Child & Family Service 100th Anniversary Celebration

Honolulu, Hawaii

Video Message

Recorded: October 30, 2000

For one hundred years, Child and Family Service has helped families throughout our state. They are recognized as one of Hawaii's premier human service agencies. Their broad reach enables them to respond to crises, both large and small, in urban Honolulu and in rural communities on the neighbor islands.

Child and Family Service helps new mothers, infants, children, teens, adults and the elderly. They provide adoption services, administer domestic violence shelters, and run schools for children with special needs, to name a few of their many programs.

As our community has changed and grown, Child and Family Service has grown to meet these ever changing needs. They know firsthand the importance of a healthy, nurturing family in the growth of happy children. And before you know it, these children are grown with families of their own.

In order to perpetuate a positive cycle of growth, we must commit, as Child and Family Service does, at the earliest moment to help ensure that the next generation of mothers and fathers learn from mistakes of the past and continue to embrace the timeless values of aloha, malama, hooponopono and laulima. Strong families help to build solid communities and committed leaders.

Congratulations to Child and Family Service for their 100 years of service and best wishes for the next 100 years.
