THE TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

MONDAY AFTERNOON.

Miss Hillebrand read a paper on the teaching of decimals. She would teach them with whole numbers. This system had been tried and proved at Hilo. Little or no explanations were necessary in teaching the operations.

Mrs. Wallace read a paper on the teaching of arithmetic. Her practice had been to teach mental arithmetic first. She taught arithmetic as a science, and placed great importance upon accuracy in definitions. Also taught the local value of digits. Pupils made their own rules.

Mr. Scott showed a difficult example to teach in division of fractions, and Mr. Moore told how he would explain it by substituting whole numbers first in the example. Mr. Oleson, Dr. Hyde and Mr. Moore spoke upon the subject.

The committee on resolutions reported one in favor of publishing educational supplements to some of the newspapers. Also, requesting the Board to establish associations on the different Islands, and to bear the expenses of delegates to the annual convention.

Mr. Oleson read a paper on "Moral Training in Public Schools." It was given close attention and applauded at the conclusion. He insisted that the school was part of the social system, designed to train the child up to sturdy morality as a member of the community, as well as to teach it reading, writing and arithmetic. It was incumbent upon the state to facilitate moral training in the schools, and thus prevent crime, just as much as to sustain judicial machinery to punish crime when developed. Teachers in our schools had little spare time for the special inculcation of morals, so fully did ordinary teaching routine occupy school hours. The Government would assist the object in view, therefore, by providing all the time-saving appliances possible for the schools. He had heard that a system of moral tuition had been adopted in New York. Summing up, he said schools did not fulfill their functions unless they made the scholars pure, true, more honest, reverential toward law and opposed to wrong and disorder.

Dr. Hyde lamented evidences presented to him of the rapid degeneration of the young people of the land. One had only to look at the vast majority of young people of Hawaiian birth in this city, to be convinced of a lack in their moral training. He wished that some strenuous effort could be made to draw the attention of the Board of Education to the necessity of paying more attention to morality in the Hawaiian schools. Increasing proneness to drunkenness and other vices was sadly to be remarked in the young Hawaiian. Referring to the case of a teacher on Maui who was guilty of grossly immoral conduct, the speaker urged the importance of having moral teachers in the first place. Some had suggested that better pay would ensure a supply of good teachers, but he had been told that when salaries were raised the effect was to make poorer teachers of those who were pretty good before (laughter).

Mr. Crook had adopted the method, in his school of 150 pupils, of holding the scholars responsible for any misconduct on their way to or from school, and they generally went home quietly.

Mr. Scott regarded moral conduct as ahead of everything. Unless they gave children ideas of right their mission would be an entire failure. He should have liked if Mr. Oleson had given the proper method of arriving at the object in view. It was not simply telling children that it was wrong to do this or that, but making them understand what was right and why it was right. In an instance of his experience, he had taken the opportunity of a child stealing another's pencil to instruct the scholars in the principles of honesty. Give the children a basis for doing right, and not read them a goody-goody story. Produce right feeling in the boy, because it was our feelings that prompted our actions. The teacher must show himself to be in earnest to have proper influence with the pupils.

Mr. Mackintosh would not have taken such a roundabout course with the boy who stole the pencil. He would have conveyed to him a sense of the wrongfulness of his act in five Hawaiian or four English words, "Thou shalt not steal." By getting the book of books into the schools they would effect more for morality than in any other way. He drilled every boy thoroughly in the Sermon on the Mount, and used Old Testament stories in the same way. And if they all had his results they would not be very unhappy over them. He had the pleasure of seeing estimable citizens in every quarter of the city, made in his factory—to use the figure of a former speaker.

Mr. Merritt said he thought Mr. Mackintosh touched the core of the matter in pointing out God's word as the basis of moral instruction. A Scotch divine had said that the morals of Scotland had declined from the day when the Book of Proverbs was removed from the list of text-books in that country's schools. The only ethics of any value the world had were those based upon the Bible. As regarded a manual of morals, he should be afraid of any other book he had ever seen. The foundation of moral teaching lay in the character of the teacher. No teacher can teach morals with any effect unless moral himself. There was more good to be derived from the use of examples of well-doing than of those of ill-doing. He had been glad to take Mrs. Bishop's life as a text for his children, at the time of that lady's death. It seemed well to him to hold up to children such characters as that of the late Wm. E. Dodge, of New York, and even of men in Honolulu, as examples of what right principles and well-doing would accomplish. He took care that the children had no occasion to accuse himself of underhandedness or duplicity.

Mrs. Hebbard said she must tell her pupils to do right because God wanted them to do so. It was necessary for every man and woman in these Islands to live a Christian life before they could get Hawaiian children to do right.

Mr. Olsen believed there should be a text-book to define the meanings of such words as arson, perjury, etc., in order to teach children the enormity of the crimes thus denominated.

Mr. Scott said he should be at great difficulty to point out examples of success in Honolulu, to hold up to children's imitation. Should it be the millionaire, who made his fifteen percent in usury; the man whose main principle is to buy cheap and sell dear, or to the man who makes great professions of goodness? He should have to see how a man acted towards his wife and family before using him as an example of high principle.

Mr. Merritt said at all events Mr. Dodge was an example he should not be afraid of holding up. The idea was that concrete morality produced stronger effects upon the young mind than abstract principles. As an instance of Mr. Dodge's consistency, he related how that gentleman had sold out his entire stock in a railway, of which he was one of the largest holders, because the directors persisted in running Sunday trains.

Mrs. Hebbard asked what was the difference between the running of trains and that of horses and carriages on Sunday.

Mr. Merritt said there was a great deal.

The convention adjourned at four o'clock until ten o'clock this morning.

TUESDAY MORNING.

The convention was opened at 10 o'clock with prayer by the Rev. Dr. Hyde.

After the reading of minutes, the Rev. Dr. Hyde read a paper on, "Some Desirable Improvements in Our Educational System." The paper indicated what its author regarded as serious deficiencies in the Report of the Board of Education, in financial statements and otherwise. It also reflected upon the lack of moral training in the Government schools, and urged that if those were not to be the training ground of vagabonds and hotbeds of leprosy and vice, the community, which was mainly responsible for abuses, must become aroused to the necessity for radical reform. Dr. Hyde closed with a series of resolutions, calling for quarterly reports of schools, a clearer financial exhibit of the Board's operations, and systematic moral tuition in the schools, and expressing the Association's high appreciation of the educational bequests of the late Mrs. Bishop. It was moved and seconded that the resolutions be referred to the committee on resolutions.

Mr. Scott remarked upon some of the statistics that he knew were reported to the Board, saying he was astounded that they had not appeared in the Board's report.

Mr. G. C. Kenyon said there were some portions of the resolutions which could not be agreed to by all the members. He objected to teachers of independent schools putting such resolutions. It was his impression that the Association was originally formed for the benefit of Government teachers, and independent teachers were admitted on an equal footing. As a Government teacher he strongly objected to being placed in a false position by those resolutions. It was not their place to dictate to the Board of Education. That was exclusively the province of the Legislature, and whatever it required of the Board would probably be supplied. He most strongly objected to the insinuation that the Government schools were training seedbeds for leprosy and viciousness. The schools had a system of moral instruction, prescribed by the Inspector-General. He strongly objected to such aspersions being cast upon his scholars, and invited examination of their morals. Such charges he considered as disgraceful to the man who made them. In answer to a question he said the system in vogue was the regular inculcation of moral maxims. With reference to the resolution asking for quarterly reports of schools, he said the teachers did not report to the Board at all, but to the school agent of the district, who exercised discretion as to the terms to be covered in reports. This society asking for a clearer financial exhibit from the Board was allied to the case of an employee in a store down town asking his employer to oblige him with a fuller balance sheet.

Mr. Kenyon was interrupted several times by points of order, and in fact spoke under a motion granting him the privilege of discussing the resolutions at that stage, as he had only an hour to stay. One of the points raised was as to the status of the Association, the discussion of which elicited the fact that Government teachers had no advantage in the institution of the society.

Dr. Hyde briefly contended that the association was free to make suggestions to the Board, in which he was supported by Dr. Hyde and Mr. Scott.

The resolutions were referred to committee.

The President read a paper on "Preparation for the Primer." It remarked upon the peculiar nature of the schools of the Hawaiian Islands, in the pupils mostly requiring instruction in a language foreign to them and in the heterogeneous grouping of pupils in single schools. The most manifest preparation required is a knowledge of the language to be read. He enquired how should this knowledge be given, and how much of it should precede the use of books. Object-lessons were emphatically chosen by him before translation as the proper method to begin with in our primary schools. "The modern world's great master of the principles of instruction took as his model an intelligent mother teaching her children to walk, to talk and to do the thousand and one things which every sound child should learn to do in the first few years of his life." The mother showed the child an apple before she taught it the name of it. It would be impossible, however, to follow the paper throughout in our brief space. It was applauded at the conclusion, and evoked a vigorous discussion. Messrs. Scott, Hyde, Mackintosh and Forbes illustrated the proverb, "Doctors differ," by showing decided variance over the proper expression of sundry vowel sounds.

Messrs. Mackintosh and Scott, and Mrs. Wallace, were elected to serve with the officers as the executive committee for the ensuing year.

The Hon. T. S. Walker was present at this sitting, to represent the Board of Education.

Recess of two hours was taken at noon.

It saves time, patience and fuel, if you buy machine-made poi.

THE road on King street from the stone church to the Waikiki corner is in a very bad condition. It is used so much, that repairs ought to be effected without delay.

THE sale of slips and sittings at Fort Street Church last evening was well attended. The bidding was not quite so spirited as on former occasions. About $5,000 was realized.

Miss Muther's Kindergarten and Primary school on Nuuanu street, will open on Monday, January 5th, 1885. This is a most excellent institution, and is doing good work under Miss Muther.

IN the Police Court this morning, Ah Sing, for assault and battery on H. Kaubane, was discharged. Ah Fow, charged with burglary, by breaking into the dwelling house and store of Ah Quang, was remanded until to-morrow.

THERE is no sign of the P. M. S. S. Zealandia as we go to press. It will be remembered that on her last trip from the Colonies, an accident happened to her piston rod, and her captain expected to be detained in San Francisco for repairs anywhere from three to five days.

A PARTY of ladies and gentlemen accompanied by Gen. Geo. A. Sheridan went up to the top of Punchbowl last evening. They heard the band concert quite distinctly and spent a very pleasant evening. Some of the party offered the General all he could survey if he would roll down the town side, but he did not accept the offer. The whole party arrived home safe.

THE Sun Pearl Gallery at the corner of Fort and King Streets, has been taken by Mr. Theo. Severin, late of San Francisco. This gentleman has been in the business many years, serving his apprenticeship with Bradley and Rulofson of San Francisco. He will make a specialty of tin types, and introduce new styles of cabinets, boudoir and promenade photographs. Such a chance as this ought not be neglected.

THE exhibition of the Harden hand grenade yesterday, convinced us that they are the most effective fire extinguishers we have seen. Mr. Myers has already received a large number of orders. Every private house, store, warehouse, plantation, public building, and other places ought certainly to have them. Another exhibition will take place Thursday afternoon at the same place, when a larger fire will be built. Being a holiday we have no doubt a large number of people will witness the exhibition.

EXCELLENT INTEREST RULES.

For finding the interest on any principal for any number of days, the answer in each case being in cents, separate the two right hand figures to express it in dollars and cents. FOUR PER CENT.—Multiply the principal by the number of days to run, separate the right hand figure from product, and divide by 4.

Copies of the above neatly printed on a card, can be obtained free gratis of Messrs. J. M. Ot, Jr., & Co., Merchant street, Honolulu.

A Valjejo, Cal., paper boasts that the jail of that place is untenanted. A registered letter bag was lately stolen at Kamloops, British Columbia, containing $9,000 in cash and checks.

SOME of the finest coral, shells and other curios from the South Seas, that have ever been brought to these Islands, will be on exhibition and for sale to-morrow, at the office of the Pacific Navigation Company.

MR. C. Wiedemann, teacher of gymnastics and drawing in the San Francisco Turn-Verein, who is here on a vacation, carries away in his notebook an excellent sketch of the BULLETIN office. He has visited the Volcano at an expense of $32.73, the details of which we shall give when space allows. Mr. Wiedemann is delighted with the country, and being correspondent of a Milwaukee paper will sound its praises abroad.
