COWBOY SWEID'S SHIRT.

Stolen by an Apache and Recovered With the Aid of a Long Range Rifle. FORT TULEROSA (N. M.), August 30. -Among the household gods in the home of Herman Sweid, who lives a few miles west of this place, is a shirt. It is not now a very good shirt, having had hard wear, but it has a story that makes it valuable, at least to the family.

Several years ago, when Geronimo was alternately living on the bounty of the Government and raiding the scattered whites of New Mexico, Sweid moved to the Tulerosa valley, went to work as a cowboy for one of the big cattle companies of this region, and at the same time undertook making a ranch for himself. As a cowboy Sweid was conspicuous because of his love for bright colors. Gorgeous shirts and flaming neckerchiefs were good enough for him, and when his pony carried him over the mountain top on the round up, the boys within range recognized him as readily as they recognized the difference between a prairie fire and a thunder cloud.

One day when Mrs. Sweid was in Magdalena buying supplies her eye fell on a particularly bright piece of Scotch plaid. Sweid had always bought his shirts ready made, and so had never had one of Scotch plaid. The wife, to give him a pleasant surprise, bought enough of the stuff to make a good shirt, and taking it home made it on the sly. The first Sweid knew about it was when he came home one night from the range and found it hanging on the clothes line, all spread out in a way to exhibit its gorgeousness to advantage.

Sweid was much pleased with the shirt, but he never wore it for a minute. For some reason it was left hanging on the line that night, and when morning came it had disappeared. They searched about the place, thinking an unnoticed gust of wind might have blown it away, and then looked for traces of a way-faring thief, but no trace of shirt or thief could they find. The mystery of its loss was the talk of Sweid's friends for several months, and then the matter of a lost shirt and all ordinary topics of interest were forgotten in the all-absorbing anxiety of the range people to get news of the Apaches. Geronimo was out, and every one wanted to know which way he was travelling.

After a time the news came. The scouting cowboys found unmistakable evidence that he was bound for the Tulerosa, and they made haste to gather the few women and children into Pat Higgins' big adobe house, where they could be well cared for while the men prepared for a siege. In due time the Indians came. The tourist in this region now hears the stage driver say such things as this: "This is the Apache Canyon. When the Apaches came out here on that raid I was telling you about, they caught eleven Mexicans right over on that knoll trying to get to shelter in our 'dobe house. They killed them all."

"See that little fence over there? That's around the graves of a couple of men killed by the Apaches." It was a merciless band, and the little party at Pat Higgins' place knew it, but they were well protected and they had very little, if any, fear. Indeed, they were so well situated that the Apaches would not make an open attack, but contented themselves with hiding behind blocks of lava, hoping to pick off a careless or venturesome man or some belated individual coming for shelter.

While thus besieged the cowboys frequently saw the Apaches walking out of rifle range and now and then gather in knots to discuss the situation. It was aggravating to see the enemy so plainly and yet not be able to down any of them, and when on the second afternoon a big Apache buck sat down in the shade of a piñon and coolly began smoking a pipe, Sweid said that the buck should have a scare, if no more, although full three-fourths of a mile away.

Now, Sweid had one of those long Remington rifles that were so popular among target shooters some years ago, and, adjusting his sights to the range, he told the boys to watch the effect of a sighting shot at a tiny black spot, presumably a block of lava, beside a bush in a little draw some fifteen or eighteen rods to the right of the Indian and in a depression out of the Indian's view. Then Sweid pulled the trigger and a little cloud of dust and a slight movement of the black object showed that the range was exactly calculated and the accuracy of the marksman wondrous.

Showing in another cartridge, Sweid turned his aim at the Indian in the shade of the piñon, and at the shot the buck's legs flew into the air and over he tumbled dead enough. A few minutes later the blast of a bugle was heard away up the trail. The soldiers were coming. It makes the cowboys grow profane when they tell how the soldiers always went tearing across the country with bugles blowing "to warn the Apaches to get in out of the wet," that danger was at hand. LEANING ON A BROKEN REED.

The Bulletin does not care to discuss the legal or constitutional aspects of an "American plebiscite" but falls back on the theory that, as some of the early predictions of the Royal party came to pass, the present dream of an illegal American interference here, in behalf of the preposterous "Queen," will also be realized.

It is true, as the Bulletin says, that the Annexationists did not look for a Commissioner, and that the Royalists did. It might be added that they did not expect the flag to be lowered, though they soon came to know that Mr. Blount's motive in that act was to put the Government over which the Stars and Stripes had floated on a negotiable basis with the Government to which they belonged. We give all credit to the Royalists, however, for their lucky guess work in these two instances; but that it was all guess-work and nothing more is proved by the fact that the Commission did not consist, as they said it would, of General Schofield and Admiral Brown; that they knew nothing in advance of Mr. Blount's appointment; and that their "inspired" statements that the latter had come to restore the throne turned out to be the veriest humbug. As everybody is aware the mass of Royalist predictions which was made about the intent of the United States after the flag had been removed were all contradicted by events.

In spite of one or two hits, the divinations of the Bulletin and its friends have so uniformly failed as to leave the ex-Queen's prophets without honor in their own country or any other. Where is the Bulletin's Australian fleet that was going to help restore the broken crown to a waiting head? What of the Naniwa and the coercion by Japan? What has become of the prediction that Minister Thurston and Consul General Wilder would not be received or recognized? Where is the "protest" that England and France had promised to make? What became of the prophecy that the Provisional Government would be overthrown by Claus Spreckels and his due bill? What of the June and September "restorations," and the twenty-three other events of like character which were to have taken place before this? And going back in the catalogue, what happened to the boastful divination—the commonest of all—that Royalists would rise and put the discarded sovereign back the moment the Boston's marines and tars had been withdrawn to their ship and had left the Provisional Government at the mercy of cold steel.

It must not be forgotten that the two Royalist guesses that turned out to be correct were of a sort which did not cover any breakage of American or international law. Those were very different propositions than one to set aside the American Constitution and the rights of Congress for the sake of violating international comity. When it comes to such a question as that, all the Royalist divinations in the world amount to so much wasted wind.

Messieurs, the Royalists, your forte is not prophecy, even though the tribes of Moreno and Macfarlane—par nobile fratrum—may congregate at Washington and give you the "tips" gathered from all the unconsidered trifles of curbstones and bar-room gossip.

HOME RULE AND THE LORDS.

The action of the House of Lords in defeating the Home Rule bill should, in a country where precedent counts for so much as in England, have serious consequences to the Lords themselves. For many years it has been an unwritten law as faithfully observed as any precept of the British Constitution, that the noble figure-heads in Parliament should not interfere with momentous legislation arising in the Commons. The last time they tried it was six decades ago when the upper house refused to pass the Reform bill, and did so with the approval of the King. It is a chapter of history that Grey and Brougham by threats to create new Lords of the liberal way of thinking and to force the unwilling hand of the monarch, finally won the day for the new measure, the reactionary peers taking the advice of Wellington and leaving their seats in such numbers that the bill could be passed. There has never been an hour since then until the present one when the peers dared stand in the way of progressive law-making of a decisive national character. In doing so now they tempt Mr. Gladstone to recur to the strong measures of Grey and Brougham and swamp the House of Lords with peers who, by virtue of their common blood, will have common sense and decent patriotism. Queen Victoria would not dare any more than King William did to withhold her sign manual from the new patents of nobility; and so we may reasonably conclude that if Gladstone makes the demand for new peers the Lords will have no alternative but to receive them or vacate their seats for the time being to the forty or more patriotic nobles who agree that the time has come to suppress medieval tyranny in Ireland. No doubt Mr. Gladstone will do his duty according to his courage of conviction and in line with the old Bismarckian maxim that when an omelet has to be made some eggs must be broken. As the Irish say, "more power to him!"

It would be a spectacle to fill the eye and heart if the dull and gouty and foggy-brained old courtiers of the middle ages type and the sickly duds of the modern era could be put on the back seats of Parliament and the power vested in them be handed over to the aristocracy of brains and virtue. Perhaps the curtain will rise on such a transformation scene in less than a year, amid the cheers of the world's democracy.

Oh, so it is on account of the old lie that Mr. Stevens overthrew the Queen that the United States Government will hold a plebiscite in a foreign land. Indeed! Of course Mr. Cleveland—who is expected to act in such a matter without the authority of Congress, which governs all electoral concerns—has forgotten that power of attorney, signed by Liliuokalani, in which she declared that she had yielded her authority to the Provisional Government! How very stupid of him.

The suggestion of the STAR that a ball be given at the ex-Palace to the departing officers of the Boston and the other naval gentlemen in port was acted upon last night by the Annexation Club with the favor and concurrence of the Government. Next Monday evening the function will take place and, if everything shall go according to the start made, the ball will be, in scenic magnificence, attendance and accessories, one of the most notable ever given in Honolulu.

The body-snatchers who have rescued the Holomua from its tomb have tagged the cadaver with the legend "Progress"—whereat the crawfish at the bottom of the sea and the worms at the bottom of the grave act as if they expected company. All the progress the Royalist paper is making is on a down-grade where gravity makes the pace rapid.

WHEN the losers by a revolution have the right to vote on the tenure of the winners, the moon will be made of green cheese and politics will move over into the millennium.

OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchia troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

NATURAL RAINFALL.

DOES NATURE SLIGHT LAND IF TREES HAVE BEEN REMOVED?

A Problem That the Son of Columbus Started Out to Solve—Many Scientists of Various Countries Have Given the Subject Much Study.

A son of Christopher Columbus once undertook a task of discovery that proved much more difficult than that which his father had tackled so successfully. In a comparatively short time Christopher had the solution of his problem. The answer which his son, Fernando, set out to find is still missing. But the younger Columbus thought he had discovered the true relations of forests to water supplies, and he announced that the copious rainfall of Jamaica was produced by the island's wealth of forests and that the decrease of rain in the Azores and Canaries was because of the removal of the wooded areas.

For as long perhaps as men have given any thought to this matter it has been the common supposition that forests increase the rainfall within the area of their supposed influence, and in that way other ways augment the flow of brooks and rivers. The earlier efforts to determine through scientific methods whether there is any good ground for the supposition were made with appliances so crude that the margin for error must have been considerably in excess of the influence, if any, which the investigators hoped to measure. In later years efforts in the same direction have been made with great pains, mostly in European countries, but the problem has been found to have so many factors that, although the mass of information collected is extremely interesting, the main question remains practically unanswered. The results of these efforts, together with some interesting observations thereon, are set forth in a bulletin of the forestry division of the department of agriculture.

Water comes as near being indestructible as any substance of which we know. Consequently the total quantity of it in the earth and in the earth's atmosphere is always the same. Only a very small percentage of it is what one of the writers in this bulletin terms the "circulating part" of the earth's water. The sun makes vapor of water that is lying at its level or on the way to find its level. This vapor is condensed until it is heavier than the air and starts again toward its level, and that is how the circulation goes on. In what way does the presence of forests influence this circulation?

It would be a long story to tell of the methods employed in France, Germany, Sweden, Austria and other countries of Europe to measure the various influences that must be considered in determining how and to what extent the rainfall and the flow of streams are affected by the presence of forests. A very important factor, since heat is what starts the movement of the earth's circulating water capital, is the matter of temperature, and the results of the investigations seem to show beyond dispute that forests reduce the maxima and the minima of temperature, that they reduce the maxima more than the minima, and that consequently their effect is to make the average temperature for the year cooler.

Also, their moderating influence is greater than their cooling effect. Because the air above forest regions is slightly cooler than the strata over treeless tracts, condensation should be more rapid than over open fields, and the rainfall should be greater. These cooler bodies of air, being blown over adjacent regions that are not wooded, should also increase somewhat the precipitation there. This is the theory, and it seems to be in some degree supported by the measurements that have been made.

Accepting the conclusion that, in general, forests increase slightly the fall of rain, and that, in general, they reduce the extremes of temperature, it remains to be determined how much of this increase is available for beneficial purposes. Part of it is intercepted by foliage, and is returned to the atmosphere by evaporation without having reached the ground. The proportion so retained varies with the nature of the foliage, the density of the forest and the season of the year. The retention by evergreen trees is less than by deciduous. It is estimated that perhaps 80 per cent of the precipitation is thus intercepted and returned to the atmosphere. Of course this interception and evaporation go on where the surface of the earth is covered by grass and other growing crops. Whether it is sufficiently greater in the forest than in the field to do away with the excess of precipitation on wooded tracts over that on cleared areas is an unsettled question.

Of the 70 per cent of rainfall which, it is estimated, reaches the ground in forests, a part is very quickly returned to the atmosphere by evaporation, but here the loss is considerably less than in the open field. Under certain conditions it is not more than 18 per cent of what it would be on bare soil, but the conditions are so various that it is difficult to arrive at an average. Again, out of this 70 per cent of precipitation which reaches the ground in wooded areas, much is deducted the loss by transpiration, "the process by which the plant gets rid of the surplus water after having drawn it from the soil in order to extract from it the nutrient which is present in only a very highly attenuated solution." Various ingenious methods have been resorted to for determining the amount of moisture used in this way, but because of the many factors having to do with it, the amount, for the various kinds of vegetation, can be indicated only with a wide margin for variations.

While as it stands now nobody can say, as a result of scientific investigation, whether forests increase the fall of rain, snow or dew to an appreciable extent, there is no room for doubt that wooded areas are valuable conservators of moisture. In this way they make the flow of streams more even, and they preserve the constancy of springs. In wooded areas there is a loss by interception and evaporation in the foliage and by transpiration, and there is a considerable gain in the protection from evaporation from the surface of the ground. It is not probable that this conservation of the water supply comes anywhere near the mark drawn by those who hold that the preservation of woodland insures an abundance of water supply, but the benefits resulting from it are sufficient to be considered among the other excellent reasons for looking well to the preservation of forests. —New York Sun.

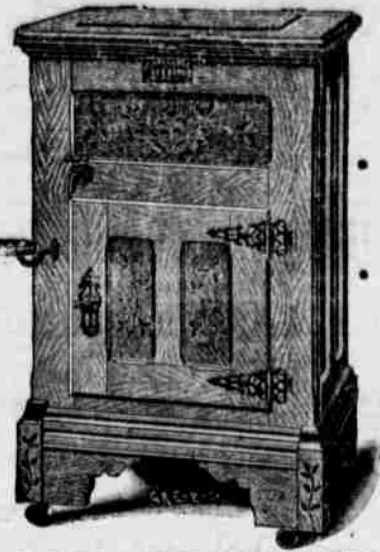

A Musical Canine Critic.

A wonderful story of a French musical critic is related by persons who profess to have been acquainted with him and to have seen him in attendance on musical performances. He was a dog, and his name in public was Parade. Whether he had a different name at home was never known. At the beginning of the French revolution he went every day to the military parade in front of the Tuilleries palace. He marched with the musicians, halted with them, listened knowingly to their performances, and after the parade disappeared, to return promptly at parade time the next day. Gradually the musicians became attached to this devoted listener. They named him Parade, and one or another of them always invited him to dinner. He accepted the invitations and was a pleasant guest. It was discovered that after dinner he always attended the theater, where he seated himself calmly in a corner of the orchestra and listened critically to the music.

If a new piece was played, he noticed it instantly and paid the strictest attention. If the piece had fine, melodious passages, he showed his joy to the best of his doggyish ability, but if the piece was ordinary and uninteresting he yawned, stared about the theater and unmistakably expressed his disapproval.—Youth's Companion.

WHY YOU WANT THE "STAR!"

A NEWSPAPER IS A NECESSITY to every person in the community—man, woman or child—who is able to read and who desires to keep in touch with the spirit of this progressive age and wishes to be posted as to events of interest which are continually happening at home and abroad, on land and sea.

The STAR is a new paper and has introduced Californian methods of journalism into Hawaii, where, before its advent, the Massachusetts newspaper traditions of 1824 held sway. It has three prime objects:

To support the cause of Annexation of Hawaii to the United States and assist all other movements, political, social or religious, which are of benefit to these Islands and their people.

To print all the news of its parish without fear or favor, telling what goes on with freshness and accuracy, suppressing nothing which the public has the right to know.

To make itself indispensable to the family circle by a wise selection of miscellaneous reading matter.

As a commentator the STAR has never been accused of unworthy motives.

As a reporter the STAR has left no field of local interest ungleamed.

As a friend of good government the STAR has been instant in service and quick to reach results.

As an advertising medium the STAR, from the week of its birth, has been able to reach the best classes of people on all the Islands.

Compare the daily table of contents with that of any other evening journal in Honolulu—

The "STAR" Is 50 Cents A Month In Advance.

THE POVERTY OF RICH MEN.

Perhaps Hungry People Do Not After All Feel Worse Than Many Others.

The editor of Scribner's Magazine, who probably enjoys a moderate income of his own, expatiates on the disadvantages of much riches and the lack of any like the philosopher who wanted merely enough, he seems to believe that the middle condition is best, and this he fixes at somewhere about $5,000 a year.

In days of doubt and financial stringency many families resort to economies that no doubt cause distress. One man sold one or two of his half dozen horses; another rented his summer cottage; a third put his steam yacht out of commission, and a fourth unwillingly desisted from increasing his collection of Japanese bronzes.

Poverty is a relative term, and there is no unmitigated vagrant. There are some who are several times more ragged, more hungry, more populous than he. There are some vagabonds who never realize that they are poor while their stomachs and tobacco pouches are full.

The Prince of Wales, who also sets the fashion in the color of gloves and the way of carrying the cane—usually by accident—is the model that these young persons have for their inner as well as their obvious lives, and they even try to improve on the pattern.

It is the sorest disadvantage of riches when it makes their possessor poor in spirit. Nobody claims that this is true in the great majority of cases. Nobody denies its truth in conspicuous and offensive instances.

While in Maine last summer I heard a good story that was new to me and may have never appeared in print. In the old days of wild bee hunters Zeke Trask was among the most successful in capturing the hiveless swarms, and even after his keen eyesight began to fail he was wont to boast of his ability to follow a "toll bee" in its flight.

Zeke had bragged about the keenness of his eyes until those who knew he was slowly but surely growing nearsighted were disgusted and resolved to trap him. Jim Onslow, a keen old fellow, arranged the plan, and it worked to a charm. One day Jim pretended he wanted Zeke to watch a bee for him, and although the boaster tried to get out of it Onslow would not accept any excuses.

"Watch him sharp, Zeke. Don't let him slip ye. Now!" And he snapped the cover of the box wide open, having first showed Zeke the bee inside.

In a moment Zeke began whirling round and round, as if he was following the circle the bee made in order to get its bearings before starting for home. The old fraud kept pointing with his finger and saying:

"There he goes—there he goes—right there, there, there." Then, all at once, he paused and began pointing straight ahead, all the while declaring: "He's gone toward Dave Snow's cider mill. He's crossed the Exeter road—see? He's gone over the cider mill—over the pond—the pond was two miles away. 'Over Benson's woods'—three miles away. 'Over the Newport line'—four miles. 'Right slap into Hickett's timber. You'll find the swarm there, sar'tin.'" Hickett's timber was more than five miles from the spot where they were standing.

"When Zeke had finished, Onslow observed: 'Well, I swan! Your eyes are monster keen, neighbor.'

That pleased the old rascal, but he pretended to be modest, and he replied: 'They do pretty well—pretty well, but I don't think they reach out quite like they did once.'

"Well, they're monster sharp to see a bee travel so far when the bee hasn't started at all." Then he showed Zeke the open glass box with the bee still in it. The owner of the sharp eyes gave a gasp of astonishment as he asked:

"What's the matter with your blamed old bee anyhow?" And Onslow answered, "Oh, northern, only it's dead." WILLIAM G. PATTER.

Apt as "the Broomstick Train."

It was on the Boston and Lowell railroad on a suburban train that was just slowing up for the East Cambridge station.

It will be remembered that the Meigs elevated railroad shops and yard are located quite near the station, and that for some time past a fine model of the cars has been on exhibition there. It was standing on a single track that is carried over the road beyond, and of course it attracted much attention from the passengers in this particular car.

Suddenly a child's voice, shrill and distinct, as all children's voices are when they are saying something especially embarrassing, cried:

"Papa, papa, look at the bowlegged horse car!"

Any one who has seen the Meigs models and noticed the peculiar angle at which the wheels are set in order to conform to the single rail idea will appreciate the child's apt description. Evidently almost every one in the car had, for the laugh that followed the remark had not subsided when the brakeman shouted: "Next stop Boston! Boston!"—Boston Herald.

Aim at the Drake

And you are bound to hit some of the ducks. This is precisely the same with Wampole's Tasteless Preparation OF Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchia troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

The Arrangements for a Glittering Reception of Naval Guests Next Monday Evening.

Late yesterday afternoon a committee consisting of J. Walter Jones, Deputy Attorney General Wilder and Fire Commissioner Andrew Brown, called on five firms and got $500 as a starter for the fund of a ball to be given the Boston as a send-off.

It was the purpose, if the Government should consent, to give the ball in the ex-palace on next Monday evening, just prior to the Boston's departure to the coast. In the evening a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Annexation Club was held to consider the matter and put the application for use of the Executive building into the proper form. The first question, "Shall we give a ball?" was answered by President Hatch, who said: "As you have $500 in hand to begin with you might as well consider that point settled." And settled it was with the visible concurrence of the Attorney-General, the Minister of the Interior and Councilmen Tenney, Ena, Bolte and Waterhouse, who were present as guests.

To carry out the plan adopted, the following committees were named:

Ball Committee—George C. Potter, W. G. Ashley, John A. Hassinger, G. K. Wilder, Dr. McGrew, G. McLeod, H. Gunn, J. W. Jones, George Stratemeyer, W. G. Smith, J. S. Martin, A. W. Keech, J. Simonson, Theo. F. Lansing, C. B. Ripley.

Sub-Committee, Decorations—G. Stratemeyer, J. Simonson and J. S. Martin.

Invitations and Printing—George McLeod, George C. Potter, Theo. F. Lansing.

Finance—J. W. Jones, Gardiner K. Wilder, A. W. Keech.

Arrangements—G. K. Wilder, W. G. Ashley, C. B. Ripley.

Refreshments—J. A. Hassinger, H. Gunn, W. G. Smith.

The Ball Committee met this morning at 10:30 to receive the reports of sub-committees and take further measures to insure the success of the affair in hand. Nearly all the members of the committee were present, Major G. McLeod being in the chair.

The Finance Committee reported that the sum of $1505 had been subscribed, but that the committee had not yet concluded its labors.

Hugh Gunn, of the committee appointed to wait on the officers of the Boston, reported that they had visited the ship this morning and that the invitation had been accepted by Lieutenant Commander Very on behalf of his brother officers.

Mr. Gunn further reported that he had, on his own responsibility, suggested to the officers of the Boston that the citizens of Honolulu would like to furnish an entertainment of some kind to the non-commissioned officers and crew of that ship, and had asked whether the crew would be allowed to come on shore for that purpose. Commander Very had replied that as the vessel would leave on Tuesday morning any shore entertainment to the men on the day previous would be out of the question. Mr. Gunn then interviewed four of the non-commissioned officers on the matter and it was decided that they should get the sense of the crew as to what form the entertainment should take and report to him to-day. The matter was informally discussed by the committee, and it seemed to be the opinion that a good dinner at noon on Sunday on board the ship would be about as suitable as anything that could be arranged.

On motion, the action of Mr. Gunn in the matter was unanimously endorsed by the committee, and it is understood that $250 or more will be appropriated as soon as the wishes of the men are ascertained. The whole matter was then referred to the Refreshment Committee, with power to act.

Mr. Stratemeyer, from the Committee on Decorations, submitted an estimate of probable expenses required amounting to $175. The whole building inside will be lighted by electricity, the verandas only by Chinese lanterns. The outside of the building and grounds are to be lighted with colored lanterns, torches, etc. On motion the sum of $200 was appropriated for the expense of this committee.

Mr. Stratemeyer's suggestion that the interior decorations should consist almost entirely of flags, palms and flowers, to be arranged under the supervision of a committee of ladies was also adopted, and Messrs. Gunn and Potter were appointed a committee to interview the ladies on the matter and request their co-operation.

The matter of music next came up, and it was decided to procure the services of the Hawaiian band and, if possible, the Philadelphia's band as well. One band is to furnish music for the dancing and the other to play outside between the dances.

W. G. Ashley, from the Committee of Arrangements, reported progress and stated that Captain Good and the members of his company had volunteered their services in the matter of moving furniture, and that no outlay was thought necessary by the committee.

On motion a five-member committee of five was appointed, consisting of Hugh Gunn, chairman and floor manager, W. G. Ashley, G. K. Wilder, and Geo. McLeod.

On motion the Executive Committee, with the addition of Colonel Soper and Messrs. Fisher, Hall, Gertenberg and McLeod were appointed a General Reception Committee.

The Invitation Committee was authorized to employ Bert Peterson to address the invitations and attend to necessary correspondence.

A list of lady patronesses is being prepared and will be published later.

The Refreshment Committee, through Mr. Hassinger, reported progress, but that no estimates of the amount of money required could be given until later.

The Committee then adjourned until 10:30 a. m. to-morrow.

BENEFITED THE SCHOOL

BY HER THREAT TO REMOVE SCHOLARS.

The Ex-Queen's Bluff Regarding Kawaiahaio Seminary Pupils Has a Boomerang Effect.

The recent publication in the columns of this paper of the substance of an interview with ex-Queen Liliuokalani regarding the twenty scholars at the Kawaiahaio Seminary whose tuition is supposed to be paid for out of the Liliuokalani Educational Fund, was prophesied by some would work an injury to the school by repelling her ex-majesty's patronage therefrom. That the contrary has been the case the STAR is enabled to state on the authority of one of the trustees.

When the announcement of the possibility of these girls being withdrawn from school by her ex-majesty reached the other islands applications commenced to pour in on the trustees from native parents who are desirous of educating their daughters in this institution. The school can only accommodate 125 scholars, although on one occasion 150 were taken. One of the trustees told a reporter this morning that there were about thirty applicants waiting for a vacancy, the school being full to overflowing now, and that at the rate fresh applications were being made accommodations for 200 girls would have to be provided soon. Instead of being detrimental to the school the withdrawal of her ex-majesty's moral support seems to have been a positive benefit.

KAWAIAHAIO CHURCH.

Efforts Said to be Made to Divide the Congregation.

The congregation of Kawaiahaio church are more or less disturbed over the defection of some of its members, who have joined the native Sunday afternoon services conducted by Bishop Willis. It is said that the ex-Queen has exerted her influence over certain members of the church and induced them to desert it.

Band Concert To-night.

The Hawaiian band will give a moonlight concert to-night at Makee Island, commencing at 7:30. The following is the program:

- PART I. 1. March—"Seven Silurians".....Millocker 2. Overture—"Zampa".....Herold 3. Cornet Solo—"Prince Bugler".....Weissenborn By Mr. Charles Kreuter. 4. Fantasia—"The Rivals".....Pettee

A Story About Liliuokalani. W. E. Lee came to the STAR office to-day and reported that the ex-Queen was out in her gilded coach yesterday in the neighborhood of South and Queen streets interviewing all the natives she could find. His family saw her drive past their home three times. Mr. Lee heard a native say that she was telling them that an election would be held as a result of which she would be restored to the throne. The STAR gives this story as it comes, and has had no time to investigate it further.

After the Trees.

As a result of the publication of the article in yesterday's STAR on Government Nurseries, Commissioner Marsden has been besieged all morning with applications for trees. A number of them were from ladies, some of whom had copies of the STAR with them and pointed out to the Commissioner just what they wanted.

AN ARTESIAN STRIKE.

RUNNING WATER FOUND AT WAIANAEO.

It Solves the Water Problem There and Gives the Company's Stock a Boom.

All sorts of pleasant rumors flew about this morning in regard to a big artesian-water strike on the Waianae Sugar Company's plantation which had saved the cane from drought and run the stock up from somewhere near 100 to 210. Some people denied that the cane had been in very much danger and others that the stock had materially advanced; but all agreed that the water find was a good thing on general principles.

A WALK AROUND OAHU.

A Tourist Describes His Experiences on the Trip.

MR. EDITOR: Having made a complete circuit of this island and visited every plantation on it since Saturday, September 9th, I thought a brief account of my tramp would be interesting. I left town at 6 A. M. via the Nuuanu Pali, arriving at the Waianalo mill at 2 P. M. Left at 2:30 and reached S. M. Damon's place near Koko head about 6:30; stayed there over night. Resumed my tramp at 6:30 on Sunday morning, passing through Ni'u, Waialae, arriving at the Diamond head telephone station at 11 A. M. Came round by the beach and arrived at the Park an hour later. Absent from town, 30 hours; walking time, 18 hours; distance traveled, 31 miles.

Started again on Wednesday morning, September 13th, at 6 A. M., for the other part of the island. I went, as before, by way of the Nuuanu Pali and reached Heeia mill at about 11 A. M. The mill was grinding and the cane looked well. Passed through several rice plantations at Kaalea, Waiahole and Waikane. Arrived at Kuloa point about 5:30 P. M., and rested while enjoying the fine scenery. There are hundreds of acres of land between Waianalo and Kuloa covered with a rank growth of guava bushes that I believe would raise fine coffee. Passed through Kaaawa and arrived at Kahana about 7 P. M., where I stayed the night. Made twenty-five miles that day. Resumed my journey at 5 A. M. and passing through Punahoa and Kaliuwa arrived at Hanalei for breakfast. Resumed my journey at 9 A. M. and through Laie to Kahuku mill, which I reached at 11:30. After leaving Kahuku the road is very monotonous and lonesome for one person. Passed over the fine new bridge at Waimea, which makes travel much more safe at that place than it used to be, on account of the quicksands, and arrived at the pretty little village of Waialua a little after 7 P. M. Resumed my tramp at 5:30 on Friday morning, reached Halstead's plantation an hour later, and at Kaena point about 1 P. M., and from there by way of Makua to Waianae, which I reached about 7:30, walking the last two miles in the dark. Resumed my tramp at 7 A. M. on Saturday, stopping at the Waianae mill for a few minutes, and then had a stretch of nineteen miles to make to reach the Ewa mill, where I arrived at 2:30 P. M. and took the train for town. Absent from Honolulu nearly four days; distance traveled on foot, ninety-eight miles; time on the road, forty-seven hours. I carried on my person the whole distance from twelve to sixteen pounds' weight of food, water, extra pair of shoes, rubber coat and umbrella. Lost five pounds in weight on the trip and feel better after it than I have for five years.

COAL TAR AND WHISKY.

How Two Barrels of the Ardent Were Smuggled Into Apia.

The American bark Helen W. Almy arrived at Apia on the 22d of last July, bringing a cargo of general merchandise from San Francisco. In the cargo were five barrels of coal tar, consigned to Wm. Blacklock, United States Consul and dealer in general merchandise. The ship's manifest called for seven barrels of coal tar, and the deficiency had to be made up in some way, so the captain took two barrels of "Old Kentucky Home" whisky, which had been quietly reposing in the forepeak, and had the revenue stamps scraped off and the heads painted yellow, and inscribed "coal tar," with the mark of Whittier, Fuller & Co. appended. Then the barrels were labeled "W. B." and landed at Apia with the five barrels of tar and delivered at Blacklock's place of business. The next morning a sailor from the Almy reported the deception to the authorities and the liquor was seized.

Consul Blacklock denied all knowledge of the smuggled jg-producer and stated that the mark W. B. meant Wightman Bros. and not Wm. Blacklock. The barrels were returned to the Almy and taken to the Gilbert Islands, and now the latest song in Apia is "Oh where is my wandering tar to-night," and the favorite beverage called for by the citizens is "coal tar."

Are the Measles in Town?

It is a general report as the STAR goes to press that Robert Louis Stevenson's Samoan servant has the measles. Rumor also says that two or three other cases have developed, but at the late hour of writing the STAR can give no more names. The facts will be printed to-morrow.

Poll, Road and School Taxes.

There are still a good many personal taxes due, and the Assessor of the First division serves notice to-day's advertising columns that poll, road and school taxes remaining unpaid after September 30th will have to be paid with a 10 per cent. addition.

FLOTSAM AND JETSAM.

HOW A QUARANTINE WAS EVADED.

The Mariposa's Combative Fireman—A Crew Discharged—A Seaman Injured.

At 11 A. M. to-day while the Alden Besse's crew were engaged in making preparations to shift the vessel from Allen & Robins' wharf to the Oceanic dock, Wm. Curtis had his leg broken by lumber falling upon him. The gang plank, a rather large and heavy affair, was being put aboard the vessel, and Curtis with another man was on the wharf mooring it. A pile of lumber was accidentally upset, and Curtis's position was such that before he could jump aside the boards fell on him breaking his left leg above the ankle. Dr. McGrew was summoned and after examining the injured leg, sent the man to the hospital. The officers of the ship were in no way to blame.

The quarantine on the Mariposa yesterday was removed during the afternoon, as far as the cabin passengers and crew were concerned, but steerage passengers were not allowed the privilege of landing. After dark, when the crew from the fire room were coming ashore, many of them brought bundles of clothing belonging to steerage passengers, while the owners dived from the stern rail and swam ashore, donning their clothes on a neighboring wharf.

During the steamer's outward bound voyage two of the firemen had a dispute, which they determined to settle by an appeal to the marly art. At Auckland the mill was arranged, but for some reason did not come off, and last night a meeting was prop-posed for here, but was again prevented from taking place by the men being kept at work till a late hour.

Yesterday three sailors belonging to the crew of the barkentine Irmgard, left the vessel because three Japanese were shipped. The men are union seamen and would be liable to expulsion from their order should they ship with non-unionists. The men were replaced this morning.

Three of the Mariposa's sailors will be shipped by the United States Consul General to the coast by the Alden Besse to-morrow. The men shipped on the Mariposa for their passage to this port.

The eleven lepers arrested a day or two since at Hanalei arrived in charge of a police officer from that place on the steamer James Makee at 6 o'clock this morning.

The passengers arriving by the steamer Makee this morning were W. E. Rowell, eleven lepers, a police officer and thirteen on deck.

When the Mariposa sailed this morning the dredger saluted her with three whistles. Captain Hayward did not respond.

The barkentine S. G. Wilder has gone to the old custom house dock to be cleaned up.

The barkentine W. H. Dimond will sail for San Francisco on or about October 4th.

The dissatisfied crew of the Detroit has been discharged.

The steamer Hall is receiving a new coat of paint.

The Irmgard is lying at the Pacific Mail dock.

REPAIRING,

the bugle blast was welcomed by the people in Pat Higgin's place, even though the Apaches did escape, for they were all able to go home again. But before starting away several of the men rode over to the further side of the creek to take a look at the Indian whom Sweid had killed. They found him on his back with his legs and arms drawn up in a way that showed he had died in much pain, and then they went over, out of curiosity, to see where the sighting shot struck. Ben Sexton was in the lead, and astonished the rest by beginning to yell as soon as he got into the draw.

"There's a shirt under that bush—reckon it's yours," he said to Sweid, not believing what he said.

"You bet," said Sweid as he came up, "and the thief's in it that stole it, too."

And that was true. Well buried under the sand behind a small bush and a block of lava, after the manner of Apache scouts, was the body of another Indian. Sweid's sighting shot had really missed the rock he aimed at, but had hit the unseen head of the Indian close beside, and that brief death struggle that followed had made the movement and raised the dust that the watchers had seen. They buried the bodies, but first stripped off Sweid's stolen shirt to keep as a reminder of one of the curious incidents of a frontier war.

The Measles at Apia.

As was generally feared the much dreaded measles have made their appearance in our midst. Rumors of their existence at Vaitele and Fagali reached Apia on the 25th ult., and on the following day Dr. Funk and others proceeded to the places mentioned and ascertained that the rumors were, unfortunately, too true. How the complaint was first introduced it is hard to determine, but it is asserted that the germs were contained in a letter which arrived from New Zealand by the steamer Alameda. Immediately on discovering that the disease was in Samoa, Dr. Funk communicated with the Government and Municipal Council, who promptly acted in the wisest manner possible under the circumstances to deal with the epidemic. The Government issued a proclamation in the Samoan language, which contained simple instructions as to how cases were to be dealt with, what food ought to be taken, and other directions, which, if attended to, will prevent mortality, and greatly modify the evils which are almost certain to result from the spread of the measles. The Municipal Council was not behindhand in its duty to the public. With commendable energy they at once took steps to confer with the Health Officer, and ascertain if the progress of the epidemic might be arrested, and if not to endeavor as far as possible to ameliorate the condition of the sufferers. They decided to engage the public hall as a hospital so that early cases within the municipality could be properly treated, as the health officer was of the opinion that if such was done the epidemic would extend in a less malignant form. Additional police were appointed and the chief of police was instructed to co-operate with the health officer to the fullest extent possible. The council resolved itself into a committee to meet each day and report progress and act where necessary. On Tuesday it was decided to quarantine H. M. S. Rapid, and accordingly the yellow flag was hoisted and all communication with the shore stopped. This step was considered necessary, as the Rapid will shortly be going amongst other groups of islands, and wishes to avoid propagating the disease. None of the other vessels in harbor have been quarantined. Many fresh cases have been discovered since the above was written, and there can be no doubt that the disease is established amongst us. So far no deaths have taken place, and if due attention is paid to the simple and effective instructions contained in the proclamations which have been issued, we feel sure that the mortality will be but slight.—Samoa Herald.

Wampole's Tasteless Preparation

Cod Liver Oil.

It aims to cure Consumption, Hits the Mark, too, and it most effectually breaks up Colds, Coughs, Hoarseness and all Throat and Lung troubles that cause this disease.

It is natural logic to conclude that if WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION OF COD LIVER OIL has power to prevent Consumption, it surely is able to cure these lesser emergencies.

This vigor-making, fat producing preparation is Absolutely Tasteless, in so far as Cod Liver Oil is concerned. All you notice is a delightful flavor of Wild Cherry and Anise.

But the purest Norwegian Cod Liver Oil is there all the same. It is a great blood enricher. Best of all it is a natural food that in its stomachic effects, actually assists its own assimilation.

In Pulmonary or Bronchia troubles it is unequalled. No one doubts the value of Cod Liver Oil, but not every one is able to take it.

WAMPOLE'S PREPARATION removes the nauseous objection and actually makes Cod Liver Oil palatable.

A Big Week!

That's what it is at King Bros. Art Emporium, a big week for the house, and a bigger week for buyers of everything in their line. This week they have an especially fine display of pictures, artists' supplies, mirrors, photograph and auto-graph albums, wall brackets and easels, plush fancy goods and novelties, the latest styles of mouldings for framing and cornices, a full line of window pole cornices, etc. Now is the time to have portraits enlarged in crayon or india ink by first class artists at lowest rates.
