THE EVILS OF PAINTING

And their Remedy.
"It has been said with much truth, too, that house painting might, with study and acquirement of taste, resume its rank as a liberal art."—Painters' Manual.

Believing the above to be true, A. B. KERR has now re-organized his system of working the business in Honolulu. In the first place he has secured the services of that celebrated artist, Mr. MAX KOHN, formerly of San Francisco, whose work in the line of plain and decorative paper-hanging, frescoing, &c., is up to the present time unsurpassed, and on these Islands has never been equalled. For house painting jobs first-class mechanics only will be employed. In future patrons can depend upon my filling every order on the most scientific basis known to the trade.

The Sign Painting and Lettering department will be permanently presided over by Mr. GEO. STRATMEYER, (further comment unnecessary.)

P.S.—Send for designs of frescos for ceiling and cornices. Something new; and if you want any glass put in call at

THE LUNATIC ASYLUM.

Is now enlarged by the addition of a new building for quiet and convalescent patients. Mr. J. G. Hayselden, the contractor, has succeeded in carrying out ably the ideas of Dr. Hagan, and has even gone so far in his desire to benefit the Asylum as to put in extra work and buildings not called for in his contract, at the request of the medical superintendent. The building is of wood, and is in aspect as much like an ordinary dwelling-house as could be made. It is approached by a flight of steps leading up to a broad verandah. Through the center of the building runs a wide hall, from which the different rooms open off. The first room on the right hand side contains eight beds, for those who recover better when in society; then comes a passage leading off to the right. The remaining rooms along this passage and the hall-way are single rooms, large, comfortable, well lighted and ventilated, and containing the necessary accommodations. On the left of the hall are the same style of rooms, except the one at the entrance, which is reserved for a sitting room and library for the patients. Beyond this are a suite of rooms for patients who are accompanied by friends or servants. It is noticeable that the windows are not barred and everything is light and cheerful, giving a great home-like contrast to the old building, which is arranged in gaol-like cells with barred doors and windows. There are accommodations for 25 patients, which will sensibly relieve the strain upon the old building.

During the past year 15 patients have been discharged cured out of 60, an unusually large percentage. There are many peculiar forms of mental disease among the inmates, one even being of the belief that he is our Savior in person, and wearing his hair and beard long and untrimmed. Great praise is due to the contractor, Mr. Hayselden, and the medical superintendent for the excellent style the building has been planned and finished, and the Ministerial party duly expressed their satisfaction with everything, and especially for the courtesy with which they had been received. Mr. Wright, the Superintendent, also was complimented on his share of the work.

In this connection we would again draw public attention to the execrable condition of the road to the Asylum. It is simply fit for "neither man nor beast" to traverse.

THE ISLANDERS.

Brought by the Julia, are much smaller than Hawaiians, have dark skins, negro features, and woolly heads. They are quite healthy and in good spirits, singing and dancing a great part of the time. They declare themselves very contented with their treatment, both on the voyage and here.

OPIUM SMUGGLING.

During the last two months quite a number of attempts have been made to smuggle opium into this Kingdom. These have been defeated by the vigilance of the Customs Department officials, especially the Port-Surveyor, Mr. MORRILL. It throws into light the efficiency of the officials that so many captures should have been made in so short a time, but at the same time it shows us that the smuggling of opium into this Kingdom must have been thought easy in the Collector-General's absence or so many would not have tried it. We trust that this belief has now been dispated by the vigilance which these occurrences prove that Mr. HENRY, the Deputy-Collector, has impressed upon his subordinates. The following list will enable our readers to see the hauls made through the vigilance of Mr. MORRILL during the last 7 weeks:

Nov. 17, ex Suez.....20 half lb. tins
Dec. 7, ex Discovery.....109 " "
Dec. 21, ex Kikihiki.....30 " "
Jan. 11, ex Falkenberg, 40 half lb. tins, and 3 five lb. tins.

During that short space of time no less than four seizures have been made and convictions of four persons obtained.

PUNAHOU PRIMARY.

Yesterday afternoon the primary department of Punahou was formally opened in the old Armstrong premises, on Beretania street, at the head of Richards street. Over 24 pupils were enrolled. The whole building has been renovated and painted and fixed, and now it presents the best appearance of any school we have seen. Miss Moore, who is a new arrival in our city, will take charge.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The Uilama brought 120 bags of paddy from Hanalei.

The Amelia 25 days from Port Blakeley arrived yesterday with 500,000 ft of lumber and 100,000 shingles.

The barkentine Tropic Bird, which arrived in San Francisco, Dec. 18 from Tahiti, reports that on November 17th, 1882, in latitude 14° 50' south, longitude 149° 5' west, she spoke the American boat Pacific, schooner-rigged, 1½ tons, Captain Bernard Gilboy of San Francisco, 90 days out from that port, and bound for Brisbane, Australia. He reported having experienced fine weather throughout, except between latitude 5 and 8 north, where he encountered head winds and calms and was delayed 29 days. He was sanguine of success.

The barkentine W. H. Diamond completed one of the best trips on record yesterday, being only eleven days from Kahului. This is, if we mistake not, the best, since 1861, when the famous old clipper bark Comet arrived from Honolulu in ten days and twenty hours.—Atta, Dec. 23.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Correspondence is solicited on the topics of the day, or what may become so.

We reserve the right to excise purely personal matter.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents.—Ed.

EDITOR BULLETIN.—An item in the Gazette of January 10th, says that "the road leading past Mr. Mackintosh's has not been in reverse condition for years." Any impartial observer will join us in saying that said road has not been in better condition for years, in fact ever since the Nuuanu road was first opened.

Yours, &c.,

MANY RESIDENTS OF NUUANU.

LOCAL & GENERAL ITEMS.

The Mochoua estate cases were decided yesterday, adversely to the King's claim.

Pinkoi street is being macadamized. By-and-bye we shall have all the streets attended to, eh?

THIRTY-SIX lepers have been put in the Branch Hospital at Kakaako in the last two weeks.

YESTERDAY MORNING, out on King street, it was so cold that there was ice in the road at half-past six.

THE Band will not play at Emma Square this afternoon—it being engaged to play at the reception of Princess Likelike, at Waikiki.

MR. CRUZAN'S theme "on Sunday will be—in the morning, "Sin and its Cure"; in the evening, "And the Devil threw him Down."

YESTERDAY afternoon the Her-bridians were vaccinated by Drs. McKibbin and Trousseau. Thirty-three of them were sent to Ookala by the Luka.

H. R. II. PRINCESS LIKELIKE will hold a reception this afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock, at her Waikiki residence. The occasion is the return of her birthday.

We are told that the Board of Immigration did investigate into the matter of the returning South Sea Islanders taking arms with them, and were assured on the best authority that the arms were necessary.

A VERY fine camellia, in blossom, was brought in by Mr. J. S. Levey yesterday from his residence, and is now on view at his store on Fort st.

This is, we understand, the first camellia in bloom on the islands.

The Band will give an extra concert at Emma Square on Monday evening, Jan. 15; and the regular moonlight concerts at Emma Square on Thursday, Jan. 18, and Monday, Jan. 22—weather permitting.

On Monday evening last a couple of gentlemen drove a mob of 7 or 8 horses through Beretania street furiously. One lady had a narrow escape, having to climb over a fence. This sort of thing should not be permitted.

Yesterday afternoon, about three o'clock, the covered grocery wagon belonging to Mr. S. J. Levey was standing in front of the Union Feed Co's store. By some means the horse got startled and it ran away along Queen street. It ran into Mr. Tucker's brake, which was hitched up to Wilder's fence; then going along, as it turned up into Fort st., overset on the sidewalk next to S. Nott's Store store. The cover was all smashed up. In the meantime Mr. Tucker's horse ran away and ran into an express standing in front of Irwin & Co's. The express had part of its under gear damaged, but Mr. Tucker's brake suffered nothing but a slight scratch.

OPPOSED TO THE TREATY.

New York, Dec. 18.—The Post says: If Hawaiian sugar is admitted at San Francisco free of duty it must be admitted free at every other port, but what a monstrous perversion of justice it is that a bounty should be voted from the Treasury to a lot of cane-growers in a foreign country, for that is what it amounts to. Experience has proved that sugar is no cheaper in the Pacific Coast States by reason of this scandalous arrangement, which has run for eight or ten years. The Secretary of the Treasury has called attention to the fact that it may be terminated next year. It ought to be terminated at 12 o'clock noon on the earliest day it can be lawfully reached.

THE DAILY BULLETIN SUPPLEMENT

HONOLULU, H. I., SATURDAY, JANUARY 13, 1883.

TROUBADOUR.

With a jaunty cloak and swagger, and a jewel-handled dagger,
And a lace across his shoulder, by a ribbon—blue at that!
And his breeches, never bigger than would show his shapely figure,
And a fascinating feather in his funny little hat:
Not fat and roly-poly, like that parody Brignoli—
Singing sentiments affected to a mercenary tune—
But a poet, young and slender, he would charm the tender gender,
As he sighed his soul, in music, at the maiden or the moon.
He would rove the land and ocean, on a fancy, whim or notion:
He would sing the tender rondeau, he would tell the merry tale;
He would thrill the fierce Crusader, he would turn a srenader;
He would banquet in the castle, he would billet in the gaol.
And the Queens and noble maidens doted on his serenades,
And they dropped the smile or ribbon, and the gloves or lock of hair,
Or, in lieu of rope or stringlets, loosed their long and silken ringlets,
And the Minstrels, bold and loving, climbed them as you might a stair.
Thus, he poached on others' manors, and he fought for others' banners,
And he dined at others' tables, and he dined in others' lives,
And he 'lived on others' journeys, and he rhymed on others' tourneys,
And he emptied others' flagons, and he dined on others' wives.
So he wandered forth, a-warring, and a-rhyming and guttaring,
And in attitudes artistic, tinkled lute-tummy airs,
And the ladies all adored him, and the gallants aped and bored him,
And his tunes were legal-tender for his lodging everywhere.
Thus, a-humming, a-strumming and a-wooling and a-cooing,
Dealing ditties by the dozen, making sonnets by the score,
While the glamour of the amour hid the stammer of his grammar—
Ah! so gay, and free, and happy was the merry Troubadour!

LONDON GOSSIP.

(BY FLANEUR.)

Special for the Daily Bulletin.

The booty burglars have hitherto been in the habit of carrying off has consisted more or less of the contents of the houses they have deigned to honor with a nocturnal visit. A case which recently occurred in France shows that they are no longer to be depended upon to pursue their operations within such narrow limits. A Paris merchant had erected a Swiss cottage at Gennevilliers, and with his family had passed most of the summer there. Two or three weeks ago he removed into his winter quarters again in the French capital, securely locking up his country retreat. On the 1st instant, the weather being fine, he drove out with his family to spend the day at Gennevilliers, when, to his no small astonishment, he found, on arriving at his little estate, that the entire house, with the whole of its contents, had disappeared. The place where his Swiss cottage had been erected stood perfectly clear. Everything had been carried off by thieves, of whom not a trace has since been found.

The atrocious crime perpetrated in Austria about three years ago by Henri de Tourville, will be fresh in the recollection of some of your readers. This French adventurer, shortly after marrying an English lady of property, took her for a trip on the Continent, and murdered her in the most heartless manner by pushing her over a precipice in the mountains of the Tyrol. He was tried at Botzen, found guilty, and sentenced to eighteen years imprisonment with hard labor. In England he would have been hanged, in America lynched. Since his condemnation the convict has been doing his hard labor at Gradisca. Last week he was removed thence to Graz. The poor fellow's health has been so delicate and his conduct so exemplary, that he has been excused all hard labor for the rest of his term of imprisonment. He is now employed at the tedious and degrading work of compositor in the printing department of the Graz prison. It is stated in some of the Austrian papers that he will probably be liberated long before his full term has expired and will then come to England to claim the property left by his wife. Of course I sincerely hope he may get it.

Among the distinguished foreigners just arrived in the French capital is "the richest man in all Mexico." He is said to be of Irish origin, and to rejoice in the name of Don Patricio Milne. He has been captured by brigands several times, and had to pay millions for his ransom. In fact, owing to his immense wealth, so unsafe is he in his own country that he has been forced to turn his chateau into a fortress, and to have a body guard. Will not this Mexican millionaire require similar protection in the capital of civilization and—demimondainerie?

Switzerland has neither gold nor copper currency. The circulating media hitherto in force there are silver and nickel coins. This state of things is about to be changed, and in the Federal Budget for 1883, the Minister of Finance proposes to issue 250,000 gold pieces of 20 francs value each. These will be the first gold coins which have been struck in Switzerland.

The Geographical Society of Hamburg has decided to send a new expedition to Eastern Africa, personally conducted by Dr. Fischer, who was one of Denhardt's companions in 1879. Dr. Fischer, who has remained at Zanzibar, has requested the Geographical Society for means to cross the snowy range, and penetrate into the country of the Gallas, to the north. The Society taking into consideration the advantage that this expedition may confer on the commerce of Hamburg, has subscribed for this object 16,000 marks.

Chimney sweepers are in most civilized countries a singular people, a sort of race apart from the ordinary run of mankind. But of all chimney-sweepers in the world, the most extraordinary, if we may trust Le Nivernais, are to be found in a certain part of France. That enlightened organ of public opinion, in its last number, says:—"A shocking accident has sent a shudder through the breast of every inhabitant of our town. The chimney-sweeper, M. Gitrin, yesterday fell from a roof and received terrible injuries in the head. It is feared that amputation will be necessary."

THE CITY OF TELEPHONES.

Sixteen young ladies in cool morning costume sat in a line in a Fourth-street office yesterday afternoon. They were all talking in monosyllables to 16 other people in various parts of the city. A young man sitting at a desk in the rear of the line held a microphone to his year, and heard what each of the 32 persons said. It was a strange chorus of voices, and yet the young man did not appear to get tired, for he had held the instrument to his ear for many hours, and would do so for hours to come. The young ladies were the people who answer "Hello!" to you when you go to the telephone. They sit in the Central Exchange, on Fourth and Walnut streets, and answer the requests of 582 subscribers. Each lady has so many subscribers to attend to, and from early in the morning until 6 o'clock at night she listens to the requests of the people at the wires and answers them. There is no time for reading or loafing. The microphone is so adjusted that she can hear all that is said without trouble, and there are few minutes in the day when it is not talking. A messenger boy walks up and down behind the line of young ladies, and when one of them receives a call from the telephone a little check is made out, and this is given the messenger, who carries it off to a clerk, who thus keeps a constant record of all that is going on outside. The office, on Fourth and Walnut, is never closed. The lights in its windows are bright until the sunlight in the morning makes gas unnecessary. There are eight other exchanges in the city, namely, on Front-street, Freeman, Elm, Broadway, the Public Landing, Brighton, Covington, and Ninth-street.

Each exchange has direct connection with all the others. They are also connected with Richmond, Lawrenceburg, and Aurora, Ind., and Hamilton and Eaton, Ohio. Next week a wire will be begun to connect direct with Dayton, Ohio. The Cincinnati City and Suburban Telegraph Association has the reputation in other cities of giving the best service and being the most efficient of any in the country. It has in use nearly 2,000 wires, and employs over 100 operators, to say nothing of its various other employees, such as clerks and electricians. Capt. George N. Stone, General Manager of the association, said yesterday to a Commercial reporter that the telephone business has been an experiment with this company, as it has with all others. It took a good deal of time to perfect the arrangements, and they are only now getting their arrangements in the shape they would like to have them.

"At first," said Mr. Stone, "we put as many as 17 subscribers on one circuit or wire. We charged these $3 per month. This was in the early stages of telephony, and there was no microphone. It was difficult to hear well at best and there was so little use for the telephone then that it looked as though one wire would accommodate any number of subscribers. These things soon began to change. The desire for telephones seemed to grow with what it fed on. Each month compelled us to reduce the number of subscribers to the wire. From 17 we came down to five, and increased the rate to $1 per month for each subscriber within a half-mile of the exchange. We were compelled to build new wires all the time, and for each half-mile of distance we charged $1 extra. We found soon that people living several miles from the exchange could not afford the price. About this time the transmitter came into use. Now let me tell you something about this transmitter and microphone. The early Edison telephone did not have them. They were invented by Bell. It was a question for some time whether they would be successful. The National Bell Telephone Company was organized, and the stock ranged down at something like 15 cents on the dollar. Suddenly Mr. Bell, who had been hard at work in his laboratory, completed his invention. From a slight improvement the Bell telephone became a decided success. Stock doubled and then quadrupled. Men who had gone to bed with a few hundred shares of stock worth little or nothing woke up to find themselves rich. Mr. Bell had his patents complete. His instrument ran everything out of the market, and of course he had the business in his own hands. He determined to place a royalty of $10 on every transmitter and $10 on every microphone, and, of course, he got it. The result is that we pay $20 a year royalty on every telephone in use. This little thing you talk through and the instrument you hear from you can't buy for love or money. Twenty dollars a year rents them, and if we break one we pay $25 to replace it. Of course, this put prices up. We put in special wires for one subscriber with telephone and transmitter at $6 per month to any point within a radius of one-half mile from the Central Exchange, and $1 for every additional half-mile."

"How did that plan work?"
"Very well. All our business men availed themselves of the special wire, but the $1 for additional distance we still found did not do so well. We therefor concluded to equalize the rates, and at present we furnish a business subscriber with a special wire, telephone, and transmitter anywhere in the city of Cincinnati, Covington, Newport, Clifton, or Avondale for $8 33 per month, and residences in the same limits with special wire at $6 per month, or three subscribers on one wire at $1 16 per month. The equalization increased no subscriber more than $2 33 per month, and decreased many from $1 to $10 per month."

"How do these prices compare with other cities?"
"Well, for special wires to business houses, for one-half mile or five miles, in Cincinnati, the rate is $100 per year. In Chicago the price is $125 per year up to one mile, then in goes to $150 for one and a quarter miles, $175 for one and a half miles, $325 for three miles. New-York City is $150 per annum for one mile, $186 for a mile and a quarter, and $222 for anything over two miles. Pittsburg and New-Orleans are cheaper than Cincinnati for one-half mile, being $84 and $75, respectively. For one mile Pittsburg is $120, and New-Orleans $100, and they both increase—New-Orleans to $200 and Pittsburg to $250—for three miles."

It will be seen from Capt. Stone's figures that Cincinnati is supplied at exceedingly cheap rates, and it only takes a little experience in other cities to make Cincinnati more than contented with the service.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Hundreds of thousands of men die annually from strong drink.—Kansas Prohibitionist. We never undertake to criticize any other editor, but we do not believe that any man can die annually. Annually means every year, and no man can die every year for any great length of time, unless he has had a great deal of practice and experience in the business.—Tec. Sift.

GOING TO KEEPING HOUSE.

Two solid citizens were in a store talking over the news, when one of them spoke of a young fellow who was married recently, and had gone to keeping house, and the other one said:

"Yes, I was up to his house last week, and looked over the lay out. He has got everything just as nice as can be, and ought to be happy, with such a nice little wife. When I saw the furniture, the carpets, and everything just as complete as possible, I compared the scene in my mind, with the one of twenty years ago, when my wife and I went to keeping house. I rented a little one story house, with three small rooms. My wife had a feather bed and some sheets and comfortables, and I bought a basswood bedstead—one of these kind where the slats come down the first night, and keep coming down. I got a straw tick filled with hay, and after the slats came down we slept on the floor. It was in December, and I pledge you my word the frost was half an inch thick by the cracks in the floor, and when I got up in the morning to build a fire I just melted frost all over the floor with my feet."

"Didn't you and your wife catch cold?" asked the other man.

"Catch nothin'? Why, we were too healthy to catch cold. Honest, the room was actually too warm. The stove was the smallest cook stove you ever saw, and when you got a fire built you had to stand and feed it just as you would a baby. I remember my father came to visit me soon after, and how he laughed when I brought in a 'chunk' to keep up a fire all night. The 'chunk' was about as big as your arm. That first morning you ought to have seen us get breakfast. My wife was a little nervous about getting up and dressing before me. You see she had never been married any, and it came on her sudden. So I went into the pantry and broke the ice on the pancake batter that she had fixed the night before, and filled the little tea kettle, and stubbed around there barefooted on the frost and gave her a show, and she jumped into a few things, and when I came out by the stove she was sitting on a soap box with her feet in the oven looking things over. To tell the truth about it, she looked a little bit discouraged. Well, you see, she went agin' her folks wishes a marrying me, and she might have had the son of a man who kept a store—the one who busted there where we lived about nineteen years ago, and beat everybody who lent him money. You remember him, Jim. His boy got to gambling and they haven't heard from him since he went to Arkansas. Gosh! Just think of it. Suppose my wife had married him, she wouldn't have had no such house as she has got now, and all the money she wanted. Well, we snuggled around the stove, and pretty soon the tea kettle began to boil, and my wife put on her shoes, and broke the ice in the tin wash basin and washed her hands and face, and as the sausage began to fry she began to look good natured, and didn't seem half so disgusted with marrying, and then the coffee began to smell sort of sociable, and the potatoes that I peeled got so we could run a fork in them and then she put on the pancakes, and we sat down to the table. She sat right by the stove where she could turn the pancakes without getting up, and we eat and laughed, and I tell you I never had a meal taste so good in my life. I have eaten at Delmonico's, and in Paris Cafes, since, and have had everything that a white man ever eat, but I never had a meal taste as good as that first breakfast did, when the little woman sat there by the stove and turned them buckwheat pancakes. Say, Jim, when you look at my wife riding around in her carriage, with her diamonds, and seal skin, and everything she wants, looking kind of toney, you wouldn't think she ever knew how to turn pancakes and fry saggies, would you? Well she can beat 'em all. I wouldn't have you tell her, but she can wrestle an obstinate pancake, that wants to double up and run all over the griddle, and fetch it out browned on both sides, looking as though it was run in a mould. Some days the servant girls, and cooks, get tantrums, and the stuff don't come on the table just right, and pretty soon I see her eyes begin to look the way they did when she had her feet in the oven that morning, and then she gets up and goes to the kitchen, without a word, and makes them girls come to taw, and don't you forget it. She has had a good deal of sickness, Jim, and has lost children, and she ain't so pretty as she was when the bed slats fell down that night, but she's a daisy, and I guess she don't regret that she told the old folks she guessed she knew her business, when she married me. The old man thought I was a dam fool, but when I bought him a ten thousand dollar farm and stocked it for him, and hired a man to do the work, and all he had to do was to ride around and boss it, he changed his mind, and one day he admitted that he was the fool, and that I took the whole cake, bakery and all. Well, after that almighty cold morning, I traded a single barrel shot gun for a rag carpet, and sawed wood for a store keeper and got a rocking chair for the little woman, and we worried along for a few years pretty poor, Jim, but after awhile I struck my gait, and we have been making money hand over fist for several years, and din't care now whether school keeps or not. I hope our young friend, who has just gone to keeping house, will always be as happy as he is now, but, do you know, I believe it is best to commence down to the bottom of the ladder and work up. It is hard to get up, but it is mighty sight harder if you have to go down after you have started away up. It strikes me, when I was up to the young fellow's house, I noticed his wife had on her face about the same sort of an expression my wife had, twenty years ago, when she had her feet in the oven. I shall never forget that expression as long as I live, because it was new to me. Well, I guess it was new to her, too. I hope the new bride hasn't had the bed-slats fall down, or anything. Falling of the bed slats is one of the worst things in the world to take the conceit out of anybody, when they first get married. Well, I must go. Sh! There comes my wife now. Say, if you ever tell her that I have been giving her away on that pancake racket, you die. Ah, sis, so you come down town this morning, eh? Want a hundred dollars to buy things for the poor, eh. O, go way. Well, here, take it, and here's an extra fifty, cause you may run on to some poor folks that you didn't expect to find. Now go long. No thanks. You helped earn it you little rascal. Don't you remember that first breakfast, when we began keeping house, and the pancakes, and the bedslats! I have just been telling old Jim about it. Egad, Jim, did you see how she looked at me when she went out? She will be telling your wife how I tried to milk a cow with a lemon squeezer, some day. Well, let's go down on change," and the two old fellows went off happy as though they were twenty instead of forty years old.

BEATING TWO-FORTY.

A convict in the Indiana penitentiary hit the nail on the head when asked how his downward course began. He said it began in trying to beat 2:40 with a three minute horse. How many people in all branches of business are trying to beat two-forty with a three minute business? The man who has a small business that is paying him, and goes into debt and tries to spread himself over too many eggs, is trying to beat two-forty with a three-minute horse. The young man who gets a small salary and spends more money for ice cream and perfumery and neckties than he earns, is trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse. The girl who is calculated by nature to be the wife of a mechanic, and gets above her business and looks with scorn upon a man who earns his living by hard work, will look at an old maid in the glass a few years from now, and realize that she has been trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse. The ordinary, every day sort of a man, who is elected to a small office, by a big majority, on account of men voting for him for charity, and who thereupon, aspires to a big office for which he is unfitted, will be nominated for the big office some day and be beaten higher than a kite, and he will then feel his aching head, examine his empty pocketbook, look around at the debts he has contracted, and the enemies he has made, and it will suddenly come to him that he has been trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse. The man or woman who leaves a profession or employment to which they are fitted, and in which they can be prosperous and happy, and have friends, and goes upon the stage, to compete with men and women who have been brought up to it, and who have made success by a lifetime of hard work, will some day realize to their sorrow that they have failed to beat two-forty with a three minute horse. The young man who has been left a fortune by a dead father, who has worked a lifetime to accumulate riches, and who changes from beer, that was good enough for him before, to champagne, and plenty of it, and who can't find places enough to spend money without sitting up all night, and who finds old sledge and peanuckle too tame and adopts draw poker and faro, and who forget that his sisters are splendid company, and gets acquainted with quick girls and buys them diamonds as big as pieces of alum, will in a few years be walking on his uppers, and having fur collars pinned on to linen ulsters for winter, and he will wake up some morning with the mightiest headache on record and come to the conclusion that trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse is what ails him. The summer resort hotel proprietor who fits up an old rookery and fills it with guests, who are seeking comfort, and charges them Fifth avenue prices for Bowery accommodations, will look at his empty house the next year and say the season is backward, and when the guests do not come with the dog days, he will suddenly scratch his head and say he made a fool of himself last year in trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse. The whole-souled, good fellow, everybody's friend, gets to drinking too hard, and as he is healthy, he gets an idea he can best whisky, a game that so many have tried and failed. He keeps it up until his nose gets red, his eyes bleared and his voice shaky, and he has a whisky cough, and his friends try to reason with him and get him to let up, but he laughs at them with his good natured laugh, and tells them that he has got a constitution like a horse, and that nothing can hurt him, and he asks them to take a drink. Some day he gets the jim jams, and all his friends say, "I told you so," and they sit up nights with him and drive away snakes, and just before he dies it suddenly occurs to him that he has been trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse. A man who is poor and wants to live on the fat of the land, marries a pretty little, rich, woman, and begins to squander her money, and when she tries to persuade him to stop it, he gets to treating her like a dog, gets worse and strikes her, and after a while she gets enough of it and obtains a divorce, and marries a man who loves her, and don't want her money, and she is happy, and her former husband becomes a dead beat and a drunkard, and would fain beg for the refuse that drops from the table of his former wife, and when he buttons his summer coat around him on a winter's night, and walks around a block for a wind pudding, and looks into the windows and sees the light of the fire from the grate of his former wife's sitting-room, it occurs to him that if he had not attempted to beat two-forty with a three minute horse, he could have been in there toasting his slippers and drinking cider, and looking into a pair of eyes that would have always looked their love for him, if he had been contented with a three minute gait, but which eyes will never look upon him again except in pity. O, there are thousands of people who make a mistake in trying to beat two-forty with a three minute horse.

SAINT ANDREW.

The following original and characteristic report of the celebration of Saint Andrew's Day in Calcutta is extracted from the Indian Daily News. It is styled "Ye Chronicle of Saint Andrew":—

1. It came to pass, in the year one thousand eight hundred and four score and one, in the City of Palaces, dwelt certain wise men from a far country beyond the great sea.

2. (In that year the rulers of the city did that which was right in their own eyes).

3. Now these wise men assembled themselves together, and they said one to another, Go to, let us remember our brethren whom we have left.

4. For, behold, we be in a far country, and it shall come to pass that men shall say of us, Ye be nameless on the earth; ye have fled from the land of your nativity, because the land of your nativity is poor.

5. This thing, therefore, will we do; we will make a great feast, so that the nose of whomsoever smelleth it shall tingle, and we will call to mind the ancient days and the mighty deeds of our fathers.

6. So they appointed a day, and many were gathered together—a mixed multitude from the Land of Cakes and of Thistles, from the West and from the North, and from the Isles of the Sea.

7. And, behold, a great feast was prepared, and men in white raiment ministered unto them, and a ruler of the feast was appointed, and set in the midst.

8. And forthwith to each man was given a writing of the good things of the feast, and the writing was in a tongue no man could understand, for it was the language of the Crapaud, which signifieth in the heathen tongue, a frog.

9. And some there were who pretended to know the writing and the interpretation thereof: now these were hypocrites: for they knew but six letters of the writing, and those letters were H A G G I S, and even this much was a great mystery.

10. And the dishes no man could number; the people ate mightily, as it were the space of one hour. And no man spoke to his neighbour till his inner man was comforted.

11. And while they ate, behold, there drew near three mighty men of valour, clothed in manycoloured garments; and they bore in their arms musical instruments shaped like unto a beast of prey.

12. And they blew mightily upon what seemed the tail thereof, and straightway came there forth shrieks and sounds as it were the howlings of the damned.

13. And the hearts of the people were comforted, for 'tis that wherein their great strength lieth.

14. And wine was brought in vessels, but the children of the North would none of these; for they quenched their thirst with the Dew of the Mountain, which is the water of fire.

15. Then spake the wise men of the congregation unto them, and called to mind the ancient days and the mighty deeds of their fathers. And the people rejoiced exceedingly.

16. Now it came to pass when they had eaten and drunken greatly, even unto the full, that the hinges of their tongues were loosened—yea, even the joints of their knees.

17. And the ruler of the feast fled to his home, and a third part of the multitude followed, and a third part remained, saying, "We thirst;" and a third part rose up to play.

18. And they played after the fashion of their country, and their movements resembled the peregrinations of a hen upon a griddle which is hot. Yet they seemed to think it pleasant, for they shouted for joy.

19. Now, as for them that were athirst, behold their drinking was steady, but their limbs were not so; yea, they also shouted for joy, and sang amazingly.

20. And they answered one to another and said, that notwithstanding the crowing of the cock or the dawning of the day, they should still partake of the juice of the barley. So they encouraged one another with these words.

21. Now, it came to pass that, as they sat, one came and said that he had seen a strange fire in the sky, but what it was he could not tell.

22. And some said, It is the moon; and others said, It is the sun; and some said, Doth the sun rise in the west? and others said, This is not the west, but the east; and some said, Which is it? for we perceive two in the sky.

23. And one said, I see nothing. Now the name of that man was Blin Foo. He was the son of Fill Foo, and his mother's name was Haud Foo; and his brethren, Bung Foo, Sing Foo, Greet Foo, and Tam Foo, were speechless.

24. Then each man bade his neighbour farewell, embracing and vowing eternal friendship, and some were borne home by men in scanty raiment, and others in carriages which jingled as they went; and others drove their own chariots home, and saw many strange sights—for they found grass growing and ditches in the midst of the way where they had not perceived them before.

25. And it came to pass that in the morning many lamented, and took no breakfast that day; and the men in white raiment brought unto them many cunningly-devised drinks, yea, pick-me-ups, for their tongues clove unto the roofs of their mouths, and the spittle on their beard was like unto a small silver coin, even a sixpence.

But, when they thought of the previous day, they rejoiced again, for they said, Our brethren whom we have left will hear of it at the feast of the New Year, and they will remember us and bless us, and our hearts and hands shall be strengthened for our labour here.

A GREAT SURPRISE.

Most business men can remember of some incident in their lives where they have been astonished, or frightened, so that their breath was taken away. Some unexpected good luck, some stroke of business that turns out better than they expected, often has that effect. We remember of an instance, the second week we were in Milwaukee, which haunts us to this day, and every time we see the warm haired man who frightened us, the cold chills creep up our back. We had moved here from La Crosse with no very definite idea of how the thing was going to pan out, but with a firm determination to get a living if working day and night, and carrying a lunch in a tin box would do it. We had been publishing a sort of a go-as-you-please paper at La Crosse, with fair success, but with no established business basis. If we got in money enough to pay the express charges on a bundle of paper it was all right, and if we didn't we could stand off the express messenger. He knew we would pay it, or if we didn't, he could pay it out of his own pocket. If a man subscribed for the paper and paid for it, it was all right, and if he didn't pay for it he got the paper all the same, and everybody was satisfied. We had about so much room for advertising, and the business men had to fill the space with advertisements, whether they paid for them or not. We would advertise for them, and trade along, and if we didn't trade enough there would be something coming, and if we traded too much, why, we could owe the balance and not trade so much the next year, and by jumping accounts every few years things were perfectly smooth, and nobody was displeased. Very little money passed between us and our customers, except for white paper and express charges. There were just groceries, and meat markets, and stores and wood yards enough, if they all did their share, to make us a good living, and if one of the hands wanted two dollars all we had to do was to go around collecting all the afternoon, and if we didn't collect the money, go down to the depot and borrow it of Tim McCarty. We never spent four years when money troubled us so little as it did there. We owed most everybody, and they knew it, and they seemed to enjoy it. Anyway, none of them ever got mad, or if they did we could take a pencil and a piece of wrapping paper and show them, in fifteen minutes, that they were all wrong, and if we had our just deserts they would owe us three dollars, and after that they would pay it, rather than have any hard feelings, and when we left that town there were lots of people that were sorry. Honestly, they were sorry. Well, when we had located in Milwaukee, and had got the type carried up stairs in a milk pail, and got out our paper, we arranged a card of rates for advertising, and decided to take cash if it were possible, though we had doubts about ever getting a dollar. One day we were sitting on a soap box, writing something too funny for any kind of use, when a stout, sandy complexioned man came in, asked for the bald headed prevaricator, threw down a greasy paper on which was written with lead pencil the following: "The best meats in the city, at lowest cash rates, R. Gray, No.—Grand Avenue." We looked at it, and thought of our old liver advertisements at La Crosse, where we would give a meat market man all the space he wanted for a spare rib, and were about to tell the man it would be all right, that we would put it in and he could send some sausage up to the house, when we happened to think of our new card of rates. He asked how much it would be for a year, in about an inch pace. We frowned, as though a little advertisement like that was of no account, looked at the card and saw that it would be twenty dollars, the way it was figured. It seemed like highway robbery, and our heart jumped up into our throat, and we tried three times before the words would utter themselves, but finally said, "That will be twenty dollars." We expected the man would offer us four dollars, and pay it in pigs feet, or soup bones, and were preparing to split the difference with him, and call it six dollars, and throw in half a column of local notices, when he reached around to his pistol pocket, pulling his coat tail one side and showing blood on his things where he had been handling a side of beef. The thought that he was going to shoot was not pleasant, but we felt that it would serve us right, and as we were about to mutter a silent prayer he pulled out a greasy pocketbook, opened it, took out two ten dollar bills, and placing them in our lily-white-trembling hand, said, "Put it in," and he was gone. It took the foreman and one of the female compositors to raise us off the soap box' and after bathing our temples they asked if the room was too warm? We looked at the twenty dollars in spot cash, got a counterfeit detector to see if it was good, and then showed the money to the foreman. He was scared, too, and wanted to lock the door, and then he went on the sidewalk to see if the police had arrested the man. A man that we had stood off for a couple of days for a freight bill came in, and we gave him the twenty dollars, and from that time things were different. We had gall and liver from that day out. Since then, we have taken thousands of dollars for advertising without the quiver of a muscle, and could to-day go through an advertiser for all he had, and make him walk home, but that first twenty dollars was the starter. It was what gave us confidence, but for a minute or two it was a stand off whether we asked him twenty dollars, or offered to do it, for five, and take it in trade. We never see that quiet, good natured butcher around the city, but we want to take him in somewhere and buy him a diamond ring to put on the big, red, freckled hand that gave us the first twenty dollars, but we never have. Editors are just as ungrateful as republics.

A MISSING POET.

"Do you ever print poetry in the Tribune?" asked a young lady, as she came into the editorial room, yesterday afternoon.

"I suppose," continued the young lady, "that the literary editor is the person to whom I should apply for information, but I thought perhaps some of the other gentlemen in here might tell me."

The horse reporter, who had been compiling some exciting statistics regarding the number of animals that had trotted in 2:30 during the past season, abandoned his fascinating pursuit, and, after indicating to the poet by a wave of his hand that she was at liberty to occupy a chair, spoke as follows:

"In answer to your question, miss, I may say that not only does poetry sometimes appear in this paper, but that we now have on our staff of contributors some of the most gifted songsters that the Golden West has produced, and that they are allowed to trill their melodies for the benefit of our readers ever Saturday or Sunday. We aim to afford all persons who feel within their minds the surging of a flood of metrical melody an opportunity of depicting in vivid word pictures the beautiful image that Fancy has limned with delicate touch upon the rose-tinted chambers of the imagination. It matters not whether the horny fist of the sweat-crowded son of toil or the dimpled fingers of a patrician maiden guide the pen which gives expression to these thoughts—all are alike welcome. From out the stately chimney that frets the sky in the rear of this establishment come forth, in curious curl and with fantastic quirk, great clouds of fleecy smoke that wrap the structure in a white, filmy mantle. Within one year after the establishment of its free-for-all poetry bureau, the Tribune abandoned the use of coal fuel. I dislike to give away the game, but you are so pure and beautiful, and your eyes have such a wistful trusting look, that I could not find it in my heart to deceive you. Go in peace, and by the way of the stairs, gentle maid, and take the fruit of the God-given genius which enabled you to produce "Save Our Mother's Hoops for Clara" to some other shop." And, with a pearly tear dimming his bright eye, the biographer of Maud S. again turned to his work.

"Has anybody been in to see me?" inquired the literary editor, as he entered the room, half an hour later. "I had an appointment with one of our best-known poets."

"I guess she was here," said the horse reporter; "and I may say, without divulging any professional secrets, that when you pull up your string of suckers at the end of the season there will be one poet missing."—Chicago Tribune.

A PICKLED GORILLA.

Paul du Chailla, the discoverer of the gorilla, is "vindicated" again, as he was a good many years ago, when Professor Owen and other great English naturalists confirmed all that the distinguished traveller had said of the "connecting link." The body of an immense gorilla, preserved in alcohol, has just been received in Philadelphia, and is to be dissected by Professor Cope, the eminent naturalist. The animal, when alive, was the terror of a certain locality on the Gaboon river, in Africa, but was finally killed by a bullet in the eye, aimed by a burly native. The missionaries there purchased the body, and securing a large barrel, packed the animal in it, filling it up with alcohol. It was consigned to Mr. Bogers, who sold it to Professor Cope. It was shipped via Liverpool to Philadelphia, and has travelled over 10,000 miles in reaching its destination. The animal is more than five feet eight inches high, with arms four feet six inches long, and it is supposed that he was twenty-five or thirty years of age. It is the largest specimen of the gorilla in the United States.

Valuable Manuscripts have recently been discovered in Riga, Russia, by an attempt to refit an apartment on the ground floor of the Hotel de Ville to serve as an additional receptacle for the city archives. The room was found, on examination, to be filled almost to the ceiling with manuscript and books, the bulk of which belonged to the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, while some thousands dated from the sixteenth, a large number to the fifteenth and some even to the fourteenth century. The most valuable among them was, probably, a collection of municipal account-books and similar documents. It was hitherto believed that only a few of the old city books of this once famous Hanse town were believed to exist, but about forty of them, of all kinds, ranging from the fourteenth to the sixteenth century, have been brought to light by this discovery. Books of all kinds, such as were kept, probably, in the Middle Ages, are here represented—accounts of the municipal lime kilns, mills, exchange of coins, exchequer receipts, beginning with the year 1432; registers of incoming ships, with abstracts of their bills of lading (from the beginning of the fifteenth century); port dues, lists of citizens, records of inheritances, ledger of receipts from succession duties, records of letters of convoy, several letter-books (one of which ranges from 1383 to 1425 and others for the end of the fifteenth and beginning of the sixteenth century). Among the other treasures here discovered is the chronicle of the Dunamunde, long believed to be lost, and a manuscript belonging to the municipal archives of Lubeck.

Junketing at the expense of the public treasury is not approved by the Chief Auditor's department in Berlin. A couple of months ago an inferior official employed in a Government bureau had put down and recovered an item of one mark for cab hire, spent in exercise of his official functions. When his bill finally came before the Chief Auditor's clerks, it was found that he had overpaid the cabman to the extent of forty pfennige (ten cents), which excess was promptly claimed from and refunded by the generous official in question. Sharp and ridiculously "close" as this practice may appear, considering the innumerable formalities involved, readers will look upon the matter in a more serious light when told that the Chief Auditor's department, by its Spartan strictness and buckram minuteness, saves the Prussian Government an amount averaging upwards of $60,000 per annum. What a glorious contrast to the junketing expeditions of our Government officials.

One of the foreign journals presents a singular statement in regard to diminished altitudes—the Andes, it appears, showing a sensible decline. According to this statement, Quito was found by La Condamine, in 1745, to be 9,596 feet above the sea; Humboldt, in 1803, could only make 9,570 feet of it, or twenty-six feet less; Boussingault, in 1831, was surprised to find the the measurement show only 9,567 feet; Orton, in 1867, found it reduced to 9,520 feet; and Reuss and Stubel ascertained, as late as 1870, that it had actually shrunk to 9,356 feet. Quito, it seems, had sunk 246 feet in 125 years, and Pichincha 218 feet in the same period. The remarkable fact appears, from definite determinations, that its crater has sunk not less than 425 feet during the last twenty-six years, and Autisana 165 feet in sixty-four years.

The wife of a Parisian, returning home, rang at her own door. Nobody coming, she rang again. Still nobody appeared. Finally, at a louder and longer ring, the man-servant concluded to show himself. "Pray, are you deaf?" said the lady. "I beg pardon, madam," said he tranquilly, "but I heard only the third ring."

An excellent liniment for tooth-ache or neuralgia is made of sassafras, oil of organum and a half ounce of tincture of capsicum with half a pint of alcohol. Soak nine yards of red flannel in this mixture, wrap it around the head and then insert the head in a haystack till death comes to your relief.

"Between the ages of twenty and thirty," says a cynical philosopher, "love is an event; between thirty and forty, it is an accident; after forty, it is an incident."
