KAU RAILROAD SUIT

San Francisco, Sept. 2.—An effort to float the new construction of a Hawaiian railroad is going up in the smoke of litigation. A suit was begun yesterday in the Superior Court by C. Rolte, as assignee of Jacob L. Coerper, against H. Wilson, Wilson, Lyon & Co., and the Wilson-Lyon Construction Company for the recovery of 2500 alleged to have been due April 9, 1932, and $22,750 alleged to have been due October 9, 1932.

The unpaid sums are included in the clauses of a contract made on February 9 of last year whereby Coerper transferred to Wilson $2,720,000 worth of the corporate stock of the Kona and Kau Railroad Company, Limited, of the Island of Hawaii, and all of his interest in the Kona Sugar Company. The transfer of these interests was for the purpose of financially rehabilitating the companies named. It is said that a new line was about to be laid for the railroad, but the company was embarrassed.

It is set forth in the complaint that Wilson agreed to put the company in proper shape and as soon as he was able to float the prospective bonds he would pay Coerper $320,000 and the additional sums mentioned in the suit. If he did not succeed in four years his negotiating the bonds the promised payments were still to be made. Wilson defaulted in the first payments, hence the suit.

Dr. Titus Munson Coon, in Harper's Magazine, declares in favor of "Soda Water" for table use. "Soda Water (more properly called Carbonated Water) whether manufactured or natural is a POWERFUL AID TO DIGESTION by stimulating the stomach and also probably aiding to dissolve the mineral ingredients of the food. It is very appetizing, it corrects acidity in the stomach, checks the disposition to nausea and cools the system in febrile complaints and is indeed the ideal beverage for the water drinker."

TO IMPROVE TRACTS

SUBURBANITES CLUB TOGETHER FOR GOOD

RESIDENTS OF KAIMUKI, PALOLO AND WAIALAE FORMED AN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION YESTERDAY.

The meeting of the residents of Kaimuki, Palolo and Waialae at the Young building yesterday afternoon resulted in the organization of an Improvement Association which sets out on laudable lines to do much good for those popular suburbs. The purpose of the organization is to improve and beautify the tracts named. Special attention will be given at first to roads, which the residents state have been neglected, and when not neglected have suffered from improper work and made worse.

The meeting was attended by twelve or fifteen property holders and they proceeded at once to elect officers as follows:

President, A. F. Clark; vice president, R. D. Mead; secretary, C. G. Bartlett; treasurer, Zeno K. Myers; Executive Board—Messrs. W. M. Minton, H. M. Wells and A. Gartonberg. The meeting was called to order by A. V. Gear. R. D. Mead and E. C. Brown were chosen temporary chairman and secretary respectively. After the election of officers, the officers and executive committee were appointed to draw up a set of by-laws and rules and report at a meeting to be called by the president.

Brief remarks were made by several present. R. D. Mead said that as a resident on one of the tracts, he knew that a great deal of good could be done by the organization. "For instance," he said, "the Government has been trying to build a road out that way. It was a bad road when they began, but now it is worse. If we act together we can probably have more influence than when acting singly."

Zeno K. Myers said he was glad the step in the direction of concerted action had been taken and considered that it was owing to the energy of Mr. Gear and Mr. Minton that the movement was successfully on its feet. He believed the work could be made a great success in beautifying the tract and would result in inducing many people to investigate the merits of the tracts, thereby becoming settlers.

Mr. Wells said a step had been taken in the right direction. What the tracts needed was better roads, at least certain improvements should be made in the main road. He pointed out that it would cost very little to put the roads in excellent condition for ordinary driving vehicles, by the use of stone, such as is sold by Mr. Cooke.

The question of improvement of the side roads came up, and it was asked whether or not the Government had taken over the side roads intersecting the tracts. That this was one of the first matters that should be settled was decided.

COMIC OPERA READY

All is ready for a good time at the Hawaiian Opera House tonight when the delightful comic opera "Said Pasha" will be presented by amateur players. Those who love music, song and humor have a treat in store for them this evening from start to finish as the pretty opera carries the audience through happy plot and merry incidents, from climax to climax, from clime to clime, from the land of the Crescent to far interior India, with a touch of Mexico introduced, and presents a beautiful picture of Oriental luxury and brilliancy.

The auditorium will hold one of the largest audiences it has ever known, yet there are vacancies for late comers and it is expected that these will all be taken.

The cast of principals and chorus is as follows:

- Said Pasha, a Turkish Diplomat Mr. Raymond C. Brown
- Hassen Bey, Officer of the Turkish Patrol Mr. Hugo Herzer
- Terano, a Mexican Nobleman Mr. James D. Dougherty
- Hadad, an Adventurer Mr. Albert M. Cunha
- Nokey, his Companion Mr. Guy Livingston
- Rajah, the Commander of Altara Mr. J. Hastings Howland
- All Musjid Mr. Fred Angus
- Musjid Ali Mr. Robert White
- Plain Musjid Mr. Harry Wilder
- Officers of the Indian Government, Sergeant of the Turkish Patrol Mr. Clarence F. Waterman
- Serena, the Pasha's daughter Miss Alice Carabell
- Alt, the Ideal Queen of Altara Mrs. Lawrence Crook
- Balah Sojah, Alt's Stepmother Mrs. Robert Brenham
- Semer Miss Agnes Lyle
- Punja Mrs. James D. Dougherty
- Alt's Attendants, Chorus of Turkish Soldiers, Sailors, Indians, Natives, and Mexicans.

Scene 1—Constantinople. Scene 2—Altara, India. Second Act—Altara.

Music by Berger's Orchestra; Capt. H. Berger, conductor. Miss Alice Rice, accompanist.

Ladies of the Chorus—Miss Gertrude Lutted, Miss Julia Deas, Miss Blanche Fisher, Miss Edith Lyle, Miss Edythe Bewick, Miss Annie S. Macaulay, Miss Rosiland Waldron, Miss Juanita K. DELEGATE TO CONGRESS

Jonah K. Kalaniana'ole

Perhaps it was legislative ambitions that caused Willie Crawford to part with his Chinese queue. It remains to be seen whether that makes a legislator of the first class.

Prospect of another Russian cruiser appearing in one of the coast ports does not strengthen the supposition that the arrival of the Lena in San Francisco was solely from the necessity of repairing her boilers.

Secretary Atkinson tells the citizens of Maui that there is nothing like good, organized kicks to accomplish results. Doubtless the Secretary coupled with this admonition not to kick so hard as to go over the traces.

Grossman's tour was not in the special interest of tourists, but a Shriner from Hawaii cannot fail to start associates thinking in this direction. Should the local Shriners take hold of the tourist question it is a fair prediction that they would land one steamer load at least during the season.

During these spasms of vote trading to land favorites, delegates to the District convention should not forget that fair representation of all elements by capable men is what carries the ticket to victory. Personal enthusiasm and prejudice should not overweigh common sense and political judgment.

Maui Democrats have carried out their plan of fusion with the Home Rulers in a way that retains little of Home Rule identity in the fusion. This leaves Beckley and Kaine free to go their way if it be true, as often alleged, that they had Republican tendencies. Naturally, the break-up of the Home Rule party must be accompanied by severe heart-burnings, but the Territory will be better off when the situation is simmered down to straight American party politics.

Judge Parker has a coat of arms, the discovery of which is possibly made with a view of catching the votes of Newport's silly aristocracy of wealth. The motto on the coat of arms is: "Non fluctu ne flatu movetur" which in ordinary English means: "Is moved neither by wind nor wave." This doubtless fits his character, but when the people encounter such stolidity some disrespectful citizens usually cry out "Get an axe" and the people vote for the other fellow who moves with out urging.

Doubtless it was the delay of Orloff's division that lost the day for Kuropatkin. The man who for sufficient or insufficient reason didn't happen to be just where circumstances afterwards prove he ought to have been usually has to stand the brunt of the defeat, just as the fellow who by lucky chance hits it right gets all the glory. It is worthy of remark that the detailed dispatches received in the last mail show that notwithstanding Orloff was late he finally saved the day by preventing the Japanese from cutting Kuropatkin's communications with Mukden. If fighters could only know what the enemy intended doing there would never be any defeats and no chasing around to find out how it all happened.

Numerous Improvement Associations have had a happy birth in this city, existed a while, and quietly passed into forgotten history. Whether the sections in which they were started were made up of people so self-sufficient that they could find no occasion for improvement is not known. Anyway, they disappeared. The Association organized by property-holders of the Kaimuki district starts off as if it had a purpose, a reason for existence, and interested men ready to do something—not forever asking the other fellow why he doesn't move. It frequently proves that pioneers who replace weeds with trees and plants take more interest in their work than those living in more populous sections, where the people are satisfied when they have a street, a sidewalk and a reasonably clear back-yard. At all events, as the urban population has apparently gone to sleep on the civic-improvement proposition, it is to be hoped that this suburban public enterprise will set a pace to not only attain its own object but furnish an example that will inspire the more pompous and self-satisfied to action. Hawaii's failure to secure even a corporal's guard of the Knight Templar tourists appears to be the result of Hawaii's failure to get into the game when the plans of the Coast visitors were first being formed. Successful tourist solicitation for the islands demands starting in at least as early as the other man. We are in competition with communities and men keen and capable in the art of promoting the attractions of their towns and country. When such men have tourists in tow, and their tours mapped out it is like assaulting Port Arthur to attempt to enthrone their captives with the glories of Hawaii and change the course of the pilgrim. Tourist-getting means rising early in the morning and keeping everlastingly at it all day and all night. Some months ago Mr. Patton of San Francisco gave an interview to the Bulletin in which he pointed out that the way for Hawaii to get Knights Templar was to catch them before they started and had plans definitely laid. And it might also be added that when assemblies of this character are on foot one of the best mediums for successful work is to obtain the active cooperation of local representatives.

DAMAGES AWARDED

suitable for traffic on the ocean, and that the studding of the house part was attached to the scow by means of nails about the size of ten penny nails. He was familiar with the water between Pearl Harbor and Honolulu. Although he says he put off the tow for two days in order to get the favorable conditions which prevailed when it started, yet the wind was so strong during the afternoon the tow was attempted, according to Mr. Dunn, a disinterested witness, that the yacht he was sailing in closehauled near the tow, carried her lee sail in the water, and there was "a heavy swell on, which would make a person not used to going to sea good and seasick."

The measure of damages in this case is the injury to the house-boat at the time of the accident. Mr. Hughes, who built her, says the scow cost seven hundred dollars and that he would not undertake to put the house-boat back in her old condition as originally constructed less the deterioration of the hull for less than two thousand dollars. Mr. Almy says the original cost was about twenty-two hundred and fifty dollars, and fitting her up for libelles' use cost nearly three hundred dollars more, making a total of twenty-five hundred and fifty dollars. Why the superstructure should now cost two thousand dollars when it originally cost but fifteen hundred and fifty, or eighteen hundred and fifty with the additions made, the scow having cost seven hundred dollars, was not explained. No evidence has been introduced as to deterioration of the house-boat and yet there must have been some. My estimate of the damages suffered by the libellant, is eighteen hundred and fifty dollars and a decree will be entered for that amount with costs.

WURZBURGER BEER.

Honolulu Brewing and Malting Co., with their usual enterprise, are putting a new bottled beer on the market. It is a little darker than "Primo" and especially fine for home use. Ladies will welcome it as it has all the strengthening properties of malt extracts and is far more palatable. It will also be a boon to German residents who like extra fine beer.

SUGAR MARKET STRONG

WILLET & GRAY REPORT ON GENERAL CONDITIONS

SMALL HOPE THAT EUROPEAN BEET CROP WILL RECOVER. F. O. LICHT'S AUGUST REPORT.

Willet & Gray's sugar circular for September 1 reports on the sugar situation as follows:

RAWS.—The week under review marks the close of an eventful month in the sugar trade. The month of August opened with quotations for Centrifu-gals on the basis of 4c., followed by great activity and a steady advance until the price of 4-16c. was reached, showing a gain for sellers of 5-16c. per pound.

This week also closes the first campaign year, since the European sugar bounties were abolished. The opening and closing quotations this campaign were respectively 8s. 5 1/2d. and 10s. 9 3/4d. f. o. b. Hamburg, for beet sugars, and 3 1/2c. and 4 1/2c. at New York for cane Centrifu-gals. The rise in prices has proven of special benefit to the cane sugar industry which suffered greatly while the bounty laws were in force.

Locally, the market has been apathetic for a fortnight, after the heavy business done early in the month, but buyers are again showing more interest in offerings and have accepted Muscovados, nearby, at 3 1/2c. for 95 test, and Cuba Centrifu-gals, for shipment at 2 1/2-16c., c. and f., basis 95 test, equal to a shade more than 4 1/2-16c., landed, for 96 test. A cargo of Hollo sugars, in store, was also placed on private terms. Only a few nearby sugars are now unsold and held at higher prices. Offerings include beet for shipment at 11s. 3d., c. and f., parity of 4 1/2c., landed, for 96 test Centrifu-gals, and Java shipped early July at 12s., c. i. f., equal to 4 1/2-16c., landed, for 96 test; August shipment at 11s. 9d., c. i. f. (4 1/2c.), and September shipment at 11s. 6d., c. i. f. (4 1/3-16c.). Late today a sale is reported of one cargo of Java, sailed late August, at 11s. 5d., c. i. f.

Receipts for the week were nearly sufficient for requirements for millings, and indications point to full receipts next week. Very little sugar is now left in Cuba and refiners must depend for, some time, principally upon arrivals from Java, Hawaii and Europe to keep them supplied.

Requirements for the next two months will be large and prices should remain firm throughout that period, and in view of the strength of the general situation, a high level of prices should continue for a longer time, unless planters become over anxious to dispose of their new crops.

The crops of Louisiana and Cuba are in a very promising condition and will doubtless begin to be harvested early. Some offerings of new Louisiana sugars have been made at 4 1/2-16c. to 4 3/4c. for 96 test, November delivery at New York, without apparent result thus far. New crop Cuba sugars have not been offered this week.

European markets have shown increased strength, with a net gain of 2-1/2c. in reports concerning the beet crops. Mr. F. O. Licht has cabled us that there is no change in the unfavorable situation and our special cablegram from London today reads: "European beet crops suffering from continued drought. Experts consider there is but small prospect of the crops regaining what is lost," which confirms the views previously expressed by us.

Estimates by some authorities in Europe of the deficiency in the beet crop out-turn, as compared with last year, range from 200,000 to 500,000 tons, but Mr. F. O. Licht has not yet published any estimate of the total production. Enough is known of the crop damage, however, to justify the present prices, and even a higher level may be expected in order to restrict consumption within the bounds of the very limited supplies which will be available next year.

EUROPEAN BEET CROP.—Mr. F. O. Licht in his Monthly Report dated Magdeburg, August 20th, 1904, says: Germany.—The weather in the past mo. in consequence of the slight cloudiness, higher temperature, and the almost entire absence of precipitations worth mentioning, deviated in many respects from the appearance of normal years, the thermometer remained in the first third near respect-ively under the July average, so it surpassed on the middle and end of the month in an unusual manner and showed a temperature seldom to be found in middle Europe. Corresponding to the surplus of sunshine duration of nearly 80 hours, the temperature gives a surplus of the average of 1.8 degrees Celsius against our record for long years. If this fact is worthy of note it gains extraordinary importance in connection with the already mentioned fact—the almost entire absence of precipitations—after a great number of months had already passed by, in which a more or less visible want of moisture made itself felt. Also the current month was till now only a little more favorable; the weather was at times cloudy, the heat diminished and brought rain with it here and there, but in nearly all parts of Germany dryness prevailed. Directly connected with this, we find that the depth of the water in the river beds was not increased, therefore the great part of the inland navigation was obliged to remain inactive.

Regarding the prospects for this year's beet harvest, it must be special-ly noted that the crop depends entirely on the course of the next six or eight weeks, and that it is foolish to antic- ipate the future harvest, owing to the present condition of the fields. We can assert with some security that those beets planted in light soil, with permeable sub-soil or which are raised in unsheltered situations, are back- ward in developing the roots, and have suffered much leaf damage that there is little probability that they will produce a normal harvest in field pro- duction. Beets planted at the right time in heavy soil, on the contrary, show a not inconsiderable backwardness at the present time, especially in the weigh of the leaves, as in consequence of the dryness their development makes slow progress, notwithstanding it is possible that, provided they re- ceive a sufficient soaking rain in the next two or three weeks, they will re- cover much again and will bring in a satisfactory harvest if the state of the weather is also, in other respects, fa- vorable. Therefore, under the present circumstances, the possibility of a smaller harvest in Germany, as in dif- ferent other countries cultivating beets, is not at all improbable, we must seriously note that an important altera- tion can be brought about by a change in the weather as has been the case in former years.

In Austria-Hungary further clear dry weather, besides slight precipitations prevailed to the regret of the farmers. Different parts of Bohemia and Mora- via complain very much in conse- quence of the perpetually increasing backwardness; also those beet fields, which on account of the timely sowing and of favorable ground condition al- lowed a well-founded prospect of a middle harvest. Till now only there where in the soil is deeper and moist- er and the beet with its roots can pen- etrate deeper was the condition to be called a satisfactory one, while in the later sown fields with a sandy sub-soil, even by favorable weather, a not in- considerable deficiency is to be ex- pected. After the figures published on the 16th of August in the "Weekly Journal of the Central Union" the mean weight of the beets is 177 gr. against 252 and 219 gr., that of the leaves 127 gr., against 328 and 346 gr., and the contents of sugar 17.9% against 14.3 and 13.2 in the two pre- ceding years.

From France is reported that show- ers fell in some places and influenced the beets there favorably, while a num- ber of other districts had dry, during the day warm and in the night cool weather, therefore, generally, precipi- tations were extremely wished for as the state of the beets are not the same everywhere and partly behind that of last year. According to the present average, however, it is to be believed in general that provided the weather is favorable the produce will exceed that of last year in a slight degree.

After the tests taken in the labora- tory of the French syndicate the state of the beet on the 12th August was: Weight of the beets, 215 gr., against 197 and 205 gr.; weight of leaves, 295 gr., against 535 and 466 gr.; contents of sugar in the beet was 13.3% against 11.6 and 11.5 in the past two years.

In Belgium and Holland things are similar, but somewhat better than in France at the present time, as the beets here have in a less measure been influenced by the scarcity of rain, so that a satisfactory harvest may be ex- pected.

Beet testing, which is executed by the "International Statistic Associa- tion" in Belgium, gave out on the 11th August the following: Root weight, 231 gr., against 219 gr.; weight of the leaves, 300 gr., against 257 gr.; content of sugar in the beet, 10.9% against 13.50% in the last week.

ticket with 29 votes, with White 25 and Coke 24. But Mr. White is a man who only looks for his personal interest, and lets his comrades get in the best way they know how. Kaine, realizing that his personal and bosom friends—as he thought, but alas! it was otherwise,—had knifed him, with "Et tu Brute!" raging in his heart, he stood up in that convention and with- drew his name in favor of J. L. Coke. Mr. White did not realize what was coming, but he was forced to take it as running mate the very man he wished to avoid.

Differences are all over outwardly now, but in their secret conclaves both Democrats and Home Rulers are cursing at each other for trying to hog it all. What appears on the surface never really reveals the true inward feel- ings, the bitter animosity for each other, that these dubious parties have for each other. There is really no true love between them, but each feels the need of the other's help. Many of the prominent Home Rulers have openly declared that in case of fusion they would rather affiliate with the Republi- cans than Democrats, who are at heart bitterly opposed to any and all of the dark races, for God in His infinite wisdom (in their estimation) never created such a beautiful world as this for the dark races to enjoy.

The result of the voting for candi- dates was as follows:

Senators. William White, 25 votes (elected); Jas. L. Coke, 24 votes (elected); S. E. Kaine, 24 votes (withdrew).

Representatives. Molokai — D. H. Kahauliello, 20 votes (elected); F. W. Beckley, 14 votes; J. N. Uahinu, 8 votes.

Lahaina — Geo. Kauli, 16 votes (elected); D. K. Kahauliello, 15 votes; C. Makekua, 11 votes.

Waialua — John Richardson and C. L. Kookoo, both unanimously elected. Makawao — Rev. J. Kekipi, 23 votes (elected); A. Forsyth, 10 votes; D. H. Aukai, 2 votes; E. H. Kekapala, 4 votes. Hana — G. W. P. Kaimakaole, 20 votes (elected); W. L. Hardy, 16 votes; Joshua Ahuli Jr., 6 votes.

The foregoing candidates were all declared nominees of the combined Home Rule and Democratic parties be- fore 6 o'clock Saturday evening. After 7 o'clock, when the Governor's party arrived in Waialua from Wahee un- der escort of Company I, in command of Capt. W. E. Bal, Market street was already crowded with Home Rulers listening to speeches from such lead- ers as Kalaokalani, J. Kekipi, J. M. Poopoo, Jonah Kumalae and Delegate C. Nottley. As the Governor's party in four hacks passed in front of Home Rule speakers, Kalaokalani was hold- ing forth, but he did not show the least courtesy,—not even to pause a while to allow the torchlight procession to pass. He kept on talking while the crowd yelled.

The Governor and Secretary Atkin- son made a few remarks at Walluku court house to a large audience both inside and outside the building. The Governor left for Kula on Sunday and he is at Ulupalakua district today. The Governor made a good impression with the natives of Wahee district, who gave him and his party an excellent luan in the school house. The Gov- ernor was presented with an address of welcome by R. J. K. Nawahine of Wahee. A quartet of Hawaiian musi- cians sang several selections in honor of the guest. After the singing, Gov- ernor Carter addressed the natives of Wahee in the church and his remarks were listened to most attentively. He gave them a straight personal talk about the aims of the Administration, and told them how and what to do in order to obtain the appropriations passed by the Legislature whenever there were any available funds for that purpose. Secretary Atkinson also gave some good advice to the natives, telling them that good, intelligent, concerted kicks are good, and that that was the only way of building up the place. He gave them illustrations of good roads from Puna to Kona, and he saw no reason why good roads from Honolulu to Wai- luku and from Hana to Waialua through Nahiku could not be built.

The mountain section of the Mt. of Kalawahine, containing an area of 222 1/2 acres.

This land extends from a short distance above the Lunallo Home to the peak of Tantalus and thence to the head of Manoa valley. It includes a portion of the upper section of Puaue Valley.

The Government Tantalus Road winds through the property for about three miles, making easy access available to all parts. It contains all of the choice, available locations for Mountain Homes.

There are never-falling springs at the upper end of the property which could be opened up and made to furnish an ample water supply. There are several houses and gardens on the property.

The land is heavily timbered and reaches an elevation at its highest point of over 2,000 feet. In the tropics high elevations bring health. For further information apply to

LESLIE LOSES LIBEL

Federal Judge S. B. Dole, at the opening of a special session of court this morning, rendered, among other decisions, his opinion in the case of George Leslie, formerly an employe of the Inter-Island Steam Navigation Co., who libelled the corporation for $50,000 damages for alleged breach of contract.

A decision was recently given in this case allowing exceptions to the original libel. The libellant has amended his libel and libellee has filed exceptions thereto on substantially the same ground as in the exceptions to the original libel. In the original libel the libellant alleged that he was a mariner and licensed as a skillful master of ocean steam vessels and relied upon his wages as a mariner for his support; that he entered into an agreement with the libellee to work on its steam vessels in the capacity of second mate at fifty dollars a month wages, and his board and lodging, which were worth thirty dollars a month; and the libellee agreed as part of the contract that his employment should be steady with chance of promotion; that he began work under such agreement August 5th, 1901, on the steam vessel known as the Keatou, as second mate (steward); that on September 6th, 1901, he was promoted by the libellee to the grade of first mate on the said steam vessel with the pay of ninety dollars a month and his board and lodging as above referred to; that he continued in said employment and in such capacity of first mate until the 15th day of March, 1904, when he was wrongfully discharged without reasonable cause, sustaining damages thereby to the amount of fifty thousand dollars. The exceptions were allowed on the ground that the libel showed the agreement to be an ordinary contract for hiring and contained no stipulation fixing any definite period for the termination of the engagement, the rule being that in such cases the contract may be terminated at any time at the election of either party.

The case of Savannah vs. Willett would be parallel to the case before the court if the libellant in the latter had been discharged upon his arrival at Honolulu before he had entered upon the duties of his new position. If that had taken place, I should feel that in some way he would be entitled to damages, for to induce a sailor holding an engagement in San Francisco worth seventy-five dollars a month with board and lodging, to cancel such engagement and come two thousand miles to Honolulu, on the promise of steady employment with chance of promotion with wages at fifty dollars a month at the start and board and lodging, and then to discharge him on his arrival at Honolulu, would unquestionably be treatmentavoring of rank injustice. But as the contract with the libellant was carried out in good faith for a period of over two years and a half, and the stipulation in such agreement that he should have steady employment with chance of promotion being faithfully carried out by promotion to the position of first mate with a raise of wages from fifty to ninety dollars a month and board and lodging as before, before he had been in the service of the libellee for one month, I feel, on the theory that he was entitled to employment under his engagement with the libellee for a reasonable length of time in view of the sacrifice that he made at the inception of the contract by cancelling his engagement in San Francisco and coming to Honolulu, which may be said to support a presumption of an agreement on the part of the employer for an engagement for such reasonable time as would be a substantial return for such sacrifice, that he had nothing to complain of and has suffered no damages that the libellee is liable for on account of his discharge.

In accordance, therefore, with these conclusions, the exceptions are allowed.

FULLERTON IS FINED

The case of James Fullerton, charged with assault and battery on Mrs. Mary Bertelman, came up in the Police Court this morning. The testimony for the prosecution given by Mrs. Bertelman, her little daughter, and Edith Spencer, was to the effect that Fullerton, with some Japanese, had entered the Bertelman house at Kalihi yesterday, while no one was at home and had started to move the furniture out on the street. Mrs. Bertelman arrived on the scene and, placing herself in front of a bedstead, which the Japanese were in the act of moving, she told the men to desist.

Fullerton took the stand, stating that he had told the Japanese to go ahead with the removal of the furniture, but had said nothing about that they should not mind if they hit Mrs. Bertelman. On the contrary, he had told them to be careful not to hit her. Fullerton had a mortgage on the place which he had advertised for sale, put up at auction and bought. He had given the Bertelmans notice to move. Mrs. Bertelman and Edith Spencer were recalled on the stand in rebuttal by Attorney Ashford, who conducted the case of the prosecution. They stated that Fullerton had not told the Japanese to be careful about Mrs. Bertelman but had told them to go ahead and not to mind if they hit her. Judge Lindsay stated in giving his decision that Fullerton should have known that if he removed the furniture he did so at his own risk. The court could see no doubt concerning the defendant's guilt, and fined him $10 and costs.

Motion To Dismiss

BANKRUPTCY Overruled By Dole

Motion made by creditors contesting adjudication to dismiss petition in involuntary bankruptcy in the matter of L. Hee was overruled by Judge Dole of the Federal Court this morning, who says in his decision:

This is a petition in involuntary bankruptcy from five business houses doing business in Honolulu, of which one is a partnership. They claim that respondent is indebted to them in the aggregate sum of $1,320.50 in excess of any securities held by them. An answer is filed by other creditors of the said L. Hee, in which they claim that the petitioning creditors are creditors of a certain partnership firm known as Wing Chong Tai, of which the partners are L. Hee, respondent, and Kwong Kui, alias Lau Kwong Kae, and not creditors of L. Hee in his individual capacity; that the said co-partnership has been in existence since January 18th, 1897, and has not been dissolved, but that its place of business was destroyed by the conflagration known as the Chinatown fire; that since that time the said L. Hee has been engaged in business as an individual in North Kohala, island of Hawaii, and that on the 17th day of August, 1902, being indebted to various persons on account of the said individual business in amounts which he was unable to pay in full, he made an assignment of all his individual property in said North Kohala for the benefit of all said creditors to Hoffschlaeger Company, Limited. Such petition also alleges that L. Hee has left the Territory and has no agent within the jurisdiction. The truth of this being shown, service by publican and by mail was made and the case thereafter came to trial.

I find that petitioners have made out a prima facie case as to holding provable claims against respondent to the extent of over $500. Their original accounts of sales to the respondent, which were a basis of their claims, were destroyed in the Chinatown fire of January, 1900. This was satisfactorily shown and secondary evidence, in the way of ledgers and copies or abstracts of the contents of such original accounts, was allowed to be introduced or to be referred to by witnesses, against the objections of counsel for the contesting creditors.

The objection that adjudication will not benefit the petitioners does not appeal to the court, for if these petitioners have a right of petition, it is for them to decide whether it is for their benefit or not. In regard to the point made as to a partnership being an entity, it seems to have no application to the issue raised by the motion to dismiss. The petition makes no reference to a partnership but asks that L. Hee be adjudged a bankrupt. The answer of the contesting creditors raises the question of a partnership, but whether there is a partnership or not, makes no difference in the matter of this motion as the question of the bankruptcy of L. Hee as an individual, is the sole object of these proceedings, and the creditors of the alleged partnership, as well as the creditors of L. Hee as an individual, may petition for adjudication as stated above.

In accordance with these views, and an act of bankruptcy by L. Hee being admitted by the answer, the motion to dismiss is overruled.

NEW GASOLINE ENGINE.

C. W. Macfarlane has just received from Buffalo one of the very latest Buffalo gasoline engines of seven and a half horse power. The engine has been placed on exhibition and is spoken of by those who know as the handsomest machines ever put on the market. NO MUKDEN BATTLE.

London, Sept. 8.—The trend of the view of the morning newspapers on the war in the Far East is that General Kurapatkin's arrival at Mukden does not solve the problem of his retreat. "Where will Kurapatkin stop?" is what is asked here.

The Daily Telegraph holds that the latest developments are merely the prelude to the "colossal conflict looming in our future." Most of the English critics look for a repetition of the Liaoyang battle at Tielhing or in that neighborhood. Scarcely any London newspaper believes that Kurapatkin has brought the bulk of his forces with him to Mukden. It is pointed out that neither side is likely to risk the desecration of the imperial tombs by a pitched battle at Mukden, the cradle of the Manchu dynasty and the Mecca of all good Manchus. It is thought, will likely be respected from motives of policy by both the belligerents, though a comparatively pacific occupation of it by the Japanese is forecasted to occur within a few days.

The Standard voices the very prevalent idea, namely, that the continued Japanese silence bodes ill for the Russians.

The Morning Post, though confessedly unable to sum up the situation owing to the absence of Japanese official reports, thinks that General Kurapatkin may have crossed the Hun river to the east of Mukden. Other critics prophesy that the Japanese will occupy Mukden or Tielhing as a winter base.

The Daily Telegraph's Seoul correspondent says there is an unconfirmed report that the Japanese have landed several fresh divisions of troops in the vicinity of Possiet Bay, cutting off the retreat of the Russians in Northeastern Korea.

"Arabic" is valuable for many reasons. It is cheap, it lasts a lifetime, it stops leaks, only a thin coating of it is needed, etc.; but, greater than all these, is the fact that it cools iron roofs fully 15 degrees.

SHORT STORY FOR EVENING HOURS

VENGEANCE OF FOON LUK

The curtain of the Varieties went up and the orchestra after the overture began a rondo. The seats were filled with an anxious and expectant audience. Foon Luk, the child wonder, was to appear. Wonderful things had been written about the feats of this mite of Chinese femininity. The playbills had pictured her in full Oriental costume, gay with colors, and golden with the dragons on the silk. She was a success before she appeared.

Before a bar of the music had been played she came out from the wings, with short, quick steps toward the footlights. The applause of the audience came to her as she knelt down on the mat before beginning. Resting on her knees and hands she bent forward until her head touched the floor.

"She is praying," said somebody in the audience to his neighbor, "that is the way those heathens pray."

She was praying, but not one of those whose eyes looked at her could have guessed what her prayer was. Amid a dead silence she rose and stood up, while a big, strong-looking Celestial brought chairs and other paraphernalia upon the stage.

"Hurry," he said to her, roughly, in Chinese. "They will laugh at you if you wait as though you were afraid. Hurry, or you will know what the black stick means when you have finished."

She began tremblingly. As fast as the man bulled the chairs one on top of the other, her body, serpent-like, glided in and out of the rungs, through the open backs, and over the seats. It seemed as though she had the power to balance those beneath her. When she had reached a point so high that the man could no longer reach he tossed the chairs up to her. "This was continued until ten chairs stood, one above the other, in the center of the stage. All the while he kept talking to her in their native tongue.

"Beware," he said, "I will prod you like a pig; make but one error and you will never see tomorrow; smile, or you will fall; let a laugh come to your lips, you cat."

To all of which the child replied not one word. She kept her knees from trembling and performed her feats well. When the tenth chair was in position, the man handed her up a lacquer globe. She balanced the globe on the back of the highest chair, then crawling up until she stood on it, she walked it slowly, as it rolled from one end of the chair to the other. Not a sound was heard in the theater; even the music stopped until she was safe back on the chair seat again. Then the applause burst out, and for the first time a genuine smile came to her lips, and she bowed, half bashfully—as any child would—in the direction of the misty rows of faces beyond the footlights.

Gliding in and out of the chairs as they were taken down, she reached the stage as she had left it. Then came the man's turn. He faced the audience and bowed obsequiously; then, stripping off his outer blouse, he threw himself upon a padded table and beckoned the child to him. She came, and he picked her up and, raising her upon his upturned feet, balanced her a moment, and then sent her through the air in a somersault and caught her as she descended.

"Al-ya!" she cried; and the audience applauded again.

"What is it now?" he asked her. "It pains my back."

"The black stick will pain you more than that," he answered, as with a swift, deft jerk he whirled her round again. The act ended.

Hand in hand, they bowed themselves off the stage amid applause, but were called back to bow again, once, twice, three times.

This was the debut of Foon Luk after two years of hard work under a vicious owner. She was a slave who had never known freedom. Her parents had sold her for fifteen dollars to Chin Foo, who had taken advantage of her supple limbs and lithe body to make her a paying investment. He had succeeded; and, as he believed, was on the verge of a fortune. For two years he had trained her and beaten her with a maula cane which he had been pleased to call the black stick. It was an instrument of torture in her eyes, and even now the mention of it made her tremble.

When she prayed to the god set up in the rooms of Chin Foo she did not pray for health or happiness or fortune. She prayed that she might die, and at night, as she lay in her bunk, her lips formed prayers to other gods, unknown to her, for a release. She had known no pleasures in her eleven years of life, and she looked forward to nothing but the work in the theater, which hurt her back. Her "al-ya's" of pain were naturally mistaken by the audience. The people applauded them.

Out of the theater they went to the home of Chin Foo, down dark streets and across lighted avenues. Not one word was spoken until they were safe in their rooms, which looked sorrowful in their dimness. Then he turned on her, half fiercely:

"I will kill you if you ever cry out again with your 'al-ya.' You have cost me enough; you must now begin to earn."

"It was your heel in my back that hurt," she began.

"You should have no hurts. Did I cry out like a woman when I appeared before the emperor, the Son of Heaven, and the clumsy knife thrower cast a blade which cut my ear?" He held his hand up to the side of his head, as if the thought of it pained him still. "No, I smiled, as if it put new strength in my limbs. Go to bed."

And she crept away to sleep, while the Chinaman went out among his friends to tell of his success. In her narrow bunk she prayed, but her prayer for release had in it a mixture of revenge, for she begged Kung-I, the god of justice, to take her master, that he might never come back.

Then suddenly, as if some heathen god had looked kindly upon her, a thought came to her which made her start, raise herself up on one elbow and peer about in the room. She scarcely dared think of it, yet she could not put it out of her mind. At last she fell asleep and dreamed strange things.

"It is done!" she called out once. Then she awoke and shivered.

Whatever her thoughts had been, little Foon Luk changed when she awoke the next day and rehearsed, as well as the space of the room would allow, the most difficult part of her work.

"What has come over you?" asked Chin Foo once, when he found her looking at him with a calm and steady eye.

"Nothing," she answered, evasively, "but today I would like to go to the temple."

"And spill good wine upon the floor for a lover, I suppose?" He was in a good humor.

"No, I want no lovers." He dressed her up like a boy and took her to the Temple of the Chung Wook Gung San. She prayed before the god of justice, and she cast the prayer sticks, and the omens were good. She departed with a light heart.

That day she went home, and after Chin Foo had gone out she took his yen hoe off the opium tray and tried to throw it so the point would stick in the door. It was a long while before she succeeded, but when at last the slender point sunk deep in the wood, she was satisfied. Every day when he went out she practiced with it, until at last she became so expert that out of every ten times she threw it seven times would it stick in the door.

At last, one unlucky day, the long wire needle broke. It did not take Chin Foo long to discover it.

"Have you done this?" he asked, holding up the pieces.

"Yes," she answered. "The more tricks the more money. I was trying a new one."

"What was it?" he demanded, forgetting in his curiosity to be angry. When she told him, he was so pleased that he promised to get a set of throwing knives and teach her all he knew. They had been doing well at the theaters, and he did not beat her so much as he had before he began to get rich. A new trick meant more money. He bought the knives, and together they practiced until at last he said:

"You throw better than the hi-tze who appeared before the Emperor." Her aim was marvellously straight, and her arm was wonderfully strong. If its strength was judged by the depth the steel blades sank into the wood. He took to praising her, for he was soon to double her work. A chance came for them to go with a circus, and now the knife-throwing was perfect, they would do two acts. Then he would receive a much larger salary. Ah, the sun of prosperity was shining for him, and he would soon be a rich man—if he would only live long enough.

He signed a contract with the circus manager. It was settled they were to start through the country in a week. He came home and told the child. She looked startled.

"You do not want to go?" he asked.

"Yes, yes, I want to go! But—see, I have no more good clothes. I must make some clothes."

He was in a liberal mood. "I will buy you some," he said.

She wanted money before she went. She had tried for it and failed. She looked about the room in despair. Upon her wrist was a bracelet. Ah, that would do. She dressed herself in the boy's suit she wore when going about the quarter, and taking one of the throwing knives locked the door behind her and slipped down the stairs into the street. She hurried around the corner to the shop of Su Quong, the locksmith, who had always been kind to her.

"Su Quong," she said, "make me a knife like this," and she pulled the broad-bladed weapon out from under her blouse. He took it, and examined it critically.

"Ah, little one, but that is no use. That would cut nothing." And he struck it against a piece of wood. "See it only bruises."

"Yes, but I want you to make a good one, with the same shape. Make it so keen that the edges will cut through a pillow filled with down. But it must run the same shape, and with a handle like this."

"And who are you going to kill, little Highbinder?" he asked.

"I am not a Highbinder," she answered, trembling. "I want the knife for my work at the theater, but I have no money. You can take my bracelet," and she held it toward him.

"I want no money, little one, and if you were a Highbinder, I would still be your friend. The gods are not always good to the most deserving."

She ran back to her rooms and was safe once more. She practiced throwing her knives at a revolving disk which Chin Foo had made, and which he said was the most difficult feat known to throwers. She was to do this in the circus.

The day before they were to leave she went to the locksmith's to get her knives. The old man had made a marvellously sharp weapon, exactly like the other but for its keenness and the fact that it had a finer point. He handed them to her.

"I have asked the gods to bless them both," he said gravely. "When you need a friend, come to me. I knew your father." Then she went out. The sharp knife she hid secretly and carefully.

They were with the circus at last. "The Chinese Child Knife Thrower and Premier Contortionist," was a speedy favorite. In every town in which the circus appeared, the women insisted in calling on her in her dressing room. They made her presents and raved over her. They did not know what a woman she really was.

Chin Foo, successful beyond his dreams, took the opium, and cut down his act, so that Foon Luk did nearly all the work. The principal thing he did now was to hold the wooden ball suspended by a rope, and swing it gently, while she threw the knives at it. One, a carelessly thrown knife had struck him in the side, but as such knives as they were could not penetrate cloth, it fell to the sawdust, and he had scowled at her and called her an "eat."

He was careful about scolding her very much now, because a change had come over her. There was a peculiar light in her narrow eyes, and a firmness about her lips that set him to thinking.

One day the manager said to him: "Chin, that ball trick with the knives don't take as well as it used to. What's the matter with you standing up against a board, and letting her throw them around you?"

"See that?" asked Chin, putting one hand up to his injured ear; "big knife thrower in Chinese, he throw before the Emp'or 'n hit ear. No good."

But the manager insisted, and the end of it was that the next week the Chinese Child Wonder was throwing knives around Chin Foo's head and body and coming so close to him that he could feel the wind they raised. He told her she threw them too hard, and because she did not answer him he struck her. She cried out in pain, and a woman rider who heard her told Chin Foo if he did not keep his hands off the child she would get a couple of canvas men to give him a thrashing.

The circus struck a new town on Sunday, and Chin Foo, more than ever a slave to opium, spent the day with his beloved pipe. He kept it at Monday, and when he dressed to appear in the knife-throwing act his eyes were half closed, and he was drowsy with the drug. He leaned with his back against the board, and the applause which greeted Foon Luk seemed to come a great distance. He shut his eyes, because the bright lights made his head whirl unpleasantly.

"Thur!" That was the first knife. He felt it go by his ear. "Thud, thud, thud!" they came and sank deep in the board. The audience applauded wildly. There were four more knives.

The next one struck under his arm pit. "That's a great throw," yelled a man in a seat on the edge of the ring. Before he had finished another knife was hurrying through the air. Those who were looking saw it strike the blouse of the Chinaman on the left side; they saw his arms reach up spasmodically. Then he sank down in the sawdust. Like one dazed, the girl stood with two knives still in her hand, while the circus men rushed over to the wounded man. As they carried him out of the ring on a litter she fainted. When she came to, the bareback rider was fanning her, and women were standing around.

"Chin Foo hurt?" she managed to ask.

"Yes," said one of the women, "he's hurt very bad."

"Chin Foo dead?" she asked again.

"Yes," she was answered. Then she closed her eyes peacefully and fell asleep.

The rural coroner and his jury decided finally that it was an accidental death. The knife which killed the Chinaman was the same as the rest, and there was nothing to show any murderous intent on the part of the child, who was released.

In the trunk of the bareback rider was a knife, the edges of which were like razors. Long afterward, when Foon Luk had gone, the rider showed it, blood stained as it was, to Mrs. Mirabella, the trapeze artist.

"That's what killed that Chinaman," she said. "It would go through boiler iron—that knife would. I helped to carry him from the ring, and I saw it, and swapped it for one of the others. I didn't want to see the little girl convicted."—William Buckley in New York Sun.

Books, Bookish People and Things

We get no good by being ungenerous even to a book.
E. B. Browning.

"Life Beyond Death." By Miss J. Savage, D. D. Cloth, 5 1/2 x 8 1/2 in. 342pp. American Unitarian Association, Boston; $1.50.

Those who agree as well as those who do not agree with the views advanced by Dr. Savage will not fail to appreciate his sincerity and absolute fairness. What he has had to say to his Boston and New York congregations these many years must have been instructive as well as interesting, and what he has to say in this book is interesting, entertaining and suggestive if not actually educational. Some may call the author a spiritualist and so have done with him at once.

Those more tolerant of other's opinions and less prejudiced in their own, will call Dr. Savage what he really is, a Unitarian minister deeply interested in psychical research. That is all. He has gone a little farther than some of us, perhaps, because he has studied more closely and been more patient with pseudo-spiritualism which he understands as a psychological tangent.

The study of electricity is not disturbed by a rather general sale of "electric" rings and belts.

Dr. Savage thinks that we have every reason to believe literally that "we shall know as we are known and see as we are seen" in the life beyond; not only this but that we may feel that our dear ones gone before attend us and in crises warn us of impending danger. At least those of us who live the higher life.

This is certainly more reasonable than to suppose that God will partially bless John Smith while he turns a deaf ear to Smith's neighbor Brown. However, nothing can be scientifically demonstrated either way, though the discussion shows an admirable spirit in this age of materialism and unfaith; remnants of a simple trust that is better than scholarship or riches.

In Dr. Savage's case the secret of the interest in this subject may be found in his dedication to his son:

"My Dear Phil:—I dreamed the other night, when my time comes to go, I shall look for your face as the first to break through the mist, as I cross the bar—the same sorrow-sown impulse of faith which others have felt.

Eugene Field writes to one son after the death of another: "Melvin knows all the great mystery now. He sees us and loves us just as of old; perhaps unseen he will join you in your play. Who knows but that God will appoint him to be your guardian angel?"

Whittier said:

"Oh, sometimes comes to soul and sense
A feeling which is evidence
That very near about us lies
The realm of spirit mysteries."

In a recent review of "The Woman with the Fan," by Robert Hichens, and "The Rat Trap," by Dolf Wylarde, Mr. Cooper, literary editor of the New York Globe, says of the two heroines: "Viola Hohue is a woman in whom the finer elements of character lie dormant. She is married to a man who apparently satisfies her ideal of happiness. He is a big, athletic, primitive sort of man, a 'slave to every impulse born of passing physical sensations.' She knows that of poetry, music and all the finer things of life he has not and never will have the slightest comprehension."

"Leetie Lewin . . . a woman of fine instincts, culture and intellect, who is wasted upon a husband of just the average sort, with a mind that never rises above horses and cricket and tennis."

These books are very light literature indeed. There is a good deal of sentiment wasted on the women whose husbands, no doubt, were as good as they, since their choice was to marry them. An old saying is that water seeks its level, and, with few exceptions, girls accept the men they are qualified to serve.

Neith Boyce, author of "The Polly of Others" and "The Forerunner," (Fox, Duffell & Co., New York), has had something to say about herself in recent interviews. Mrs. Haggood was the victim at one time of a little experience in New York Journalism.

"My newspaper experience was brief," she says, "lasting less than a year in all—and though very interesting to myself at the time presents no features of public interest. It was not a brilliant success, in fact. The old Commercial Advertiser, under a new and unconventional city editor, used to print my little stories of the city, sometimes definitely as fiction, sometimes less ingenuously as news. A typical news-story of mine in those days was a pen-picture of Brooklyn Bridge in a blizzard. This afforded me some Whistlerian effects of language and a severe case of bronchitis."

But the unusual thing about the paper was the group of men connected with it who have since worked out into larger literary fields. Lincoln Stephens, the author of "The Shame of the Cities," was then city editor. Norman Haggood was dramatic editor. Abraham Cahoon, the novelist, was one of the general staff, which included also Hutchins Haggood, Carl Hovey and Edwin Lefevre. A certain New York publisher was "copy editor" at the outbreak of the war in Cuba, when he went South as correspondent for the paper, and for a short time I edited "copy" in his place. Among other things I had to read his letters—a laborious task, for he wrote a perfectly illegible hand. Each installment of war-correspondence, in fact, caused an outbreak of hostilities in the composing room, and his proof used to come down full of blanks and looking like a regiment after a charge in face of the enemy. Then I would work late into the evening hours, puzzling out and fitting in the missing words, and occasionally consulting the foreman of the composing room—a gentleman who always wore a leather apron and a look of obstinate patience, and who referred to me sardonically as "the lady copy-reader."

"At that time I was living on Governor's Island. In the same house, with the wife of one of the officers sacrificed in the war, were Marie Manning, who has since written two successful novels, and Elizabeth Jordan, now editor of Harper's Bazaar. Miss Manning was then on the Journal, and Miss Jordan on the World, and they both used to glory in the successful violence of their newspapers, and referred to the gentle old Commercial as "Grandmother." The war and my newspaper career ended together."

BRIGHT'S DISEASE AND DIABETES NEWS.

San Francisco, Sept. 8, 1904. Dear Sirs:—The discovery in this city of a new diuretic is saving thousands of lives. It is hard for people to believe who are not eye witnesses. You as a brother druggist will know that up to this time chronic Bright's Disease and Diabetes have been necessarily fatal. It is no longer. And I not only know this by being on the ground but I was also one of the patients. I had both Bright's Disease and Diabetes and looked upon death as inevitable. I was so prejudiced I wouldn't buy the new treatment. I couldn't believe it. So they gave it to me to prove it. I not only recovered but have since given it to somewhere near fifty patients and know of only three or four failures. I am a pioneer druggist of this city: have been doing business on my own premises for forty-eight years, and I now declare to you on the honor of a brother pharmacist the absolute curability of these dread diseases in about nine-tenths of all cases. I understand the business men who are placing it before the world have appointed you to represent them in your city, and I beg to tell you that there are lives to be saved and friends to be made. Yours sincerely, CARL D. ZEILE.

We sent for the Fulton Compounds to which the above refers and now have them in stock. They are the first cures the world has ever seen for chronic Bright's Disease and Diabetes. Free pamphlet.

ATTITUDE OF CHINESE IN FIGHTING ZONE OF MANCHURIAN WARFARE

ARE UTTERLY INDIFFERENT AND KNOW PRACTICALLY NOTHING OF CAUSE OF WAR. CURIOSITIES.

Mukden, May 25.—An important and much discussed factor in this war is the attitude of the native population in the theater of operations. It is generally recognized that, to a certain extent, the Chinese hold the balance of power should they take it into their minds to interfere in the game. Although not formidable from a military standpoint, their passive potency is enormous, and a force to be reckoned with.

What, then, is the real situation? Do the Chinese threaten the security of the Russian position, as many critics contend, or do they strengthen it? These are questions of moment, and an answer may be found in an exposition of conditions as they appear to an unprejudiced observer on the ground.

Certain essential characteristics of the Chinese should be considered in this connection. So far as I have been able to judge, a great majority are utterly indifferent in their feelings toward the belligerents, who are turning their country into a battleground. They appear, where they think about the matter at all, to regard it rather from the point of view of unconcerned onlookers.

It is almost impossible for Westerners to appreciate the cardinal principle in Chinese philosophy—"nothing matters." The Chinaman's chief desire is to be permitted to go his way in peace. Naturally, if two nations undertake a war in his backyard it puts him to some inconvenience, but he does not worry much about it. The inhabitants of Manchuria, particularly those accustomed to disturbed conditions and the alarms of war, they have never known anything else. For hundreds of years the country has been in almost continual turmoil. If not war, then insurrection, and if neither then the chinchus, who are perennial. Manchuria is Calm.

So today, with one of the greatest wars of modern times going on within its borders, Manchuria is not materially disturbed. It should be remembered that in reality the active operations are confined, and in all probability will continue to be confined, to a comparatively small area. North of the Liaotung peninsula, and five miles away from the railroad, one would scarcely know a war is going on. Occasional patrols of Cossacks, who go about the country quietly, and under strict orders to refrain from acts liable to disturb or excite the people, furnish the only indications.

It may not be credited, but it is a positive fact that in the greater part of central and northern Manchuria a majority of the people hardly know about the war at all. They have probably heard about it, it is true, but they regard it as something in which they have practically no interest. Excursions made on horseback through the country clearly demonstrate this.

To illustrate, I will mention an incident which occurred recently. I was riding with a companion who is able to speak some Chinese, only a short distance from Mukden on a plain-traveled road, where such news as is transmitted through Chinese sources moves freely. We stopped to rest at a large village, and were immediately surrounded by a curious crowd. An elderly man of some importance voiced the curiosity of the people by asking our nationality. His inquiries took something like this shape: "Are you English?" "No." "French?" "No." "Russian?" doubtfully, for he had seen many Russians.

The old man seemed to have named all the foreign nationalities in his category. After looking at us for some time, he said: "Are you Japanese."

Had heard of Americans. Whereupon we came to his assistance, and explained that we were Americans, and he nodded as if he had heard of such people. But here were a lot of Chinese in Central Manchuria who, apparently, would not know Japanese if they saw them. And this is probably true of 90 per cent of the population north of the line of Japanese invasion in the war with China. We asked if they had any news about the war. Oh, yes, there was a war, they had heard.

But had they heard anything particular about the movements of the Japanese to the eastward. Oh, yes; it was quite true, there was a war. But what about the war? Oh, yes; undoubtedly there was a war. This information seemed to exhaust the war news of that village, which is typical of several days ride from the railroad the people have not even heard of the war. They till the fields and pursue their customary occupations in peace. It requires extraordinary penetration, or a vivid imagination to discern in these people any real appreciation of the situation, much less the germs of a discontent which might draw them into the conflict.

There are those who profess to find in North China and Manchuria plenty of evidence, among the native inhabitants, of intense hatred to the Russians, which only bides its time until a fitting opportunity offers to strike a blow to old Japan. I don't know where they find such evidence among the Chinese. There is plenty of it falling from the lips of foreigners in the clubs and meeting places of the treaty ports, but not from Chinese.

A Chinaman will rarely answer one, especially on political matters, except in the way he thinks one wants to be answered. He is too polite, or clever, to take an opposite view from his questioner, and his ability to detect one's sympathies amounts to something more than intuition. So in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred he will tell you what he thinks you want to hear. This refers to the intelligent Chinaman, who is the only one worth taking account of. On such matters the average Chinese has absolutely no opinion, lacking information to base an opinion on. Minds Are Not Made Up. And the intelligent Chinese in Manchuria has no decided sympathy in this war, because he has not yet been able to determine on which side his interests lie; which means, in this case, that he feels himself unable to pick the winner. For the Chinaman "stand in" with the side that comes out on top. A simple philosophy, but figures that it is to his interest to not without its advantages. To my mind, talk about the patriotism of the Chinese being involved in the issues of this war is nonsense. Not that a Chinaman is destitute of patriotic impulses. But he never allows politics to go to his head. And in Manchuria he has not the slightest intention of disrupting the issue of this conflict, whatever it may be.

At present writing the Russians are here. And the intelligent Chinese knows that they may remain here, some weeks ago there was talk of the possibility of a Japanese advance to Mukden. The rumor made the Chinese business men very uneasy, although they maintain, to an astonishing degree, their habitual outward calm. Had any latent hope for Japanese success existed among them, surely its outcropping would have been visible then. On the contrary, they were rendered very uneasy by the possibility.

And well they might be. For the war has brought prosperity to Manchuria, and Mukden, as its capital and chief commercial center, is distinctly conscious of the stimulus. A brief resume of conditions will demonstrate this. The war has caused the Russian Government to spend an enormous amount of money in the country. Tens of thousands of mules and horses, thousands of carts, thousands of sheep and beef cattle, grain and provisions of all kinds in great quantities have been purchased for military usage, and at prices from two to three times greater than ever before known in the country. And for all these things the Russians have paid immediately in money. A pony which in ordinary times would bring thirty rubles cannot be obtained now for less than one hundred, and a mule which formerly might have gone begging at one hundred now is held at twice that amount.

So Chinese horse and mule buyers have been scouring the country for good animals, for which they find a ready market in the large towns along the railroad, where the Russian purchasing details are established. And the money thus expended percolates throughout the entire country. Furthermore, the war has given employment to thousands of coolies. The average wage has advanced 50 per cent. In the last three months, and there is plenty of work for everybody. Private Expenses Heavy.

In addition to the huge amounts disbursed by the Russian Government for military purposes, the private expenditures incidental to the war are by no means inconsiderable. There is now on deposit in the Mukden branch of the Russo-Chinese Bank more than three million rubles credited to private accounts. Nearly all this money belongs to Russian officers and other persons whom the war has brought into Manchuria.

This money is being spent with great liberality, especially by the Russian officers, who are like all other soldiers in this respect. Most of the officers now arriving from Europe see the Far East for the first time, and they behave accordingly. When they can get a day or two, or even a few hours, away from their duties, they spend the time seeing the sights. They visit the shops and tea-houses and purchase most freely of all kinds of goods to be sent back home to wives, sweethearts and friends.

The "ricksha coolies" and Peking cart drivers were never so busy and prosperous in their lives. The fare between the station and the city has doubled within a month. Nearly every native saddler in the city is hard at work supplying saddles for the men the Russians are mounting upon Manchurian ponies. The freight carter have more hauling than they can do. In fact, without entering into further details, the prosperity is general, and some of the money being put in circulation reaches nearly everybody. Even the beggars are sharing in the reign of plenty, and the "living skeletons" branch of the profession is threatened with extinction.

Laborers Not Plentiful. The state of affairs at the port of Newchwang has prevented, by the spread of alarming reports through some of the news agencies, many thousands of coolies who make an annual migration northward to work the crops, from coming this year, and others usually who till the fields are employed upon military works incidental to the war. But there always exists in all countries a large reserve force of human energy which can be called forth in emergencies. It consists of people who, under ordinary circumstances, live in comparative idleness, or work but little. Among this class are men and women past a certain age and others of naturally idle inclination whom only a hope of extraordinary reward can induce to effort.—New York World Correspondence.

THREE YEARS' WAR. Paris, Sept. 6.—An official of the Japanese Legation today says he expected the battle deciding the future of Manchuria will occur at Harbin, as General Kuropatkin's flight had been too hurried to permit him to intrench at Mukden. Owing to the distance of Harbin from Mukden, about 325 miles, and the approach of winter, the battle, the official added, probably will not occur before spring. In the meantime if Russia desires peace she would be able to open negotiations, but the Japanese Government would never make the first proposition, as they are calculating that the war will last three years and are making preparations accordingly. The Temps quotes an "eminent Russian" which is understood to mean the Russian Embassy here, as follows: "Russia will never make the first proposition for peace. Furthermore, she will entertain no proposition for intervention, even if it comes from the Powers having the greatest sympathy for her and which she considers her friends. This is the unalterable determination of our Emperor and Government."

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS Oyama's Report On Liaoyang Fighting

Tokio, Sept. 6.—An extended report from Field Marshal Oyama, the Japanese commander in chief in the field, was received in Tokio today and made public tonight. It is largely devoted to a review of the fighting which took place between August 24th and September 4th.

The announcement that the Russians will retain possession of the Yentai collieries indicates a strong possibility of a battle there. Yentai is the only colliery in Northern Manchuria, and its possession is of vital importance to the Russians in connection with the operation of the railroad.

Field Marshal Oyama reports that a portion of the Russian troops hold Yinghsian, south of Yentai, and that General Kuroki's right is in close touch with the Russians. He announces also that the left and center Japanese armies, under the command respectively of Generals Oku and Nodzu, have halted on the left bank of the Taitse river, and that it is his intention to displace a portion of them to occupy the heights north of Munchang and along the railroad. General Kuropatkin burned all the railroad and other bridges over the Taitse river.

The report says that the exact number of Japanese losses since August 25th is not known at present, but that casualty lists are being compiled. The Field Marshal predicts that the losses will prove heavy. The report does not mention the number of guns taken, but it is known that sixteen guns were captured at Anping and Anshanghan, and earlier reports mentioned the capture and use against the railroad station at Liaoyang of certain ten-centimeter Canon guns.

Field Marshal Oyama says also that in spite of continuous attacks for ten days against an enemy occupying semi-permanent fortifications, and the heavy resultant sacrifice, that the spirit of devotion and determination of the Japanese troops is excellent. General Kuropatkin, according to the report, continued to receive reinforcements until August 13th, and his final strength consisted of at least twelve full divisions. The losses sustained by the Russians are not known to the Japanese field force.

General Kuroki encountered desperate opposition in the battle on the heights to the west of Helyingtal, where he fought continuously and fiercely for four days before he succeeded in dislodging the Russians. It is manifest that the stubbornness of the Russian defense at Helyingtal saved the Russian line of retreat and averted an overwhelming disaster.

It Will Improve Your Game

The Pneumatic Golf Ball is the only ball made that combines great liveliness off the wood and iron clubs with reliability in approaching and putting. Experts agree that, in adopting rubber-cored balls, distance was gained only at the cost of accuracy in the short game.

Horace Hutchinson, the English authority on golf, in a recently published article on the rubber-filled ball, says: "The truth is that you do not want a lively ball for approaching and putting; you do not want a ball that runs far off the pitch, nor one that is easily displaced by little roughnesses of the ground."

THAT'S WHY YOU WANT THE PNEUMATIC.

While as lively as the liveliest for the long game, it pitches dead on approach shots; does not hop and shy at slight unevenness of the putting greens; does not "fizzle" nor jump out of the cup. It "stays put".

The first time you try to put it you play short. That is because you have been playing a ball that is over-sensitive at the surface. It is this slowness in putting that makes the ball so deadly accurate.

You will see on a moment's reflection that it is easier to calculate and control a strong putting stroke than an over-delicate one. Once you recognize the advantage of this quality, a little practice puts you right.

Pneumatics are guaranteed not to cut. We have a lot of these balls, fresh from factory, which we are selling at 50c each, or $5.00 per doz. Try them.

Arthur Johnstone, whose name appears in the preceding list, will not be able to serve for the reason that he is already a Territorial trial juror in Judge Robinson's court.

Fred Wundenberg is an attorney at law and will therefore probably be excused.

Signal Corps Will WIG-WAG

Report Of Races

The Signal Corps of the National Guard of Hawaii have arranged with the Regatta Committee to assist in reporting the races Saturday. The Signal Corps will be under command of Lieut. T. P. Cummins. He will be assisted by Captain Thompson, Luther Evans, Tom Evans, A. M. Keoho and others.

A signal corps man will be stationed on the judges' boat and the results of each event will be "wigwagged" to both the Myrtle and Healan boat houses, where other signal men will translate the reports into every-day parlance.

The Signal Corps boys look upon this as an excellent opportunity for drill in their art and it certainly will be greatly appreciated by the spectators at the boat houses.

ROBBER FROM THE REEF TAKES WITNESS STAND Territory vs. Hosoi, a Japanese alleged to have received stolen goods, came on for trial before Judge Gear today. Deputy Attorney General M. F. Prosser prosecutes while Attorney J. W. Cathcart represents the accused.

A gang of organized boys is supposed to have kept defendant supplied with merchandise, selling material stolen from the store of one Pacheco at half rates.

Fijaro, now serving two years on "the reef" for larceny, took the stand and testified as to the manner in which he and his comrades helped themselves to Pacheco's goods and delivered them to Hosoi.

Witness stated that Hosoi had agreed to buy all that Fijaro could bring him.

Cathcart had occasion to object frequently to questions put by the prosecution, as leading.

Attorney for defense brought out some interesting facts on cross examination: Fijaro is 17 years of age; has been arrested four times for gambling and fighting; went to school here for three years but cannot read, write or figure, although he knows the result of putting two and two together; is a Portuguese; was born on Maui; has lived in Honolulu twelve years; used to assist an ice man and has worked for Hustace & Co.

Territory vs. Fukuda follows the present case. Fukuda is also charged with receiving stolen goods and the same gang of young robbers is supposed to have supplied him with the goods. Cathcart represents Fukuda.

Punahou Servant's Quarters Robbed

A couple of petty robberies of servants' quarters in the Punahou district have been reported to the police. Yesterday forenoon between 6 o'clock and noon the Japanese servant working for Mrs. Lewers had his room entered by an unknown thief. A silver watch and $1.50 in cash was taken.

Last night a thief entered the room of Mrs. C. A. Holstein's Japanese servant on Makiki street. The invader made a good haul, taking away a whole trunk with its contents of silk kimonas, etc., and a small sum of money. The matter is being investigated by the police.
