FRIDAY : : : : : May 4th

EVENING dress is the proper thing for balls, not bob-tail coats.

A general election just now would show pretty clearly which way the wind blows.

The German Government proposes to establish a system of compulsory insurance of workmen in order that they might provide against want in old age or when otherwise incapacitated.

A rumor, well founded, was around yesterday that the King declines to have anything further to do with the present Ministry. We are not one bit surprised at such action.

The Government wind bag must be very hard up for matter to fill its columns when it prints such an effusion of utter nonsense as appeared in yesterday's issue, signed Hiloite. It is simply impossible to make head or tail of it.

A REPORT is in circulation in Washington that Secretary Fairchild intends to call in the money loaned to national banks, in order to force the banks to sell their bonds, which are deposited to secure the Government against loss on these loans.

The members of the Anti-Asiatic Union were much amused yesterday morning at the presumption of the "Gazette" of having been the inspirator of their conference with the Planters' Association, as if any sensible suggestions have ever been issued in the Government wind bag, without its having been public property long before.

THE GOVERNMENT WIND BAG.

Judging from a Billingsgate effusion which appeared in the "Gazette"—the Government wind bag—yesterday morning, we cannot avoid a strong suspicion that its leading columns are being used as a training ground for some youthful aspirant to the art of journalism. Not that this is a matter of vital importance, but when an attempt is made to take the ADVERTISER to task for alleged transgression a few words in reply may not be out of place. First of all, it is a generally acknowledged axiom that a private business transaction is not a legitimate theme for press comment, but for the fact of it being dragged into publicity by the Government wind bag, it would never have been mentioned by us. Much less is it necessary to be "explicit and give dates," and considering that our statement is accepted, why raise a quibble about it. Again, although it may be a truism to say so, though one not appreciated by the novice with whom we are dealing, the public actions of a public man are legitimate subjects of discussion in the press. The insulting and undignified remarks of the Attorney General which we condemned had nothing whatever to do with the merits of the suits pending by the Supreme Court. They were purely personal, and as such were very much out of place. This certainly is a point which it does not require a large amount of professional acumen to discover, and so far as we have observed is the generally prevailing sentiment. Hence the general approval with which our remarks were received. The latter part of the "Gazette's" editorial is taken up with bombastic and empty phraseology, which plainly gives the writer away. There is no need to allude to it further. There is just one point on which we must seek enlightenment. True, there was a judicial triumph on one revenue suit—that is, a majority conviction on one count out of three; but what about the moral success in the other?

At the King-street rifle range yesterday Mr. Frank Hustace made a score of 49 out of a possible 50, at the 200 yards, with military rifle, open sight, and off hand, which is the best score ever made on these Islands at that range. Frank is a crack shot at the long range as well, and considering that he has been practicing rifle shooting for a year only, deserves great credit for his good shooting.

A few days before his marriage to Miss Munck, Prince Oscar of Sweden went unrecognized into a London shop to buy a photograph frame. He selected one, and then the shopkeeper asked him if he didn't want a photograph to put in it. "Oh, yes," said the Prince, "I don't care if I do take one." Whereupon the other selected a portrait of Miss Munck and handed it to him with the remark: "This is the most popular one now. It is the girl who is going to be married to the Swedish Prince."

The Sugar Tax.

The compromise which, it is alleged, has been made between the majority of the ways and means committee and the representatives in Congress from the state of Louisiana, will perhaps have the effect of giving to the Democrats the majority they need to carry the proposed tariff bill through the House of Representatives. This change may have been necessary on the ground of policy, and if it consists simply in leaving the standard at the present point of No. 13, instead of raising the minimum grade to Dutch standard No. 16, it is not likely to make any material difference to the consumers of sugar one way or the other. If No. 20, Dutch standard, had been chosen as a minimum, it would have permitted the importation of light colored unrefined sugar, which could be brought into competition with the refined sugar of the trust refineries, and in this way have kept that association from exacting too high a price for its production. But as between 13 and 16, the difference is not sufficient to embarrass the operations of the sugar trust, and if a congressional gain can be secured by holding to 13 rather than changing to 16, it may be just as well to hold to the old number. We should have preferred if the majority of the ways and means committee could have seen their way clear to placing sugar upon the free list. It is an admirable means of raising a revenue, but with our present large surplus the revenue is not needed, and after a transfer of sugar to the free list had been made, here would still be scores of millions of dollars of surplus revenue which could be utilized by additions to the free list and by reductions in the customs taxes. But as Rome was not built in a day, so an entirely satisfactory tariff bill is not likely to be the outcome of a single session of Congress. The Mills tariff bill is in almost every respect a vast improvement upon the tariff laws as they now stand on the statute books, and it is the belief of tariff reformers that after an experience of two or three years of the result of partial tariff reform, the people of the country will be so thoroughly impressed with the advantages resulting from the change that they will demand that the unfinished work be taken up and carried forward toward completion.—(Boston Paper).

CARE OF AGED PERSONS.

HOW TO LIFT THEM OVER LIFE'S ROUGH PLACES.

The First Physical Changes Noticeable as the Years Glide Swiftly by—A Physician's Ideas Concerning Diet and Medicine—Sleep—Temperature.

There appears good reason for considering old age "second childhood." The development seen in childhood during the first five years is reversed, though more gradually in those who live to be over 80 years old. Among the most noticeable changes is wasting, first, of the least essential part of the body—fat. As that disappears a shriveled appearance of the aged subject is the result; the face becomes deeply wrinkled, the hands bony and the limbs shrunken. Then the muscular tissue is slowly absorbed, and the process is accompanied by loss of strength, which, however, is less noticeable by reason of the previous reduction in weight. Occasionally we note in very aged people that the powers of the mental faculties are retained in a wonderful degree, but in the majority of cases they are more or less impaired, and the subjects become capricious, exacting, and, in fact, childish. The feebleness of mental power is due to wasting of the brain. As has been said, the memory goes first, especially the recollection of recent events. Far off remembrances of early days, and those of middle life, come up almost as freshly as ever; but what happened yesterday, or even to-day, is easily forgotten. The power to reason closely, or to give attention very long to one subject, next gives way. We need not dwell on the dimness of sight and dullness of hearing which are among the usual, but not universal, infirmities of age. In all these particulars there is a very great variety in individuals. Some of those who live the longest retain till the last more of their original mental capacity, with good sight, hearing and muscular strength, than those whose life energy is exhausted not much after the end of four score years.

POWERS OF DIGESTION.
The care of the aged is a subject which must concern all, although to some of us the time when we shall need the application of correct management may seem afar off. It is easy to reason out the most imperative needs. We know that the powers of digestion must necessarily be weaker at 70 than in early life; hence the importance of a correct dietetic regimen. Food must be taken oftener and less in amount at each feeding. After a person has reached the age just stated, he should take food four times a day until he is 80 years old; then, for the next ten years that he lives, five meals each day are none too many, and his food should be simple and easily digested. There are very few people near the age of 90 who have many sound teeth; therefore, during the years which follow their loss, unless false can be worn, their diet should be liquid, and made up largely of milk. Beef tea, and fluid extracts of beef, properly prepared, are of great assistance in feeding the aged.

After three score years and ten have been reached, earlier if it appears necessary, it will be well to commence the use of stimulants. It cannot be denied that by the judicious administration of alcohol to the aged better health and longer life are promoted. Of course, it must be wisely given, or, instead of a benefit, it will prove an injury. The question naturally arises, what quantity may be safely allowed and only good follow its use? No rule applicable alike in all cases can be given; each case must be studied, and the estimate made on individual needs. In a general way, it may be said that when decline in the vital powers, in consequence of old age, is reached, be it at the age of 65, 70, or later, use of stimulants may properly commence. If the subject has been habituated to the use of alcoholic drinks, then the quantity allowed him may be greater, but if he has lived a temperate life, a teaspoonful of whisky or brandy, or a dessertspoonful of the stronger wines, sherry, etc., may be properly given before his meals. Alcohol will improve his appetite, stimulate digestion and quicken circulation. As he declines in life, and his strength fails, the quantity will need to be increased somewhat. The conservative reader will kindly understand us, that we advise alcohol in old age as an accessory food. Not only would we discourage its use for any other purpose, unless it be medicinal, but we most emphatically condemn it. Give the old man or woman regular doses of a teaspoonful or more if needed, of whisky, or some stimulant equally as strong, or the equivalent in wines, and he or she will be better for it, and, we doubt not, will live to a greater age.

MORE HOURS OF SLEEP.
The younger a child the more hours of sleep it needs. In declining life the number of hours in bed must be progressively increased. Old people, as a rule, are more or less wakeful; few among them sleep so many hours continuously as those who are younger. At least eight hours of the twenty-four should be passed in bed by every one who has reached his 60th year. After 70, nine hours should be passed in the same way; after 80, ten; and as 90 approaches at least half of the time should be spent in bed or reclining on a couch.
The next measure of treatment which we shall recommend for the aged will doubtless be as strongly advocated as the stimulant treatment already advocated. Here we will say it is by no means original with us, but has long been recognized and advised by able physicians. It is that of giving opium during declining life. This agent may be used to promote sleep, and under certain conditions it can very properly be administered occasionally during the daytime. If the aged subject is wakeful and sufficient sleep is denied him, then ten or fifteen drops of laudanum on retiring will be found of benefit in nearly all cases, and if its action is good, there can be no excuse for withholding it. Restlessness and mental irritability, which tell sorely on the aged, may demand, as stated, its use at other times. It should be remembered that opium is not simply a quieting, or what some call a "benumbing agent," it is a stimulant, and with nearly all very old people it acts well, and seems to help "lift them over the rough places" encountered in the way down the decline of life.
The natural temperature of the body is lowest in the aged. They cannot bear the cold well, and are easily made ill by it. Therefore, their clothing should be the warmest, and, if very old, they should not sleep in a room where the temperature is below 50 degs. In warm, pleasant weather they can be in the open air if it pleases them; in fact, the more they are out of doors, if the conditions are favorable, the better. But in very cold weather, those who are far advanced in life should be comfortably housed. As has been said, a very old person "risks death from cold stroke by even walking out of doors when the temperature approaches zero."

UNLIKE many kinds of cathartic medicines, do not make you feel worse before you feel better. Their operation is gentle, but thorough, and unattended with disagreeable effects, such as nausea, griping pains, etc.

Seigel's Operating Pills are the best family physic that has ever been discovered. They cleanse the bowels from all irritating substances, and leave them in a healthy condition.

The best remedy extant for the ban of our lives—constipation and sluggish liver.

These Pills prevent fevers and all kinds of sickness, by removing all poisonous matter from the bowels. They operate briskly, yet mildly, without any pain.

If you take a severe cold, and are threatened with a fever, with pains in the head, back, and limbs, one or two doses of Seigel's Operating Pills will break up the cold and prevent the fever.

A coated tongue, with a brackish taste, is caused by foul matter in the stomach. A few doses of Seigel's Operating Pills will cleanse the stomach, remove the bad taste, and restore the appetite, and with it bring good health.

Oftentimes disease, or partially decayed food, causes sickness, nausea and diarrhoea. If the bowels are cleansed from this impurity with a dose of Seigel's Operating Pills, these disagreeable effects will vanish, and good health will result.

Seigel's Operating Pills prevent ill-effects from excess in eating or drinking. A good dose at bedtime renders a person fit for business in the morning.

These Pills, being sugar-coated, are pleasant to take. The disagreeable taste common to most pills is obviated.
