Indigestion Loss of Strength And Appetite.

The testimony of Mr. R. Dennis, Adelaide, South Australia, who was cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is like unto that of many thousands of others. He writes:

"It is with very much pleasure that I testify to the great benefit I received from using your wonderful blood-purifier. I was a sufferer for years from indigestion, loss of strength and appetite, and constipation. My whole system seemed to be thoroughly out of order. A friend finally told me to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I followed his advice, though feeling discouraged at the fruitless results of other treatment, and I am thankful to state that a few bottles completely cured me."

The medicine that has cured others will cure you.

COMING TERM OF COURT

Judge Stanley Has a Heavy Calendar of Cases to Try.

Very Little Criminal Business and Cases Unimportant—Some of the Most Important Civil Actions.

The calendar of cases for the February Term of the Circuit Court was given out this morning, and it is evident from a hasty perusal that Judge Stanley will have his hands full in disposing of it.

The criminal calendar is light and the cases mostly unimportant. For the Hawaiian jury there are four appeals from convictions for maintaining a lottery and one for assault and battery. For the foreign jury there are four opium cases, one for selling liquor without a license, two for assault, one for assault on female under 14 years of age, one for assault with a dangerous weapon, and one each for gambling, disorderly conduct and drunk-and-ness.

On the civil calendar before the Hawaiian jury there are five ejectment suits, two to quiet title, one for damages and one in assumption.

For the mixed jury there are 24 cases, the more important of which are Henry Smith vs. Hamakua Mill Company, ejectment; Emelie Macfarlane vs. E. K. Wilber, ejectment, and S. Ahmi vs. H. Holmes and others, ejectment, the latter involving title to property on Emma street fronting the square.

There are 21 civil cases to come before the foreign jury, among them the following: Minister of Interior vs. Estate B. P. Bishop, condemnation of land; J. D. Spreckels et al vs. A. G. Hawes, ejectment; C. K. C. Rook vs. Queen's Hospital; C. R. Bishop et al vs. Queen's Hospital; J. B. Conwell vs. W. E. Rowell, damages; Clinton J. Hutchins vs. Widener Steamship Company, damages, and Nakamura et al vs. Makae Sugar Company, trespass.

There are 29 jury waived cases and 19 for divorce or separation.

AUSTRALIA OR ALAMEDA.

Rumor that One of These Vessels Will Go on Klondike Run.

It is pretty well established that one of the Oceanic Company's steamers will go on the Klondike route in the next few weeks. An expert opinion is that the choice will lie between the Alameda and the Australia. In San Francisco it is currently reported that the Australia will go. Captain Houdlette admits having heard of the matter, but states that he has received no orders as yet. No official information bearing on the subject has reached W. G. Irwin & Co. to date.

Work on the Zealandia was being hurried when the Australia sailed. It was generally understood that that vessel would be put on the Honolulu route, perhaps going also to the colonies. The Alameda next Thursday will bring definite news of what will be done.

The Minister of Foreign Affairs, accompanied by Minister Damon, paid an official call on Commodore Fort and Captain Piguet of the French cruiser Duguay Trouin at 10.30 this morning. The usual salutes were fired from the cruiser on their departure.

ARTHUR FITZGERALD AGAIN

Cuts a Couple of Gashes in His Arm to Gain Sympathy.

Prison Commissioners and Jailor Low Loth to Resort to Flogging the Troublesome Young Man.

Jailor Low is having lots of trouble with Arthur Fitzgerald, the incorrigible young convict who makes a life a burden to the prison guards at the Oahu jail.

Fitzgerald has been in solitary confinement and on half rations for 15 days and he has yet two months more of it to make up for past misconduct. The Prison Commissioners have instructed Jailor Low to pay no more attention to Fitzgerald's protestations of good behavior in the future and make him suffer the full penalty every time he infringes the prison rules. Consequently Fitzgerald is not allowed to communicate with any other prisoners, is locked up all day and only given two hours exercise every evening after the other convicts go to bed. He cannot read or smoke or amuse himself in any way. For breakfast he gets bread and water; for dinner a pound of beef stew and panikin of tea, and for supper bread and water again. This is termed half rations.

On Thursday morning he begged an interview with Jailor Low and promised by all that was sacred that he would be good if let out. Mr. Low told him he had been fooled too often by such promises and that they wouldn't go any more.

That night Fitzgerald was taken out for exercise and while outside his cell was rubbed with some liniment by the hospital steward for a swelling on his body. The steward carelessly left the bottle on the bench while the guard supposed he had taken it with him to the dispensary. Fitzgerald secreted the bottle in his clothes and got it into his cell. When his bread and water was taken in to him yesterday morning a pool of blood was found on the floor. Investigation showed that he had broken the bottle of liniment and with a sharp piece of glass cut two gashes in the fleshy part of his arm. Although he had lost a good deal of blood, enough had coagulated over the wounds to stop the bleeding. The prison physician sewed up the wounds and said they would soon heal up again. When asked by Jailor Low why he cut himself he said it was because the latter would not accept his protestations of future good behavior.

That same night Fitzgerald scared his guard half to death by making a croaking and gurgling noise as though he was choking to death. The guard finally got on to his scheme, threw the wicket open and caught him with his face right behind it.

Jailor Low was asked why he did not resort to flogging. He said the matter had been discussed by the Prison Commissioners and himself. Personally he was opposed to it because he did not believe it would have the slightest effect. Fitzgerald had already been flogged on a man-of-war and no good had come of it. Besides he did not think the young man cared for physical pain. Mr. Low is convinced that Fitzgerald has no idea of committing suicide but is only making a play for sympathy.

Meeting of Company D.

At the meeting of Company D held yesterday evening two new members were elected. Much of the time was given to discussion of the Elvin rifle competition, which begins today, and to a proposal for a medal or cash prize contest which may immediately follow. Annual business matters were postponed for one week.

JAPAN HEARD FROM AT LAST

The Minister of Foreign Affairs Declines to Give Particulars.

Acting President Cooper Preparing His Message to the Legislature—Usual Ceremonies at the Opening.

"Is it true that the Government has received another communication from the Japanese Minister?" asked the BULLETIN reporter of the Minister of Foreign Affairs this morning.

"Yes," replied Minister Cooper. "I received a communication from the Japanese Government through Minister Shimamura a few days ago."

"Can the nature of its contents be made public?" asked the reporter.

"Not at present," replied Mr. Cooper. "The communication is a long one and has not yet been fully digested. Some months ago I forwarded to Minister Shimamura an exhaustive statement of the position taken by Hawaii in the immigration troubles. The document I have just received contains a similar statement of the Japanese position."

"Does the reply of Japan bring the issue any nearer to a settlement?" asked the reporter.

"That I cannot say now," said the Minister, "something may depend on our reply, which at present is not prepared."

Asked about his preparations for the opening of the Legislature on Wednesday week the Acting President said:

"The same ceremonies will be observed as two years ago. The usual invitations will be sent to the diplomatic and consular corps and naval officers in port to attend the public opening at noon. President Dole left no message here but there is yet one more chance to hear from him. If he sends a message to the Legislature I shall of course read that, but I think it is doubtful if he does. I am now preparing one of my own in case I do not hear from the President. All I can tell you about mine is that it will be quite long. There are so many subjects requiring attention that I fear I cannot make it as short as I could wish."

Rousing G. A. R. Meeting.

The meeting of George W. De Long Post, G. A. R., on Thursday evening was one of the most successful and interesting held in a great while. L. L. La Pierre presided most efficiently. Interesting reminiscences were related by Colonel Gilbert F. Little of Hilo, Prof. Cook, Comrade J. N. Wright, Capt. K. McDonnell, Comrade Long of George Thomas Post, San Francisco, and others.

SPRECKELS CALLS ON DOLE

How the President Was Mistaken for Judge Campbell.

Description of Two Very Handsome Gowns Mrs. Dole Will Wear While in Washington.

Soon after they had reached San Francisco and put up at the Occidental hotel, Claus Spreckels paid a visit to his old friends, President Dole and wife. The friendship existing between Mr. Spreckels and the Doles was formed many years ago in Hawaii, and questions of island politics and public policy have never dulled the kindly sentiments then established.

At the islands Mr. Spreckels was known to his many friends as Colonel Spreckels, and so he was greeted by the President and Mrs. Dole in the old-fashioned, warm-hearted way. The visit was delightful in many respects and afforded Mrs. Dole quite as much pleasure as it gave to her distinguished husband. In the midst of the packing and preparations for the eastern journey they talked of old times in Hawaii, of mutual friends and acquaintances, but never touched in the slightest degree the subject of island government.

Two very handsome dresses were made by the City of Paris, San Francisco, for Mrs. Dole, which she will wear while in Washington. The material and trimmings used in these dresses are of the richest.

One gown is a black Nouveaute Duchesse moire reception dress, the bodice of Duchesse moire, with tight fitting back. The front opens over a lavender velvet waist coat, with jabot of point lace; the slopes of waist trimmed with Applique point, tight sleeves mounted with small puffs, Marie Antoinette collar of lavender velvet. Skirt en cloche.

The other gown is a very handsome ball gown made of black tulle. The corsage decollete, with small shoulder puffs and garniture of spangles. The skirt made with tulle, with spangled designs all over and finished with three flounces at bottom, the whole made over satin imperial.

During the recent visit of Honolulu's chief executive to the city the following delicate compliment was paid him. Mr. Dole had just finished his breakfast and was standing in front of the hotel drinking in the loveliness of the morning and ruminating on the uncertainty of life, and other things, when he was approached by an individual of rather doubtful appearance. Mr. Dole was positive that he did not know the stranger, as the only persons that he had, thus far, had the pleasure of meeting were Lieutenant Noble of the army and a few hackmen and railroad agents who had gathered on the wharf the day of his arrival to bid him welcome. However, he of the peculiar appearance evidently had no doubt of the identity of the personage he saw standing in the hotel entrance, for the moment his eye caught sight of the distinguished stranger his face became suffused with the warm blush of pleasure and a smile of ecstatic happiness overspread and softened the somewhat hard lines of his cynical countenance, and rushing up he extended the glad hand to the Island President and without giving that gentleman any opportunity to say a word, commenced:

"Judge, I've been looking for you all over the town as I want to put you right on that little matter of Mag's that is to come up before you this morning. You see—"

"You must have made a mistake," broke in Mr. Dole. "I am the President of Hawaii and not a judge."

"Hully gee!" exclaimed the stranger, falling back, "I took you for Judge Campbell, as I thought there was only one bunch of whiskers like that in the city."

LEGEND OF THE KOA BOWL

New Book That Is Silently Finding Its Way About Town.

Accompanied a Token from Masons to a Brother—Clever Story by a Very Modest Author.

"A Legend of the Koa Bowl" is the title of a small book that has made its appearance quietly among a few people in Honolulu in the past few days. The story is conceded to be a most meritorious one and places the author, whose name is clouded beneath an impossible nom de plume, in the front rank of Hawaiian amateur writers.

The book is dedicated to Franklin H. Day of San Francisco, an uncle of Dr. F. R. Day of this city. Its publication came about in a peculiar manner. About a year ago the Masons of Honolulu decided to present Mr. Day with a token of special esteem. The committee in charge of the matter decided upon a Koa calabash. As luck would have it they found a very old one, made in the primitive way, and carefully preserved for more than a hundred years. It came from Kona.

With the finding of this calabash was unearthed its remarkable history, told by the writer of the book mentioned. The story was written off on a typewriter, bound and sent to Mr. Day with the bowl. That was the last heard of it for some time.

As might have been expected the bowl and story excited unusual notice in San Francisco. They were exhibited in the lodge rooms of the city. Every Mason read the story and examined the bowl. Enormous valuations were placed on the treasure. "You should have insured it; it might be consumed in a fire," was suggested by more than one. Mr. Day was delighted beyond expression with his souvenir, and decided to have the cleverly written legend printed and distributed among the Masons. That is what has been done.

The book is elegantly bound. On the fly leaf is a clear half tone cut of the bowl, with the inscription upon it. The ornamentation is a design in silver, representing the mosaic pavement, the Incident Tessel, the Blazing Star and the name of the recipient. Twenty-two pages of the book tell the story of the Koa bowl. Masons of Honolulu and a few others have read the legend with keen interest.

The writer is very modest, and urgently requests that a review, merited by the book, be not made. Upon his promise that he will be "heard from again" in other stories, this paper agreed not to review the work and not to publish the author's name. It may be said, however, that the writer is a prominent Government official and is known and esteemed by every man in Honolulu.

CURING ROOMS.

Providing a Current of Air Neither Too Moist or Too Dry.

In cheese curing rooms the difficulty is to keep the temperature of the air right at the same time that it has exactly the correct amount of moisture in it. Professor F. H. King of the Wisconsin experiment station has been laboring at this problem. The result of his work he summed up in a paper read before the Wisconsin Dairymen's association. We give some extracts from his paper, with a diagram.

The greatest difficulty is experienced in maintaining the even temperature of the curing room and the right degree of moisture while the outside air is constantly changing in both respects. Suppose outside air, laden with moisture, is let into the curing room at a temperature higher than that of the room itself. Shortly the moisture in the warm air is condensed in the form of a fine dew upon the walls, the shelves and the cheeses themselves. This hurts the flavor of the cheese inevitably. The temperature at which the outside air thus parts with its moisture in the curing room is called its dew point, and this changes with the different seasons of the year. The difficulties in the war will thus be apparent.

Professor King gives the following table, showing the mean temperature and humidity of the atmosphere during the warm months for his own state of Wisconsin. He says:

Month	Mean temperature	Mean relative humidity	Dew point
May	57	74	4
June	67	75	6
July	73	77	6
August	69	81	6
September	61	83	6

It will be seen that during the months of May and September the natural air conditions are about what seem to be desired for cheddar cheese, but for June, July and August the temperatures are too high.

Now, since the mean temperatures of the air are too high, it is evident that, in order to secure a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees for the curing room, some method of cooling the air must be adopted during the three summer months.

Several efforts have been made to use subearth ducts as a means of cooling the air to the desired temperature before admitting it to the curing room.

To change the air in a curing room 20 by 30 by 10 feet in size once each hour would require a ventilating flue 10 inches in diameter, through which the air moves at the rate of 2.27 miles per hour.

There are several methods which are available for cooling the air until it shall enter the curing room at the proper degree of dryness, and I should speak first of the deep well method. The mean temperature of deep well and spring water in Wisconsin ranges from 40 to 52 degrees, and this means that, if it were practicable to construct a suitable subearth duct 30 to 50 feet below the surface, it would be possible to cool the air down to 50 degrees and thus render it dry enough for the curing room.

Mr. J. F. Steinwand of Colby, Wis., has written me for advice regarding the construction of a curing room. He has a well 25 feet in diameter, 64 feet deep, with 16 feet of water, which he says has a temperature of 38 degrees F. We have recommended that he adopt the following plan: Lower a ten inch galvanized iron pipe into this well to within a foot of the level of high water in the well, and lead this pipe into the curing room, which is to be made very tight. Then connect the ventilation of the curing room so that it exhausts into the smokestacks from the boiler house, if practicable, so as to utilize the waste heat of the engine to force a strong draft from the ventilator of the curing room. By this arrangement the cold air from the bottom of the well will be drawn continually into the curing room, and the water which is condensed from the air in the pipe will drip back into the well. Should this not give air cold enough, then it would be practicable to let the tube form a U, so as to utilize the water in cooling the air. The most serious objection to this latter plan is the possible danger of the bend of the pipe becoming filled with water condensed from air passing through the pipe. Should this difficulty arise it would have to be overcome by using a pump to withdraw the condensed water from the bend as it became necessary.

If the air entering the curing room is first passed over ice, its temperature will be lowered. A cold air duct could be used in conjunction with the ice and thus reduce the quantity needed.

The amount of ice required is as follows:

	Ice alone	Ice with cold air duct
In June.....	8,288 pounds	4,524 pounds
In July.....	12,250 pounds	6,927 pounds
In August....	9,958 pounds	5,927 pounds
Total.....	31,222 pounds	18,127 pounds
	15.6 tons	7.5 tons
	64 cubic feet	32 cubic feet

These figures indicate the minimum amount of ice which could be used, as

SATURDAY, FEB. 5, 1898.

There is nothing unexpected in the drop sugar has taken by last advices. Nor was there anything unusual in the rise near the end of the year. Both these things happen as regularly as the seasons.

Wages have not governed rents so much in Honolulu as may have been the case in cities abroad. Rents have come down the past ten or twelve years with out a corresponding cut in wages as a general thing.

for apprehending that they are likely ever to make a material drop. Probabilities are very much the other way. If there were unlimited areas for city extension the matter would be different.

Room there is for suburban expansion which, with rapid transit, will be certain to proceed as it has been doing for many years. Yet the land immediately overlooking the harbor and close to the focus of the traffic that is bound to endure and to increase, just as long as men go down to the sea in ships, must in the nature of things become more and more valuable while the years roll along.

CIRCUIT COURT NOTES.

Will of Miss Anna Cahill Filed for Probate.

In the case of S. Abmi vs. H. Holmes, trustee, and others, bill to quiet title, Mrs. En Syak Asen, by her attorneys J. A. Magoon and R. D. Silliman, has interposed a plea in bar, setting forth a decision of the Supreme Court affecting the title at issue.

In the matter of the bankruptcy of Kate S. Tregloan, the objections made by R. D. Silliman, an attorney for J. D. Tregloan and E. C. Winston to the presentation of claims by Thos. H. Davies & Co., E. Hoffschlager & Co., and others have been withdrawn.

Father Valentine has petitioned for letters of administration on the estate of Miss Anna Cahill, deceased, under the will, which is filed with the petition. The will is dated January 31, 1898, and after bequeathing her rings, bicycle, etc., to employees and other directs that the residue of her estate be given to her sister, Mrs. P. H. Callahan, of Louisville, Ky., to whom her trunks and remaining personal effects are to be sent. The executor is requested to continue the millinery business carried on by the deceased until it can be sold for what it is reasonably worth, the estimated value being $3000.

NOTICE.

There is a list being circulated of persons who offer monthly a donation to Dr. Spinola's Sanatorium for the purpose of continuing the institution on a larger scale—admitting any person of whatever nationality without distinction, who is unable to earn a living on account of sickness or old age. Since locating here I have been supporting from two to three patients without any help, but cannot continue so to do without outside assistance. Therefore I ask all charitable persons who will subscribe, to come to my house and get information from those actually under treatment or who have received treatment. A little help is all that is needed to insure the success of this praiseworthy undertaking. 830 31 DR. A. P. C. R. SPINOLA.

ALL FOR THE SOUTH.

CAMPFIRE TALES OF A NOTED CONFEDERATE BATTERY.

It is useless to deny that Confederates had the hardest end of it in all that pertains to soldier experience in the field. There was little chance for change or promotion, none for discharge. The whole south volunteered in the first flush of enthusiasm and for men of honor and self respect there was nothing to do but stick it out, the army growing smaller and smaller every day, the hardships greater and the chances for success less.

In spite of the enormous mass of war literature there is nothing so far that turns life in the Confederate army inside out. Attempts have been made. In a sketch of the Richmond Howitzers a member of the company runs lightly over four years' campaigning with the Army of Northern Virginia. He strikes into the heart of the subject and tells how it was that his comrades bore up under every discouragement, fighting like tigers when told to and shiffling for themselves when not wanted in battle.

The Richmond Howitzers was a crack local company organized in 1859 by George W. Randolph, who served the Confederacy as secretary of war. The company was out in the John Brown raid. From that time on until the outbreak of the war the members were thoroughly drilled in artillery tactics. During Sumter days the company rendezvoused in a hall under the old Spottswood hotel. It drilled night and day, and learning that a government war vessel was ascending the James, the company was ordered down the river with its guns.

Nothing came of that expedition, but the incident gave the company local celebrity, and there was great eagerness on the part of the Richmond blue bloods to join the ranks of the Howitzers. A fine, strong company was mustered in for the war. A glance at the roll shows that the sons of the first families of Virginia were not too proud to enroll themselves as common soldiers.

So great was the rush to join the Howitzers that a battalion of three companies was formed. It is the story of the first company which I shall epitomize from the narrative of one of its survivors.

After enjoying a picnic in the city of Richmond, and on the route northward—greeted on all their travels by "many young ladies with reticements in trays and baskets lavishly supplied"—the Howitzers landed on the hot plains of Manassas in June, 1861. They found the nucleus of the artillery corps of the Army of Northern Virginia. Drills were heavy, but at that date the masses were well supplied. Biscuits were baked with the delicacies of the season, over and above the abundance of flour, bacon, beef, molasses, sugar and coffee regularly issued. The intervals of drill were given to amusement, which, the story tells us, consisted in reading newspapers, novels and letters sent from home regularly and playing cards. The games at Manassas were euchre and seven up. Poker, the final favorite, came in at a later date. How wildly these gilded youth had miscalculated was shown by the fact that many of the boys took along to the front saratoga trunks filled with civilized apparel, white trunks, collars, cuffs and hosiery, and in off moments took occasion to sport them. Among the visitors to the Manassas was General R. E. Lee, whom the Howitzers' historian says was at that time not only unknown to fame, but under a cloud because of the check he had suffered in West Virginia at the hands of McClellan. Lee's visit created no sensation, and he did not come anyway near eclipsing Beauregard, the idol of the army at Manassas.

The Howitzers were not heavily engaged in battle at Bull Run, but they were under fire and learned the difference between real soldiering and play soldiering. The company was exposed to a searching fire from the Federal batteries across Bull Run.

"The crashing and exploding of projectiles approaching this time in quest of life, not receding beautifully as in target practice, was rather a startling acquaintance; the first one seemed to have begun the destruction of the world and the ones immediately succeeding to be clinching the job." Late in the day the rebel yell swept over the field, followed by the exulting cry, "They're retreating, they're routed!" The Howitzers started enthusiastically in pursuit, thinking that they were going to Washington, but they were soon called back by orders from the generals.

It was in the first winter camps that the Howitzers discovered the beauties of poker as an army pastime. The game went on day and night without intermission. Eating and camp calls were shifted as much as possible to keep a winning or losing hand and let the game go on. Grains of corn represented the stake, and, for the most part, were the only stake played for, for few were ever "redeemed" by the "bank" or any one else. The army paymaster visited the camp once during the winter, the first and last time the Howitzers ever saw him. In this first winter camp the Howitzers passed their holiday of soldiering. Log huts for dwellings, with mammoth outside fireplaces kept roaring with hickory, oak and pine logs, kitchens and mess tables presided over

For more than fifty years has PERRY DAVIS' PAIN KILLER stood the test against all remedies prepared to eradicate pain, and today stands at the head of the list among the medicines that are so essential to keep at hand in the home.

It is not a new fangle remedy nor do the proprietors lay claim to any wonderful revelation of the ingredients that enter into the manufacture of this ever popular remedy.

It is perfectly harmless, you need have no fear of becoming habitually inclined to its use.

For Colic, Cramps, Dysentery, Colds, and all painful affections, a few doses will certainly give relief. You cannot afford to be without a bottle in the house.

Your forefathers used it and found it beneficial.

Why experiment with some remedy that is new and its effect on the system unknown?

It has many rivals but no equal.

The new 35c. size contains over double the quantity of the 25c. size.

FAMILIES SUPPLIED.

by negroes and regular meals, gave the nearest possible approach to comfortable home life.

When the Howitzers started on the back track for Richmond in the spring of 1862, they began to realize that the war was not all glory nor profusion. The meals at the hotels were much deteriorated since 1861 and were paid for by a very much increased quantity of printed paper called money. The company halted in Richmond for a few days only and then joined the army down the peninsula. Some changes had taken place in the company, and it was necessary to elect a captain. The Howitzer chronicler says that it was a comical sight to see the "officers" elected by the "people" in the ranks, but this system continued in the company to the end. There was no ambition on the part of the members to hold office.

At elections officers went, as it were, by default to those who would take them rather than to seekers. However, "public opinion" saw that only the fit should hold command. To be a member was considered better than being a commissioned officer. The commander was really between two fires unless discipline in the southern army was sham. Whenever an order was promulgated that was obnoxious to the members of the Howitzers, a committee would call upon the captain to know if the paper in question originated in his headquarters or higher up. If higher up, he was constrained to unite with the petitioners to have it modified. If in his headquarters, he was constrained to modify it on the spot.

At Williamsburg the Howitzers won a little glory all to themselves. Their guns occupied Fort Magruder and for a day held in check the advancing Federal columns. The company followed the fortunes of the Army of Northern Virginia throughout 1862 and established its winter quarters on the Rapidan. In spite of pinching poverty, the Howitzers contrived to have a good time and to make their winter quarters "oases in the barren waste of war." Their dwellings were snug, and, although they had to substitute straw for mattresses, then bushes for straw, they sang all the merrier and played cards with increased zest.

It has always been a mystery just how the Confederate soldiers fed themselves and their animals in a sparsely populated country by no means over-productive in eatables for man and beast. The Howitzers' historian lets out one secret in describing the "hay detail." Sometimes the "detail," like that of guard and police duty, was a method of inflicting punishment for trifling slips of discipline. The chances for getting a house dinner somewhere or raw material for the camp mess took away some of the curse of the punishment. A "detail" of two battery men and a driver with a four horse team was sent out on the hay excursion.

Hay, when found, was taken or "impressed" on official I O U tickets issued by the quartermasters, and this "impressment" was, of course, as the years dragged on, a heavy drain on the farmers. Nevertheless, the Howitzers managed to keep in their good graces, to secure the best fare in their dwellings and to make themselves thoroughly entertaining to the household family before quitting it. The farmers would help to load the wagon with the hay, while the family got up a good dinner for the "detail." In spite of such frequent ravages, the "details" were invited to eat again and again, till no more hay was left. The exceptional powers exhibited by the cannoners in entertaining their hosts, under the vexing run of military operations, were ever amply repaid. The "calls" required occasionally no little tact to be successful. Now and then a farmer was stumbled across who seemed at first to be of impossible impressment. On one special occasion a farmer, whose native generosity had been soured by bad treatment, was called upon by a "hay detail" of the keenest kitchen trail. Nothing would do in the way of ordinary politeness. He pronounced all soldiers to be vandals, devils incarnate, and the "detail" chined in with each and every particular one of his utterances. The army of Northern Virginia was about the worst for destruction that ever bore arms. These trivial objections were finally flanked and utterly routed by the united assault of the "detail." Was the gentleman in need of having the wood on his wood pile cut or of water from the spring? Yes. Well, then, here be good turns indeed to be done, and, without any ado, the "detail" gracefully and zealously did them for him, and words and acts combined worked wonders on the larder, brought out its very best.

The "detail" cut a cord of wood that day and brought a barrel of water from the spring, which was a mile off, before the old man got pleased and invited them to dinner in his house. These tactics were used again and again with success.

Cooking, though so essential to the soldiers' well being, was by no means a pleasant indulgence for the Howitzers when emergencies compelled it. Generally they had hired negro cooks, but in times of battle the cooks rarely ventured from the rear to the front, and the cannoners in the course of several consecutive days of fighting had to depend largely on their own talents for cooking.

Several of the Howitzers had been students at the military institute under Stonewall Jackson. Around their campfires many vivid descriptions were given of "Old Jack's" methods with his pupils. When the army was recrossing the Potomac from Maryland, the Howitzers passed "Old Jack" in saddle by the wayside, and after the battery halted for bivouac one of the institute cadets, named Dick Wharton, proposed to go back to the river and have a chat with their old teacher. His fellows did not anticipate a very kind reception under the circumstances and declined to go, so the boy set out alone. Some hours later he returned to the battery bespattered with mud and looking very much disgusted. "Well," some one asked, "what did 'Old Jack' have to say?" "Say!" growled Wharton. "Well, I no sooner spoke to him than he set me to work totting stones and shoveling dirt with the infantry."

Terrible Pains

In the Stomach—Dreadful Headaches—Face and Neck Covered With Boils—Cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla—Skin is Now Clear.

"I was covered with boils all over my face and neck. I had dreadful headaches and pains in my stomach. I took medicines, but was not much benefited, and I procured six bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking the first bottle I could see an improvement. When I had taken a few more bottles the boils had all gone, my skin was clear, my appetite returned, and my health was entirely restored. I am thankful I ever found such a blood purifier as Hood's Sarsaparilla. I paid out a good deal of money for useless medicines before taking Hood's Sarsaparilla." W. F. BUCKWORTH, Hurlock, Maryland.

ITEMS FROM HARBOR FRONT

Borneo Steamer Amur Bound for the Klondike Arrives.

Waialeale With Kahuku Sugar—W G Hall Ahead of Time—Some Nice Ships—Noeau Cargo.

Smoother weather with heavy swells on the Laie bar.

The W F Babcock and Mauna Ala finished discharging yesterday.

The French cruiser Duguay Trouin is taking in 600 tons of coal.

The ship Fort George will get the Hawaiian register and sail for Royal Roads next week.

The steamer Noeau with a full load of Lithue sugar arrived this morning. Captain Pederson reports light easterly winds in the channel coming home. The bark Arago received the Noeau's cargo. Sugar on Kaula yesterday, 40,500 bags.

The schooner Waialua sails next week for Marquesas islands under Captain Garland, formerly of the missionary steamer Mariner. She will bring to Honolulu a number of Hawaiian native missionaries who have been there some years and want to return home. The Waialua will be away about three months.

Luxurious Sailing Ships.

Captain Curtis of the ship Tillie E Starbuck, now on the berth for New York, is the highest salaried master in the American merchantman service. His long and successful career has demonstrated to the owners of the big ship that it pays to reward a good mariner. And besides the Tillie E Starbuck is the pride of the American sailing fleet. She was built regardless of money. Her cabin, finished in hard wood and with rare workmanship is luxurious, is polished and reflecting light like mirrors. The Harry B Hyde, also awaiting a sugar cargo here, is another fine example of American ship building. "Poor Jack at Sea" links into a tradition after the visitor has seen the fine, commodious and clean quarters of these big ships.

A Klondiker Arrives.

The British steamer Amur, bound for Victoria, arrived in port this morning from Labuan, North Borneo. She sailed from that port Jan 7, having been bought by parties in Victoria for the Klondike traffic. The Amur has been engaged in the India trade and comes empty except for a quantity of coal. The coal in her bunkers becoming exhausted it was necessary to transfer some from her hold which could not be done while the vessel was steaming. The Amur is a small vessel for ocean traffic, being somewhat larger than the Kinau, with the smokestack set away aft giving her a peculiar appearance. She shows signs of rough seas encountered on her voyage. The Amur is anchored in naval row and will sail for Victoria in a few days.

PASSENGERS ARRIVED.
