"STEVENSON IN SAMOA"

"The Song of the Men" and the Kind Deed It Commemorates.

The story-teller's step-daughter, Mrs. Isobel Strong, writes in the July Century of "Stevenson in Samoa." Tusitala was the name by which the natives knew and loved him.

The "Son of the Wen" commemorates an interesting event. A humble servant of the family, a lively, amusing fellow named Eliga, was afflicted with a large unsightly tumor on his back. In a land where beauty is of the first importance, this unfortunate man was made to suffer doubly. Mr. Stevenson and my mother had him examined by the kindly surgeon of an English man-of-war, who proposed an operation. But Eliga would not submit. He explained to Tusitala that there were strings in the wen that were tied about his heart, and if they were severed he would die. When Mr. Stevenson translated the doctor's diagnosis, Eliga was unconvinced. His skin, he said, was different on the outside from a white man's and therefore it was not unnatural to suppose that his insides were made on a different plan.

In the end, Mr. Stevenson's and my mother's arguments prevailed, and he submitted; but for their sakes, not his own, and he begged them to remember when he was gone, that he died for love of them. On the day of the operation Eliga prepared his house for death; the five mats were spread, the rush curtains were all up, decorations removed, the single room was so exquisitely prepared that not a pebble on the floor was out of place, and his relatives were assembled. He himself was of a pale lead-color and shaking with apprehension, yet he came out bravely and lifted Aolele (Aolele is Mrs. Stevenson's native name. It is a term of admiration, meaning "Beautiful as a flying cloud.") off her horse, and received Tusitala and the doctor with perfect self-possession.

The operation was successful, and Eliga recovered; but it was not only renewed health and strength that came to him, but the fulfillment of his dearest ambitions. Owing to his deformity he had been kept out of titles and estates that were promptly restored him. In the islands no deformed or very ugly person can be a chief. Indeed, if the children of a great man are ill-looking it is not unusual for him to adopt the handsomest boy in the village to succeed him.

The change in Eliga was magical. Instead of being the cringing, almost dwarfish creature who cut monkey-tricks to make people laugh, after the pathetic manner of the deformed in Samoa, he carried himself erect, with a haughty mien; he dyed his hair red, and wore it in the latest fashion, combed up into Grecian curls and powdered with sandalwood. When he came into his title, he made a visit to Vailima in state, accompanied by his new retainers, all laden with gifts for the family, and the "Song of the Wen" was sung for the first time.

A semicircle of men sat upon mats laid out upon the lawn in front of the house. On the veranda, facing them, sat Mr. Stevenson, surrounded by his family and native servants, looking on with that serious, respectful attention it was his custom to accord all native formalities, however trivial they may have seemed.

Eliga came forward crouchingly with a coconut tied by a piece of sinnet to his back. To the accompaniment of clapping hands and harmonious chanting, he half recited, half acted the story before us. He capered, he made silly, hideous faces, he did the buffoon for the last time in his life; and then, as the string was cut, and the coconut rolled to the ground, he sprang erect, thumped his breast, and sang aloud his triumph and gratitude.

THE TEMPERANCE QUESTION.

Our readers must not think that we intend to bore them with an essay on the thrashed-out temperance question. The fanatics who insist on total prohibition and who hope that "the sale and use of intoxicating liquors as beverage will be as totally destroyed in this city as is African slavery on the mainland," are the worst enemies of temperance. They cannot use good judgment and they cannot understand that men who have used liquors as beverages from childhood and grown up to a good old age, strong, healthy and prosperous, are not going to sacrifice their natural and accustomed diet to save men to whom liquor is as bad as poison, or to assist in running a political temperance campaign with good fees for the advocates of prohibition.

On Sunday last the Rev. Wm. Gardner addressed the Central Union Church, and the subject of his sermon was, "Is an agitation of the temperance question needed in Honolulu?" The reverend gentleman had, previous to his sermon, sent out a circular letter in which he asked a number of well known citizens in Honolulu to express an opinion in regard to the question propounded by him, and naturally the majority of those responding claimed that an agitation against the sale of liquor and saloons was the most proper thing—and then they took a drink.

Mr. Gardner admits that our present license system is the best he has ever seen and then he makes a broad assertion to which we decidedly wish to take exception, and the writer knows more about the saloon business than Mr. Gardner or any of his informants, we don't care who they are. The reverend gentleman said: "I am credibly informed that all the saloons but one are run in constant violation of the law, and that that one, because of its known respectability, is the place where more young men from respectable families start in the road to ruin than at any other five."

Mr. Gardner is not alone making a very strong accusation against the saloons but he is impeaching the police department, whose duty it certainly should be to prevent violations of the law under which the liquor dealers enjoy their expensive licenses. Has the reverend gentleman been around on Sundays and succeeded in getting even a glass of water from any licensed saloon? We think not. The barkeepers and owners of those places are only too glad to have a day of rest after working every day during the week from 5:30 a. m. to 11:30 p. m. They are not hankering for Sunday work. The temperance advocate insinuates that gambling is going in saloons, and that perhaps the presence of women and music contrary to law can be found on the forbidden grounds. It is true that some of our missionary young men who attend the Central Union Church regularly did show themselves in the saloons after the Myrtles won the races, lifted their voices in what they called song (music) and "set 'em up." But it could hardly be called a violation of the law. The only women we have ever seen in a public saloon here were tourists, mostly from Australia where it is considered quite natural for a woman to enter a barroom and take a glass of beer. As far as gambling is concerned we don't think that Mr. Gardner or his "very best authorities" can show a single instance where a single dollar has been won or lost in a saloon since the Marshal stopped the use of dice boxes. And Mr. Gardner should be aware that every owner of a saloon and barkeeper was more than pleased at the order because dice shaking was simply a nuisance to those who conduct the saloons.

We would have taken little notice of Mr. Gardner's remarks which shows his ignorance of the subject he deals with and how ill informed he is, if he had not made a most unwarranted attack on the saloon in which, he claims, no law is violated, but more young men ruined than in any other five; owing the respectability of that one. If Mr. Gardner would ask the young men of respectable families who take a drink whether their company is specially wished in the saloon he refers to, he would learn that that is the place where they get "fatherly" advice, where they are told that their space is more desirable than their company, and if they get there "loaded" are "unloaded" into their carriages or road with an injunction never to show their faces again on those premises. Mr. Gardner of course mentions no name of the special saloon which he has selected for his attack. He wouldn't dare do it. But we don't think that vague assertions, a cowardly stabbing in the back and cast and rot are the means through which the question of temperance will be promoted and society benefitted.

In the District Court.

Senator W. H. Rice appeared this morning as a culprit before Judge Wilcox. The ex-Governor was charged with importing live stock without a license. A nolle pros. was entered by the Deputy Marshal, who explained that the stock in question were consigned to Mr. Rice, but really were imported by the Honolulu Stock Yard Company, now a chartered corporation of which Mr. Rice is a director.
 Judge Wilcox expressed his regret that the Senator had been put to such an inconvenience and told him to "git." The popular ex-Governor looked somewhat out of place while before the Judge, but evidently left happy at not being handcuffed as others were 1895.
 Dr. Noblitt was charged this morning with practicing medicine without a license. The doctor was represented by attorneys Hankey, Humphreys and Berry. The Marshal, who prosecuted failed to prove a case and the doctor was discharged. The law relating to the practicing of medicines is evidently "muddled."
A Shocking Death
 Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Richards are the objects to-day of the sympathy of the whole community who feel with them in the sad loss of their two year old daughter who was drowned accidentally in a water tank within a stone throw from the house of her grandfather, Mr. J. B. Atherton, on King street. The little girl had strolled away from her nurse and fate brought her to the well which she only reached after climbing through a fence. When missed after a few moments absence a search was made and the poor little child was found in the well still alive but beyond recovery by human skill.
 The funeral takes place this afternoon at 4 o'clock from the residence of J. B. Atherton.
A SUCCESS
Was the Sale of Season Tickets for the Opera Yesterday.
 No stronger evidence could possibly be had of the wishes of the amusement loving public of this city for the coming opera season than the unprecedented sale of seats yesterday at Wall-Nichols Company, amounting to $920. It means, without doubt, that every available seat in the Opera House will be sold for the entire engagement, with a lot of late comers on the outside—impossible to get in. The Boston Lyric Opera Co. is well known in Honolulu. The reputation and record of success which this famous organization enjoys, has been written about time and time again. Its coming to this city will prove to be a musical treat which will be fully appreciated by our great musical community. Sale of seats continues daily from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.
Dentist Exonerated.
 A coroner's inquest was held on the body of Wm. Murdon who died on the 7th inst. The deceased was a soldier of the Sixth Artillery, and his death was unexpected, as the man had not been sick.
 Dr. S. A. Yule, U. S. A., signed a certificate giving the cause as catarrhal pneumonia induced by anaesthetics administered by a dentist.
 On the strength of the opinion of the doctor an inquest was held. After hearing the evidence of Drs. Grossman and Clark, dentists, the jury returned a verdict that the said Wm. Murdon came to his death in Honolulu, September 7, as the result of catarrhal pneumonia.
David Garrick.
 The second presentation of David Garrick by the Moore-Roberts Company last evening was as great a success as the first performance of that interesting play. Roberts was in excellent form and once more proved his talents as an actor of the first-class. It is not complimentary to the taste of Honolulu people that the talented company has not received better patronage than it has. In due time a reform will take place.

A Swift Torpedo Boat.

A torpedo destroyer, made for the British Government, lately attained a speed of 43 miles an hour. It is worked by machinery on the famous Parsons turbine system. If this could be applied to Atlantic steam communication, vessels would make the voyage between England and Canada in about three days. The chief present obstacle is the enormous amount of coal which would be required by vessels using the turbine system, but efforts are being made to overcome this objection, and these may yet succeed.

SENSATION AT BIRMINGHAM.

Nine Bodies of Children Found in a Cellar.

A shocking discovery has been made at Birmingham. The bodies of nine children have been found in the cellar of a house in Arthur-street, Small Heath, which was formerly occupied by a widow named Mary Bowen. On May 31, she was removed to the Workhouse Infirmary, suffering from a cancer in the cheek. One day one of her sons went to the house to remove some of the furniture, and was led to go into the cellar as he thought a very bad smell came from that quarter. He then saw nine small boxes, which had contained dry-soap powder, arranged in one corner, and on further investigation discovered in them the dead bodies of infants in various stages of decomposition, as though they had been there for a considerable period.
The police were communicated with, and a further examination of the premises was made, but no other bodies were found. The lids of the boxes had been nailed down, and the boxes wrapped in paper and tied with string, as though ready for being taken away. In each box there was a good deal of wadding, and each body was surrounded with it. In some cases it appeared as though lime had been freely used. Some of the bodies appear to be those of newly-born children. Mrs.
Bowen, who is in a critical condition, and has not been able to give any account of her share in the extraordinary collection, has for some years earned her living as a midwife, and it is thought that the bodies have been entrusted to her for burial, and that she has failed to take them to the cemetery. It is believed that most of the children have been still-born. The assumed failure to bury the bodies constitutes no crime; it is merely an offence against the public health. An inquest will be held.
