WIT OF PUBLIC MEN.

WALTER WELLMAN HAS SEARCHED
THE RECORDS FOR REPORTEE.

The Line Dividing the Sublime from the Ridiculous is Often Perilously Narrow.
Jokes Have Often Turned Away the Wrath of Statesmen.

(Special Correspondence.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—In the house a few days ago we had a fine example of the narrowness of the border line which sometimes exists between the sublime and the ridiculous. Mr. Lewis, of Mississippi, in replying to strictures of Mr. Kelley, of Kansas, on the former state, said some people were continually going up and down the land disturbing the peaceful and calm and industrious with false cries of "Murder! murder! murder!" At this moment, when the feelings of the spectators had been worked to a high pitch by the dramatic manner of the speaker, old Gen. Spaulding sang out, "Call the police!" In a twinkling tragedy was changed to comedy, and everybody roared.

Two or three weeks ago, during a decisive roll call on the election bill—a critical historic moment, when senators and spectators were in a state of suppressed excitement—Senator Dixon, in asking a transfer of his pair from Senator Ransom to Senator Hampton, declaredly remarked that after this exchange of courtesies between the senator from North Carolina and the senator from South Carolina he could vote—an allusion to a good old joke which filled the senate chamber with merriment.

Instances of sudden change from the sublime to the ridiculous are by no means rare in congress. Congressman Belford, of Colorado, a few years ago was exhorting a fellow member with all his powers of eloquence. "There he sits," exclaimed Belford, "skinking his finger at the object of his wrath, 'mate, silent and dumb!'"

"Yes," shouted a wag, "and he is not saying a word."
This was even neater than Gen. Spaulding's call for the police. Gen. Spaulding, by the way, is full of sharp repartees. He is noted for his old fashioned high collar, which tickles the lower lobes of his ears. One day a rash young member made some sneering allusion to Spaulding's collar, whereupon the old man retorted, "It would require a collar fifty times higher than mine to hide the ears of the gentleman."

Another member, on another occasion, attempted to make a pun: Mr. Spaulding's expense. The old warrior having replied rather hotly to some remark, the punster said:
"Oh, well, you needn't get your choler up."
Quick as a flash came Spaulding's retort: "I always have my collar up; and I advise the gentleman to take care that the other end of the garment to which his collar is fastened is kept down."

One of the sharpest bits of repartee we have had in congress in many a day was that of young Senator Wolcott to Senator Power. Wolcott had just voted against his party, and Power was taking him to task. "It's a great mistake, Wolcott," said he, "a great mistake. You have ruined your reputation." "You go make one," retorted Wolcott.

Not long ago there was a little tiff between Reed and Springer which brought forth a neat repartee. The speaker said something which Springer said he had failed to hear.
"I think you can hear well enough to catch my idea," said Reed.

"I can't catch the speaker's idea," responded Springer, "without hearing what he says, and frequently I can't catch it when I do hear what he says."
When congressmen become bitterly personal they talk about each other's "record." A "record" is a terrible matter to a debater. It touches his integrity and consistency, and often provokes a fierce answer. Sam Cox used to tell a story about two statesmen from the Egypt district of Illinois who went at each other in this fashion: "You cannot assail my record," said one hotly. "No; I do not care to go into small matters," was the retort. "That is where you and I differ. I do go into small matters, for I shall answer you." "Then discuss yourself and magnify little things."

A convenient form of repartee or sarcasm is reference to the predecessor of one's antagonist. During the debate on the rules in the last session one of the Democratic members spoke of Speaker Reed as the man who rattled around in the seat formerly occupied by John G. Carlisle, which was not happy, inasmuch as Reed is physically three times as big as Carlisle, and their corporal disproportionateness was at once in every one's mind, notwithstanding the member's obvious intention to compare the men intellectually.

Much better was Ingalls' subtle, delicate sarcasm a few years ago in the same line. He was castigating Mr. Hoar in a polite, parliamentary manner for that senator's alleged devotion to Massachusetts cast. Senator Dawes came into the chamber just in time to hear a few words, and, raising, asked if the words were intended for him.

"I refer now," said Ingalls, "to the successor of Charles Sumner and not to the successor of Daniel Webster."
This delicately cruel way of holding the two senators from Massachusetts up to comparison with Sumner and Webster brought a grin to the face of every one in the chamber, Senators Hoar and Dawes alone excepted.

More vicious was John Randolph's use of the same method many years ago. Randolph and Nathaniel Macon were fast friends. When Macon went out of the senate and James Resell succeeded him the latter tried to curry favor with the great, the terrible John Randolph. But Randolph would have no intercourse with him, and one day in making a speech packed unmercifully, looked at Resell and exclaimed, "This reminds me of a remark once made by Nathaniel Macon, of North Carolina, the wisest man I ever knew. But now, alas, his seat in this body is vacant, vacant, vacant!"

A delicious bit of ridicule was that which Matt Carpenter once aimed at Mr. Sumner: "He so completely identifies himself with the universe that he is not at all certain whether he is part of it or it is part of him."

Two or three days ago there was a lively tiff between Senators Dawes and Cook, in which the latter ferociously demanded to know if he could not tell what a Democrat had sworn to under oath without swearing a Democrat. "I do not know about that," was Mr. Dawes' demure rejoinder, which was greatly enjoyed. In his prime Dawes was a good deal of a wag, and has in his composition a vein of quiet humor, which even now occasionally flashes out. When he was in the house, and was talking about more light houses for the coast of Massachusetts, some one asked him how many light houses there were in the district. "Five," said he. "I was up there last summer, in vacation," rejoined the questioner, "and I am sure I counted a dozen."

"Oh," said Mr. Dawes, "they are double reflectors, and perhaps you saw double."

Puns on names are common—too common—in the minds of congressional wit. Once Mr. Archer, of Maryland, voted by mistake when Oakes Ames' name was called, and voted again when his own name was reached, whereupon two or three members sang out, "Insultate Archer, would not one vote suffice?"

Sam Cox once looked this matter up, and found that the same joke had been made on no fewer than three of the many Archers who have sat in the house.

Mr. Springer's pun on the picturesque member from Philadelphia, Mr. Randall's successor, is not bad—"Vaux populi, Vaux Dei."

It is odd how jokes are perpetuated, worked over, respiced, in congress. "Gentlemen will pass through the tellers," by mistake for "Gentlemen will pass between the tellers," is an old as the house of representatives, but it always brings a laugh. Not long ago "Buck" Kilgore, who was serving as a teller, announced, "Two more in the negative, Mr. Speaker," as Mr. Barnes, the pug-nate statesman from Georgia, passed through. This, too, is an old joke. It was first applied to Mr. Baldwin, of Massachusetts, in the Thirty-seventh congress. It was also once put on to substitute him in order to make a quorum.

A few days ago a western member viciously and persistently addressed the chair. Finally the speaker turned to him and asked:
"For what purpose does the gentleman rise?"
"To a point of order. I ask for information."
"The point is well taken," said Speaker Reed sharply, amid general laughter.

It was at least thirty years ago that a representative, speaking on the tariff bill, exclaimed:
"Mr. Speaker, I am a plain, blunt business man, who deals in facts and figures. I am tired of these theories. What I want is more practical common sense."
"That's so!" shouted some one, and the house was convulsed with laughter.

During one of the night sessions of the senate last month Mr. Hoar, tired and sleepy, said, "Mr. President, there is no debate before the question."
This was so funny that even Mr. Hoar laughed, but it was not as ludicrous as the slip made a few years ago by Dr. Gallinger, who has just been elected to the senate from New Hampshire. The great doctor was in the house then, and in control of time in a certain debate. "Mr. Speaker," said he, "give three gentlemen to the minute from Kansas, Mr. Perkins."

Even Mr. Ingalls, who is a stickler for form and etiquette, made a queer slip one day while presiding over the senate. His colleague rose, and the presiding officer, instead of exclaiming "The senator from Kansas," blurted out "Plumb." That was not as bad as Vice President Morton's endeavor to say, "The senator from Mississippi," when Mr. George Ross, of Mississippi, from Missouri—no, Montana—Michigan—Mississippi was the way in which he did it, with a very red face by the time he had made this rapid circuit of the interior of the continent.

The mistake of saying "The gentleman," which is the house usage, instead of "The senator," as required by the rules of the senate, has often led to laughable incidents in the latter body.

Senator Berry spoke of Mr. Hiseock as "The gentleman from New York," and instantly corrected himself, saying, "I don't mean that. Pardon my error. Not the gentleman, but the senator from New York," etc., thus going from bad to worse.

"Gentlemen—Mr. President—no; I was addressing the house," and inadvertently called the body "gentlemen." This was the next but malicious way in which Senator Nye, an inveterate joker, made the same play on words.

Jim Belford once moved that the house adjourn bona fide, but this was after several visits to a committee room in which a large jug was kept as one of the literary treasures. Frank Lawler, on another occasion, moved that "the house adjourn sine die till to-morrow at 12 o'clock."

Scores of the brightest sayings known to the annals of congress are credited to Senator Edmunds, though many of his sharpest utterances do not appear in the Congressional Record. At times he keeps up a running fire of acute voice comment, full of sarcasm and bitter irony. Once while he was making a speech in general terms a senator interrupted him to say, "if the senator is firing at a block it is a safe way of firing." "One block seems to be all, at any rate," retorted Edmunds.

THURSDAY, APRIL 16, 1891.

It is said the tendency of the Vatican lately is toward democracy, and yet both republicanism and democracy appear in modern times as the champions of free-thought.

The latest despatches announce that the Catholics of Canada have arrayed themselves against the Manitoba school act. It is nothing new to find religious bodies arrayed against Government systems of education. There is no cure for the evil, except to educate religious bodies up to the standard of modern political economy. The United States has had the same fight with various religious denominations and has, owing to the general intelligence of her citizens, thus far been the victor. Education tells, especially in a Republic.

The late riots and disturbances in the coke regions near Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, in which the guards on duty shot down a number of the strikers, was altogether an unfortunate affair. There is, however, a moral and a lesson attached thereto. Investigation shows that every man killed by the guards was a foreigner. Had the strikers been Americans there is every reason to believe they would have been brought under the rigid control of the law in the same manner, as were the American strikers at Seattle a few years ago. It is, therefore, quite plain that when the United States Government informs foreign nations that foreigners in the United States will receive the same treatment and privileges accorded American citizens, the Government at Washington means just what it says.

The Federation Convention of Australasia had been in session over two weeks when the last mail left Sydney. It was composed of the leading public men of all the Colonies, presided over by Sir Henry Parkes of New South Wales. Three great questions seemed to occupy most of the time, viz.: Shall the States govern the Federation, or the Federation the States? Shall the Senate have the power to amend money bills? and, Shall the decisions of the Appellate Court of the Federation be final, or shall they be subject to review by the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council?

The general disposition of the convention seemed to be against following any existing constitutional model—the American, British, Canadian or Swiss. At the same time powerful warnings were heard against a composite constitution, that is, an admixture of the American and British systems in single particulars. There was manifest also a strong tendency to secure elasticity in the federal constitution. For instance, it was to be left an open question—at least pending the fullest deliberation in convention and standing committee—whether members of the Cabinet should necessarily be members of the Legislature.

As this element of the British polity has often been cited in Hawaii as an immutable principle of responsible government, it is decidedly interesting to see its expediency strongly questioned in such a purely British aggregation of States as Australasia. Equally remarkable is another point raised in the convention—that is, whether the tenure of the Ministry shall be absolutely dependent on the votes of a partisan majority in the popular branch of the Legislature. This indeed shows almost startling independence of thought in the Colonies regarding the cardinal doctrines of British constitutional government.

Writers in the Sydney press as well as speakers in the convention strenuously reprobated the narrow spirit in which some of the delegates approached the great questions at issue. These protests had proved effective in restraining the narrow-minded politicians from declaring, when important matters came up and before they were fully discussed, if such and such a course was not taken that there would be no federation, or that the speakers would leave the convention. Some very able and statesmanlike speeches were made in the convention.

The Auckland Herald refers to the difficulties met by the convention and adds: "The sentiment in favor of Federation is, however, so strong that there is little doubt that a measure will be framed to be laid before the different colonies. In this colony also, people are beginning to see that if a Federation is formed it would be impossible to us to keep out of it. Our interests with Australia are very great, and if we were to refuse to join, our trade would be much hampered."

It is anticipated that the census about being taken in the Colonies will show a population of over four millions. Existence in disjointed and in some respects antagonistic relations with each other cannot long be possible with such free, intelligent and wealthy peoples. Their effort to realize the noble idea of "One people, one destiny," proposed by Sir Henry Parkes, as a toast at the inaugural banquet, cannot fail to be of the greatest interest to the whole civilized world.

OUR GAME OF LIFE.

BY EVA BEST.

We each take turns upon an earthly field. Stand twixt the pitcher Life and catcher Death. Within our hands the club of Destiny—Beneath our eager feet the Diamond Hope! High or low ball? Shall the grim catcher, Laugh at our whizzing of the bat through space. And Fate, the umpire, calls us out on the strikes. Before the first base of our youth is gained? Or shall we touch the goal and laugh to scorn. The quick in hurling of the well sent ball? Suppose we gain the first; a brother comes. And in his hand now lies our wear or woe? Should he, by luck chance, so wield the bat. That the good ball should soar o'er fielders' heads. And lose itself midst mustard plant and dock. 'Twere most miraculous! And we are wise. If, now, we watch with cool, unblinking eyes. The near short-stop, Necessity.

Home runs. But few of us may hope for; if we creep. From base to base and watch each wary chance. We're doing pretty tolerably well. To score on singles even! Lucky we. If liners fly not swift to fielders' hands and send us to our durance on the grass. Where, near by, Captain Cunning coaches men! The odds are great against us; for the ball. In taking downward curves escapes our sweep. And falls too often in the catcher's hands. Or, spite of our efforts, is a foul. And we're caught out!

We ever start to play. The short nine is rings of our little lives. With visions of great ball—of many flies. Lost in the ether by e of sunny skies. And wait to see—a daisy cutter jump. Low toward the waiting fielder, Cicumstance! Ofttimes the bat's too heavy for our hands. Or far too light for our great zealous strength. And though the diamond lures us eye-on. The dust we make in scrambling for each base. Fills our poor eyes and blinds us to our fate. And when we stand erect and see again. The Grand Stand of this vast, terre trial sphere. Lo, one fine ball is safe within the hands. Of stern Forordinali n at our backs. And our grim umpire, Fate, calls loudly—"Out!"

"ZEPHYRS" WORK THEM.

Just think of a two-horse Aermotor running a six-inch pump and filling a thirteen hundred gallon tank in less than an hour! Do you know of any other wind motor that will do this? We try to keep posted on such things but fail to find anything in wind history that even approaches this record. The mills we speak of force water five hundred feet and elevate it twenty-five—hard to believe isn't it, but it's a fact. They are as strong as the strongest material and good workmanship can make them and cheaper than any other mill on the market, two points of excellence in their favor.

Another thing in their construction, or mechanism, whichever you prefer, is the fact of their being made so that they will not fall to pieces by being overworked. They make three revolutions and pump once. The strain is not all put on the wheel at each revolution, it is equally divided and consequently the wheel lasts longer than the ordinary run of wind mills. We are not afraid to talk about the Aermotors now that they have been tried and proved satisfactory right here at home. We have had to publish testimonials from parties at a distance because Aermotors were new here and had not been tried, but now that we have sold so many and everyone has been satisfactory to the purchaser we can get on all right by referring parties to those people who have tried them here. We continue advertising them because they are still a comparatively new thing on the Islands—before long they will not need a single notice in the newspapers because they will sell themselves. We want people to try them and if they are wrecked in a wind which does not level your house at the same time we will refund the money. A bold offer but it is a way we have of doing business. We know they are strong enough to warrant our guaranteeing them, and that one will probably last longer than the purchaser will have any use for it. If you want a windmill remember that the Aermotors sold by us is cheaper, stronger and better than any windmill on the market and will do more work than any windmotor ever invented. For sale only by the Hawaiian Hardware Company, Fort street, opposite Spreckels' Block, Honolulu.

MORE RAMIE HINTS.

S. H. Shaght of New Orleans who is interested in ramie growing and manufacture in that section says in a recent letter to the Bulletin of that city that ramie will only grow well in this country in Pacific Coast and Gulf States.

"It is not adapted to our great flax-growing region. The separation of the fiber from the stalk is entirely mechanical and is never done by a wet process. It is either done green or dry. This is called decorticating and must not be confounded with the unginning process which is never done dry. The operation of decorticating green or dry is the same with a proper machine; and just the same as in the case of flax, hemp or jute except ramie will not rot soon enough in water so as not to spoil the fiber. It is no more difficult to decorticate ramie than flax or hemp. The unginning is the most difficult of all plants, but it must be removed at the same time with the mildest material that will not injure but soften the hands even.

"Ramie fiber is short, only two to six inches long, and needs carding only two inches long. Only a small portion is longer than four inches, and prepared by machinery, decorticating and process unginning need not be converted into 'tow,' but carded or combed, and none of it can be worked into fine spinning except as the Chinese work it, by hand. I do not know of any place where it grows in a permanently moist atmosphere. And many times in California even, it will not dry without artificial means, and even drying it at all is very expensive, as it must be done off the stubble. Furthermore, the decorticated fiber does not want to be beaten and pounded to remove the gum when dry. That is done by the 'wet' unginning process. It must not be done dry, as it injures the smoothness of the fiber, and the drier the climate the more danger of injury.

"We all know that alkali land, if watered much, will not do well for alfalfa, and less for ramie. We must commence right, be sure and experiment slowly. Plant the roots on good soil and with irrigation facilities, then branch out slowly for dry, wet or alkali lands."

NEW U. S. LAW FOR VESSELS.

Collector Phelps has received from the Treasury Department about one thousand circulars containing the Act recently passed by Congress relating to the marking of vessels' names and draughts. As soon as possible Deputy Collector Jerome will distribute them to the masters of vessels. The Act goes into effect on April 1st, and Section 4178 has been amended to read as follows:

"The name of every documented vessel of the United States shall be marked upon each bow and upon the stern, and the home port shall also be marked upon the stern. These names shall be painted or carved or gilded in Roman letters in a light color on dark ground, or in dark color on a light ground, and to be distinctly visible. The smallest letters used shall not be less in size than four inches. If any vessels of the United States shall be found without these names being so marked the owner or owners shall be liable to a penalty of $10 for each name omitted; provided, however, that the names on each bow may be marked within the year 1891.

"Sec. 2. The draught of every registered vessel shall be marked upon the stem and stern post, in English feet or decimeters, in either Arabic or Roman numerals. The bottom of each numeral shall indicate the draught of that line. The owner, agent or master of every inspected sea-going steam or sail vessel shall indicate the draught of water at which he shall deem his vessel safe to be loaded for the trade she is engaged in, which limit as indicated shall be stated in the vessel's certificate of inspection, and it shall be unlawful for such vessel to be loaded deeper than stated in said certificate."

A NEW WIRE GUN. A new wire gun, invented by John Hamilton Brown of New York was tested today at Fort Wadsworth by navy and army officials. All present expressed themselves satisfied that the new gun was an improvement on others that had been produced in this country.

The new invention is essentially a wire gun. An inner tube, made of numerous steel segments, is wound with steel wire at a tension of 276,000 pounds to the square inch. This so compresses the segments that no possible powder pressure will open the inner surface of the tube. In winding the wire a tension regulator is employed, by means of which the tension at which the wire is wound is brought to one-tenth of an ounce of uniformity throughout the entire mass. Finally, the completed gun is bored out to receive the lining tube.

At the first discharge the gun was charged with two pounds and eight ounces of powder, the resultant pressure being 41,500 pounds to the square inch. For the second test three pounds and one ounce of powder were used, a close calculation placing the pressure at 400,000 pounds to the square inch. This places the capacity of the Brown gun far above any of the big guns now in use.

FOUND GUILTY OF HERESY.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 15, 1891.—The Episcopal Court, which heard the charge of heresy against the Rev. Howard MacQuary, of Canton, Ohio, held three long sessions at Trinity Cathedral today and adjourned at ten o'clock tonight. It will probably convene tomorrow and finish its work. The Rev. Mr. MacQuary was found guilty as charged by a vote of three to two. Those voting against him were Dean Morgan, of Trinity, and Rev. Messrs. Aves, of St. John's, and Putnam, of Emmanuel, all of this city. The Rev. Messrs. Gallagher, of Palmyra, and Smyth, of Toledo, voted "not guilty."

Having been convicted the Court took up the question of Mr. MacQuary's penalty. There are three forms of punishment:—First, admonition; second, suspension, and third, expulsion. Messrs. Gallagher and Smyth voted to permit Mr. MacQuary to go free. Inasmuch as the Canton author and heretic had been admonished, no one voted to admonish him again. Mr. Aves thought he ought to be suspended, while Messrs. Morgan and Putnam were in favor of expulsion, and were so recorded.

The verdict means that Mr. MacQuary will leave the church, for his suspension, if ordered, would continue until he retraced his well known views on the birth and resurrection of Christ, which he would refuse to do. When his penalty is finally fixed it, together with the opinion of the Court, will be sent to Bishop Leonard, who in turn will transmit to Mr. MacQuary. The Bishop can modify the penalty, but he cannot increase it. It is likely, however, that he will permit it to stand just as announced.

CULTURE OF THE RAMIE PLANT.

Sacramento, April 1.—A meeting of the Sacramento Board of Trade was held yesterday to consider the matter of introducing the cultivation of the ramie plant in this country. An address was made by W. H. Murray of San Francisco. He said that the Sacramento valley was particularly adapted to ramie culture and could raise three crops a year. A syndicate will give 3 cents a pound for the fiber. The yield to the acre is 5700 pounds of dry stalks, of which 15 percent is fiber. The Board of Trade appointed A. S. Hopkins and A. W. E. Peterson a committee to investigate.
