WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 1894. This Pope proposes to settle the war between the Japs and Chinese. As a prince militant the Pope seems to have the requisite amount of nerve.

HERETOFORE it has been thought the people of Hawaii discovered the Republic and that the Republic discovered President Dole as its able and honored leader.

It is understood that one of the purposes of President Dole's visit to Hawaii will be to personally look into the matter of the disposition of the old crown lands property.

THE position of the natives at the present juncture of Hawaiian politics seems to be one of doubt in which they are uncertain whether to still cling to their former leaders or desert to new pastures.

FROM all accounts the financial depression which has struck England is about as bad as that which English newspapers always prophesy will strike the United States after a Republican victory.

THE forecast of local politicians that the native Hawaiians have made up their minds to register en masse and swamp the Republic does not seem to be borne out by the facts.

THE Royalist rumor that a split is in progress on the Labor Commission owing to the diffidence of the planters to serve on the Commission seems to be another case of reckoning without "mine host."

THE Bulletin has opened its alleged independent battery upon the American Union party. It only took the late Royalist journal forty-eight hours to flop from a position of lack of political credit to a tenure of political uncertainty.

journalistic or political compromises with those who have deserted the Royalist cause after it has become an evident failure and who demand, at the eleventh hour, a pound of Republican patronage for an ounce of Royalist flesh.

The policy which the Republic has followed since its inception, of acting upon political principle and demanding that its supporters shall meet it with platform and practice of like principle is both trustworthy and praiseworthy.

The fact that the political and journalistic leaders of the late monarchy are now deserting the cause they claimed a few months ago to be upholding on principle is the best evidence that the Republic has sized up the existing political conditions correctly and that the natives, in fact as well as in theory, need the protection of an honest and capable white man's Government.

MR. CUSTOMER

DEAR SIR: In reply to yours of 30th ult. we would say that we have all the goods you ask for. In most of the cases the prices you quote are our regular prices, but on some of the items our prices are lower than you mention, and we shall of course give you the benefit of the reduced rates.

Razors and Strops—We are glad you have decided to try our new "set blade" razors, and patent swing strops, as in the country ever man has to do his own shaving and as shaving becomes a pleasure with these "books" we know you will have a large demand for them.

Lawn Sprinklers—we will say that we have sent a very simple one, which cannot wear out or get out of order, the price you see is low, and they will do good work.

Pocket Knives—we send what you order in this line and will say that we have lately received a fine assortment so can furnish anything in this line from 15 cents to $4.00 each.

Clauss Knives, have sold them for a year, either in sets or single broad knives. Our stock of Butcher and Hunting Knives is also complete.

Soap—As you did not say how many bars you wished to the 100 lbs., we are sending one case each 42-50-60 and 70 bars to 100 lbs. We carry a heavy stock of this article and we have put it in at a very low figure.

Fence Wire and note that in future you will come to us and get a first class article. We thought when you told us of your "bun" that before it had been up long you would see you had a "sell."

In closing let us say that we have a large and varied stock of Hardware, Ship Chandlery, Paints oils, and leather, and when filling your orders will always charge the lowest prices. Truly Yours

E. O. Hall & Son, LIMITED.

HISTORIC AND UNIQUE OLD NEWSPAPERS STORED IN THE CAPITOL.

The Collection Makes One of the Most Interesting Exhibits Among Uncle Sam's Many Treasures—All Our War Maps Are Also Preserved There.

One of the most interesting departments in the Washington capitol is the newspaper file room. The habit of keeping files by the senate in its early days...

Files of these two old papers, with some others of the north and south, were carefully kept in the senate, and were the source of constant information for the senators and representatives...

Mr. Van Ness, the guardian, has a den under the rotunda floor. He was found at work by the reporter, a fine glass-enclosed cabinet on top, filled with overflowing with the latest issues of the papers...

"Then every two months," he went on, fumbling through a drawer in the table, "they send me their current files from the senate, which I have to collate very carefully. I take them from their temporary binders and go through them particularly to see what numbers are missing. Then I write to the publication offices of the papers and try to supply the deficiencies. When the volumes are as complete as I can make them, they go to the binder."

"You can see from this list the number of papers we get here," as he handed out a carefully kept book that contained the names of upward of a hundred of the best journals published in the country. It showed the date of subscription and the date of sending the volumes to the binder, as well as that of its return. "The senate takes all papers now in addition to these. It keeps its pretty busy attending to them all. Let us walk in and see what you can see that a quantity of material we have here."

The books were arranged in alphabetical order of states, beginning with the old newspapers of Alabama, published in 1819. A few steps took the two around in a circle, which completed the list of states and brought forth the names of the European capitals.

"For we have some very complete files of foreign papers," said the custodian. "We have the London papers from its beginning, from before it was The Times, in fact. Then here are files of the Manchester Guardian, and here is a set of Gallman's Messager. We receive a great many files from the state department that furnish us with many valuable additions. Here is a complete file up to a short time ago of Le Constitutionnel, a French paper. And here are the magazines both of this country and Europe. Here is about the best collection of The Gentleman's Magazine in the country."

TWO MEMORABLE WRECKS.

The Horrors of a Northwest Gale on the Atlantic Coast.

Woe to the sailing ship that encounters a December nor'wester in the north Atlantic! A vessel of this kind, and crewing become increased with ice, the crew work with difficulty, for the prodigious seas coming on board freeze where they strike, making deck and rigging slippery and frozen beams, bows and feet. Woe to the ship that is wrecked on our coast in such terrible weather!

There is one specially memorable wreck in which these horrors were awfully exemplified. It happened to an American private brig in the year of the Revolution. She sailed out from Plymouth to that part of Massachusetts. The wind was southwest, but when it got into the bay it veered to the northeast, blowing so hard that the crew were obliged to keep off a lee shore. They were ship and tried to run back, but she struck on the bar and could not be moved. A prodigious sea was running, it was the month of December and the vessel was loaded down with frozen spray. Then the wind shifted to northwest, and what the northeast began the north-wester completed.

After the wind went down, the people of Plymouth went out to the rescue. They climbed the slippery sides and stepped on the slippery deck, and entered the cabin and the fore-cabin. There was not a man left alive on board. All were dead. One hundred and forty-four corpses were taken on shore, and were buried in the month of December. Similar was the doom that befell the noble ship New Era in 1834. She was struck by the deadly northwester. Those were the days when emigrants came to the United States in sailing ships, and the New Era had some 600 souls on board. It was the middle of December, 1834. She was on the coast of New Jersey, and all our coast one of the most dangerous—and yet her captain, instead of exercising proper vigilance with such a precious freight in his charge, was engaged in making love to one of his passengers and drinking himself drunk.

On a dark night in a blinding snowstorm the ship struck on the beach. To make matters worse she settled on a quicksand, which sucked down the hull, and the breakers poured over her decks and swept off the crew. The survivors fled to the rigging, and then the wind shifted into the north-west, sharp as a razor and fierce as hell. One after another the survivors were frozen to death. Some fell frozen into the sea, some clung with icy grip to the ropes and spars dead. Nearly 500 corpses lay the next day in rows in a long bar, where the bow-lander of the Hathaway House now stands. They were buried in one common grave at Branchburg.—Worthington's Magazine.

FOREWARNED. He Was a Fraud, For She Had Plenty of Stuff in the House. At 9 o'clock the other evening a bare-headed, plainly dressed woman about 45 years of age walked into a Grand River avenue drug store and asked: "Has a man been here within an hour and asked for poison?" "No, ma'am," was the reply. "Neither small man, with a goatee and freckled face!" "I don't remember any such man," "I tell you a sneaky fellow, and he'd tell you that he was tired of life and longed for rest!" "No, no such man has been in here, ma'am."

"Well, he may come. It's my husband. Every week or two he tries to bluff me, and when he finds he can't do it threatens to poison himself. He wants to get rid of me, saying I would never see him again, and that I would read of his death in the evening papers."

"You'll know him the minute he walks in. He'll ask you for arsenic—10 cents' worth of arsenic." "Yes, ma'am." "He'll begin to blow about me while you are putting it up, saying as how I make life miserable and full of woe, and that he has decided to die." "Yes, ma'am." "Then he'll begin to shed tears and claw off and say perhaps he'd better make one more effort to live with me, and the result will be that he'll walk out and leave you 10 cents out of pocket."

GEMS IN VERSE.

A Fallen Idol.

High niched within the temple of my heart An idol stood, all faultless in his sight. The rays that lit him were in lower world light, His pose, his face, his form, and every part Proportioned fitly by the sculptor's art. Confided, it seemed, as seen from its great height, To make a form divine and day and night My soul to its did admiration pay. Till in a time it fell upon the ground, And right before my feet it broken lay. When, scanning it unawares, I found 'Twas but a coarse and faulty piece of clay. My partial sight alone had made it seem A work full meet to fill a master's dream. —W. E. VASSER.

Outgrowth.

Say, you wrong her, my friend; she's not feckless, her love she has simply outgrown. One can read the whole matter, translating her heart by the light of one's own.

Can you bear me to talk with you frankly? There is much that my heart would say. And you know we were children together, have quarrelled and "made up" in play.

And so for the sake of old friendship I venture to tell you the truth— As plainly perhaps and as bluntly as I might in your earlier youth.

Five summers ago when you wooed her you faced to face, heart to heart, never dreaming your souls could be parted again.

She loved you at that time entirely, in the bloom of her life's early May. And it is not her fault, I repeat it, that shades not love you today.

Nature never stands still, nor soars neither. They ever go up or go down, And her love has been steadily soaring—but how has it been with your own?

She has struggled and yearned and aspired—grown purer and wiser each year. The years are not farther above you in your luminous atmosphere!

For she whom you crowned with fresh roses down yonder five summers ago has this day the light of her own stars to God and ourselves to be true.

Her eyes they are sweeter and calmer, but their vision is clearer as well. Her voice has a tenderer cadence, but is pure as a silver bell.

Her face has the look worn by those who with God and his angels have talked; The white robes she wears are less white than the spirits with whom she has walked.

And you? Have you attained at the highest? Have you, too, aspired and prayed? Have you looked upon evil unawares? Have you conquered it unawares?

Have you, too, grown purer, and wiser as the mountains and the seas have reined on? Did you meet her this morning rejoicing in the triumph of victory won?

Nay, hear me! The truth cannot harm you. When today in her presence you stood, Was the hand that you gave her as white and clear as that of her womanhood?

Go measure yourself by her standard. Look back on the years that have passed since you stood. Then ask, if you need, why she tells you that the love of her girlhood is dead!

She cannot look down to her lover—her love, the fire that she kindled, is dead. He must stand by her side, or above her, who will kindle his body fire.

Now, farewell! For the sake of old friendship I have ventured to tell you the truth— As plainly perhaps and as bluntly as I might in your earlier youth. —Julia C. R. Dorr.

CANE CRUSHER

THE HONOLULU IRON WORKS COMPANY, having secured the EXCLUSIVE AGENCY for the Hawaiian Islands for the Krajewski Patent Sugar Cane Crusher, are now prepared to receive orders for the same, to be delivered in time for the next crop.

This machine, which has been invented but a few years, has been adopted by a great number of cane sugar manufacturers, especially in Cuba, where it was first put to trial and where it became extremely popular. Nearly one-third of the whole sugar crop made in Cuba is being made with the assistance of these crushers. These crushers have also proved a great success in other West Indian Islands, and Louisiana, as can be seen by testimonials on hand.

These crushers when attached to any cane mill will increase its capacity by from 50 to 100 per cent; will improve extraction; will regulate feed of the mill. We have three of these machines in the way. For further particulars enquire at the
