Pledged to neither Sect nor Party, But established for the benefit of all.

FRIDAY, MARCH 16, 1888.

SHOULD A PUBLIC SERVANT HAVE A PRIVATE BUSINESS?

Complaints against persons in the public service having at the same time private business interests are reasonable, if those persons allow their private business to interfere with their public duties, or if their private business interests in any way militate against the proper discharge of their public duties.

A man who is in the public service should give to it his entire time and talents during his hours of duty. Neither should he when off duty engage in any pursuit that may have the effect of diminishing his fitness for, or lessening his faithfulness to, duty. The State, whose servant he is, requires and expects this of him, and has a right to require and expect it.

If he is not prepared to fulfill the requirement, there is but one course open to him, as an honorable and conscientious man, which is to retire in favor of some one more willing.

But complaints against persons in the public service having at the same time private business interests are unreasonable and frivolous, if those persons do not allow their private business to interfere with their public duties, or if their private business interests do not in any way militate against the proper discharge of their public duties.

Were our public service like that of some countries, where appointments are "for life, or during good behaviour," and superannuation is accompanied by a pension, the complaint would be entitled to grave consideration and the objection be worthy of being sustained. But an entirely different practice prevails in our public service, which justifies a public servant, particularly if he has a family to feed, in doing his utmost, consistent with his public duties, to establish private means of livelihood, to fall back upon when he is dismissed from office—a contingency which may occur any day.

It is an unfortunate fact, that of late years the position of a public servant has become very uncertain. Efficiency, honesty, and devotion to duty are no guarantee of continuance in office. At very short notice he may be called upon to vacate, perhaps to make room for another who is his inferior in fitness. He may be secure enough while one Ministry is in power, but as its tenure of office is uncertain, so is his. The first act of the next Ministry may be to discharge him. Where and when the terms of employment are so precarious, it is too much to expect the employee to rely upon it as a permanency, or to require him to forego any private source of income, which is honorable and does not clash with his public duties. Indeed, he is wise, if, like the man we read about in the parable, but in a legitimate way, he prepares some "habitation" to go into when he is turned out of his "stewardship."

THE SITUATION.

While everyone must acknowledge that substantial and important advantages have been secured by the Reform movement, it is a matter of regret that some flagrant instances of deceitfulness and meanness on the part of prominent Government officials should have damaged the record of good accomplished. We certainly have secured a spirit of wise economy in the financial administration of public affairs, instead of the foolish, wasteful, and extravagant expenditures of recent years. We cannot too warmly praise the skill and energy in the care and improvement of our Honolulu streets, and roads generally all over the islands. Some improvement in the lower judiciary and in the police officials gives promise and hope of still better things.

But without impugning any particular person's motives, or decrying with wholesale depreciation the present administration of public affairs, we express the grief of many non-partisan citizens, that some transactions look very much like favoritism for those of a particular clique, or acts of personal spite against rivals or opponents. We feel justified in making this general statement of approval of the cleaner look and more wholesome atmosphere in our governmental affairs. We feel justified, also, in these general statements of regret and disappointment at some flagrant instances of deceitfulness and meanness. The whole Reform movement is injured by these deplorable failures at some particular points to maintain the high standard reasonably expected of our present political leaders. Some writer in the native newspapers is raising the cry "Beware of the Reform Oligarchy." We say, help the Reform Party to do good work, and better work by sloughing off some unsightly deformations, that ought never have been allowed to get their abnormal and unwholesome growth on our body politic.

lantic to 50 deg. in the Pacific, with

HONOLULU FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Pursuant to an order the members of the various fire companies assembled at the Bell Tower last night at 7 o'clock for taking action on the proposed amendment to Art. 21 of the Department Constitution.

The proposed amendment was to substitute the words "Board of Representatives," for "Active members of the Fire Department." The Article would then read, "No alterations or amendments shall be made in this constitution, unless by a concurrence of two-thirds of the Board of Representatives of the Honolulu Fire Department."

There were 163 votes cast; 148 for the Article as it now stands, 14 for the amendment, and 1 scattering.
The votes of the different companies were as follows: No. 1, 6; No. 2, 15; No. 4, 44; No. 5, 44; Pacific Hose, 18; Hook and Ladder, 36.

DEATH OF L. AHOLO.

Mr. Luther Aholo died this morning, at 8 o'clock, at the Palama residence of Princess Liliuokalani.
Heart disease was the cause of death.

The deceased came here from Lahaina, Maui, some months ago, for medical treatment, and has been stopping at the Princess's residence.
He had been in poor health for the last year or two.

The late Mr. Aholo was a native Hawaiian, and a man of more than average brains and ability. He was at one time, many years ago, a teacher in the Lahainaluna school.
After leaving that institution he occupied the position of Governor's clerk for the island of Maui, and later did duty as tax assessor or collector on the same island. He also practised as a lawyer. For many years he was a representative for the district of Lahaina in the Legislature and was Vice-President of the Assembly for several terms.
In the Ministry immediately preceding the present, Mr. Aholo held the portfolio of the Interior.

As before intimated, he was a Hawaiian of rare mental capacity and acquirements, and his decease creates a blank that will be hard to fill. He was of a non-communicative disposition, but was always dignified and gentlemanly.

The Pope on Saturday received 300 American pilgrims.

In re estate of Sarah Ann Morris, late of Honolulu, Oahu, deceased.
Petition of C. R. Bishop for Probate of Will, etc. Ordered that will be admitted to probate, that letters testamentary be issued to J. A. Magoon for petitioner.

THE DEBATING CLUB.

At the meeting of the Debating Club last night, Mr. Alex. Robertson read an essay on "Reciprocity and Pearl Harbor." Several members took part in the discussion which followed, after which Mr.
Robertson ingeniously replied to the points raised by his critics. The meeting terminated with a reading by Mr. H. Adams and a recitation by Mr. J. F. Smith. "Is the credit system an evil in Honolulu?" was announced as the subject of debate for the next meeting.

Y. M. C. A.

The regular monthly meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held last night, President F. J. Lowery, presiding.
The reports of the various committees were read and accepted.
The Hon. A. F. Judd reported that the Hawaiian branch was in a very flourishing condition and great interest was shown by the members, especially in committee work.

The Treasurer's report showed an excess of expenditures over receipts of $5.75, which amount was made good by a collection. The report also stated that the sum of $450, would be required before the end of the fiscal year to meet all demands.
The matter was referred to the Finance Committee.

Messrs. W. A. Bowen, A. F.
Cooke and S. D. Fuller were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the next ensuing year and to report at the annual meeting to be held on the third Thursday of April next.

A VAST UNDEVELOPED TERRITORY—

NORTHERN AUSTRALIA.

A lecture on this subject was delivered last night at Exeter Hall by Hugh Watt, M. P. Lord Brassey, K. C. B. presided, and in introducing the lecturer observed he had recently returned from a voyage, in the course of which he had circumnavigated the coasts of Australia.
He would not say that the northern territory of South Australia was a region very fit for colonization by large numbers of our population, but this was clear, that if we could develop the resources of those countries, whether by the labor of men of our own race or by the labor of tropical races, we should produce beneficial results for ourselves. If we made those countries prosperous and populous, we increased the consumption of our manufactures and promoted trade and commerce.
Mr. Watt then delivered his lecture, which he said, related to a vast continent, forming a portion of one of the most important possessions of the greatest empire that human genius had ever created. The northern territory contained an area of 531,402 square miles or 340,097, 280 acres, of which up to October last more than half—267,845 square miles—had been taken up by pastoral lessees. It might interest the farming classes in this country if he stated that the total rent payable for that enormous tract of country only slightly exceeded £20,000.
He afterward spoke of the rich mineral and agricultural resources of the northern territory and of the advantages it offered to immigrants.

"I can never be more than a sister to you," said a buxom widow, tenderly, to an old bachelor, who had proposed. "Ah, madam, yes you can," he responded, gallantly.
"I am not a man to lose hope."
"Yes, but I say I cannot," she persisted. "You have daughters, madam," he said, "and you may yet be my mother-in-law."—[Wash-

BYRON'S DESCENDANTS.

The poet's first child was Ada, whom he never saw after her second month, for his wife then abandoned him. Allegra (illegitimate) was thirteen months younger than Ada, and was the only object Byron really loved. She died, however, in her childhood, and was sent from Italy to England for burial. Ada Byron became an elegant woman, but never displayed intellectual power. In her twentieth year she married an English gentleman named King, who by courtesy was called the Earl of Lovelace. She died in 1852, being in her thirty-seventh year, just the age of her father when he died. She had two sons, and the elder was so eccentric that his death was a relief. He turned amateur highwayman and stopped a carriage with a pistol, to which was added other mischief which soon wore out the patience of his friends. Then he renounced the name and got employment in a shipyard, and was on the point of marrying the daughter of a carpenter when his death suddenly took place.
The next son inherited wealth and a title, but he lacked force of character. He married the daughter of a clergyman, but the union, which was very unhappy, was soon dissolved by the death of the wife.
One daughter was born to this discordant couple, and she is now the sole representative of the line, which no doubt will become extinct, and if so it is just what the miserable poet desired. Well, the centennial will take place on Sunday. Though I do not suggest it as a Sunday theme, it certainly affords lessons which might be improved on any occasion. The worst spectacle in the world is a wasted life, and such was the picture Byron thus presents of himself:—

In short, I Have squandered my whole summer twas May,
Have spent my life both interest and principal,
And deem not what I deemed—my soul invaluable.

The best thing to read in connection with this confession is James Russell Lowell's "Extreme Unction," the original of which Byron might have supplied better than any other character. —[N. Y. Corr. Troy Times, Jan. 25.

"I wonder what's the matter with the old black hen?" said Mrs. Bascom. "I haven't found any egg in her nest for four or five days."
"Guess she's laying off," said Mr.
Bascom. —[Detroit Free Press.

SOME TALK ABOUT HOOPS.

Is it not so? Not so much as to the extravagance and wastefulness of distended hoops, but the unsightliness and discomfort of them—are they necessary or convenient? These are considerations not supposed to weigh much with fashion, but hoops are exceptional in the demands that they make upon women. In point of grace or comeliness they are not, perhaps, to be held more guilty than some other excesses, but if they are written down as hideous and offensive, it may be asked again, Is it not so? Probably the question may be asked many times before the art of dress is fully understood. We may never again be threatened with hoops "eight yards wide," such as a ballad of 1753 is rightly severe upon, showing how completely our author failed to bring about any reform, but so long as eccentricity with some passes for beauty, there will be no revivals, more or less complete, of the hoop and crinoline. At such times this spirit of olden times should be kept in view, not so much to condemn what nobody is likely to defend, but to show the extravagance to which foolish emulation might again, as it did then, swell out the skirt. It is not that the statements contained in it are doubtful or unsupported.

Robert Chambers shows how Edinburgh society suffered, within his memory, under the tyranny of hoops. In the morning a lady put on a pocket hoop resembling a small pair of panners. For occasions, not quite full dress, there was to be worn a bell hoop—a petticoat frame in shape like a bell—made of cane or rope. For full state there was provided a hoop so monstrous that "people saw half of it enter the room before the wearer." This, the matter-of-fact chronicler goes on to say was "inconvenient." So inconvenient was it that in the narrow passages and entries of Edinburgh Old Town "ladies tilted them up and carried them under their arms; in case of this happening, there was a show of petticoat below." This happy audacity has been denied to women of later days, although there were times when it would have relieved perplexity and spared much annoyance. So long as these facts remain, or John Leech's drawings are remembered, surely the shapeless horrors of crinoline should be impossible of renewal.—[Woman's World.

SLAVERY IN BRAZIL.

A letter to the Hartford "Courant" from Brazil says:

The slavery question has recently changed very materially. It is still what is left of the saddest tragedy of human history, but lately it had its comic side. Of course the Government is of the Buchanan type—pro-slavery to the core. They have been able, by some conjuring, to patch up the finances and keep exchange at a figure much higher than the facts will justify. This gave their cause prestige in commercial circles, but the Abolitionists went quietly to work to put their underground railroad in good running order, and the slaves disappeared first by dozens, then by scores, then by fifties and hundreds. The Government sent troops into the Province to put a stop to this wholesale running away of the goods and chattels. In the first notable encounter the slaves came off victoriously, putting the soldiers to flight and taking their horses. In the next a soldier was killed. One Senator, seeing how the tide was turning, came squarely out in favor of abolition.

"It is not an uncommon thing to hear of a body of slaves presenting themselves to the master, declaring their intention of leaving, and asking for provisions, for the journey. There has been no violence except when attacked and in self-defense. The fugitives scatter in every direction, and go to work for any wages they can obtain, peaceably, quietly, with their wives and children. Santos has become a city of refuge for the families. It is estimated that there are 5,000 fugitive slaves in and about that city. It is the strangest page in all the history of slavery. These facts relate only to the Province of Sao Paulo. In the provinces of Rio de Janeiro and Minas the old regime still obtains, but cannot last long. Liberty is contagious. A well-known planter, owning 150 slaves, went quietly into his coffee-plantation to see what his hands were doing, unseen by them. He found a group of twenty or thirty standing round one of the slaves resting on their hoe-handles and listening to the reading of a stirring abolition speech recently delivered in the Senate by Dantas, the ultra-Abolitionist. The planter was dumfounded. How did the boy learn to read, and where did he get the latest Liberal paper, the "O Paiz?" Like a sensible man, he called the slaves all together that night, and told them that if they would behave he would give them all their freedom at Christmas, 1889, and begin at once to pay them wages, very low it is true, but gradually increasing, depending on their good conduct. Of course that man's niggers didn't run away. There are many instances of strikes for better food and less work. This is the comical side. The tragical side is seen in the fact that a Dr. Davino—himself a mulatto—recently had four of his slaves whipped to death to spite his father-in-law."
