THE DAILY

Pacific Commercial Advertiser.

SATURDAY, FEB. 1, 1890.

In the ADVERTISER office is to be seen a small but very neat and skillfully executed engraving by Henry Grube Marchant. If our esteemed friend, Robert W. Wilcox, had only employed his time abroad in something useful he might earn an honest living, instead of being the vagrant and unmitigated public nuisance he now is. True, the engraver's art demanded more talent even than turning feet into meters, and it is not every one, as we have lately learned, who can manage so much as the latter. Mr. Wilcox is not the first noisy demagogue who follows that vocation from a want of capacity for anything else.

MR. JOHN ROSS ON POLITICS.

Mr. John Ross has written a letter to the Bulletin in which he states that he was present at the Fish Market on Saturday, and that he can therefore state of his own knowledge that Robert Wilcox did not say what the ADVERTISER has ascribed to him. As we have not published or commented on any speech which Mr. Wilcox made on Saturday, the force of Mr. Ross's denial is somewhat weakened, and it would be well for him to reserve his criticism of the ADVERTISER's bitterness and injustice for some other occasion. We are informed that Mr. Ross, like ourselves, is not a native scholar of the first water, and consequently his denials may not carry all the force which they would, coming from an expert in the language. As to our bitterness and injustice, we fear it is ineradicable, and so advise Mr. Ross to soothe his weary nerves by the perusal of the meek, mild, peaceful and temperate utterances of the Voice of the Nation, the National Herald, and the public speakers on that side.

BEARING FRUIT.

A few evenings ago a lady in crossing the street was accosted in an insulting manner by some natives, who jeeringly called her a "missionary," with other language. On Saturday an old lady in her carriage drove to the Fish Market. Several natives crowded up and made insulting remarks. Anything more unlike the native Hawaiian, with his natural courtesy born of a kind heart, can hardly be imagined; yet the incidents are true. Such conduct is born of the feeling of insane jealousy and anger now rankling in the hearts of many of the natives, planted there and watered by the false and incendiary talk of Wilcox, Bush and their coadjutors. Where is liberty! where is independence! when the people are cursed, threatened and ostracized if they dare to vote against the ring represented by these men! The tactics in use these last days are those of desperadoes determined to win at any cost. The intelligent and enlightened voter and citizen is warned to act with his eyes open and with a full knowledge of what it means to support the National Reform party.

An artesian well was completed at Woonsocket, South Dakota, January 11th, and broke loose the next morning at 7:30 o'clock and threatened to flood the town. A solid column of water as big as a man's body is thrown sixteen feet high from the top of the stand pipe. The engine-house is filling with quicksand and the lower parts of the town will soon be under water. No power can control the well at present.

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the statements made, or opinions expressed by our correspondents.

The Reform Party on Maui.

Mr. Editor: A meeting of the Reform party was held in Wailuku on Saturday the 25th, and the attendance was very good. A special train brought people from Hamakua ports, Makawao, Paia, Spreckelsville and Kahului. There was a little disturbance outside the hall in which the meeting was held, caused probably by the presence of "election gin," but it was soon stopped. It looked very much as if the Opposition party tried to break up the meeting. If so, they did not succeed. The several speakers were attentively listened to and often applauded. I think there is reason to hope that the Reform party will come out victorious, in spite of what "Makainana & Co." writes in the Bulletin. The voters will not forget when they go to the polls, that the leaders of the Opposition party, or Bush & Co., acted as if the Government existed only to further their own private objects, and that money was squandered right and left for the most useless and absurd purposes. To trust the treasury in the hands of such people, would be to put a fox as night watchman over a well filled chicken coop.

Monday the 27th, Mr. W. Halstead, the candidate as Representative for Makawao, met the Portuguese voters at Paia skating rink. There was a great number present, about one hundred, besides a few natives. Mr. W. B. Kala was also present, the candidate for the Opposition party. Each had his interpreter. The Opposition party had prepared the report that Mr. Halstead had received money from the Reform party, and the principal reason for calling the meeting was to tell the Portuguese that such was not the case. Mr. Halstead was the first speaker. He said that the accusation of having received money was utterly false; he had not received any, and had not been promised any, and would not take any. He did not intend to work for this person or for that, but for the good of his country, which for him was the most important. The idea that Mr. Balwin was running the Government seemed to be prevalent, but he (Mr. Halstead) did not care for the Government than any other man. They all run the Government, or rather they all had a chance to, by electing good reliable men to represent them, men that would not promise more than they had good money to sell them the Government. He further referred to what this Government had done for the Portuguese. It has given them a right to vote, a right which they did not have before, and which would never have been given them by the old regime. What power is there in the machine thus given you? Suppose there should be a tie at any election, one of you might be the one that decided who would be the Representative, for good or for bad. I adhere to the platform as given by the Reform party, the party who has opened large tracts of land for you to settle on. This is your country just as much as mine. You have children to bring up, and for our own sake, and for their sake that comes after us, we must establish and maintain a good honest government, pledged to no person or persons, but for the development and good of the country. The Portuguese asked Mr. Halstead a few questions which he promptly and openly answered, and it seemed to please the way hence the way he spoke.

W. B. Kala came next. He started by saying that he would see to it that a law was passed, to pay all laborers one dollar a day and found, and told them that if they did not vote for him they would soon have to work for twenty-five cents per day! The absurdity of this statement struck the Portuguese, and they only sneered at the speaker. At this point a good many left, not caring to listen to such talk, and after having so thoroughly abused the present Government, and promised to work for returning the lepers to their homes, Mr. Kala had to stop, because nobody paid any attention to what he said.

The meeting was most orderly throughout, and it was a great sight to see who of the two speakers was most appreciated, and the result will no doubt be that the voters will support the honest Government we have, against the doubtful men that try to get hold of the reins and of the keys to the money box. "Claus Spreckels," said a friend of his yesterday, "looks so much like the conventional idea of Santa Claus, the Christmas saint, that no one ought to be surprised at his being named 'Claus.' The old sugar king has a full white beard, rosy cheeks and luxuriant snowy hair. He is even as benevolent in a quiet way as his Christmas namesake is on a large scale, and his family and employees have all been voted to him. Mr. Spreckels knows the sugar business from the cane field to the refined product. When the refinery was being built near the foot of Reed street in Philadelphia, at a cost of more than $1,000,000, a quantity of the most expensive machinery in the plant was put in wrong, and when Mr. Spreckels saw it he recognized the error at a glance.

"As a practical machinist he leaped into the excavation, had the whole mass of iron and steel yanked out, and personally superintended its proper erection. Few millionaire operators in any business know its ins and outs so thoroughly as he." [N. Y. World.] Advertise your wants in the DAILY PACIFIC COMMERCIAL ADVERTISER.

THE ADULLAMITES.

"Every One That was in Distress and Every One That was in Debt, and Every One That was Discouraged, Gathered Themselves Unto Him." (Continued.)

At the hour for the meeting to construct a platform, Loquacious Moses stalked into the cave, taking gigantic strides, his hat set on the back of his head to show his massive brow. He rapped on the table and shouted "Boodle, boodle." This brought the assembly to order and Moses proceeded: "Gentlemen, we have a harder task this evening than we have yet undertaken. Hitherto we have concerned ourselves too much in pleasing ourselves. Now we must try to please the voters. That we may the better accomplish this task I have decided to have you discuss the matter fully and freely, after the manner of a committee of the whole."

At this point Charley the Trooper, seeing that Moses was about to cease speaking, sprang to his feet with the evident intention of catching the next speech on the fly. With head erect, chin protruding, eyes fixed on dim futurity and arms performing gyrations in apparent imitation of a Dutch wind-mill, the trooper sent his silvery voice careering through the cave to the following effect: "Gentlemen, I want to play ball. But I am so busy all the week (going billiard halls) that I have no time to play baseball. I want to play baseball on Sunday. Now, the law is against that, and I want the law changed. I am willing to advocate either side of any other question you choose if you will only let me play baseball on Sunday. By this touching appeal Elder Shrub was melted to tears, while Garibaldi, rushing forward impetuously, embraced the speaker, exclaiming, "My dear Mr. Trooper; to me you are a political necessity."

General Deficiency's burdened brow arrested all eyes, and as his gaunt form arose, even Duty and the flippant Cuspidor felt that a scheme of broad statesmanship was to be announced. "The Audit Act (ahem) is the sheet (ahem) anchor of all my hopes. It checks unrighteous (cries of down with the missionary.) Beg pardon, gentlemen, I mean it possesses great capabilities, as it were. (Cries of hear, hear.) At present, however, the Legislature is given undue discretion in calling an auditor to account. This is a serious objection to the office and I do hope that this may be changed and that with the right man in the place, we will see to it that he is not trammelled unduly by Legislative committees."

"The General is sound on the Audit Act, I know something about him," chirruped Shrub. "Hold, Elder," when I was in the Legislature I interjected the Solon from Waianae, "I was on a committee to investigate—" The cave of Adullam was in an uproar, Moses vainly shouting "Boodle!" the upper Cuspidor waiting around with his hands on his hips, and the lower Cuspidor, the Trooper making war remarks about the confusion, while Garibaldi, standing on a chair and flourishing a cane, startled everyone with his shrill tones and brought order out of chaos. "Gentlemen, let us have peace, victory and boodle. It is not possible for us to get into power if we let the people know what we mean to do. Say nothing about what we mean to do (when it does not seem to be very popular), but get in first. When I get to be Minister (a sardonic smile) I'll take care of the old General. In that way we shall be left free to talk on all sides of every question so as to please all the voters. Now, I want a big army, 200 in the King's guard, besides a good many other companies. Charley and I will run the army. (A crooked smile.) I want him for a drummer boy. (Applause.) But it won't do to say anything about that in the platform. It would drive away all the voters. I will let you know what I will do for my white friends, (rubbing his hands.) When I get to be Minister I'll fix all these matters." (Applause.)

Then Moses arose and unsteadily, as if laboring under the weight of an immense mental burden, and said: "In Garibaldi we have indeed a wise and great leader. We must use diplomacy. That meeting at the Chinese theater warns us that we must be strong on paper, but we must be weak in the islands (till after the election) though deep down in this sincere heart lies the patriotic desire for annexation to Portugal."

A heavy groan escaped the speaker as he heard the last word, and then this child of his own intellect being safely born (alive though somewhat feeble) he fell back into his chair and lay panting. Elder Shrub rushed forward and fanned him vigorously with his hat while Tommy Cuspidor ran for a bottle of cold water. By these assiduous attentions Moses was soon restored to his usual activity, though he remained somewhat pale and quiet all the evening.

The piping voice of Excusable C. Duty was now heard pleading for an immediate change in the law, and by-and-by (with another sardonic and exceedingly crooked smile) we'll fix the disturbing element."

Tony Fire Eater stroking his Burnsides, and shaking his fat sides, fairly scintillated with rapture at Garibaldi's diplomacy. "Flip Demarest, standing aloof at the mouth of the cave where the fresh air could fan his fevered brow, turned to the grin Trooper and slowly closed one eye. "I've got to be Minister (a sardonic smile) I'll take care of the old General. In that way we shall be left free to talk on all sides of every question so as to please all the voters. Now, I want a big army, 200 in the King's guard, besides a good many other companies. Charley and I will run the army. (A crooked smile.) I want him for a drummer boy. (Applause.) But it won't do to say anything about that in the platform. It would drive away all the voters. I will let you know what I will do for my white friends, (rubbing his hands.) When I get to be Minister I'll fix all these matters." (Applause.)

Shrimp had already gone home with a headache, and D. W. Blossom from district five, with that pulled over his eyes, was snoring in the corner. Glancing over to the elder, who was sitting in the rear, looking wise, Tony Fire Eater with a pompous thrust of his hand into his pantaloons pocket said: "Everyone here knows we are after the same thing—'boodle.' (Oh, boodle, my boodle," pursued the Cuspidor.) "It is all the more necessary," continued Tony, "that we should pool out pet projects. There is one issue that all lovers of Hawaiian stability are agreed upon, and that is that we should unite to our disagreeable political elements from this country. I have been a sleeping member of this organization, but the time has come to oust these despicable characters."

The Trooper's brow was knit and Flip Demarest began buttoning his coat preparatory to going out into the chill cold world, when the sibilant voice of the Elder broke the awkward pause.

"We all know what we want." "Oh boodle, my darling boodle," purred the Cuspidor. "Let's turn the whole thing over to Loquacious and Excusable. They can put into the platform something of everything that anybody has thought about for the last six months."

"Such as countenancing reciprocity," crookedly grinned Garibaldi. "And a liberal modification of the property qualification," echoed the grin Trooper. "And the election of some Government officers," gently insinuated General Deficiency. "And appointments giving better public satisfaction than hitherto," he added as an afterthought. "And an equitable pension law," soliloquized the Elder.

"And a beautiful revision of the constitution," added Garibaldi with a more sinister and more or less crooked grin. "Excusable and Loquacious will get it all in," was the oily assurance of the Elder. "Diminutive Scribbs will adorn the Patriotic. He has been at all our meetings, and I'll see the old man of the Evening Ostrich with whom I am intimate and have him suggest some fresh ideas to Scribbs." And with that Adullamites went forth to invite the suffrages of the people.

Gate City Stone Filter

These Filters are easily cleaned, and NEVER become CRACKED or CRAZED by change of Temperature of the Water. The Filtering Medium is a NATURAL STONE, mined from the earth. It is unlike any other stone.

IT DOES NOT ABSORB AND BECOME FOUL. IMPURITIES never PENETRATE it, but lie on the surface, and internally the stone remains as pure and white after years of use as when taken from the mine.

The Gate City Stone Filter is a perfect success. It is the only real filter I have ever seen. I would not be without one for any consideration. It converts our lake water into the best drinking water in the world. HENRY M. LYMAN, M. D., 533 West Adams St., Chicago.

From Maui and Hawaii per star W G Hall, Jan 31—His Majesty the King, Bishop Willis, R H Parker, Miss L Parker, J C Slater, A A Pond, Prof W T Brigham, A Wasey, W T Bell, W E Rowell, Mrs W Dunn and child, J H Thomas and wife, H N Greenwell, J T Cognet, Mrs Nahaoleia and 4 deck.

SHIPPING NOTES.

The C. R. Bishop takes some very heavy machinery for the Kahuku plantation today.

The bk the Amelia, Capt. Newhall, sails for San Francisco to-day with a full cargo of sugar and a deck load of bananas.

The bk Andrew Welch finished discharging her coal Friday morning and has fine weather until leaving Hawaii, where she encountered strong northeast winds.

The Sugar Duty.

The opinion of the Collector of Customs of Philadelphia having been asked by the Secretary of the Treasury, Collector Cooper made the following statement:

"Regarding sugars I think that the present duties imposed throughout the country amount to $60,000,000 yearly, and nearly one-fourth of this amount is paid in at the port of Philadelphia. In Allison's bill a reduction from the prevailing duty on sugar is shown, which, if put into force, would reduce the duty on Philadelphia to the extent of $6,000,000 annually, and yet this reduction would probably be of no benefit to the consumer, as the prevailing retail prices would be maintained. A reduction of 25 per cent. would, he thinks, be more in conformity with the public desire than any other figure. This reduction would, however, entail an additional expense to the Government, as it would undoubtedly increase importations and necessitate the employment of a greater number of persons to handle it."

Police Court.

FRIDAY, JAN. 31. A nolle pro. was entered against M. Maloney charged with vagrancy.

Keau a native woman charged with larceny of a silver watch, the property of a Chinaman, was found guilty and discharged.

Nali (W.) was fined $2 with $1 costs for drunkenness.

Three thousand men have been shut out of the Haverhill, Mass., shoe factories, the employers refusing to allow them to decide the method and prices of work. Evidently a mild winter is not a good thing for manufacturers in the East.

LOCAL AND GENERAL.

The first day in February. Politics are becoming quite interesting.

A special notice appears elsewhere from the Enterprise Carriage Co.

Bishop Willis returned yesterday from a pastoral tour on the island of Hawaii.

The band gives its usual concert at Emma Square this afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

There was a large audience at the Barn concert at Thomas square last evening.

There will be Union service in Hawaii at the Kawaiahaeo church Sunday evening.

Bento Ignacio, a Portuguese, was arrested yesterday on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

There is to be a grand fireworks exhibition this evening on the new mar at ground on the Esplanade.

The first division of the Liliokalani Educational Society will hold a meeting Monday at 3 p. m. at Washington Place.

The S. S. Australia is due next Friday from San Francisco, and the Zealandia is due the next day from the Colonies en route to San Francisco.

Mrs. Sherman the artist did not return on the W. G. Hall. She remains on Maui a short time longer returning to Honolulu February 11th.

Prof. M. M. Scott is holding normal classes at the Fort Street School four days in the week from 2 to 4 p. m. The attendance is about forty.

A meeting of the subscribers to the capital stock of the Ewa Plantation Company will be held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the office of Castle & Cooke.

At 10 o'clock this morning there will be a meeting of the Kahuika Plantation Company at the office of Mr. Jas. B. Castle, opposite Post office, for the purpose of organization.

Alfred Rhodus, who, it will be remembered, got into a shooting scrape here a few years ago and served a sentence on the reef, recently lost an arm in a shooting scrape in Denver.

Professor Brigham and Mr. A. Wasey returned from the volcano on the steamer W. G. Hall yesterday. Mr. Wasey reports that the Dana lake was unusually high, and they witnessed a most brilliant volcanic display.

The foreign jury will be required in the Supreme Court at 10 o'clock this morning when the case of M. de Gourville vs. H. N. Greenwell et al. will be heard. Several of the witnesses in the case came by the W. G. Hall yesterday.

Messrs. Bush and Wilcox went to Kalaie on this island on Tuesday, and held forth to eleven natives. The impression these two great blusters left on the minds of these eleven men was one of disgust. The latter have openly expressed themselves.

The January term of the Supreme Court closes to-day by limitation. We desire to thank Mr. Henry Smith, Clerk of the Court, for the courtesy he has shown to our reporter during the term. It never seemed to be any trouble to him to extend favors. Also must we thank Mr. Jones the able stenographer for his kindness on many occasions.

Messrs. H. Reed and A. W. Carter the deputy clerks have faithfully attended to our wants in chambers. Many thanks, gentlemen.

Mr. C. J. Lyons of the newly-forming "Weather Service" wishes us to say to all voluntary reporters of rain fall for the month of January, to include all that fell between 6 A. M. of December 31st, and 6 A. M. of January 31st, as of January 1st. All falling after the last mentioned time on the 31st should go to the record of February 1. It has been found by experience the best way to secure certainty as well as uniformity in reports, to read the rain gauge at 6 A. M., and enter on the record with the date of that day, and as of the day previous.

Peculiar to the Trade. There is one thing peculiar to the hat and cap trade, and that is the manner in which stocks are ordered. By correspondence we agree with different manufacturers on a date on which we will meet their representatives. Half a dozen companies, for instance, manufacture a similar class of goods. By correspondence we agree with each of the factories, and we don't want to visit one and buy there. Neither do we want to have one agent call on us one week, another another week, and so on. Hence the arrangement for the agents of competing houses to meet us at the same time, the result apparently being satisfactory to all concerned.

It does seem quite novel to see half a dozen or more names written on a hotel register, one after the other, all from New York, and to be told they are drummers for one line. I presume this is the only branch of business in which this is likely to happen. It is possible in our mainly for the reason that all styles and purchases are made away in advance of the season. For instance, though winter goods, ordered months ago, are not all in yet, we are now ordering for spring and summer, and have been for two weeks.—Hat Dealer in Globe-Democrat.

Gun chewing, according to recent reports, is the prevailing mania in Albion, Neb. The disgusting habit has become so general that parents and preachers inveigh against it, but to no effect. During services in church last Sunday the dominie delicately insinuated that the congregation looked like a corral of munching cattle, so industriously did the jaws wag. While the preacher was rounding an eloquent peroration on the beauties of the echoes' sharo, a mighty yell rent the rafters. It came from the paralyzed jaw of a Mr. Cato, who had been suddenly smitten with lead colic, caused by chewing adulterated gum. Cato was taken home and the congregation dismissed. Next by a ton of second-hand gum was pumped from the pews and dumped into the raging Beaver.

Return of His Majesty. The W. G. Hall arrived yesterday afternoon from Maui and Hawaii, having on board His Majesty the King, The Royal standard was flying at the mainmast, and as soon as the vessel entered the harbor salutes were fired from the shore battery at Kakaako, the U. S. S. Mohican and H. E. M. S. Champion. The yards were manned on both vessels. The King was met at the wharf by their Excellencies Ions, Austin, Minister of Foreign Affairs; Hon. A. S. Cleghorn, Colonel Macfarlane, Chamberlain, and Mr. J. W. Robertson, Vice Chamberlain.

Public Concert. The Royal Hawaiian Band will give a concert this (Saturday) afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, at Emma square. Following is the programme: 1. Overture—La Dame Blanche. Boieldieu 2. Galop—Iris. ... 3. Grand March—Kakakaua. ... 4. Selection—Prince Minamoto. ... 5. Gavotte—Think of Hawaii. ... 6. Waltz—On the Blue Lake. ...

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

The skeleton of the largest elephant ever killed in India has been found to measure ten feet six inches high.

An old bachelor died recently in Rome leaving the Pope 1,000,000 lire. To his sister he left a monthly allowance of five lire.

At a bazaar in Vienna an English millionaire paid $5,000 for a kiss from one of the beautiful stall holders—the Marchioness Pallavicini.

Sir Conrad Reeves, the Chief Justice of Barbados, is of slave descent on his mother's side, and is the first mulatto who has received the honor of Knighthood.

The Sepoys of India kicked up a great rebellion about bog's grease, but their tastes have changed in the last five years and they now eat American ham and bacon with as much gusto as a European.

A prominent Turkish official in Constantinople laments the spread of Christianity among the women of Turkey, on the ground that it will soon lead the Turkish ladies to dress as immodestly as Christian ladies.

Cremation is apparently growing in favor of the aristocratic classes in England. One of the great landed owners of London, and the descendant of an illustrious line of dukes (name not given) is reported to have made a donation of $5,000 to the Cremation Society of England, and his body is to be burned after death.

The total population of Bulgaria and Rumelia, strangers included, was ascertained on January 1st, 1888, to be 3,154,575. Of these 2,336,250 were Bulgarians, 904,000 Turks, and only 85,000 Greeks. The Turkish race in Bulgaria exhibits a singular predominance of females, who number 607,000, and 58,000 of the Greeks are females. Among the Bulgarians and other races the males are in excess.

The Empress of Russia, like her sister, the Princess of Wales, never wears high-crowned or large-brimmed hats, which, indeed, would be unsuited to the delicate type of her beauty. Everything must be small and neat, and compact, whether hat or bonnet. Her favorite colors are pale blue and mauve.

In the town library of Nuremberg is preserved an interesting globe, made by John Schoner, professor of mathematics in the gymnasium there A. D. 1520. It is very remarkable that the passage through the Isthmus of Panama, so much sought after in later times, is on this old globe carefully delineated.

Hair-dyeing is becoming general among the laboring people of England—not from motives of vanity, but under the spur of necessity. Working women, and even men, it appears, are given to decorating themselves in this way as a matter of necessity, and in order to earn their livings. Gray hair looks aged, and suggests inefficiency, or perhaps it does not, for some other reason, satisfy the fancy of critical customers; consequently it is not in favor with employers. Hair-dyeing has therefore become an established custom among persons seeking employment.

From the last report of Krupp's establishment at Essen it appears that in 1883 there were only nine workmen, and in 1848, seventy-four. In July, 1888, the establishment employed 20,960 men, of whom 13,626 were at Essen. Including the families of the workmen they supported a population of 73,969 souls, of whom 24,193 lived in houses provided by the firm. There are at Essen 1,195 furnaces of various constructions, 286 boilers, ninety-two steam hammers of from 100 to 50,000 lbs. 370 steam engines, with a total of 27,000 horse-power, 1,724 different machines, and 361 cranes. Of coal and coke, 2,735 tons are daily used, and eleven high furnaces of the latest constructions produce 600 tons of iron per day.

HENRY M. STANLEY.

The world which was slow to accord honor and good judgment to the man who found Livingstone, now places his name at the head of the list of famous explorers. Great as are his achievements, his qualities as a man challenge our admiration more than his discoveries. The story of the famous march, as told in his letter from Mtwah to the New York Herald, is one of the most touching and eloquent ever read, and is noted for its reverent tone and recognition of God's directing hand. "I gave," says Stanley, "as much good will to my duties as the strictest honor would compel. My faith that the purity of my motive deserved success was firm, but I have been conscious that the issues of every effort were in other hands. Those are words that render him worthy to be named with the martyrs for like them his courage was undaunted, and he fought a good fight in the interest of civilization and Christianity. Like the laborer of a Saturday evening returning home with his week's work done, his week's wages in his pocket, and glad that to-morrow is the Sabbath, he acknowledges that "a veritable divinity seems to have hedged us while we journeyed," the march to the coast closing with "thanks be to God forever and ever." All honor to the man who, from the humblest station in life, has risen to high eminence, not as the guest of kings, but the beloved of nations, enshrined in the heart of humanity. We send ourselves of an admirable though brief sketch of the man contained in the New York Tribune.

Stanley was born in Denbigh, Wales, in 1840. To no hero in history, or even in American legend, is there a stranger or nobler career than has been actually his. His parents were named Rowlands, and they christened him John. Being wretchedly poor, they gave him over to the care of the parish when he was three years of age, and his associate in a well-endowed and expectant heir of a wealthy man he had been wandering about in the Indian country of the Southwest, and had obtained much experience of savage ideas and habits, which he had never forgotten.

The war had broken out, and he was impressed into the rebel service. But his sympathies were with the North and he managed to get over upon the other side, where he continued to serve, though with any particular distinction, until the fall of Richmond. Then he obtained employment on the New York Herald as a reporter, and was quickly recognized as a picturesque and clear-headed correspondent. He was sent to fight for him and liberty in the Cretan army and to record its fate in the Herald. That over, he traveled through the eastern countries and in Abyssinia and Spain as a roving correspondent until October, 1869, when Mr. Bennett sent him to find Livingstone. The story of that wonderful achievement is told in his book, one of the most fascinating records of great victory. Mr. Bennett sent him back to Africa almost immediately after his return from the Livingstone expedition and four years more were spent in travels and battles through the dark continent. Then he returned to America, where he was again employed by the New York Herald, and Sir William Mackinnon besought him over the cable to go and rescue Emin.

The last expedition, covering a period of three years, has terminated in the rescue of Emin, in geographical discoveries that solve the mysteries of Central Africa, in scientific knowledge of priceless value, and in showing the world an example of heroism, pluck, endurance, courage, humility, integrity, that is long to be remembered. He has become one of the most famous marches in history. All hail, Stanley!

LAUGHING AT FRANKLIN.

Madame de Lamballe on the Philosopher and Miss Deane.

The American ambassadors, Benjamin Franklin and Silas Deane, were received by King Louis XVI. of France and his Queen one hundred and eleven years ago last March 22. On the following day the Russian Count Tschernicheff found on the top step of the entrance to the royal palace in Versailles a letter addressed to M. de Sartines and signed by Mme. de Lamballe. Tschernicheff took the letter home with him, read it, and sent a copy of it to his sovereign, Katherine II. of Russia. The last number of the Revue Nouvelle contains the letter. Mme. de Lamballe wrote thus:

"This morning I was at the Queen's levee, which, on account of the presence of the American ambassadors, was frightfully long. I have such a headache that I would not write did I not know how anxious you are to know how we liked the gentlemen from America. Well, so, so, la, la. You have the Countess Julie and me to thank for even this much. It cost us no little trouble to get the Queen into the mood to hear them. Unfortunately Mme. Bertin had been with her, and you know how unfavorable to the interests of the modistes the war with England is. Mme. Bertin had poked so much fun at the American ambassadors that, when they entered, she could hardly preserve her dignity and a straight face, and I do not wonder much at it. They were, in fact, wretchedly dressed. There was nothing distinguished about them. We described to the Queen in vain the simplicity of the costumes of that all forms. "Say what you will," answered the Queen, "they do look somewhat like camellias." We laughed at this and she regained her good humor, which she had lost on account of these barbarians. But I beg you to spare our decorum and send us your clown when they come again, so that we may not break down entirely. Then the Countess Julie and I promise you to do our best to cure the Queen of her prejudice."

After copying Mme. de Lamballe's letter Tschernicheff returned it anonymously to M. de Sartines, who was so provoked by its loss and by the mysteriousness of its reappearance that he offered the police a reward of 10,000 francs for the discovery of the finder. His curiosity was never satisfied. Tschernicheff's sovereign was so pleased with his cleverness in handling the letter that she sent him her picture and a $2,000 snuff box. In her next letter to him she intimated that Marie Antoinette seemed to be doing a great deal of laughing, and that "she laughed best who laughed last."

Distribution of Seeds.

Mr. Darwin found that the small portions of earth attached to the feet of migrating birds contained seed. Nine grains of earth on the leg of the woodcock contained a seed of the toad rush. From six and a half ounces of earth rolled into a ball and adhering to the leg of a wounded partridge he raised eighty-two separate plants of five species. Migrating birds often frequent the edges of ponds ere their departure, and in six and three-quarter ounces of such mud he raised under glass 537 plants. Seeds furnished with crowns, hooks, or prickles readily stick to the plumage of birds, which all such birds, and especially such wanderers as the albatross, might carry long distances.

Applying these facts to the case of the Azores, Mr. Wallace found that most of the Azorean flora are well adapted to be carried by the methods just suggested—45 of the 439 flowering plants belonging to genera that have either pappus or winged seeds, 65 to such as have minute seeds, 30 to those with fleshy fruits which are greedily eaten by birds, some have hispid seeds, and 84 are glaucous plants well suited to conveyance by winds and currents. The only trees and shrubs of this isolated group are bearers of small berries, such as the Portugal laurel, myrtle, laurustinus and elder, while those with heavy berries, which could not be conveyed by the means suggested—oaks, chestnuts, hazels, apples, beeches, alders, etc.—are absent, common as they are in Europe. The character of the flora is that of the southwestern peninsula of Europe, and, if we assume that one-half of its species is indigenous, the other introduced by European settlers, there is still a rich and varied flora which Mr. Wallace thinks has recently been carried over 900 miles of ocean by the means just indicated.

There is probably no better example of ocean migration than that offered by the Azores, and it is believed that the phenomena in question are still in progress, and that 900 miles do not form the limit of the distance to which this same ocean carriage of plants extends.—Edinburgh Review.

Rafting That Didn't Pay.

It is now all of twenty years since a raft of lumber went from the Northern Lumber company to New Orleans. There was only one raft, and that was sent as an experiment by a St. Louis firm, but when the accounts were balanced it showed a loss for the enterprise. The trip required too long a time, and when the lumber got there it did not suit the trade. The major portion of it found its way back to St. Louis on barges, and was sold here for more than it was offered there for. That was along back in 1869. It was the first and last experiment of its kind ever tried in the lumber business.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Danced the Bottom Out of Their Boat.

High Gaffney, of Birmingham, had the honor of rescuing three young women from a very unpleasant position. The girls were out in a shabby boat on the Housatonic river, just below the spile bridge on the Derby extension, when in their exuberance of spirits they began to dance and sing. The bottom of the boat could not withstand the treatment received. It gave way and let the girls into five feet of water. They were in a sad plight when rescued. The river, although wide, is very shallow at that point, so they were in no great danger.—New Haven Palladium.

FILTER PRESSES.

PAARUAU PLANTATION, HAWAII, March 9, 1888.

Ridson Iron and Locomotive Works, San Francisco.

Gentlemen—We have used two of your 30-chambered Filter Presses this season. They are convenient, easily handled and are working entirely to our satisfaction. I can recommend no improvement on them.

Very respectfully yours,

(signed) A. MOORE, Manager Paarua Plantation

HAKA, Sept. 28, 1889.

MR. JOHN DYER, Agent Ridson Iron Works, Honolulu.

DEAR SIR: Please ship us one of your 30-chambered Filter Presses, 540 square feet surface, same as the one supplied us last season, which I am pleased to say has given us entire satisfaction. Yours truly,

GEO. R. FEAR, Manager Heia Agricultural Co.

These Presses are made extra heavy for high pressure, occupies a floor space of 11x4 ft., and presents a filtering surface of 240 square feet. A limited number in stock in Honolulu and are sold at very low prices.
