TERNISSA.
[Walter Savage Landor.]
Ternissa, you are dead!
I say not to the dead,
But to the happy ones who rest below;
For, surely, surely, where
Your voices and graces are,
Nothing of death can any feel or know.
Girls who delight to dwell
Where grows most asphalt
Gather to their calm breasts each word you speak;
The mild Persophone
Places you on their knees,
And your cool palm smoothes down stern
Pluto's cheek.

Oaths of All Nations.
[This Bita.]

The following summary of the forms of oath in use in foreign legislative assemblies is extracted from the reports received at the British foreign office in New York:

Havaria—I swear * * * So help me God and His holy gospel.
Denmark—I promise and swear * * * So help me God and His holy word.
Greece—I swear in the name of the holy and consubstantial and indivisible trinity.
Hesse Darmstadt—I swear * * * So help me God.
Saxe-Coburg and Baden—I swear. So help me God.
Holland—I swear. So help me God.
Portugal—I swear on the holy gospels.
Prussia—I swear by God, the Almighty and omnipotent * * * So help me God.
Saxony—I swear by Almighty God.
Servia—I swear by one God and with all that is good to lay most sacred and in this world dearest * * * So help me God in this and that other world.
Spain—After swearing the deputy on the gospel, the president says: "The may God repay you, but, if you fail, may he claim it from you."
Sweden and Norway—I (president or vice president only) swear before God and His holy gospel * * * I will be faithful to this oath as sure as I shall save my body and soul.
Switzerland—In the presence of Almighty God I swear * * * So help me God.
United States—I do solemnly swear * * * So help me God.
In Havaria, non-Christians omit the reference to the gospel. In Holland and the United States, affirmation is optional. In Prussia and in Switzerland, affirmation is permitted to those who object on religious grounds to the oath. In Austria, a promise is in every case substituted for an oath. In Belgium and Italy, the adjuration is used without any theistic reference, and in France and Roumania, the German reichstag and for deputies in Sweden and Norway, neither oath nor affirmation is demanded.

The Duty of Good Living.
[The Cook.]

"The average individual in this country lives better than the average individual elsewhere, says a New Yorker who 'wells well.' 'Take it in England, The well-to-do man is great on chops, but the poor man never has chops. They don't have meat at the prices the poor man can pay for they keep out American cattle in order to keep up the prices of English beef. For myself, I live generously,' he continued. 'I do not believe that a man can continue long under the strain of complicated business affairs and do good work unless he keep his physical system in good working order. I am shy of stimulants, but I believe in taking, and do take a plenty of the best food I can get. I have a regard for regularity, but do not believe a man should enslave himself even to a regularity of diet.' 'What do I eat? Well, pretty much anything that is good. I am a strong advocate of a mixed diet, and while I am as far as possible from being a vegetarian, I eat plenty of vegetables. Meat is as necessary to me as any other food, for although in the torrid zones a man may get along well without it, in this climate, at least, he needs meat. Yet a meat diet exclusively would be as bad as an exclusively vegetable diet. Fruits, too, are an important element of proper eating. The various acids of the different fruits are all valuable to the wonderful mechanism of the human frame. You may certainly put me down as a thorough believer in the wisdom of taking the best possible care of the body. Human life is worth comparatively little unless it is spent under the best attainable conditions."

How Bret Harte Lost $10,000.
[Cor. Philadelphia Times.]

When Bret Harte came east in the first flush of his California fame, and New York and Boston were bidding for his work, Chicago undertook to waylay him and secure the prize for herself. To this end a dozen rich and prominent Chicagoans arranged for an elaborate dinner, with Harte as the principal guest. The dinner, in truth, was given on his account, to induce him to cast his lot in the Garden City. As an insurer of their purpose they put under his plate an accepted check for $10,000.

The hour came, and the company, with one exception—the exception being the chief guest. The dinner was delayed, the dishes cooled and the gentlemen warmed with impatience and vexation. Still they thought that he would arrive at the last moment, or at least send some word of explanation. It was nearly 10 o'clock when they sat down, having despaired of his presence. To his day he has never offered any excuse for his staying away. But the reason was, I have been told, that Mrs. Harte had not been invited, at which she took grave offense, communicating her temper to her husband.

A Tender Link Re-called. "You would be astonished to see and hear queer people who sometimes come to our place," said the keeper of a very cheap Chatham street restaurant. "The other day a man came in during the afternoon and said: 'I was here in the morning, and I got four small sausages, a cup of coffee, two rolls of bread, a pat of butter, and two potatoes all for 10 cents.' I thought he had relished what we gave him, and come back to try it again, so I said: 'Certainly, sir, and we can let you have the same things for the same price every day in the year, Sundays not excepted.' 'Thank you very much,' replied the man; 'but that is not exactly what I want. I am, I think, the co-ee and ate all the bread and butter, and both the potatoes, and I finished three sausages, but the fourth sausage I could not tackle. I was satisfied, but now, do you know, I'm hungry again. I have a kind of hankering after that sausage, and I can imagine what was the matter with me that I could not eat it this morning; so I've just stepped it to see if the cook couldn't hunt it up and let me have another chance at it. It's paid for, and you know, and you won't lose anything.' That's the kind of customers we get, and we can't always oblige them."

EXPERIENCE WITH ALLIGATORS. When an Old Saw-Mill Man Lost His Temper—A Race For Life.

They were talking about alligators. A well-known watchmaker of Charlestown laid down his instruments, pushed his eye-glasses up on his forehead, and said: "Talk about gunning, I tell you it's lively sport shooting alligators. They're saucy critters, and dangerous ones, too. A number of years ago I was in Jacksonville, Fla., on board the schooner Carrie Walker, my brother, John McFarland, being captain of the craft. We were hauled up at Scott's saw-mill, loading with lumber. Old Scott as you used to call him, could swear the bark off a southern pine tree. There were two alligators under the mill, and we wanted to shoot them. Old Scott swore wouldn't; for, said he, 'they've been under my mill for several years, and they're my pets.' One morning a negro boy, whose father worked in the mill, was fishing from the wharf, when one of the alligators caught him by the leg and pulled him under the water. That was the last of the boy. Some one told Scott about it, but he wouldn't have the alligators hurt. The next day Scott's nephew, a young boy whom the old man dearly loved, was fishing from the same wharf, when he was caught by one of the alligators and devoured. When Scott heard of the fate of his nephew he was beside himself with rage. Rushing into the mill he shouted: 'Every man under the mill and go and kill them alligators under the mill. Not a stick of timber will be saved here till them cussed critters are dead.' They pay even money just the same as though the mill was running. 'Them cussed alligators have eat my boy!'

"Every man quit work, and armed with shotguns and pistols, began war on the alligators. On the third day the crocodiles were killed. On opening them only a few small pieces of cloth and several pieces of straw were found. The death of the boy was a hard blow to Scott, and he never could forget the sad affair. Alligators are very tricky. For instance a flock of geese will alight on an alligator some distance off, stick its nose out of water and look about him. The next time you see him his head is poked up among the geese. They can measure distance to a dot.

"I was on board a schooner on the Mississippi one time, when I noticed a work woman in a boat crossing the river. I also observed an alligator push his nose out of water. The man in the boat saw the crocodile too, for he began to increase the number of strokes of his oars. Again the alligator came to the surface. He was nearer the boat than when first seen. The man increased his speed. When the alligator showed his head again he had shortened the distance between himself and the boat. The man now exerted himself for all he was worth, for it was a race of life or death. Fortunately the alligator was solidly and coast, upon which the woman had been sitting, was lifted from the seat and with the crocodile disappeared beneath the surface of the water. Hat the man when half a minute later in reaching the shore the woman would have lost her life.

"Alligators when wounded in the water will take to land, and you have got to shoot them. I always fire into the mouth. Stand in front of the critters, for their tails are powerful, and with them they can fell an ox or a horse. The hides of these alligators are exceedingly tough.

Whaling Sh. p. in the Arctic. [St. Nicholas.] In the fall, just before it gets so cold that the ice forms, the ships huddle together, and each puts up a line of poles to shoot them. One at the stern, and these hold them from striking against the shore or one another until the ice forms around them and freezes them solidly. Then the whalers are taken up, and with lumber which they have brought from home, the whalers build a substantial house over the ship. Then they get to making out to sea, and the snow house over the wooden house, and so, with all this covering to protect them, they manage to keep comfortable with very little fuel, and with a few whalers in the company. Sometimes they put in double windows, the inside ones of glass, as usual, and the outside ones being made of slabs of ice, like the curious windows of the Arctic.

Scientific Hand Cleansing. [Medical Journal.] Everybody's hands, it appears, are always more or less dirty. In the Gazette Medica Italiana Dr. Forster says that after the hands are washed with water and brushings with soap and water and rinsings with carbolic acid and other disinfectants the hands remained so impure that upon touching the fingers to sterilized gauze the micro-organisms were rapidly developed. The doctor found, indeed, that on rinsing the hands with a solution of one to one thousand of corrosive sublimate they became "scientifically cleansed" for the time, but that in wiping them upon a towel not previously disinfected they return to their sad condition of uncleanness.

Curiosities in Indian Decorative Work. [Denver News.] It is thought that within five years Indian pottery will be in vogue all over this country, as much of it is highly decorative, and the demand is increasing for it in all the eastern cities, and at the great art exhibitions. Denver dealers are shipping it all the time. Easterners will have it at any price, and if they can not get it from one point they will persevere until they get it from another. This state of things accounts for the exorbitant prices which are charged for it; as far as the great cities are concerned, it is the rage of the moment, and will be paid for. Each tribe of New Mexican Indians has a style of pottery peculiar to itself, there being little similarity in the decorations or in the shapes. The Teague Indians work only in the mica clay, the articles they manufacture being quite plain, except in rare instances. The Santa Clara pottery is always black; the work of the Zunis is generally red; that of the Acomas is made mostly in basket shapes and always has handles. The Cochiti pottery runs in extremely large shapes, such as the extra-sized water-jars, which weigh several gallons.

The Apache ware is the finest made by any of the New Mexican tribes. It is made of willow, and the work is fine, and is considered the noblest. Water-pots, light baskets, which are in great demand, are made of this. The Apache is the only New Mexican tribe which does not make pottery.

The work of the Zunis is thought very handsome. Many flat, queerly shaped baskets are made by them, and used as vases for flowers. The elegies made by this tribe are all in designs of owls.

THE LATEST AMERICAN INVENTION. THE VICTORY OF ELECTRICITY.

Since Electricity has been applied for lighting purposes, all efforts of inventors have been directed to construct a lamp for general domestic use. The reason why this problem has till now not been solved, is that none of the inventors could rid themselves of the idea of gas lighting, and that all have adhered to the system of producing the electricity in some central place, or by large machinery, instead of first laying down the principle that a lamp which should ever become generally useful and popular, must be portable like an oil lamp, and contain the generator of electricity in itself, i. e., in the foot of the lamp.

The Norman Electric Light Company has at last succeeded in completely realizing this ideal of electric lighting, and thereby to make that the most important invention which has ever brought about a complete revolution in all branches of lighting.

Our Electric Lamp needs neither machinery, conductors, nor any expensive outfit, and is neither complicated or disagreeable in manipulation; all that is necessary is to refill it every four or five days with acid. The cost of lighting will be as cheap as gas (4 cents per hour), and it has before the latter the immense advantage of neither producing heat, smoke nor carbonic acid, owing to which the air is not impured, and remains at the same degree of temperature. It is further, absolutely inodorous, and does not need to be kindled by match or otherwise, but simply by turning the key, thus avoiding all danger of fire, explosion or suffocation, as in the case of gas, if the key is left open; and it must be conceded that this advantage alone is invaluable. It is further preferable to any known kind of lighting for the following reasons:

1. That it neither requires the disagreeable fixing of the wick, or the cleaning of the cylinder, as in the case of oil lamps. 2. That the light produced is a soft and most steady one; that it never flickers, and the flame, though being equal in power of lighting to gas, can be regulated to any degree. 3. That every danger of fire is absolutely excluded, as the light will be extinguished immediately, if by any accident the glass surrounding the burner should be broken. 4. That it will burn, even in the strongest wind, completely unaffected, thus being invaluable for illuminations, lighting of gardens, corridors, etc.

This lamp is constructed for the present in three different sizes: A. small size. Height of complete lamp, 14 inches; weight, about 5 pounds; for lighting rooms, cellars, stages, and powder magazines (or similar places where explosion is kept), coaches, illuminations, gardens, mines or any other industrial purpose. Price, $1. — Per lamp delivered free to any part of the world. B. medium size. Serves all domestic purposes for lighting rooms, houses, etc. This lamp is elegantly decorated, and has removable white ground glass globe. Price per lamp (inclusive of bronze foot and globe, richly and elegantly constructed), 2. — delivered free to any part of the world. C. — delivered free to any part of the world. Foot of lamp in either bronze, Japanese, faience or silver oxide.

Agents, salesmen on commission, and consignees for our lamps wanted every where. No special knowledge or capital required. A fortune to be made by active persons.

The bids will be for each lamp per month, with the understanding that the number may be changed, as circumstances may require, at the pleasure of the Marshal.

Supreme Court.

AT CHAMBERS—BEFORE M'CALLY, J.

FRIDAY, February 19th.

In the estate of Simon K. Kaas, deceased. The Court heard the motion filed by A. Rosa on behalf of the Government as to its claim of $162. After explanations made by Mr. Dole, which were satisfactory to Mr. Rosa, the motion was withdrawn and the accounts of the administrators of said estate approved. The estate is shown to be insolvent, and after paying the several mortgages and other secured debts, amounting to $10,296.99, the administrators applied the balance, which was $774.41, to the payment of unsecured debts at the rate of 17 6-10 per cent, total of unsecured claims being $4,401.83. The administrators, Messrs. S. B. Dole and S. M. Damon, were ordered discharged.

BEFORE CHIEF JUSTICE JUDD.

In re. Aho et als. vs. Lee Kan et als., in equity. The Court hears argument of counsel upon motion of the receiver, V. V. Ashford, asking that the solvent partners of Kwong Man Yuen Co., an insolvent firm, be required to contribute toward paying off said firm's liabilities, which are reported by the Master to be $3,254.83. The solvent partners are Aho, owning two shares; Lo San, one share; and Ahechoe, one share. These partners are asked to pay the firm's debts according to their respective shares. The Court deferred signing decree until the pleadings were thoroughly looked into. Ashford & Ashford for Receiver, Paul Neumann for Ahechoe.

Mrs. Emma Beckley vs. C. Afong, ejectment. The Court hears motion filed by defendant asking that plaintiff show cause why she is not in default for failure to answer demurrer. The Court, after argument of counsel, ordered plaintiff defaulted and allowed her to amend complaint in five days, which virtually is an order sustaining demurrer for insufficiency of the plaintiff's bill. Jona. Austin and A. C. Smith for the motion, Paul Neumann for plaintiff, in default.

M. JUSTICE FRESTON PRESIDING.

His Honor heard application of Pua-alki (w) of Kaneohe, Oahu, praying for the appointment of a guardian over the person and property of Ikaia Pahee, a minor. The Court appointed Josiah Meeman as such guardian, under bond of $250. The property of said minor is a one-half interest in a piece of land situate in Hamakua, island of Hawaii, being Royal Patent 939, under lease to Miss Lucy Peabody for $150 per annum. Cecil Brown for petitioner.

The following cases were heard and submitted in banco upon exceptions taken at the December term of the Second Circuit Court, held in Lahaina:

The King vs. Aho, alias Young Chin Hop, obstructing Customs officer from the discharge of his duty. Paul Neumann for the Crown; Ashford & Ashford for defendant.

The King vs. Ah Lee and Ah Fu, lottery. P. Neumann for the Crown; Ashford & Ashford for defendant.

From last term of Supreme Court, on exceptions:

H. Rheimschneider, administrator of the estate of Wm. Harbottle, vs. Mrs. Keoloha Kaleahao and husband, action of assumpsit. Ashford & Ashford for plaintiff; S. B. Dole for defendants, appellants.

The orchestra and choir will lead the congregation in the singing of popular hymns. Mr. Cruzan's sermon will have for its theme, "The Self-Start of Sin." Morning service at 11 o'clock; theme of sermon, "The Par Value of Manhood." A general invitation and all made welcome. Seats free in the evening and no collection.

The second congregation will hold service, more especially for children, at 11:15 a. m., when the Rev. George Wallace will deliver an appropriate address. Sunday School at 10 a. m., in the Punahou Preparatory School. Evening prayer, with sermon, at 7:30 p. m.

The Merry-makers.

BROTHER AND SISTER.

I cannot choose but think upon the time When our two lives grew like two buds that kiss.

At slightest thrill from the bee's swinging chime, Because the one so near the other is.

He was the elder, and a little man Of forty inches, bound to show no dread; And I the girl that puppy-like ran, Now lagged behind my brother's larger tread.

I held him wise, and when he talked to me Of snakes and birds, and which God loved the best.

I thought his knowledge marked the boundary Where men grew blind, though angels knew the rest.

—George Eliot.

THE SHIP OF THE DESERT.

The Camel's Qualifications for Usefulness as a Means of Transportation.

The horse and ox, with all their strength and their usefulness, under favorable conditions, would shortly leave their bones bleaching on arid wastes if put in the camel's place, and man, his dependent, would die also, were never sepulture is raised to mortal remembrance. But here comes nature's volunteer, and says to those who do business on great sands, "Send me." Let us examine his qualifications.

First, his feet. They are spreading pads divided into wide toes, encased in the skin as in a stocking. This operates on the principle of snowshoes, preventing the animal from sinking in the yielding sand. Callosities on the flexures of limbs and chest save the skin from cracking in contact with the heated sands when he lies down or kneels to peep close as easily as his eyelids; thus he is provided against the deadly simoon.

He carries an eternal reservoir for seven or eight gallons of water, which he will deal out to himself at the rate of three quarts a day should circumstances require, while exposed to heat resembling that in which the Three Worthies were tried. Sometimes, alas, to keep himself from perishing of thirst, his owner is compelled to kill the beast for the sake of his little store of liquid. As regards food, his natural nippers of teeth clip and masticate to his satisfying relish the tough plants that contend for existence along the desert route; his habit of taking a bite from every dwarf acacia and its kind occasioning many surprises of twisting and jumping to the unaccustomed rider. The amble of the camel is a mixed rolling and pitching which is apt to be ill-appreciated by riders not to the accompaniment.—(Lavinia S. Goodwin in The Current.)

A Co-Operative Success.

Eighteen iron molders, employes of a bankrupt foundry in New York harbor, "chipped in" $4,000 in 1881 and bought the foundry for themselves, forming a joint-stock co-operative concern. A president, treasurer, foreman, and nine directors are chosen at the yearly meeting and their salaries are fixed at the same time. Five of the directors still work at the bench. The concern now employs forty-eight to fifty men. Its capital stock has been quadrupled, some of it sold to outsiders to raise money for business extension. For no year has the annual dividend been less than 6 per cent, and 8, 10, and 11 per cent. Dividends have been earned, but the surplus over 6 or 7 per cent. has been funded.

Last June some unsold stock was auctioned off to stockholders only and brought from 10 to 17. The business meetings are harmonious, although the men often have conflicting ideas, but the majority rules without a word of opposition after the vote. The men are temperate, work steadily, and all make good pay. There are a number of apprentice boys in the shop, preference being given to the sons of stockholders. Is there no lesson for other American workmen in these facts?—(Chicago News.)

The Graded System in Schools.

The graded system, excellent when not wrongly used, offers sturdy opposition to the teacher's progress and to the employment of original talents. The graded system is a constant temptation to teachers and supervisors to make the work of the school a beautifully-moving mechanism. A teacher succeeds in the work of reducing a school to a smoothly-running routine, and she is voted a success by the principal and board. She stifes ambition, crystallizes habit, checks mental progress, but which makes a splendid show to the careless visitor. If she can keep down her percentage of tardiness and keep up her percentage of attendance, though her pupils may be ignorant of the commonest facts and destitute of the ability to think, she is a success.—(A. P. Kent in The Current.)

Aristocrats in Trade.

Among us one has become a starter (Lord Marcus Doreford), another a dressmaker (Mr. Meade), and a third a bonnetmaker (Mr. Grandville Gordon). Spillor's cigars are commonly reported to be the property of the brother of a peer. Lord Londonderry daily advertises coals, while Lord Dudley's name stares us in the face over a shop window in Lowndes street. Several sons of peers are club secretaries or wine merchants, and some of dukes are on "claps" in the tea trade, etc. Lords Shrewsbury and Savernake run cabs, and there is quite an army of aristocratic brewers and agents. On the other hand, look at the number of new peers and powerful men who have sprung from the ranks of trade. Any one can pick out over a hundred names in the past seventy years.—(Vanity Fair.)

Chinese Printers in San Francisco.

The Chinese have invaded another industry at San Francisco. There are now three printing offices in that city which are owned by Chinese. Only white compositors are at present employed, there being no Chinaman who understand the trade, but that want will no doubt be soon supplied. In China native printers, wholly ignorant of the English language, frequently master the art of putting manuscript into type, and do it almost as rapidly as white compositors who know the meaning of the words before them.—(San Francisco Letter.)

The English Derby.

It is a surprising thing, but it is quite a safe thing to say, that possibly the greatest voluntary gathering of mankind is annually seen at a horse-race. This race is the English Derby. The town of Epsom is fourteen miles southwest of London, and is famous in two ways—as being the place of the great trial of running speed named after the earl of Derby, whose country-seat, the Oaks, is near by, and as being the place where Epsom sells "originated." The town carries passengers for a shilling the round trip. Lines of vehicles fourteen miles long occupy the highways. The attendance usually numbers 1,000,000 souls.

[Cor. New York Sun.] "I think it's Simmons," said the signature expert of the treasury, as he laid aside the magnifying glass and wiped his eyes with his silk handkerchief. He had for half an hour been examining a curious scroll on the back of a check. It consisted of a black stroke of a pen, tapering off to an irregular line, and was there to represent the name of some bank cashier.

"There is not a letter in it," he said, holding it up to the light, "but it means Simmons." "Do you have many of that sort?" "Worse than that. Five or six hundred different signatures pass through here in a month, maybe, and two-thirds of them are illegible. Bank cashiers seldom make any letters in their signatures. They adopt a certain form of scroll, generally, and always use it for their signature. About the same height. Again you have no name at all. It is simply the sign of a name, but it is just as good for us. It is always the same, and, as simply as it may seem, I don't think it could be counterfeited. Here is another with the same pointed strokes, but there are fewer of them, and the signature is higher than it is long. But there is one signature we get on checks principally which is more remarkable than either of these. The letters are all the same height, and will reach from top to bottom across the face of a check. At first glance nothing can be made of it, but if you follow the line carefully you can unravel the name, and you will be surprised at its plainness. Each letter is perfect in itself, but is so tall and narrow that at first glance you don't comprehend what it is.

"We come across some very curious signatures, and some mighty bad ones. Those of Ben Butler and Horace Greeley are famous for their ugliness, but they would fall into insignificance alongside of the scrawls that pass through here on drafts and checks. NOT LETTERS BUT CONTOUR. "How do you make them out?" "Generally the contour suggests the name though no letters may be formed. Sometimes I know a name at first glance, when, if I try to analyze it I am thrown off the track entirely. Probably once or twice we have had to write to find out what a name was, but generally, when they are too much for me, the register of the banks will give the name. When we come across a new signature that is particularly hard to make out, we make a record of it, so that whenever we see that same combination of odd characters we know what it stands for. "Is a bad signature a sign of ignorance?" "By no means. The worst signatures are those of educated men, generally bank officials. They are always written freely and quickly. Write your name as fast as you can and see what it looks like. That's the way it's done. These men have to write their names so often that they get to making the quickest combination of characters possible, and adopt it as their signature. FORGORIES. "What is the easiest signature to forge?" "One that is extremely bad or remarkably good. Spinner used to write the names of his partners. When there were a dozen clerks who could counterfeit it so perfectly that no one could tell the difference. The perfect Spencerian signature, however, is the easiest to imitate. One of the best American signatures I have ever seen is that of the new treasurer, Jordan. It is beautiful to look at—as clear and legible as engraving—but I think it could be counterfeited. He can write his name quicker than any man I ever saw. Assistant Secretary Fairchild and Third Auditor Williams write their names well, too. "The most ponderous signature I ever struck was that of Drake De Kay, who was assistant adjutant general under McClellan. When he signed letters and papers of various kinds they used to be spread out on the floor, where the sun would strike them to dry. This is a fact. I don't know what he used to write with, but I think it was a stick. "Do you ever come across any forgeries?" "Yes, but the large majority of them are innocent. They grow out of ignorance. Sometimes checks come in with a man's name signed to them, and when we come to look over the papers in the claim against which the check is drawn, we find he can't write at all and has used a mark only. Then, of course, we know there has been a forgery committed, and the man generally turns out that the man has had some one sign his name for him, and the parties have been led into a forgery innocently."

Rendering the Watch-Dog Harness. [Chicago Times.] Burglars have a hit upon a plan by which the herest watch-dog is rendered harmless. They take along with them another dog, and on arriving at the premises to be robbed, turn him loose. Of course the watch dog, seeing a strange dog, stops to ask him what is the news, and while the two sagacious animals are exchanging information the burglars go in and get the silver. Longest Tunnel in the World. [Chicago Times.] Eight thousand men are engaged on the thirty-one-mile tunnel stretching from Croton lake to the reservoir in Central park, New York, and which, when finished, will be the longest tunnel in the world. It will have cost by that time anywhere between $3,000,000 and $60,000,000. Quite a Saving. The American drummers have agreed not to pay sleeping-car porters gratuities any more. It is calculated that this will make a difference to the aggregate of porters of $5,000,000 a year. Less than one-third of the earth and double that covered Pompeii so long remains in place.

ANOTHER TEST.

Messrs. W. B. Wiltshire & Co., Agents MACNEALE & URBAN SAFES, 206 California Street, San Francisco, Cal.: Gentlemen—In reply to your inquiry concerning the opening of the Burglar-Proof Chest in the safe of the office of the Clerk of the Supreme Court—now so well known as The McCarthy Safe.

I will say that I took charge of the office on Wednesday, the 6th instant. For some days previous, unsuccessful attempts had been made by various experts to pick the lock. On Thursday, further similar efforts were made with the same result by Mr. Ensign and other noted experts. ALL OF WHOM FINALLY DECLARED THAT THE LOCK COULD NOT BE PICKED, and that the safe must be opened by force.

On Friday I employed the expert of one of your competitors, who did faithful and honest work for that purpose. On Saturday morning work was begun, and this morning (Wednesday), FOUR DAYS AFTER, the expert succeeded in drilling through the door and opening the safe.

I consider it was an extraordinary severe test, much beyond what a burglar could possibly employ under any circumstances, and can assure it has inspired me with the highest confidence in the security of your Burglar-Proof Safes, AND THAT YOUR LOCKS ARE PICK PROOF AGAINST THE BEST EXPERTS. After working for some hours on the lock, one expert said that he had found that Y was one letter, and another that U was one. On examination, neither of these letters appeared in the combination. Yours, truly, J. D. SPENCER, Clerk of Supreme Court, San Francisco, January 13, 1886.

The above was a Macneale & Urban No. 8 Fire & Burglar Safe. C. O. BERGER, 1m General Agent, Hawaiian Islands.
