THE LABOR QUESTION.

The steamer Mariposa brought, among other interesting items, the news that the Emperor of Germany had proposed to several of the other European powers to hold a conference upon the labor question.

An intelligent knowledge of advertising, and of that which pertains to it, is essential to the success of a well-regulated store.

One may have the only store in town; the mercury of local competition may be frozen out of sight in the business barometer, but every mail brings in a new competitor.

The man who has the only store of his kind in town needs to advertise to let the people know that there is such a store in existence.

There is, and cannot be, a trade so permanent and all, and so well protected, that it cannot be scorched by the fire of competition.

Advertising not only brings trade; it creates trade. Half of the customers in any community do not know all they want until somebody tells them.

modest ones. Extravagant socialistic schemes can only precipitate the world into disorder and chaos. The method which is to be fruitful must build an experience, must take advantage of the past, must be in the line of historical development.

The merchant should always advertise in the local paper. At certain seasons of the year a column is not too much space, but the average merchant can afford to run an advertisement of from a quarter to a half a column in each issue of every respectable paper printed within his territory.—Exchange.

Most of Friday and Saturday was spent in wandering aimlessly about, inquiring now and then if anything had been heard from the Elder, etc.

Sunday morning, no Elder, but by telegram it was announced that she would sail at 6 P. M. on Sunday. So I went to church and heard a good sermon, and enjoyed a Sabbath school once more before going beyond civilization, and at 6 P. M. we were ready to go aboard the Elder, but it was late in the evening when we finally got off on our wonderful trip to Alaska.

The Elder did not sail till 4 A. M. of Sunday, July 29th. It was foggy, and when we began to stir about in the morning, it was to find that the accommodations of the Elder were of the narrowest, and that we were fairly sandwiched into her.

Added to all this our steward was often unfit for duty through inebriety. But Capt. Hunter and his chief officers did their best to make us comfortable, and the voyage was agreeable one. We came for a pleasure trip and were not lightly to be disappointed. Many, if not most of our company had seen the rough side of life.

As a rule we had little wind. We arrived at Port Townsend about noon of the 29th. Here the third man in our room, a Russian priest for Keliisroo, came on board. He did not speak English, but caused a little trouble as the case admitted of; though he acted as if he feared his baggage might be stolen.

I should say here that I do not certainly know that I lost anything by theft during the trip, though some complained that they lost things. It is not worth while to take much for fancy on the trip, unless for trade with the Indians.

As I may well remark here that the so-called Indians whom we saw are not Indians at all, and are not considered as Indians by intelligent white people. They are undoubtedly descendants of Japanese who drifted to the continent of America at a greater or less distance of time ago.

But it is equally difficult to account for their peculiar mythology making the whale, the crow, the frog and the bear and some other animals their progenitors and patron gods. Some childish whim, probably, growing out of misconceptions in general, and taken advantage of by their designing shamans to reduce them to servility. Such a system would require no long time to become fixed in the very texture of their minds, being an ignorant and impressive people who had no other and more reasonable system to occupy them.

The logs, floated to the mill on the Sonnd, are hauled up from the water upon their carriage, where short work is made of sawing them into any desirable shape of lumber.

matters about the mill, and gave some statistics which I regret to say I have forgotten, not having made a memorandum of them at once, the constant succession of new and interesting objects which followed crowded them out.

On leaving, Mr. D. presented us with copies of The West Shore, published in Portland, a magazine with illustrations, giving valuable information about the town and the surrounding country.

From accounts, it appears that the resources of the place and its immediate surroundings are various and ample. Among them lumber must for a long time rank first, then iron, lime, coal, etc., offer scope for the evidently growing enterprise of the place.

The Elder tied up to the substantial wharf on which are good store houses. The town is a mile away, and spreads over a large space—in a very sensible way. Why crowd houses together as if there was not room in the world to spread one's elbows? Only in the very center of the place are the business blocks crowded; but the houses are not so high that in case of fire, water could not easily be thrown to the top.

Our immediate company hired a team to take us about town, and also to the naval station and dry dock at Esquimault, and across "the gulch," etc., etc. so we may say we have seen the place. The dust was very annoying, but not so bad as at Tacoma and Port Townsend. There had been very little rain for many months.

THE HILLS SEND ALL ABOUT THE TOWN and most of the country are still covered with the virgin forest. Some farms are seen, but by no means as many as I have been led to expect. The roads are all that has been claimed for them; indeed, of all that we saw they were the best. We did not at this time go into the government buildings, and when we again went up into the town on our return, they were being pointed so we could not go in.

Yesterday noon Mr. G. P. Wilder went on board the bar-entine S. G. Wilder and meeting Capt. Griffiths in the cabin presented him with a large sized picture of his father the late Hon. S. G. Wilder enclosed in a very handsome frame. Mr. Wilder made a few remarks in presenting the picture and wished the vessel much success.

The Claims of Engineer Hall's Wife. From a dispatch dated Syracuse, N. Y., February 5th, it is learned that the widow of Engineer George W. Hall, who died from alleged cruel treatment in Samoan waters last June, proposes to bring suit against the United States Government for being, through its officers, accountable for her husband's death. The evidence, it is declared, will disclose official malignity of the worst type. What will give strength and support to the plaintiff's suit will be the strong side-light thrown on it by the harsh treatment which Undertaker John McCarthy subjected to in his search for Hall's body.

Fresh evidence comes to the widow every day. It has just come to light that after Hall was taken off his vessel, the Nipic, he mailed his wife from Apia a letter which he wrapped in a newspaper lest, should he inclose it in an envelope, it might be intercepted and the contents noted. The letter was one which he sent Admiral Kimberly, then at Honolulu, in which he asked for a leave of absence on account of extreme illness. The letter was returned, and on the bottom was written: "You see your request has not been granted."

Mrs. Hall believes this reply, signed by Kimberly, was of malign import. It is further believed that Hall did not die without writing the particulars concerning what he evidently felt to be harsh treatment on the part of his superior officers. So far as known, no such letter reached Mrs. Hall at her home in Onondaga valley.

Police Court. TUESDAY, Feb. 18. Seven Chinese charged with gaming were remanded to the 21st. Ah Tan was fined $2 with $1 costs for selling goods of foreign manufacture without a license. Malina, for drunkenness forfeited bail of $5. Ah Kan and Sai Man, were charged with assault and battery on Keawe a native woman. They were found guilty and both fined $20 with $2-80 costs. An appeal was noted to the Intermediary Court.

THE SOLAR ECLIPSE.

Return of the Astronomers From South America. A dispatch from New York says: Finished with triumph and considerably bronzed by the sun Professors Burnham and Schaeble of the Crocker eclipse expedition have returned from their field of labor in South America. Their efforts in the cause of science have not been crowned with complete success.

There were but two points on the terrestrial globe where the eclipse was visible in its totality, the northeast coast of South America and the west coast of Africa. It was in Cayenne, French Guiana, upon the solid ramparts of a French battery that the instruments of the Lick Observatory were solidly set up. To California and to a citizen of that State was due the honor of an expedition which has added materially to the scientific knowledge and the cause of learning throughout the globe.

"We have heard nothing of what has been going on in the rest of the world since we left South America, but I will say that circumstances were against us, but Providence was on our side. A few minutes before the eclipse occurred the sky was overcast, then, as if for our special benefit, the clouds cleared away and the moon's shadow passed over the discs of our instruments. After we had taken our photographs the sky became cloudy again.

"As the eclipse in its totality only lasted two minutes, you can imagine how fortunate we were. We selected Cayenne as our point of observation because it was as far south as we dared to go in the track of shadow. When it left us to journey across the ocean to our brother workers in Western Africa, at the rate of a mile a second, the sun was two hours high in the horizon.

"We were thus able to get very satisfactory results. It is of interest that our expedition had the honor of priority in observing the eclipse by some five or six hours. The comparisons between the photographs taken by us in Guiana and those procured in Africa by the English and American astronomers are of the utmost scientific importance. We can superimpose on the print upon one another and thus see exactly any difference which may exist between the corona at the first and the second points of observation.

"In this way we can ascertain whether the flame streamers are constant or not. If there are characteristic features they will then be all the more rare."

"What are the results of your observations?" "That question," said the Professor, "cannot be answered until the photographs are submitted to study. We have not attempted to print from our negatives, and this will not be done until we arrive in San Francisco; but I can say, as I have already said, that we will await our principal results in California. The differences in the African photographs and our own will contribute the main results.

"There is not much to tell about the actual work of an eclipse expedition. It is pretty much all over in a few seconds, but considering the work of preparation, the length of our journey, the expense of the undertaking, which in this case falls upon Colonel Crocker, I can tell you."

"How about your itinerary, Professor?" "That is simply told. We arrived on Sunday the 22d of December, and the eclipse took place on the morning of the 27th. We left Cayenne for Trinidad on the 3d of January on the steamer Venezuela. We left Trinidad on the 4th and arrived here on the 15th of January.

Professor Schaeble said that the photographs obtained greatly resembled those taken of the eclipse on January 1, 1889. He concurred with Professor Burnham as to the importance of the results obtained, and said that the only thing was only half an hour of clear weather, and that was at the time of the eclipse. The Governor of French Guiana, Monsieur Cerville Reache, witnessed the observations, and was very kind to the astronomers. He gave several entertainments and a state dinner to their honor.

"We carried with us," said the Professor, "three instruments belonging to the observatory on Mount Hamilton, one six-inch Clark equatorial, one Dallmeyer lens and an eighteen-inch silvered mirror, ground and figured by Prof. Schaeble of Ann Arbor. An exact duplicate of one of these instruments was used in Africa. This makes the condition of comparison absolutely perfect. We were aided in every way by the French Government, who placed their convicts at our disposal."

The Comte de Bismarck, who was sent upon his mission to Africa, was accompanied by Jansen, the great French astronomer, photographed the eclipse on Salate Island, just off the coast. It was here that Father Perry, the Catholic priest, who was brought there upon an English man-of-war, was attacked by dysentery just before Christmas day. He was carried on a litter to his instruments, did his work in spite of his great debility, and died almost immediately after.

C. H. Rockwell of Tarrytown, a friend of Professor Holden, accompanied the scientist to South America and aided materially in the work. Professors Burnham and Schaeble will remain a few days in New York before starting for the Coast.—(San Jose Mercury.)

MUSIC FOR THE LEPERS.

Among Many Other Gifts Sister Gertrude Receives a Piano. A dispatch dated New York February 5th says: Miss Fowler, known as Sister Gertrude, the intrepid young Englishwoman who is on her way to the work of ministering to the sufferers in the leper hospital at Molokai, has been made happy since her stay in New York.

One of her greatest wishes has been granted. A gentleman has ordered a superb piano, which will be shipped by way of San Francisco to Honolulu by the next steamer. Many other contributions, among them being money, have also been received by Sister Gertrude. She says now she would like a typewriter. Several letters have been sent to Miss Fowler by ladies who express a desire to devote themselves to the work of nursing lepers, making inquiries about the proper steps to take. Miss Fowler desires it known that she deeply appreciates such a noble impulse, but she wishes to say, that at present there is no need of any more help on the staff of nurses in the hospital. She now intends to start for the Pacific Coast in time to sail by the steamer leaving there March 3d.

Gate City Stone Filter. These Filters are easily cleaned, and NEVER become Cracked or CRAZED by change of Temperature of the Water. The Filtering Medium is a NATURAL STONE, mined from the earth. It is unlike any other stone. IT DOES NOT ABSORB AND BECOME FOUL. IMPURITIES never PENETRATE it, but lie on the surface, and internally the stone remains as pure and white after years of use as when taken from the mine. "The Gate City Stone Filter is a perfect success. It is the only real filter I have ever seen. I would not be without one for any consideration. It converts our lake water into the best drinking water in the world." HENRY M. LYMAN, M. D., 533 West Adams St., Chicago.

ENCAUSTIC PROCESSES.

Those Practiced by the Egyptians in the Time of the Roman Emperors.

In the older Egyptian mummies the face of the outer casing is usually modeled in relief, in a purely conventional way, but in this latest form of burial under the Roman empire a portrait of the deceased was painted on a very thin piece of wood and then fixed over the dead face. It is very remarkable to find such fine coloring and skillful drawing in work of this late date, which must have been turned out of an ordinary undertaker's workshop. The portraits, both male and female, are most vivid and lifelike; the ladies are mostly dressed in a purple garment and the men in white, with a red sash. The modeling of the flesh is very skillful, and in some cases the coloring reminds one of the Venetian school from its rich depth of tone. A special point of interest about these paintings, is their technical execution in the hot wax, or encaustic process, as it was called. The pigments were mixed with melted wax, and then fixed in their places by holding a charcoal brazier near the surface of the painting, as is described by Vitruvius. The somewhat lumpy impasto of the surface is due to the hardening of the melted wax when the brush touched the cold surface of the panel, and, owing to the non-absorbent nature of the wood, the subsequent application of heat was not able to drive the wax below the surface, as was the case with encaustic painting upon stucco. One of these portraits is noticeable from its ornamental framing with a flowing pattern, formed by pressing wooden stamps upon soft stucco, which was afterward gilt, a process exactly like that which was so often used to decorate mediæval pictures on panel, especially retabes, or acones, as the Venetians called them.—Saturday Review.

Horses Look Gawkily in Pictures.

"Instantaneous photography is a nuisance," said an artist, whose business is to draw cuts for the magazines and newspapers. "Before they began to take those blamed photographs all you had to do was to draw a horse so that it looked natural and lifelike, and the papers and public were satisfied. Now, though, since that Philadelphia fellow printed his book, and especially since The Sun reprinted the cuts from it, nothing will do but that we must draw running horses just as they are, and not as they look. Of course the pictures don't look nearly so pretty, and the horses are as awkward and unnatural as donkeys, but they are accurate, and that is the craze just now. We have had to learn our animal drawing all over again, and have to puzzle our brains by the hour over cuts of instantaneous photographs, trying to find some position that has at least a bit of grace and life in it. For my part, I think it is ridiculous. Compare the magazine pictures of horses a year or two ago with those Scribner's had last month and tell me if you don't think the old ones gave a better idea of the beauty of the animals in motion. Imagine Rosa Bonheur's horses with their fore feet stuck out straight like ramrods, or think of Messoniers' types charging before Napoleon on horses that had all four legs doubled up under them at the same time!"

Whatever may be the opinion as to the justness of the artist's criticisms and complaints, there is no doubt that he is right on his facts. The horse pictures in the magazines nowadays nearly all show at least an effort to make the positions correspond with those shown by instantaneous photographs. The picture horse of the past is relegated to the circus poster and the bills of the racing associations.—New York Sun.

Was It a Vision?

We were having a new home built and my husband went to it every day to see what progress was being made. One day, as he stood in the front room upstairs his attention was attracted to the street. Looking out the window he saw a funeral procession passing from the door and out through the gate. The casket was small, white and covered with flowers. He recognized friends and neighbors in the crowd, and through some indefinable impression he understood that the corpse was that of his son. His son, though he had no son at the time. Surprised and startled at the thought, he saw the procession vanish, and he felt unable to account for the experience.

Within a few months a little son was born to us, and before three years it was carried out the gate in a flower covered, white casket and followed by the same friends my husband had seen that noontime long before. What explanation can be given of this circumstance?—Amarala Martin in Hall's Journal of Health.

We were just in the middle of "Tramp, tramp," when a long, clear whistle, with a crack like a pistol shot at the end, stopped us short. Sitting down on the roadside we listened, and soon the whistle began again; then followed the most exquisite mimicry of many of the songsters of the wood, varied by sounds resembling the clear tones of a distant bell, the rattle of a rickety wagon, raspings and gratings that made the cold chills run down one's back, whispers, moans, cries and laughter. I clearly distinguished the coarse laugh of the giant kingfisher, the cooing of the dove, the call of the black and white shrike, the song of the rusty-backed thrush, the scream of the hawk, and the hoarse screeching of the cockatoo. Sometimes the song, with a volume like a large organ was loud and sweet, and it seemed as if the musicians must be within a stones throw, then again it died away to the faintest whisper. There was a mellow richness in parts that reminded me of the liquid notes of the clarinet. We sat spellbound until the song had ceased. I have heard most of our American songsters, and some of them are very fine, with voices rich and mellow, but the mocking-bird himself can not compare with this prince of songsters, the Australian lyre-bird.—Sherman F. Denton.
