BALLET IN PARIS.

LITTLE GIRLS TAKING DANCING LESSONS FOR THE STAGE.
A Peep into the Big Bare Room Where the Classes Meet for Practice—Professor and Pupils—Art of Smiling—Moments of Rest.

By some accident or another, we will suppose, M. and Mme. Pipet have decided that their little Adele shall become a dancer, and so the little dear is brought to Mme. Theodore, the professor of the opera, who examines her and passes her on to the doctor, who in turn examines and pronounces her to be fit or unfit for the profession. The verdict being favorable, little Adele henceforward belongs to the opera; she is now aged 7 or 8 years, and if she works hard she will become a passable danseuse in about ten or twelve years. The first stage is the little girls' class, la classe des petites. Winter and summer, day after day, every morning at 10 o'clock, Mme. Theodore awaits her pupils, who come accompanied by their mothers, each one carrying a little bag that contains a regular Noah's ark full of miscellaneous objects necessary for the studies or the happiness of a pupil of the petite classe, such as stockings, dancing shoes, a box of poudre de riz, a comb, a button hook, some bread, a bottle of wine and water, some cold veal, hard boiled eggs, sardines, apples and what not.

In the twinkling of an eye the little ones undress, put on their working costume, and come rushing up stairs pell mell into the class room, bounding round the professor and kissing her.

A BIG BARE ROOM. Let us look at the room. It is a large, bare room, with bars fixed parallel to the walls on three sides and a sloping floor, to accustom the pupil to the sloping stage of the theatre. Along the free wall are benches, and two cane seated chairs accommodate the professor and her assistant, who plays a fiddle or sometimes a sort of harmonium. The girls, of whom the oldest is perhaps 13, wear low necked corsets leaving their arms bare, white muslin skirts, broad sashes of blue or red ribbon, pink tights and gray canvas shoes. They are a lean, scraggy lot, not lovely to look upon individually, but full of good humor and vivacity.

"Allons, mesdemoiselles, vos places!" cries the professor, and the girls run to the bars, and the fiddle gives the word of command, just as the bugle calls direct the soldier. There is no melody, but simply a series of andante, allegro, pizzicato and trill movements, each followed by a tremolo, so that to the untutored ear the sounds suggest the confusion of the tuning of an orchestra. But the dancers understand that such and such notes indicate such and such a posture at the bar, which must be held as long as the professor keeps up the tremolo; other notes followed by a tremolo indicate another posture. And at every moment during the lesson the professor intersperses her remarks with the words: "Souriez! Souriez! Mais souriez donc!" (Smile! Won't you smile?) For in the midst of the most difficult and torturing dislocations the ballet girl must smile, and the art of smiling has to be learned just like a step or a developpe.

After half an hour of these general exercises at the bar there comes a rest, and the little girls begin once more to chatter and flutter, while the professor lays the dust by watering the floor in geometrical interlacements. Then follows the adage, or second part of the lesson, which consists of an ensemble and composed steps. The dancers take place in the middle of the room in rows; Mme. Theodore holds up her skirts and indicates the step, and the little ones begin to bound, while pirouette, form groups by twos, and smile in unison, while the fiddle scrapes queer tunes and the professor cries in strange terms: "Ballonne, fondu, assemblez, soutenez, souriez. Mais souriez donc!" Always that smile!

At intervals there are moments of rest; but the zealous pupils do not rest; they run to the bar and work their knees and loins, multiplying the efforts to gain their suppleness and lightness that the public often seem to regard as natural and innate.

The third part of the lesson is the variation. The pupils gather in a group around the professor, who with her fingers dictates the steps that are to be executed, one finger of each hand representing the two legs of the dancers. "Attitude, pas de bourree, glissade, entrechat, temps de cuisse," etc., says the professor in her wonderful language, as she expounds the variation that she dances with her fingers. So, too, in fencing one indicates the play of the foils with the index of each hand. Meanwhile the pupils carefully watch the professor's fingers, and imitate with their own, their bodies oscillating and undulating, and as it were feeling the steps. "Est-ce compris?" (Do you understand?) "Yes, madam." "Very good. In position, then." And they all promptly take their places once more in the middle of the room, and, with the professor, dance the variation while the fiddle plays a more rapid measure.

Suddenly the fiddle stops. There is a rest and then the girls go through another course of dislocation at the bar, and then, with their sweetest smiles they salute first to the right and then to the left, as if thanking an idolizing public for a deserved ovation. Then "Au revoir, Mme. Theodore. A demain." In a second the class room is empty; the little girls, panting and worn out, don their patry robes of poverty and return under their mothers' wings to Montmartre or Belleville.—Theodore Child in The Cosmopolitan.

It must be a case of commercial license when a dealer in corn cutters, cork-screws, etc., advertises "only straight goods."

TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, 1888.

The weather always affords favorable topic for discussion. The weather during the past three months has been so oppressive that every one welcomes with pleasure the slight change apparent. As compared with two or three years past it has been warmer, but the more equal distribution of rain this year has kept the whole country beautifully green.

The Bulletin asserts that it did mention the fact that the Legislature overrode the King's veto of the Chinese Accounts bill on the 10th of August, which our informant denied.

A careful inspection of the columns of the Bulletin issue of August 10th, 11th, 13th and 14th sustains the statement of our informant. There are, to the best of our knowledge and belief, absolutely no words or sentiments in those columns stating the important fact that on the 10th of August the Legislature, by a two-thirds majority, nullified the King's veto of the aforesaid bill, and that the bill in consequence became a law.

On the contrary, the debate on the afternoon of the 10th upon the motion to reconsider, stops unfinished and abruptly in the middle thereof in the Bulletin of August 13th. The paper of the 14th fails to give the conclusion of the debate and the vote ensuing. It omits not only that important matter, but omits also the entire proceedings of the sixty-third day, Saturday, August 11th.

We do find interpolated in the middle of the debate, where it is necessarily meaningless, the brief expression that "The motion to reconsider was carried." Did the Bulletin refer to that senseless line when it said that it did state the action of the Legislature? We ask, if any reader could deduce the result of the debate from such a line interpolated in the middle thereof. The natural conclusion of any intelligent reader would be that it was a sentence accidentally dropped where it was found by a printer's error, having no reference to the question in hand.

The Bulletin does not venture to assert that it has ever given a line of editorial comment upon so conspicuous a fact as the above veto and the nullification of it. Its opinions upon such a subject would not have been without value. What were its motives for withholding them? This question occurs, in line with the query, "What were the King's motives for his veto on that occasion?"

The Bulletin's petulant snarling at our supposed informant, is natural to the unpleasant position it occupies, but does not alter the facts in the case.

ONE of the curses of society is gossiping. The best preventive of this is occupation. Women have the reputation of being great gossips and the reputation is deserved in part. The principal reason is their lack of occupation. The man or woman who is hard at work all day and goes home tired at night, has very little disposition for gossiping. It is true, however, that those whose employments are wholly physical do engage more or less in idle talk. But those whose minds are healthily employed have neither the time nor inclination for it. One of the healthiest signs of the present day is the interest shown by a large number of women in what are called popular courses of study. Such courses are known as the Chautauqua. There are others besides this, but none so well and favorably known. This course was originated a good many years ago and has been under the direction more particularly of the Rev. Dr. Vincent. There are a great many thousand people in the United States and elsewhere who are taking this course. The course provides for four years' reading, consisting of history, philosophy, literature and various branches of the sciences. Graduates from this course are not educated in the sense that one who has taken a college course is expected to be, but people are taught to think, which of itself is worth all the trouble of the course. In addition to this the desire to obtain a thorough education is often implanted, which results in many persons acquiring higher education who otherwise would remain commonplace all their days. For this reason the Chautauqua course is doing very valuable service. One of the objects of this course was also to provide a definite something to which people might look forward for the summer vacations in the United States. The vast majority of those who go off for the summer go for no definite object except to have what is called a good time. With such the vacation too often results in simple loafing. Men, women and children hang about the hotels and boarding houses eating, sleeping, gossiping, and too often acquiring vices. It was to provide for these people in part that this course was first instituted. A popular watering-place in the western part of New York State was the place selected for the anniversary exercises. And now every year in the month of August thousands of people congregate at Chautauqua Lake and spend a delightful two weeks or more uniting pleasures of the senses with cultivation of the mind. All of the appliances of a delightful country are afforded, such as riding, driving, boating, walking, which are mingled with lectures, concerts and the exercises of the graduating classes. A very pleasant description of a visit in Chautauqua this year is elsewhere printed in an extract from a private letter. Three or four of what are called Chautauqua circles have been established in Honolulu and are doing good service. Indeed it is quite likely that some of the members may be able to criticize the accuracy of some of the statements of fact herein contained. It is to be hoped that these literary circles will be well sustained and that their number may increase in the future.

A VISIT TO CHAUTAUQUA.

We arrived at Chautauqua Saturday morning at ten. Our quarters were small owing to the great number of people there, but we were not in them much. The table was good, the landlady very nice, and we met many pleasant people. I had to answer many questions, and some of them such ridiculous things! The first morning we took a nap instead of going out, we were so tired, but after dinner heard Joseph Cook lecture on Phillips, Gough and Beecher. He was very good, but so long that one gets very tired. We also heard a splendid concert by the Hungarian band. Sunday was very full, we started out at 8 o'clock to the devotional exercises, and at 9:30 to Sunday School. A Mrs. Crafts was to conduct the children's department and we were anxious to see how she carried it on—she was splendid. I sat with a class of little boys but did not have to do any teaching. From there we went to the Amphitheatre to hear Bishop Vincent's Baccalaureate sermon. It was just grand to be in that building that holds between five and six thousand and every seat filled, besides people with their own camp chairs or standing just outside—it is open all the way round so that it is not necessary to be inside. In the afternoon we took a walk and at four came the vesper service; at 7:30 the song service, and after that the night vigil. A person can attend something every hour of the day if one wishes. Monday morning we went to the children's Bible class. Willie would have enjoyed being there very much to have seen Frank Baird draw. I had heard so much about him that I was quite anxious to see him. He is an odd looking man and funny also. At 11 was a lecture by Dr. Gunsaulus on Oliver Cromwell. He is a gentleman of only a little over thirty but a magnificent speaker. Some call him the Beecher of the West. So many said they liked him better than Cook. M— and I both did. That afternoon Cook lectured again but we did not feel like listening to him, so at 4 I went to a meeting of the class of 1887. I was welcomed very cordially, and it was proposed that I carry the banner of our class in the procession on Wednesday, but as I had never passed through the arches that could not be. I met a Miss McClure, cousin of Mrs. Willie Hopper, and several others who were acquainted with Island people. That evening we attended another concert; besides the music there was a recitation by an elocutionist.

Tuesday morning we went through the museum and visited several other places before going to hear Dr. Gunsaulus lecture on the American view of Washington. Every one was so glad to see him appear on the platform that the Chautauqua salute was first given him and then a perfect round of applause. The salute is the waving of the handkerchief, and it was a pretty sight to see several thousand waving at once. At 3:30 we went to the question drawer, people handed in questions and Cook answered them without any preparation whatever. I enjoyed him then as he was so constantly changing his subjects. As soon as he was through Mr. Leon Vincent lectured on Thackeray. A promenade concert was announced for the evening, and of course every one went down to the beach. Not very far from the lake is the Hotel Athenium, surrounded with the most beautiful grounds; these were brilliantly lighted with lanterns—both the house and grounds—in fact most of the cottages were decorated. Then on the lake was a fountain showing different colors, and a fountain also in the lake, besides fireworks and the band playing. It was just lovely and we bated to leave. About 9 it looked rather cloudy and we thought it best to go home. Just the moment we got up stairs it began to pour and a great many of the lanterns were spoiled. Oh how cold it was Wednesday morning. As it was the day we wanted to wear white but instead we had to put on woolen dresses and our jackets. This was "recognition day" and of course every one turned out. Mamie and I had to separate for the morning—she had joined the class '92 so went with them while I joined the '87's. The graduating class, you know, passes through the arches and those who have received their diplomas but have had no opportunity to march are allowed to go with them. There were twenty-one of our class who marched. We formed in line, then the gate was unlocked while we went through—we were marching in fours but here we separated and went two by two through the gate and the two arches. While we were marching the choir stood at the entrance to the Hall of Philosophy singing, and eighty-eight little girls dressed in white with wreaths on strewed flowers in our path. In the hall we all had our seats and were greeted by Bishop Vincent. The class of '88 was called the Plymouth Rocks and their flower the geranium, consequently in the front of the hall was what was meant to represent Plymouth Rock and the decorations were in geranium, the class motto, etc. We were only there a few minutes and then were to pass to the Amphitheatre. We wished to join the rest of our class who had passed through the arches, so while the '88's were forming we ran across lots and came out by our President. The procession now was a very long one, for first came the band and those who had graduated before the under classes. We all separated and allowed the graduates to pass between our lines, while we waved the handkerchief to them. We all had seats saved for us and no one else was allowed to come in until all the C. L. S. C. were seated. Then the ropes were taken away and the outsiders flocked in, over the backs of the seats or any available way. There was an oration given by Mr. Warren and the class was greeted. The amphitheatre was beautifully decorated with geranium. At 2 the diplomas were given—I think over four hundred were there to receive them. We did not stay through it all and shortly after I went to the building of the '87's and met several very pleasant people—one a Mrs. Smith knew Helen Chamberlain, or rather her daughter was a great friend of Helen's. Then the '87's had a meeting and by that time we had to go to supper. That night was the vesper service and after it speeches by E. E. Hale, Carlisle and several others—all of them excellent.

Thursday morning we viewed the places we had not seen before and then took the little steamer and for Mayville. We went on one steamer and came back on another, were gone about an hour and a half. That made us a little late for Hale's lecture though we were there through most of it. Right after dinner we were asked to go out rowing and as we had had no chance before we were glad to accept. We took a boat with two pairs of oars and I helped row. The gentleman who was pulling said I must be accustomed to rowing as I did not interfere at all with his oars but kept stroke with him. Next we had to pack then went to a concert by the Hungarian band. After that to the Round Table where a Chinese missionary and the principal of a deaf and dumb institution spoke. There were three mutes in the class and he had come as their interpreter. After supper we had a great time getting the trunk checked, as we knew there would not be time in the morning. We were through just in time to see Frank Baird's stereoscopic views but not in time to get a seat. Then came the procession of ghosts, a take-off on the exercises of the day before. They had the gates that the ghosts marched through, each one had to show a ticket and then was pushed through. It was quite late when we got home so that we could not go out again on the lake as we had intended. I forgot to tell you that we met Bishop Vincent and Miss Kimball the secretary. She had her headquarters at Plainfield, New Jersey, and she told me she would be glad to have me come there and she would show me around. Tell Charlie the class of '91 is a very enthusiastic one and she must be sure and keep on with the reading and then come to Chautauqua in three years. I had such a good time and shall never regret having gone.

COLONIAL NEWS.

The judgment obtained by a Chinese passenger, refused admittance to the country, against the Victoria, Australia, Government, was rendered by a majority of four to two judges in banco. It appears that the Government acted without statutory authorization, and in the judgment recorded it is maintained that although the power of a sovereign state to exclude foreigners is sustained by writers on international law, it is a power which has never been exercised in England, special statutes having invariably been passed to deal with such matters whenever occasion arose. But admitting that a sovereign state might, if it chose, dispense with such Parliamentary authorization, the judges held that a Colonial Government does not stand in the position of a sovereign state and if such power existed it must have been conferred under the Constitution Act, which had not been done.

The election of a member for Redfern, N. S. W., rendered necessary owing to the death of J. S. Farnell, resulted in the return of Mr. J. P. Howe, a protectionist, by a majority of 852 votes over the free-trade candidate, Mr. Martin.

Negotiations with England colliery proprietors were proceeding for the landing of 150,000 tons of coal in Melbourne within the next eight weeks.

The New Zealand colonization scheme is being actively prosecuted in London. There are over 30,000,000 sheep, cattle, and horses in Australia.

Since March, 1887, when night traffic was first permitted, some 800 vessels have passed through the Suez Canal by the aid of the electric light. A little over 300 of these have carried their own lighting plant, while the others have hired the apparatus on the spot. Two companies supply everything necessary. Each has a station at either end of the canal, the machinery being put on board the vessel as it enters the canal, and left at the other end, in readiness to be taken back by the next vessel passing in the opposite direction. The cost of this service, including all attention to the lights, is $50 each passage.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER Absolutely Pure.

For quick raising, the Royal Baking Powder is superior to all other leavening agents. It is absolutely pure and wholesome and of the highest leavening power. It is always uniform in strength and quality and never fails to make light, sweet, most palatable and nutritive food. Bread, biscuits, muffins, cake, etc., raised with Royal Baking Powder may be eaten hot without distressing results to the most delicate digestive organs. It will keep in any climate without deterioration. Prof. H. A. Mott, U. S. Government Chemist, after examining officially the principal baking powders of the country, reports: "The Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure, for I have so found it in many tests made both for that company and the United States Government. "Because of the facilities that company have for obtaining perfectly pure cream of tartar, and for other reasons dependent upon the proper proportions of the same, and the method of its preparation, the Royal Baking Powder is undoubtedly the purest and most reliable baking powder offered to the public. The Immigration Question.

In the last GAZETTE a gentleman states that the Japanese and Portuguese can live as cheaply as the Chinese. They may be able to do so, but they do not; neither do they desire to do so. I will guarantee that a Chinaman can live on one-half the money that the Jap or Portuguese do. The Japanese live as well as their small pay will allow of, and they like to dress well and have watches. The Portuguese like to have horses, wine and all the good things that their pay will allow of. All the Chinaman seems to think of is to get money and get back to China. Give him rice and pork and his happiness is complete. He can live and sleep in almost any place. In San Francisco, in some of those miserable dens, they are packed in so close that it would almost seem impossible for a fax seed to get in between them, maybe in order to save money. A Japanese would not be contented to live in that manner. The Chinese are increasing so fast that they must go somewhere, and a climate like that of these islands is the place where they prefer to live, and if they are not stopped they will in time be a great curse instead of a blessing to these beautiful islands. A Japanese knows nothing about meanness. A more generous people do not exist, and none more polite. Maybe the Chinaman thinks he has the dealers in such goods as he purchases on the h. p. All love money and some would get down on their knees to the Chinese in order to get their trade. Money will seal mouths that should be outspoken. It was ever thus, true as gospel. Evidently these are merchants who do not go in for home protection; money is their god. These would allow the Chinese to ride over them roughshod. The next lot of Japanese that are coming, it is thought, will mostly have families. They will, it is hoped, all come in future with their better halves, for the women have a good influence over their husbands and Japs in general. J. A. M.

MARINE

Germicide Paint

THE MARINE GERMICIDE PAINT IS AN ANTI-FOULING compound for IRON, COPPER, or WOOD, an absolute protection against Barnacles, Corals, Sea Grass, Terebants, and all Marine Parasites, and an unfailing preventive of rust on iron or steel.
The success of the Germicide Paint, in San Francisco, New York and the West Indies, has been phenomenal. The U. S. Navy Yard at Mare Island is using Germicide exclusively, after testing it against the best paint. Of 450 tests in 1886, they find that Germicide came out nineteen to one better. It is stated that the Naval authorities at Washington are about adopting it altogether for the U. S. Navy. We have numerous testimonials to prove its efficiency.
