LOVE'S HARVESTING.
 [Alfred Austin.]
 Nay, do not quarrel with the seasons dear,
 Nor make an enemy of friendly Time,
 The fruit and foliage of the falling year
 Rival the buds and blossoms of its prime.
 Is not the harvest moon as round and bright
 As that to which the nightingales did sing?
 And thou, that call'st thyself my satellite,
 Will seem in Autumn all thou art in Spring.
 When steadfast sunshine follows fitful rain,
 And gleams the sickle where once passed the plow,
 Since tender green hath grown to mellow grain,
 Love then will gather what it scattereth now,
 And, like contented reaper, rest its head
 Upon the sheaves itself hath harvested.

Celluloid Versus Linen.
 [New York Mail and Express.]
 "Celluloid cuffs and collars are worn more generally now than ever before, said a wholesale and retail dealer on Broadway to a reporter.
 "How do you account for that fact?"
 "It is simply a question of economy. Washing now is high. It costs almost as much to launder a pair of linen cuffs and collars as it does to buy them. The celluloid articles can be cleaned perfectly at no cost within two minutes. When celluloid cuffs were first made they were too thick and rattled too audibly when they came in contact with any hard substance. This was quite objectionable. But now these are manufactured as so thin and pliable and so much like linen that few people could detect their quality unless they felt them.
 "Do you sell them principally in New York?"
 "A great celluloid trade is done in the west. The washerwomen out there must be either laid or hard to get, so the men wear celluloid cuffs and collars and save time, trouble and annoyance. You would be surprised if I told you some of the high toned men about town who wear them. They don't disguise the fact and swear they have gone back on linen collars and cuffs forever. Celluloid goods always appear laundered, and never come down in hot water. The big celluloid cuff and collar trade begins in the summer months. Youths going to Coney Island with their sweethearts want them and old men want them. They are becoming so popular that I predict that within ten years they will altogether supersede linen for collars and cuffs."

The Frog and the Peasant.
 [Detroit Free Press.]
 A Frog who had long dwelt in a Pond near a Peasant's Cabin was one evening Highly Delighted to hear the Peasant remark to his wife:
 "Have you ever Noticed how Beautifully that Frog sings?"
 The Speech tickled the Frog Amazingly, and he at once began his Tune and kept it up all night long. At day-light the Peasant came down with a Club and called out:
 "If you don't leave here forthwith I'll be the death of you!"
 "What have I done?" asked the Astonished Frog.
 "Kept us Awake all night with your Croaking!"
 "But it was only Last Evening that you committed me on my Song."
 "That is True, but I Heard only brief Songs and at long intervals."
 Moral—It is a dangerous thing to compliment the man who makes the Opening Speech at a ward caucus. Nine times out of ten he'll want to go to the legislature.

The Latest Washington Fad.
 [Miss Grundy in Boston Courier.]
 Has any aesthetic Boston lady yet had a Kafé Klatch? If not, Washington is ahead of Boston, for the youngest daughter of Justice Miller, of the United States supreme court, has had one for several weeks. It is not a revival of an old style of gown, made of modern materials, nor any article of personal adornment, nor yet a refined species of malaris contracted in Rome and developed in Paris. Miss Miller, every Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock, entertains those of her friends in the foreign legations, and among Americans who speak German, and has German black bread, coffee, and other refreshments usually seen at a social gathering by day in Germany, all cooked and served in German style. No food or drink not seen in Germany on such occasions is provided.
 Vienna's "Beggars' Ball."
 [Pall Mall Gazette.]
 During the various carnival festivities at Vienna, the palm for eccentricity was carried off by a "beggars' ball." The guests were rigged out as thieves, pick-pockets, coiners, defaulting cashiers, armed burglars and rascals of the lowest type. One of the most amusing representations was a group of men and women violently, their faces scratched and noses bleeding—a parody on the lively scenes that sometimes occur. Prizes were distributed for the best dressed and sustained characters. The first medal was won by a woman, whose toilet bristled with tiny revolvers.

Pronunciation of Afghan Words.
 [Pall Mall Gazette.]
 Cabul is pronounced Kawble; Merv is pronounced Mahriv; Herat is pronounced Herah; Kurrahee is pronounced K'rachy; Peshawar is pronounced Peshower. The accent on Afghanistan is on of the second syllable. In such words as Bolan, Rohat, etc., the accent is on the second syllable, and the "a" is pronounced broad like "ah."

A GREAT NEWSPAPER. THE WEEKLY P. C. ADVERTISER is the best and most complete paper published in the Kingdom.

MONDAY - - - June 29th.

"SMALL-POX IN JAPAN." There was an important omission in our article under this heading in Saturday's ADVERTISER.

IS JAPAN AN ASIATIC COUNTRY?

We put this question because a persistent attempt has been made by the Opposition press to discountenance Japanese immigration.

In this connection we refer our readers to the translation of a remarkable article on the subject, published more than six months ago by the "Jiji Shimpo," the leading Japanese newspaper, which we print in another column.

General Irwin, which we have been permitted to read. Mr. Irwin writes in remonstrance against the attacks upon the Japanese in certain of the local press, under date June 25th, on board the Yamashiro Maru.

Let it ever be borne in mind that this country, so far as the race is concerned, is an Asiatic State. But its civilization and institutions have been adopted from Europe, and therefore it is not, either politically or socially, an "Asiatic country."

Native Sunday-school Exhibitions. The exhibition of Sunday-schools at Kawaiaho and Kaunakapili churches came off very pleasantly yesterday.

The Fun Concert. The Royal Hawaiian Band will give a complimentary concert to Mr. and Mrs. Hoffmann at the Hawaiian Hotel to-night at 7:30 o'clock.

Baseball - An Unsatisfactory Game. The Pacific and Oceanic Clubs met at the baseball ground last Saturday afternoon, and the game was commenced a little before 4 o'clock.

Fatal Accident. At Hanalei, Kauai, last Friday, a German laborer was driving a cart down a hill, the cart suddenly upset, and he was instantly killed.

Shall Japan Become a Christian Country?

The "Japan Mail" translates the following rather remarkable article from the "Jiji Shimpo."

To a man who has no desire for the society of his fellows, the only alternative is to retire from the world altogether, and to bury himself in some remote retreat.

Only a short time ago, the writer had a conversation with an Englishman, who told him that though the Egyptian massacre of last spring, and the recent proceedings of French in reference to China, might appear revolting to the public, still, in one sense, the responsible military leaders were not to blame in the matter, the true cause of the seeming cruelty being that the European soldiers hold the life of an Oriental very cheaply, and think no more of destroying it than of putting an end to a pest or insect existence.

The foregoing, however, does not immediately refer to the subject of our discussion, though what we have described must inevitably enter largely into the nature of the relations that exist between countries.

As some of our readers may have opinions at variance with our own, we may here deal with what we may suppose will be their objections. It will be convenient to divide these opponents of our views into two classes, unbelievers and Buddhists.

The mind of an unbeliever is light and cold, and being so, he ought to adopt whatever religion is popularly respected. To destroy shelves for ancestral tablets or to break a cross is too unpronounced an action to pass unnoticed, nor is it a politic way of dealing with society to declare one's own disbelief in the existence of a God.

The Volcano Excursion Trip.

Ed. P. C. ADVERTISER-Sir, I, with four other ladies, have just returned from an excursion trip to the volcano, and we all of us had such a splendid time, that the volcano itself is such a magnificent sight, that I cannot rest satisfied until I have told you something about it.

When Mr. Wilder advertised the first of the round trips, and let the public know that he could take tourists to the volcano and return for $50, a number of us arranged to go.

As we came near the anchorage the whistle sounded one toot for each passenger going to the volcano, so that the men ashore in charge of the horses might know how many to bring down.

About 4 o'clock p. m. we started down the road leading to the crater, taking with us shawls and wraps, for the night promised to be clear and cold.

I found all my preconceived ideas on the subject utterly at fault. I recognized the great walls of the crater as shown in several sketches I have seen; but when we reached the lakes of fire, after a walk of some three miles, I found myself gazing at something that the most vivid imagination would find it hard to describe.

We reached the Volcano House again about half-past eleven, and went to bed, feeling tired, but satisfied at having seen the crater. I counted no less than six double blankets on my bed, and very comfortable they were.

The whole trip was a delightful one, and was made doubly pleasant by the constant attention of Mr. Wilder, who was always preparing some new pleasure for us.

Farwell Concert.

The concert given last evening in the Music Hall, by Miss Annie Montague and Mr. Charles Turner was fully up to the standard of excellence of the series with which the musical public of Honolulu have been entertained by these gifted artists. In part first, the cavatina from "Pre Au Clercs," sung by Miss Montague, was pleasing, her sympathetic voice being well adapted to the pathos of the piece. Brahms' well-known song, "The Death of Nelson," was well sung by Mr. Turner; and the selection from Fauria, sung by Mrs. Wiseman, received merited applause. The second, and final part of the evening's entertainment, included three scenes from Gounod's "Faust," and it is only justice to Miss Montague and Mr. Turner to say that throughout the whole of the long scenes they sustained the characters of Faust and Marguerite in an artistic and satisfactory manner. The "Jewel Song" in the garden scene was well sung, the voices blending harmoniously. The acting was level; and the selections, being sung in English, the interest was well sustained.

The audience was a very good one, the house being well filled. Their Majesties the King and Queen were present, together with pretty much all other lovers of good music in Honolulu. The receipts of the evening were about $400.

Accidental Drowning.

Hilo, Hawaii, June 25, 1885. On Thursday evening last a kakaka named Kaulana, who was employed on the steamer Kinna, was drowned while in the act of taking a bath by diving from the steamer, which was lying at anchor in the bay. The body was not seen after it struck the water, and at latest accounts it had not been recovered. The Hawaiian brig Hazard, Goodman, Master, will probably sail for San Francisco on the 27th inst. At present Hilo is blessed with plenty of rain.

"Children's Day."

Yesterday was devoted to the children at the Bethel Union church. At both services the young people were out in full force. At the morning service the school marched into church with banners, singing, "March On." Rev. S. E. Bishop read the scripture lesson, and Dr. Elshoff offered prayer. Mrs. S. M. Damon presided at the organ and led the singing. There were recitations by Miss Addie Smith and Mr. Maurice Beck with Miss Helen Hillebrand, with the aid of a map, described Paul's missionary journey. The school recited, by classes, portions of the life of Paul. The pastor gave a ten minute address on the "Character of Paul." He said: "A man's character is not what he has or what he knows, but what he is. Some have much, others little character. Paul had much. In this climate they build houses and churches for but one season. But in the States they build for all seasons. Paul built for time and the hereafter. He went from city to city to preach the gospel. Many ought to go from this Sunday-school and church to preach the gospel in all lands.

In the evening there were interesting addresses by General Secretary Fuller and Mr. Frederick T. Rouse, who is on his way to complete his studies at Hartford. There was, under charge of Mrs. B. F. Dillingham, a Tower of Truth covered with moss, in which thirteen young ladies placed chimes, accompanied by appropriate verses of Scripture, which was followed by Miss Katie Lewis singing "Chiming Bells." The song was beautifully rendered. The church had been profusely decorated for the occasion. Behind the pulpit there was inscribed in letters of flowers, "Feed my lambs." The contributions of flowers were abundant and beautiful. The pastor expressed his sense of appreciation to all in the church who had aided in making this day both pleasant and profitable to the children, and thanked Messrs. Fuller and Rouse for their earnest addresses.

On Wednesday evening there will be a preparatory lecture and admission of new members. On Thursday evening will be the regular monthly social. On next Sabbath morning the celebration of the Lord's Supper.

Skating Carnival.

The carnival at the Central Park Skating rink last Friday night was a very pleasant affair. There were about fifty skaters in costumes on the floor, all masked, and as they glided about the hall they were loudly applauded by the spectators, of whom there were at least a thousand present. One of the most novel and attractive costumes was worn by Mrs. C. W. King, and was made of numbers of the P. C. ADVERTISER. Three prizes were awarded, the first being given to a little mite of a girl, a Miss Gomez; the second to the "Skeleton," Mr. Frank Darling; and the third to the "Fat Boy," Mr. Severin.

A very interesting game of baseball was played last Saturday morning between the junior clubs from Fort-street and the Royal schools. The little fellows acquitted themselves in the style, and the decisions of the umpire were given, and accepted, with good nature and judgment. The match was won by the Star club, from Fort-street school.

An important meeting of those interested in the celebration of the coming Fourth of July is called for this evening at the Hawaiian Hotel.

BLOWING UP A SHIP.

POSSIBILITIES OF THE WARFARE OF THE FUTURE.

Dropping Bombs from the Skies—A Miss—Light-Giving Rockets Which Unmask the Attacking Party—A Magnificent Sight.

[Green's "Modern Dredgals."] Our equipment was the same as before, except that half of us carried a single ten-pound bomb instead of three five-pound ones. We followed the shore on the southern side of the bay as far as Dalke Island, which borders it in that direction. About a mile in the offing were visible the lights of a large steamer, the first of the line. We knew that the next one lay two miles beyond her, but from that distance we could not make out her lights. Arrived at a point almost directly above the vessel, I halted my little party and explained my plans, which were exceedingly simple. One of the men, bearing a ten-pound bomb, was to descend cautiously until he was near enough to drop his bomb into the funnel, after which he was to rise upward again as fast as possible. The rest were to remain in readiness to repeat the maneuver if it should fail the first time. The man selected at once began the descent, and for a few moments we strained our eyes through the gloom, vainly trying to follow his movements. Suddenly a slight rattle was heard; there was a bright flash and a stunning report. The bomb had missed the funnel and exploded on the deck.

For a few seconds there was dead silence, then a confusion of many voices; then a shot was heard, a rocket whizzed up past us and burst into a cloud of dazzling brightness, which lighted up with wondrous clearness an area of more than a mile. In the unearthly glare we could plainly see our comrades hastening upward to rejoin us. Before the intense brightness had gone out, there was a second report, another rocket came hurtling and screaming right among us, and burst into great blazing stars above. The effect was indescribably magnificent, but sadly disconcerting to our plans. We were confused and hazled, and must have been plainly visible to our board. "Scatter, men, scatter!" I shouted as a third rocket came almost in the track of the second. It was a fatal mistake, for it remained where we were, but in spite of the flaming sulphurous masses that were falling like a rain of fire around me, I balanced myself for a moment, resting at a lofty elevation at a distance of about half a mile from the ship, diffused a bright light over the water, by which the smallest boat within the distance of a mile might have been directly seen. The rattle of a drum beating to quarters came across the water, and it was clear that she at least would not be caught napping. But while with my whistle I rally my followers, and the dull reports, as shell after shell was sent up. This was the very thing we wanted. The darkness in which she was shrouded was necessary to our success, while the intensity of vigilance with which her crew scanned the surface of the water prevented any eye being turned toward the sky.

With a low whistle I brought all my men around me, and in a few words, directed one who carried a large shell to descend low over the vessel, and make quite sure that it dropped into the funnel. He was then to shoot away to the dark side as quickly as possible. The rest of us ascended to greater height, keeping as directly over the doomed ship as we could in the darkness. For a few minutes, which seemed an age, we waited, looking down. No grander or more striking spectacle can be imagined than we met our gaze, the flashes of the mortar, the intense blaze of bursting shells, the quivering light reflected from the illuminated circle of sea, and in the distance the rockets which the other vessel continued to throw up. The third ship was now burning lights too, and so brightly was the surface of the water displayed that even so small an object as the head of a swimmer would have been seen.

But we had not long time to admire this brilliant display. We could not follow our comrades' movements in the darkness which fortunately enshrouded him; but after some minutes of suspense a deep, thunderous sound was heard, followed, after a few awful moments, by a loud, confused shouting. The firing ceased; the light of the last shell went out like a dying lamp; and through the darkness a horrible rushing, gurgling sound came up to our ears. "That's the last of her," said one of the men, in awe-struck tones; "I guess that shell has blown a hole in her bottom. Say, captain, shall we go and try the other one? We may as well make a complete job while we're about it."

The Tricolor Quadrille. [Paris Letter.] The latest and funniest phase of French fashion has cropped up in Paris in the invention by a society leader of what he calls the "Tricolor Quadrille." Of the eight couples composing the quadrille half the gentlemen wear red coats, the other half blue coats, and all of them white knee breeches. At last, however, we could make the quadrille movement makes kaleidoscopic. It is proposed to get up a cosmopolitan ball where the dancers shall represent the national colors of every government in Europe.

Jenny Lind. Jenny Lind Goldschmidt, who has not sung in public since 1863, now proposes to raise her voice in Norwich, England, for the sake of raising funds for a children's infirmary there of which she was the foundress.

The Bicycle Business. There are in England over 300,000 cyclists, and the capital invested in manufacture of bicycles and tricycles is $15,000,000, employing 3,000 persons.

A ROUGH SEA.

ON BOARD THE MONITOR EN ROUTE TO HAMPTON ROADS.

The Iron Clad's Battle with the Waves—Narrow Escape From a Watery Grave—Commander S. Dana Green's Letter—Extracts.

[United Service.] "UNITED STATES STEAMER MONITOR, HAMPTON ROADS, March 14, 1862.—MY DEAR MOTHER: I commence this now, but I don't know when I shall finish, as I have to write it at odd moments when I can find a minute's rest. When I bid Charlie good night on Wednesday, the story, you see, was not finished. On the next day, as I then thought it would be impossible to finish our repairs on Thursday, but the mechanics worked all night, and at 11 o'clock we started down the harbor, in company with the gunboat Saccam and Currituck. We went along very nicely, and when we arrived at 10 o'clock the wind freshened and the sea came alongside and took her in tow. We went out past the narrows with a light wind from the west and very smooth water, and as it was a matter of time before the Thursday night, I turned out at 6 o'clock Friday morning, and from that time until Monday at 7 p. m. I think I lived ten good years. About noon the wind freshened and the sea was quite rough. In the afternoon the sea was breaking over our decks at a great rate, and coming in from the westward in perfect sheets. The berth-deck hatch leaked in spite of all we could do, and the water came down under the tower like a waterfall. It would strike the pilot-house and go over the tower in the most beautiful curve. The water came through the narrow eye-holes in the pilot-house with such force as to knock the helmsman completely around from the wheel. At 4 p. m. the water had gone down our smoke-stacks and blowers to such an extent that the blowers gave out and the engine-room was filled with gas.

"Then, mother, occurred a scene I shall never forget. Our engineers behaved like heroes, every one of them. They fought with the gas, endeavored to get the blowers to work, until they dropped apparently dead. I was nearly suffocated with the gas, but got on deck, after every one had left the engine-room, just in time to see myself. The three women were in the same condition as the engineers. Then times looked rather blue. We had no fear as long as the engine could be kept going to pump out the water, but when that stopped the water increased rapidly. I immediately rigged the hand-pump on the berth deck, but as we were obliged to lead the hose out over the tower, which was not force enough in the pump to throw water out. Our only resource now was to bail, and that was useless, as we had to pass the buckets up through the tower, which made it a very long operation. What to do now we did not know. We had done all in our power, and must let things take their own course. Fortunately the water was off-shore, so we bailed the tug-boat and told them to steer directly for the shore, in order to get in smooth water.

"At 8 p. m. we managed to get the engine to work, and everything comparatively quiet again. The captain had been up nearly all the previous night, and, as we did not like to leave the deck without one of us being there, I told him I would keep the watch from 8 to 12, he take it from 12 to 4, and I would relieve him from 4 to 8. Well, the first watch passed off very nicely, and so did the second. At 12 o'clock things looked so favorable that I told the captain he need not turn out. I would lie down with my clothes on, and if anything happened I would turn out and attend to it. He said, 'Very well, and I went to my room and hoped to get a little nap.

"I had scarcely got to my bunk when I was startled by the most infernal noise I had ever heard. The Merrimac's firing last Sunday was music to us. We were just passing a shoal, and the sea suddenly became rough and right ahead. It came up with tremendous force through our anchor-weigh and forced the air through our hose-pipe where the chain comes, and then the water would rush through in a perfect stream, clear to our berth-deck, over the wardroom table. The noise resembled the death groans of twenty men, and with the most dismal, awful sound I have ever heard. Of course the captain and myself were on our feet in a moment, and endeavored to stop the hose-pipe. We succeeded partially, but now the water began to come down our blowers again, and we feared the same accident that happened in the afternoon. We tried to hail the tugboat, but the being dead about their ears, and we had no way of signaling them, as the steam-whistle which father had recommended had not been put on.

"We began then to think the Monitor would never see daylight. We watched carefully every drop of water that went down the blowers, and sent continually to ask the crew what they were doing. His only answer was 'Slowly,' but could not be kept going much longer unless the water could be stopped from coming down. The sea was washing completely over our decks, and it was dangerous for a man to go on them, so we could do nothing to the blowers. In the midst of all this our wheel ropes jumped off the steering wheel, owing to the pitching of the ship, and became jammed. She now began to sheer about at an awful rate, and we thought our lawyer would certainly part. Fortunately it was new, and held on well. In the course of half an hour we freed our wheel-ropes, and now the blowers were the only difficulty.

"At about 3 o'clock Saturday a. m. the sea became a little smoother, though still rough, and going down our blowers somewhat. The never-falling answer came from the engine-room, blowers going slowly, but can't hold out much longer. From 4 a. m. till daylight was the longest hour and a half I ever spent. I certainly thought Old Sol had stopped in the recess case of the Alaska and Winnipeg, is quite common in seafaring life. Communication between the vessels is maintained by signals, flags being used by day and lights by night. When the forward vessel wants to go to starboard the vessel in tow is signaled to throw her bow to port. This movement draws the stern of the forward vessel in the same direction, causing her to go to starboard. The reverse of this forward vessel sends the bow of the forward vessel to starboard.
