war parties in Russia. The latter has already begun to assail Germany as the cause of all the trouble, and to demand the punishment of Bulgaria, but it is believed the Czar now realizes General Kaulbars' mission as a fiasco, and has decided to follow the pacific leadership of M. de Giers.

Cannot Change their Spots.

Thomas Power O'Connor cables from London to the New York Star: The Tory organs recognize the peril in which the Ministry have placed themselves by the latest developments of their Irish policy. They declare the time has passed for parleying with the leaders of the National movement, and that the law must be sternly enforced against tenants at all hazards. On the threshold of a threatening upheaval in Europe they call on the Cabinet without further delay to adopt measures so stringent as to overcome the people and put an end to the movement for abatement of rents. England, they argue, must at any cost have her hands free to deal with Russia, and this cannot be as long as the Irish people are allowed to defy the law and drift into disorder. The dismissal of Sir Robert Hamilton from the post of Under Secretary in Ireland is accepted as the first step in that direction of a more vigorous policy and the inauguration of a new regime. It is intimated that Sir Robert's transfer to another position will be followed by a large number of changes, sweeping the service of officials who have at any time favored Gladstone's Irish policy, or the popular movement in any shape.

France and the Vatican.

A London despatch of November 21 says: The discussion between France and the Holy See over the refusal of the French Government to acquiesce in the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Chinese Empire and the Vatican is far from being ended. It is understood the German Government now advises the Vatican to complete its arrangement with the Chinese Empire, leaving the Government of De Freycinet to deal with the difficulty created for it by its own course toward the Pope as best it may. The highest diplomatic authority is given for the following text of a telegram sent by the French Government to his Holiness when Monsignor Aghardt was on his way to Peking: "Give up sending nuncios to China, or withdraw your nuncios from France."

The Pope knew this meant that the French Government intended to suppress the Budget of Public Worship; in other words, to deprive the French clergy of their regular legitimate support, and he replied: "I wish to maintain amicable relations with France and will recall my nuncios." This left the burden of recall upon the French Government. The revival of papal relations with China will put the French Government in an extremely awkward position between Clemenceau, the leader of the Republicans, and those hostile to the church, under whose influence the aggressive telegram was dispatched, and an attempt will be made by Raoul Duval to organize Conservative support for De Freycinet, with the help of the Monarchists and Imperialists.

Vatican Troubles.

Cardinal Jacobini, the Papal Secretary of State, on the plea of ill-health, has asked the Pope to accept his resignation. It is known that the Cardinal suffers from incipient dropsy, but the chief cause of his desire to resign is the approach of a quarrel with the Quirinal. It is reported that the Pope wrote to Emperor Francis Joseph asking him to intervene on the ground that he would be obliged to quit Rome unless the position of the Vatican improved, as the anti-clerical party was taking every chance to insult him. Emperor Francis Joseph has not replied yet. There is much intriguing to succeed Cardinal Jacobini if he should be allowed to resign.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

THE SUGAR MARKET.

A Ray of Hope.

The weekly review of Willett & Hamlen, dated New York, November 4th, has the following concerning the statistical position and prospects of the sugar trade: "As October 1st is the close of all crop years, it appears that the consumption of Sugar in the world for the twelve months—October, 1885, to October, 1886—was 114,302 tons more than the production of the world, plus a surplus of invisible stock which is conceded to have been in second hands on October 1, 1885, in excess of such surplus stock of October 1, 1886, of at least 200,000 tons; that is, the actual consumption of the year was 314,402 tons more than the production. The increased consumption of sugar for the coming twelve months should be at least 150,000 tons, which might be apparently increased by 100,000 to 150,000 tons if the sentiment of dealers changed to carrying larger stocks."

actual requirements of the coming twelve months are at least 464,000 tons and possibly 600,000 tons more than the production of the past twelve months. Against this we have an estimated increase of the Beet crop of 380,000 tons, of the Cuba crop of 60,000 tons, of the British West India crop of 30,000 tons, of the Brazil crop of 50,000 tons, and deficiencies in Louisiana crop of 30,000 tons, and in Mauritius and some other crops of say 20,000 tons, and 30,000 tons of Philippines sugar less afloat for United States of last crop, but included in stocks on hand. The sum of these figures gives estimated increased production for twelve months of 440,000 tons against increased requirements of 464,000 tons and possible requirements of 600,000 tons. There is great doubt, also, about Russia allowing a bounty on exports, the absence of which will be equivalent to a reduction in production of 65,000 to 100,000 tons of sugar for the consuming countries. Under these conditions there would seem to be no good basis for the most extraordinary depression now existing upon the value of an article of such prime necessity, and an improvement of at least 10 per pound can be confidently looked for during the coming twelve months. The first half of 1887 will show a large increase in consumption of foreign sugar in the United States. There has been no further decline during the week, and sellers are generally rather firmer in their pretensions, in view of the depth to which prices have already been depressed. Home consumption is fairly satisfactory, in view of the marketing of the domestic crop now beginning. Export demand has virtually ceased with the enforcing of the new bounty conditions from November 1st. Stock in all hands is reduced 7,574 tons for the week. Beet crop estimates remain unchanged, by M. Licht, at 380,000 tons over last year's. The New York stock contains very little of high grade, being made up mostly of low grade sugar, which should rapidly diminish when the demand for it begins. Cost and freight business is neglected.

Shipping Intelligence.

Personal.

Mr. Griffin, United States Consul at Sydney, was among those ashore from the mail steamer last evening, being on the way back to his post after a visit home.

His Excellency G. W. Merrill, American Minister Resident here, is reported at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, after a trip through the State.

Mr. Ballingall, who put up at the Hotel yesterday, is an Hon., a Col., a great hotel man and the mainspring of a newspaper—that is, its banker. He is now on a tour of the world. To the writer he expressed himself as agreeably surprised at the size of Honolulu and the beauty of the suburbs and Kapiolani Park.

Mr. James McLean, a professor in Ballarat College, Australia, took a good view of the city during the stay of the steamer. He was an able contributor about ten years ago to a weekly paper conducted "down East" by the editor of the HERALD. The present trip is the "home stretch" for him from a general tour in Europe, Egypt and Palestine, with a visit to his old home.

Waiialua Notes.

On Friday evening, 26th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Damon held a mission service for the Chinese in Mr. Halstead's mill. Between 30 and 40 Chinamen were present, besides a large number of Portuguese and white folks. The Chinese were very quiet and attentive, so we trust good results may ensue.

The grass, which had begun to grow rapidly after the late rain, seems likely to be all devoured by millions of caterpillars which are paying us a visit.

Mr. Churchill's friends will be glad he has sufficiently improved his health to allow of his return to work.

Owing to the rain and mud the Government school was closed Monday and Tuesday.

Fall Among Thieves.

The Call has an account of an attempted murder and robbery committed on Thomas Wallace, a Hawaiian Islander, by a notorious ex-convict, Jack Cooney, and an accomplice. They invited him to a room in the California Hotel, and after treating him liberally to beer fell upon him and robbed him of his watch and money. Wallace resisted and was seriously slashed about the face and throat in the struggle. The victim was sent to hospital, and Cooney arrested. Another paper says Wallace was mate of the whaler Northern Star.

LOCAL NEWS.

The festivities of the King's jubilee birthday are over.

Mr. H. E. Avery, barrister, has gone to San Francisco on the schooner Rosario from Kahului.

The O. S. S. Australia will sail from San Francisco for this port on December 5th, and be due here on the 15th.

A row of three two-story wooden tenements, all of a size and shape, is building on the new street below Maunakea, near the harbor.

The Mariposa's through passengers took advantage very generally and freely of the opportunity of seeing Honolulu and its environs.

The "chestnut bell" has reached Honolulu, and now shall the proverb be verified in the midst of us. "As the bell tinketh so the fool thinketh."

A supply of Smith's Planetary Almanac and Weather Guide for 1887 has arrived and will be found at the bookstores this afternoon. It contains calculations of the proper time for planting in the Hawaiian Islands, according to the theory of "Lunar Influence on Vegetation."

Captain Clark, of the King's Own, yesterday received one hundred dollars in gold coin from His Majesty, for that company, in recognition of the excellence of its performances at the competitive drill on Saturday. It is claimed, on behalf of the corps, that they went through more maneuvers and executed all much better than last year.

A Recent Sojourner.

Robert Crichton, a former book-keeper of the Odd Fellows' Bank, who was arrested recently for embezzlement on his return from a sojourn in Honolulu, failed to appear when his case was called by Judge Murphy today. His bonds were declared forfeited and a bench warrant for his arrest was issued. Simon Hamburg of 1708 Clay street, and Walter Neustadt of 646 Stevenson street have each promised to pay the State $3,000 in case of Crichton's permanent absence.—S. F. Bulletin.

State Dinner.

Last evening the State Dinner, last item on the programme of the Jubilee festivities, came off at Iolani Palace. Those present included, besides His Majesty and retinue, the Ministers of the Crown, members of the Judiciary, foreign representatives, legislators, etc. Mr. Bartlett, manager of the Hawaiian Hotel, was caterer on the occasion, attending personally to the service. After the dinner the night was spent in merry making of song and dance.

Last of the Series.

Last evening the last of the series of three billiard matches between Morris and McCleery was played at the Commercial billiard room, and resulted like the other two in victory for Morris, who thereby takes a purse of $100 in addition to the prizes for all the matches. There were several heavy runs, including the brilliant scores of 463 by Morris and 378 by McCleery. The latter was 89 when the game was lost. Following is the score of the 31 innings played by both:—

Morris—2, 1, 1, 3, 463, 0, 3, 3, 2, 4, 0, 0, 0, 15, 185, 3, 0, 2, 5, 43, 2, 0, 10, 2, 31, 142, 2, 9, 0, 1, 66—1,000; average 32.57.
McCleery—0, 1, 7, 154, 1, 0, 4, 4, 9, 2, 0, 4, 23, 0, 18, 5, 0, 1, 0, 9, 1, 29, 0, 124, 5, 2, 378, 0, 16, 1, 0—598; average 25.74.

SIDE LIGHTS.

West, Dow & Co., whose large holiday announcement appeared in the HERALD yesterday for the first time, make a fine exhibition of furniture, musical instruments from pianos down, pictures, bric-a-brac, fancy goods for use and ornament, Christmas cards, toys, etc. The wonder is how they managed to display such a large and varied stock to such excellent advantage. Early callers will have the more ample choice in the order of their coming for purely holiday goods; as the wise merchant at this season wants to clear off that class of stock, leaving as little as possible to hold over till next year. Even in the line of this firm's regular trade, the public must be reminded that it is less than four weeks till Christmas, and fresh importations cannot be obtained in Honolulu at a week's notice.

Those Beauty's Bower Cigars of McCarty's cannot be beaten.

"As a true tonic, effective invigorator and genuine appetizer, Duffy's Malt Whisky is unequalled."

SUPREME COURT.

Before Judd, C. J., Monday, November 29th.

In re estate of Alina (Ch.) of Honolulu, deceased, application for probate of the will, continued from the 22nd inst. The Court heard the evidence of Kanalu, one of the subscribing witnesses, for whose testimony hearing was postponed. It was ordered, no one contesting, that the will be admitted to probate and that letters of administration with the will annexed issue to J. Alfred Magoon under bond of $250. Mr. Magoon appeared for the application.

Before Preston, J.

In re estate of Hiloone Konohiki, a minor. Application by S. Aukai, guardian, for order to sell real property of the ward situate in Auwailimu, Honolulu. Counsel for the petitioner gave the following reasons for making the application: That the ward is a leper without any hope of recovery; that he was in distress and want; that a piece of land in Kalawao, Molokai, could be bought for a trifle over $200, and a house there built for the reception of the ward if sent there; that the property in Auwailimu at present only brings in a rental of $30 per annum which could not be increased for nineteen months yet to come, and the ward probably would not live that long, and it is the desire of the ward to have the money for the remainder of his days, which are not many. Counsel for the mother, contestant, said, that although the sale might be an advantageous one, yet he could not approve of the proposed method of applying the proceeds; that it would require constant application to the Court for leave to expend out of the principal. The parents of the minor are not shown to be in destitute circumstances and it is their duty to care for and support him or give him up to be supported by Government. The Court declined to grant an order of sale. W. L. Holokabiki for petitioner, A. Rosa for contestant.

Hop Sing Co. vs. Kun On and John S. McGrew. Bill in equity to foreclose mortgage. This is an application praying for a temporary injunction (and is heard ex parte) to issue against defendants enjoining them from selling or otherwise disposing of the goods, chattels and effects, crops or other property named in the mortgage deed which is the subject of the suit. For the protection of the parties in interest the Court granted temporary relief as prayed for. Ashford & Ashford for plaintiffs.

In re bankruptcy of Leong To, of Honolulu, voluntary bankrupt. Hearing on petitioners' motion to vacate the order of bankruptcy granted on the 12th inst. The motion is based on the affidavit of the several creditors that they have seen fit to release him from their claims. Order vacating former judgment granted. Ashford & Ashford for petitioner.

In re bankruptcy of Lam Chock doing business in Honolulu under the firm name of Yee Ying Yuen as a dealer in general Chinese merchandise. Petitioner presented himself before the Court while in charge of a police officer, having been arrested and confined to jail since Friday last to answer the complaint of Wing On Wo & Co., of Honolulu creditors, which was filed the same day before the Chief Justice. Petitioners' liabilities as per schedule filed are $9,487.07, and his assets consist of book accounts due to petitioner to the amount of about $60,004, some liquor in bond in the Custom House and a share in the partnership of Yuen Wo Co. worth about $400. The Court adjudged petitioner a bankrupt and appointed Monday, December 13th, for proof of claims and election of assignee. The Marshal was ordered to take charge of the property. Ashford & Ashford for petitioner.

Police Court.

Yesterday's drunk list was well up to the old-time Monday standard, comprising T. Hopkins, W. O'Brien, Dick Edwards, John Campbell, John Silva, jr., Peter Lawrence, Keola and J. Cohn.

J. Ryan was tried for assault and battery on Puakalehua and M. Harvey on Saturday night. His Saturday night's rampage in the Cosmopolitan Saloon and on Nuuanu street was described by witnesses. He was remanded for judgment till the 30th inst.

Ben. Tenorio and Capt. Weir were charged with affray. The latter forfeited $15 bail, while Ben pleading not guilty was remanded till the 30th.

Ah Sang and Ah Tai Ang, charged with violating the Sabbath by playing dominoes, and eight other Chinamen charged with gaming on the same day, all defended by Hon. P. Neumann, were remanded until December 3rd.

Ah Chew alias Ah Hon, in whose room at the wash-house a tin of opium was found, regained his liberty on a nolle prosequi.

The Hawaiian flag floated over the Consulate of that country in this city yesterday in honor of King David's fiftieth birthday. The flag so much resembles that of England that its appearance provoked a rumor of a British protectorate.—Alta California.

FOREIGN NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Shocking Murder in San Francisco.

San Francisco was terribly agitated on Wednesday the 17th of November, by the deliberate shooting dead of Mamie Kelly, a school girl of about fifteen years, by Alexander Goldenson, a young hoodlum, who lay in wait for her at the corner of Polk street and Ash Avenue. Pursued by a crowd, headed by a laundry wagon driver who witnessed the crime, the murderer ran into the Police Station and gave himself up. It took the entire police force of 400 men to beat back the crowd, which evidently were going to take summary vengeance on the miscreant.

Death of Ex-President Arthur.

Chester A. Arthur, ex-President of the United States, died on the 18th inst., at his home in New York.

Death of Charles Francis Adams.

Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Sr., died at 8:30 o'clock Sunday, November 21. He was the third son of John Quincy Adams. Since he was made the victim of sharpers, who took advantage of his weakness four years ago, Mr. Adams had always been accompanied by an attendant. He had at no time been confined to his bed or rooms, but had taken gentle outdoor exercise, and often enjoyed a drive to the city. He was last out of doors about ten days before his death when he came according to his custom, from his home in Quincy to his winter residence in Boston.

Charles Francis Adams, L. L. D., D. C. L., son of John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States, was born in 1807. He was nominated by the Free Soil party for the office of Vice-President in 1848. He was elected a member of Congress in 1858-60 by the Republicans. From 1861 to 1868 he was Minister to England, and in 1870 he was one of the arbitrators of the Alabama claims. His position in England during the civil war was a most difficult one, but the duties were performed with tact and discretion. He was the Democrat candidate for Governor of Massachusetts in 1876. He was eminent in his day as a statesman and a political economist.

In 1829 Mr. Adams married the youngest daughter of Peter C. Brooks, a Boston millionaire, a connection which also made him a brother-in-law of Edward Everett.

The President's Message.

A Washington despatch of November 21, thus discusses the President's coming message: "It is the belief of all the influential men who have arrived here since the elections this month that although this session of Congress will be a very short one, it will, in all probability, develop the Presidential candidates for both political parties. Everywhere the remark is made that Cleveland is straining every nerve on his message, and that he expects to make this the document of his life. Cleveland; it is said, will try to solve the problem now presented in the threatened wreck of the national banking system; that he will make an attempt to point out to the National Legislature what should be done with the foreign issues arising; what disposition should be made of the public lands, and many other matters before the people and which are crowding Congress for action. It is predicted also that the labor question will be touched upon very forcibly, and the whole field of technicalities in statesmanship gone over. The message will be the best evidence of the fitness or unfitness of Cleveland to occupy the position he is in of anything he has shown since he came to the White House, and it will, several Congressmen say, make or break him for the struggle of 1888.

EUROPE.

Latest from Bulgaria.

A London cablegram says: It is felt here that the Bulgarian question is coming into more regular position, as General Kaulbars now withdraws, and there seems to be nothing to prevent the early assembling of the conference, as proposed by Lord Iddesleigh. The objects of the British Government at this conference will first be to establish such harmony as may be possible among the powers, and in maintaining the obligations of the Berlin treaty, subject to necessary modification, made necessary by the Bulgarian absorption of eastern Roumelia. Russia professes no serious objection to this plan of unification, but it may become a question with her whether she will assent to this after the recent statements at Buda Pesth, that she can be allowed no supremacy in that quarter. If Russia gives way on this point, there ought to be no difficulty in finding a candidate suitable to her, and Prince Waldemar is as promising a one as can be expected. While the Powers now labor for a conference, a great, though silent struggle, is sure to arise between the peace and war parties in Russia. The latter has already begun to assail Germany as the cause of all the trouble, and to demand the punishment of Bulgaria, but it is believed the Czar now realizes General Kaulbars' mission as a fiasco, and has decided to follow the pacific leadership of M. de Giers.

Cannot Change their Spots.

Thomas Power O'Connor cables from London to the New York Star: The Tory organs recognize the peril in which the Ministry have placed themselves by the latest developments of the Irish policy. They declare the time has passed for parleying with the leaders of the National movement, and that the law must be sternly enforced against tenants at all hazards. On the threshold of a threatening upheaval in Europe they call on the Cabinet without further delay to adopt measures so stringent as to overcome the people and put an end to the movement for abatement of rents. England, they argue, must at any cost have her hands free to deal with Russia, and this cannot be as long as the Irish people are allowed to defy the law and drift into disorder. The dismissal of Sir Robert Hamilton from the post of Under Secretary in Ireland is accepted as the first step in that direction of a more vigorous policy and the inauguration of a new regime. It is intimated that Sir Robert's transfer to another position will be followed by a large number of changes, sweeping the service of officials who have at any time favored Gladstone's Irish policy, or the popular movement in any shape.

France and the Vatican.

A London despatch of November 21 says: The discussion between France and the Holy See over the refusal of the French Government to acquiesce in the establishment of diplomatic relations between the Chinese Empire and the Vatican is far from being ended. It is understood the German Government now advises the Vatican to complete its arrangement with the Chinese Empire, leaving the Government of De Freycinet to deal with the difficulty created for it by its own course toward the Pope as best it may. The highest diplomatic authority is given for the following text of a telegram sent by the French Government to his Holiness when Monsignor Aghardt was on his way to Peking: "Give up sending nuncios to China, or withdraw your nuncios from France."

The Pope knew this meant that the French Government intended to suppress the Budget of Public Worship; in other words, to deprive the French clergy of their regular legitimate support, and he replied: "I wish to maintain amicable relations with France and will recall my nuncios." This left the burden of recall upon the French Government. The revival of papal relations with China will put the French Government in an extremely awkward position between Clemenceau, the leader of the Republicans, and those hostile to the church, under whose influence the aggressive telegram was dispatched, and an attempt will be made by Raoul Duval to organize Conservative support for De Freycinet, with the help of the Monarchists and Imperialists.

Vatican Troubles.

Cardinal Jacobini, the Papal Secretary of State, on the plea of ill-health, has asked the Pope to accept his resignation. It is known that the Cardinal suffers from incipient dropsy, but the chief cause of his desire to resign is the approach of a quarrel with the Quirinal. It is reported that the Pope wrote to Emperor Francis Joseph asking him to intervene on the ground that he would be obliged to quit Rome unless the position of the Vatican improved, as the anti-clerical party was taking every chance to insult him. Emperor Francis Joseph has not replied yet. There is much intriguing to succeed Cardinal Jacobini if he should be allowed to resign.

Mr. Henry Billings, Washington, D. C., writes: "I have used your Duffy's Pure Malt Whisky for medicinal purposes. As a tonic I consider it superior to the hundreds of concoctions which are now flooding the land as stimulant liquors."

THE ENGAGEMENT.

The Rovero and Escudo families had been on terms of the closest intimacy ever since their immigration to Louisiana from Cuba in 1838. They had come to these shores on the same vessel, and though the Roveros were a little overbearing on account of their family connections in Havana, and the Escudos were prone to refer on all occasions to their past possessions at Cardinas, yet, after their arrival on American soil, they fraternized as if they had all been born under one roof.

Shortly after the arrival of the two families in New Orleans, they selected residences down on the Rue Damaine, about two squares apart, and barely a day passed but found a Rovero at the Escudo residence on an Escudo slipping delicious Xeres at the Rovero table. Old man Escudo started in the sugar trade, and the delicate Castilian Rovero opened a wholesale cigar store. Both prospered well, and in a few months had succeeded in accumulating quite a handsome sum as the result of shrewd speculation. Both drove out on afternoons in their carriages, and both dined frequently together down on the lake. It was almost touching to see the fond affection existing between these two families, and their neighbors could not but believe they were closely related.

It was not long before that sort of promiscuous brotherly love that had grown up between them became more concentrated, and Jose Rovero became deeply enamored with Juanita Escudo. He was 24 and she was 18, and their fathers looked upon their espousal as a thing extremely desirable for both. Of afternoons they talked the matter over together, as they smoked their Regalia Chicas after dinner, and laid their little plans for setting up the young folks in a handsome domestic establishment when the happy event should take place.

One unfortunate afternoon a Mr. Cleburne, a gentleman of the highest respectability, called at the Rovero house on a friendly visit. In the course of conversation he alluded to the recent completion of a new cock pit, where gentlemen spent their leisure moments watching the game chickens battle with one another. He, himself, he said, was quite fond of it.

This remark electrified old man Rovero. A brighter luster came to his eye, and a ruddier glow to his cheek. He regretted he had not known this before. Why, he was the happy possessor of the champion cock of all Havana, and nothing could give him more pleasure than to show American birds what a Spanish game cock was made of. He thanked his visitor for the information he had given, and said that he was probably the oldest cock fighter in all Cuba.

The next day old man Escudo dined at the Rovero's, and the new cock-pit was mentioned. If the announcement of its existence had pleased Rovero, it delighted the whole Escudo family. Of all amusements this, to them, was par excellence. Old Escudo twisted his moustache vigorously. Since he was 15 years old he had raised game chickens, and he informed his friends confidentially that he had brought the greatest fighting chicken ever known in Cuba. This caused Senor Rovero to raise his eyelids in astonishment, and to shrug his shoulders. He, too, had brought over the pride of all Havana. He ventured to suggest that perhaps his amiable friend's chicken could whip all Cardenas, but his own was the champion of all Cuba.

In the most courtly Castilian they discussed the merits of their favorite birds, waxing warmer and warmer all the time. The family, having adjourned to the broad gallery after the cafe noir, heard with astonishment loud words in the dining-room, and on entering were astonished to see both old gentlemen confronting one another pale and excited. The reappearance of the ladies brought them to their senses, and they became the polished courtiers of half an hour before. The result of this little encounter was a match for $2,000 between the Rovero and Escudo birds, to take place at the new cock-pit in a month from that day.

It is impossible to forecast the results that may follow from so slight a circumstance as the possession of a game rooster. From that afternoon it was noticed the two old gentlemen grew more polite to each other, and there was a reserve in their manner that betokened an underlying coolness. It was bruited about that there was to be the greatest cock-fight at the new cock-pit New Orleans ever saw, and there were some who paraded the one favoring the Rovero bird, the other swearing by Escudo's. As day after day passed the excitement over the event increased, and the two chickens, having fully recovered from their sea trip from Havana, were duly trained and groomed each morning.

While the alarms of war were marshalling together the adherents of "Pe-pite," the bellicose chanticleer of Rovero, and "Zip," the fierce-eyed chicken of Escudo, the two swains, Jose and Juanita, billed and cooed in loving half tones utterly oblivious of the coming fray.

If the heads of their houses, the old gentlemen, chose to exhibit wrong feeling on account of their feathered pets, it mattered little to them, for they moved in an atmosphere of love entirely above such subliminary things as chicken fights. At last the great day approached. The papers had announced the event in flaming advertisements, and seats had been sold in advance, some of them bringing as much as $10 apiece. Such was the interest taken in the fight it was found impossible to afford even standing room to the throng that desired to attend, and so an arrangement was made that the varying progress of the combat should be given to the crowd in the street by a stenorian-voiced lawyer from the upper window of the cock-pit.

The two families had almost ceased to speak to one another, and Jose thought he noticed a slight coolness in his inamorata, Juanita. He called there regularly every day, and was well received and all that, but his welcome had more ice water than wine about it. Everybody was polite, courteous, suave, but through it all there ran an undercurrent of frozen lemonade that was not exactly pleasant to the ardent Jose Rovero.

The day of combat arrived. Old man Rovero had arranged for a messenger to convey the result to his family, and Senor Escudo had hired a cab-driver to carry the news to his house. In each domicile the breakfast was eaten in silence. The great climax was soon to come, nobody cared to talk. A little before noon Jose called to invite Juanita to take a promenade. They would pass by the cock-pit and hear the news during the battle. Juanita accepted the invitation gladly, and followed by the prayers of the whole Escudo family for their chicken, they started out.

The street around the cock-pit was thronged with a heterogeneous crowd. Betting was lively, and even the ubiquitous small boy waded cigarettes and Creole beer. About 1 o'clock a hush fell upon the throng. The little lawyer in the upper window announced, "The birds are in the pit." The heat was so great inside he had taken off his coat, and was mopping his face with a handkerchief.

"They commenced!" he shouted, and the crowd echoed the announcement with a cheer.

"Jose," whispered Juanita, leaning on her lover's arm in the outskirts of the multitude, "I do not wish any harm to your father's chicken, but I want our bird to win."

"She said this in such sweet Spanish that Jose himself felt inclined to weaken in his allegiance to his father's champion. He hinted that it made no difference to them who won."

"But you know," she continued, "papa's chicken was the best in all Cuba."

Jose agreed to this, provided his father's was not included in the sweeping assertion.

"I do not think your chicken is to be compared to ours," she went on.

"Perhaps not," meekly answered Jose. "Rovero has put in a good blow," shouted the man in the window, and a smile overspread Jose's face.

"You need not laugh about it, Jose," Juanita said, indignantly, the color mounting to her face; "one blow is nothing."

"Rovero has Escudo down!" yelled the man at the window. The Rovero backers cheered.

Juanita was now full of the excitement. "It is mean of your father to take advantage of mine," she said, letting go Jose's arm. "It is not fair. I know it is not fair. They are cheating in there." Her face was white now.

Jose said nothing, but looked good-naturedly down upon his fiancée.

The beautiful brunette would have preferred that Jose should show some resentment. His silence made her more angry. "Jose," said she, "you Havana people think you are so smart, and you will take advantage of a poor old gentleman like my father. It is mean, too mean, I say."

"The Escudo bird is killed," shouted the lawyer, throwing his hat high in the air. It lodged on a house-top across the street. There was one tumultuous yell. It could be heard squares away.

Juanita trembled in every muscle. Her family pride had been wounded to the quick. It was an insult to her personally, so she reasoned. Jose said nothing and she hurt her more. Unable to endure the agony any longer, she turned to the officious young man with "Senor Jose it were, it is a shame the way your family treat my family, and I will not stand it. They have insulted my father by letting their chicken kill his and I will have nothing more to do with you."

Jose was appalled. He could not understand Juanita's system of logic and endeavored to appease her. She left him abruptly and started homeward. He was amazed. He had cared little about the fight and had less feeling in the matter. He looked after the disappearing form of his sweetheart with sorrowing eyes. They never met afterward. Even to this day, when there is roast chicken on the table at the Escudo house, not a word is spoken, as it awakens unpleasant associations of the great fight of 1849, when the Rovero bird broke the neck of the Escudo chicken and Juanita's engagement at the same blow.—Charles E. Whitney in Times-Democrat.

The Late Volcanic Eruptions.

The injury done by the late volcanic eruptions in New Zealand can now be pretty accurately gauged. The Melbourne Argus states that an area of 2,000 square miles is covered with quite three inches of volcanic dust, while the deposit reaches to three feet and more over twenty miles. For 400 square miles the country is totally destroyed, and 1,600 square miles are much damaged, the result depending on the problem of the fertilizing qualities of the deposit. Speaking of volcanic disasters, Casamicciolo, in the island of Ischia, which was wrecked by an earthquake just three years ago, has been sufficiently rebuilt to accommodate visitors to the hot springs. Special "safety houses" have been constructed near the springs in case of any further earthquake.—Frank Leslie's.

A Nation of Tavern-Keepers.

Slowly, but surely, the Swiss are being converted from a nation of freemen into a race of tavern-keepers. "Restoration" appears at every turning. In the towns every other house is a "hof." In the mountains every other chalet is a "cafe." Upon the road the tourist is waylaid all day long by the peripatetic vendors of refreshment, who seem to bob out of each bush besieging the carriage with wood strawberries and wild cherries, stale bread and fresh milk, and in case these appeals to the inner man prove unavailing, straightway supplementing them with an assault upon his vanity in the form of forest flowers and wicker baskets and carved wood.—Cor. Courier-Journal.

A Costly Indian Tomb.

Taj, the famous tomb in India on the Agra, built 200 years ago by Shah Jehan, in honor of his favorite wife, cost, says Hugh Wilkinson in "Sunny Lands and Sea," $3,000,000, and took 20,000 men several years to complete. This is equal to 340,000 men in one year, and assuming that the material cost half the money, it appears that the workmen earned, on an average, less than $4.10 a year. "Slaves," you say? Perhaps, but their "keep" must have cost more than that. Guess the boy exaggerated.—Detroit Free Press.

In Honor of the South.

The south has been remembered in the naming of the new navy cruisers. One will be called the Charleston and another the Baltimore. The Charleston will be a 1,000-ton ship, and built on the plan of the Japanese cruiser Nanawakan. The Baltimore will be a steel cruiser of 4,418 tons, with armored deck. The third of the line of ships will be named Newark. All of these vessels will be built of steel, and are expected to be completed and put in commission within the next two years.—Chicago Times.

Will Not Grow in Africa.

Herr Schmidt, an accomplished German horticulturist, who was some time ago sent to east Africa to introduce the cultivation of European kitchen garden vegetables and corn, reports that after repeated trials the experiment has completely failed.—Chicago Times.

They do say that a girl never looks so pretty to a young man as when she has just refused to be his wife.—Sovereign Journal.

THE SUGAR MARKET.

A Ray of Hope.

The weekly review of Willett & Hamlen, dated New York, November 4th, has the following concerning the statistical position and prospects of the Sugar trade: "As October 1st is the close of all crop years, it appears that the consumption of Sugar in the world for the twelve months—October, 1885, to October, 1886—was 114,302 tons more than the production of the world, plus a surplus of invisible stock which is conceded to have been in second hands on October 1, 1885, in excess of such surplus stock of October 1, 1886, of at least 200,000 tons; that is, the actual consumption of the year was 314,402 tons more than the production. The increased consumption of sugar for the coming twelve months should be at least 150,000 tons, which might be apparently increased by 100,000 to 150,000 tons if the sentiment of dealers changed to carrying larger actual requirements of the coming twelve months are at least 464,000 tons and possibly 600,000 tons more than the production of the past twelve months. Against this we have an estimated increase of the Beet crop of 380,000 tons, of the Cuba crop of 60,000 tons, of the British West India crop of 30,000 tons, of the Brazil crop of 50,000 tons, and deficiencies in Louisiana crop of 30,000 tons, and in Mauritania and some other crops of say 20,000 tons, and 30,000 tons of Philippines sugar less afloat for United States of last crop, but included in stocks on hand. The sum of these figures gives estimated increased production for twelve months of 440,000 tons against increased requirements of 464,000 tons and possible requirements of 600,000 tons. There is great doubt, also, about Russia allowing a bounty on exports, the absence of which will be equivalent to a reduction in production of 65,000 to 100,000 tons of sugar for the consuming countries. Under these conditions there would seem to be no good basis for the most extraordinary depression now existing in the sugar market, which has broken the price of Sugar to lower than the lowest prices of the century, and nearly 1c per pound below prices of a year ago, when the actual statistical position was much worse than the statistical outlook is at the present time. The improvement noticeable in general business, and affecting all articles of merchandise except sugar, cannot much longer withhold its influence upon the value of an article of such prime necessity, and an improvement of at least 1c per pound can be confidently looked for during the coming twelve months. The first half of 1887 will show a large increase in consumption of foreign sugar in the United States. There has been no further decline during the week, and sellers are generally rather firmer in their pretensions, in view of the depth to which prices have already been depressed. Home consumption is fairly satisfactory, in view of the marketing of the domestic crop now beginning. Export demand has virtually ceased with the enforcing of the new bounty conditions from November 1st. Stock in all hands is reduced 7,574 tons for the week. Beet crop estimates remain unchanged, by M. Licht, at 380,000 tons over last year's. The New York stock contains very little of high grade, being made up mostly of low grade sugar, which should rapidly diminish when the demand for it begins. Cost and freight business is neglected.

It is easier for an eye to go through the camel of a needle than for a woman who writes for the papers to get off a pun without italicizing it.

Personal.

Mr. Griffin, United States Consul at Sydney, was among those ashore from the mail steamer last evening, being on the way back to his post after a visit home.

His Excellency G. W. Merrill, American Minister Resident here, is reported at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, after a trip through the State.

Mr. Ballingall, who put up at the Hotel yesterday, is an Hon., a Col., a great hotel man and the mainspring of a newspaper—that is, its banker. He is now on a tour of the world. To the writer he expressed himself as agreeably surprised at the size of Honolulu and the beauty of the suburbs and Kapiolani Park.

Mr. James McLean, a professor in Ballarat College, Australia, took a good view of the city during the stay of the steamer. He was an able contributor about ten years ago to a weekly paper conducted "down East" by the editor of the HERALD. The present trip is the "home stretch" for him from a vacation tour in Europe, Egypt and Palestine, with a visit to his old home.

Waialua Notes.

On Friday evening, 26th inst., Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Damon held a mission service for the Chinese in Mr. Halstead's mill. Between 30 and 40 Chinamen were present, besides a large number of Portuguese and white folks. The Chinese were very quiet and attentive, so we trust good results may ensue.

The grass, which had begun to grow rapidly after the late rain, seems likely to be all devoured by millions of caterpillars which are paying us a visit.

Mr. Churchill's friends will be glad to hear that he has sufficiently improved his health to allow of his return to work.

Owing to the rain and mud the Government school was closed Monday and Tuesday.

Fel' Among Thieves.

The Call has an account of an attempted murder and robbery committed on Thomas Wallace, a Hawaiian Islander, by a notorious ex-convict, Jack Cooney, and an accomplice. They invited him to a room in the California Hotel, and after treating him liberally to beer fell upon him and robbed him of his watch and money. Wallace resisted and was seriously slashed about the face and the struggle. The victim was sent to hospital, and Cooney arrested. Another paper says Wallace was mate of the whaler Northern Star.

SUPREME COURT.

Before Judd, C. J., Monday, November 29th.

In re estate of Alina (Ch.) of Honolulu, deceased, application for probate of the will, continued from the 22nd inst. The Court heard the evidence of Kanalu, one of the subscribing witnesses, for whose testimony hearing was postponed. It was ordered, no one contesting, that the will be admitted to probate and that letters of administration with the will annexed issue to J. Alfred Magoon under bond of $250.

Before Preston, J. In re estate of Hiloone Konohiki, a minor. Application by S. Aukai, guardian, for order to sell real property of the ward situate in Auwailimu, Honolulu. Counsel for the petitioner gave the following reasons for making the application: That the ward is a leper without any hope of recovery; that he was in distress and want; that a piece of land in Kalawao, Molokai, could be bought for a trifle over $200, and a house there built for the reception of the ward if seat there; that the property in Auwailimu at present only brings in a rental of $30 per annum which could not be increased for nineteen months yet to come, and the ward probably would not live that long, and it is the desire of the ward to have the money for the remainder of his days, which are not many.

Hop Sing Co. vs. Kun On and John S. McGrew. Bill in equity to foreclose mortgage. Shocking Murder in San Francisco.

Death of Charles Francis Adams.

Hon. Charles Francis Adams, Sr., died at 8:30 o'clock Sunday, November 21. He was the third son of John Quincy Adams. Since he was made the victim of sharpers, who took advantage of his weakness four years ago, Mr. Adams had always been accompanied by an attendant.

Charles Francis Adams, L. L. D., D. C. L., son of John Quincy Adams, the sixth President of the United States, was born in 1807. He was nominated by the Free Soil party for the office of Vice-President in 1848. He was elected a member of Congress in 1858-60 by the Republicans.

In 1829 Mr. Adams married the youngest daughter of Peter C. Brooks, a Boston millionaire, a connection which also made him a brother-in-law of Edward Everett.

The President's Message.

A Washington despatch of November 21, thus discusses the President's coming message: "It is the belief of all the influential men who have arrived here since the elections this month that although this session of Congress will be a very short one, it will, in all probability, develop the Presidential candidates for both political parties.

Cannot Change their Spots.

Thomas Power O'Connor cables from London to the New York Star: The Tory organs recognize the peril in which the Ministry have placed themselves by the latest developments of the Irish policy. Vatican Troubles.

Cardinal Jacobini, the Papal Secretary of State, on the plea of ill-health, has asked the Pope to accept his resignation. It is known that the Cardinal suffers from incipient dropsy, but the chief cause of his desire to resign is the approach of a quarrel with the Quirinal.

THE ENGAGEMENT.

The Rovero and Escudedo families had been on terms of the closest intimacy ever since their immigration to Louisiana from Cuba in 1848. They had come to these shores on the same vessel, and though the Roveros were a little overbearing on account of their family connections in Havana, and the Escudedos were prone to refer on all occasions to their past possessions at Cardinas, yet, after their arrival on American soil, they fraternized as if they had all been born under one roof.

Shortly after the arrival of the two families in New Orleans, they selected residences down on the Rue Dumaine, about two squares apart, and barely a day passed but found a Rovero at the Escudedo residence or an Escudedo slipping delicious Xeres at the Rovero table. Old man Escudedo started in the sugar trade, and the delicate Castilian Rovero opened a wholesale cigar store. Both prospered well, and in a few months had succeeded in accumulating quite a handsome sum as the result of shrewd speculation. Both drove out on afternoons in their carriages, and both dined frequently together down on the lake. It was almost touching to see the fond affection existing between these two families, and their neighbors could not but believe they were closely related.

It was not long before that sort of promiscuous brotherly love that had grown up between them became more concentrated, and Jose Rovero became deeply enamored with Juanita Escudedo. He was 24 and she was 18, and their fathers looked upon their espousal as a thing extremely desirable for both. Of afternoons they talked the matter over together, as they smoked their Regalia Chicas after dinner, and laid their little plans for setting up the young folks in a handsome domestic establishment when the happy event should take place.

One unfortunate afternoon a Mr. Cleburne, a gentleman of the highest respectability, called at the Rovero house on a friendly visit. In the course of conversation he alluded to the recent completion of a new cock pit, where gentlemen spent their leisure moments watching the game chickens battle with one another. He, himself, he said, was quite fond of it.

This remark electrified old man Rovero. A brighter luster came to his eye, and a ruddier glow to his cheek. He regretted he had not known this before. Why, he was the happy possessor of the champion cock of all Havana, and nothing could give him more pleasure than to show American birds what a Spanish game cock was made of. He thanked his visitor for the information he had given, and said that he was probably the oldest cock fighter in all Cuba.

The next day old man Escudedo dined at the Rovero's, and the new cock-pit was mentioned. If the announcement of its existence had pleased Rovero, it delighted the whole Escudedo family. Of all amusements this, to them, was par excellence. Old Escudedo twisted his moustache vigorously. Since he was 15 years old he had raised game chickens, and he informed his friends confidentially that he had brought the greatest fighting chicken ever known in Cuba. This caused Senior Rovero to raise his eyelids in astonishment, and to shrug his shoulders. He, too, had brought over the pride of all Havana. He ventured to suggest that perhaps his amiable friend's chicken could whip all Cardenas, but his own was the champion of all Cuba.

In the most courtly Castilian they discussed the merits of their favorite birds, waxing warmer and warmer all the time. The family, having adjourned to the broad gallery after the cafe noir, heard with astonishment loud words in the dining-room, and on entering were astonished to see both old gentlemen confronting one another pale and excited. The reappearance of the ladies brought them to their senses, and they became the polished courtiers of half an hour before. The result of this little encounter was a match for $2,000 between the Rovero and Escudedo birds, to take place at the new cock-pit in a month from that day.

It is impossible to forecast the results that may follow from so slight a circumstance as the possession of a game rooster. From that afternoon it was noticed the two old gentlemen grew more polite to each other, and there was a reserve in their manner that betokened an underlying coolness. It was bruited about that there was to be the greatest cock-fight at the new cock-pit New Orleans ever saw, and there were formed two parties, the one favoring the Rovero bird, the other swearing by Escudedo's. As day after day passed the excitement over the event increased, and the two chickens, having fully recovered from their sea trip from Havana, were duly trained and groomed each morning.

While the alarms of war were marshaling together the adherents of "Pe-pite," the bellcoke chauticleer of Rovero, and "Zip," the fierce-eyed chicken of Escudedo, the two swains, Jose and Juanita, billed and cooed in loving half tones utterly oblivious of the coming fray.

If the heads of their houses, the old gentlemen, chose to exhibit strong feelings on account of their feathered pets, it mattered little to them, for they moved in an atmosphere of love entirely above such ordinary things as chicken fights. At last the great day approached. The papers had announced the event in flaming advertisements, and seats had been sold in advance, some of them bringing as much as $10 apiece. Such was the interest taken in the fight it was found impossible to afford even standing room to the throng that desired to attend, and so an arrangement was made that the varying progress of the combat should be given to the crowd in the street by a stenorian-voiced lawyer from the upper window of the cock-pit.

The two families had almost ceased to speak to one another, and Jose thought he noticed a slight coolness in his innamorata, Juanita. He called there regularly every day, and was well received and all that, but his welcome had more ice water than wine about it. Everybody was polite, courteous, suave, but through it all there ran an undercurrent of frozen lemonade that was not exactly pleasant to the ardent Jose Rovero.

The day of combat arrived. Old man Rovero had arranged for a messenger to convey the result to his family, and Senior Escudedo had hired a cab-driver to carry the news to his house. In each domicile the breakfast was eaten in silence. The great climax was soon to come, nobody cared to talk. A little before noon Jose called to invite Juanita to take a promenade. They would pass by the cock-pit and hear the news during the battle. Juanita accepted the invitation gladly and followed by the prayers of the whole Escudedo family for their chicken, they started out.

The street around the cock-pit was thronged with a heterogeneous crowd. Betting was lively, and even the ubiquitous small boy watered cigarettes and Creole beer. About 1 o'clock a hush fell upon the throng. The little lawyer in the upper window announced, "The birds are in the pit." The heat was so great inside he had taken off his coat, and was mopping his face with a handkerchief.

"They commenced!" he shouted, and the crowd echoed the announcement with a cheer.

"Jose," whispered Juanita, leaning on her lover's arm in the outskirts of the multitude, "I do not wish any harm to your father's chicken, but I want our bird to win."

She said this in such sweet Spanish that Jose himself felt inclined to weaken in his allegiance to his father's champion. He hinted that it made no difference to them who won.

"But you know," she continued, "papa's chicken was the best in all Cuba."

Jose agreed to this, provided his father's was not included in the sweeping assertion.

"I do not think your chicken is to be compared to ours," she went on.

"Perhaps not," meekly answered Jose.

"Rovero has put in a good blow," shouted the man in the window, and a smile overspread Jose's face.

"You need not laugh about it, Jose," Juanita said, indignantly, the color mounting to her face; "one blow is nothing."

"Rovero has Escudedo down!" yelled the man at the window. The Rovero backers cheered.

Juanita was now full of the excitement.

"It is mean of your father to take advantage of mine," she said, letting go Jose's arm. "It is not fair. I know it is not fair. They are cheating in there." Her face was white now.

Jose said nothing, but looked good-naturedly down upon his fiancée.

The beautiful brunette would have preferred that Jose should show some resentment. His silence made her more angry.

"Jose," said she, "you Havana people think you are so smart, and you will take advantage of a poor old gentleman like my father. It is mean, too mean, I say."

"The Escudedo bird is killed," shouted the lawyer, throwing his hat high in the air. It lodged on a housetop across the street. There was one tumultuous yell. It could be heard squares away.

Juanita trembled in every muscle. Her family pride had been wounded to the quick. It was an insult to her personally, so she reasoned. Jose said nothing and his heart her more. Unable to endure the agony any longer, she turned to the incipient young man with "Senior Jose it were, it is a shame the way your family treat my family, and I will not stand it. They have insulted my father by letting their chicken kill his and I will have nothing more to do with you."

Jose was appalled. He could not understand Juanita's system of logic and endeavored to appease her. She left him abruptly and started homeward. He was amazed. He had cared little about the fight and had less feeling in the matter. He looked after the disappearing form of his sweetheart with sorrowing eyes. They never met afterward. Even to this day, when there is roast chicken on the table at the Escudedo house, not a word is spoken, as if avatars unpleasant associations of the great fight of 1849, when the Rovero bird broke the neck of the Escudedo chicken and Juanita's engagement at the same blow.—Charles E. Whitney in Times-Democrat.

The Late Volcanic Eruptions.

The injury done by the late volcanic eruptions in New Zealand can now be pretty accurately gauged. The Melbourne Argus states that an area of 2,000 square miles is covered with quite three inches of volcanic dust, while the deposit reaches to three feet and more over twenty miles. For 400 square miles the country is totally destroyed, and 1,600 square miles are much damaged, the result depending on the problem of the fertilizing qualities of the deposit. Speaking of volcanic disasters, Cassinociolo, in the island of Ischia, which was wrecked by an earthquake just three years ago, has been sufficiently rebuilt to accommodate visitors to the hot springs. Special "safety houses" have been constructed near the springs in case of any further earthquake.—Frank Leslie's.

A Nation of Tavern-Keepers.

Slowly, but surely, the Swiss are being converted from a nation of freemen into a race of tavern-keepers. "Restoration" appears at every turning. In the towns every other house is a "hot." In the mountains every other chalet is a "cafe." Upon the road the tourist is waylaid all day long by the peripatetic vendors of refreshment, who seem to bob out of each bush besieging the carriage with wood strawberries and wild cherries, stale bread and fresh milk, and in case these appeals to the inner man prove unavailing, straightway supplementing them with an assault upon his vanity in the form of forest flowers and wicker-baskets and carved work.—Cor. Courier-Journal.

A Costly Indian Tomb.

Taj, the famous tomb in India on the Agra, built 200 years ago by Shah Jehan, in honor of his favorite wife, cost, says Hugh Wilkinson in "Sunny Lands and Sea," $23,000,000, and took 20,000 men seven years to complete. This is equal to 340,000 men in one year, and assuming that the material cost half the money, it appears that the workmen earned, on an average, less than $4 to a year. "Slaves," you say? Perhaps, but their "keep" must have cost more than that. Guess the boy exaggerated.—Detroit Free Press.

In Honor of the South.

The south has been remembered in the naming of the new navy cruisers. One will be called the Charleston and another the Baltimore. The Charleston will be a 1,000-ton ship, and built on the plan of the Japanese cruiser Yamawakan. The Baltimore will be a steel cruiser of 4,413 tons, with armored deck. The third of the line of ships will be named Newark. All of these vessels will be built of steel, and are expected to be completed and put in commission within the next two years.—Chicago Times.
