STOLEN GOODS.

The Articles Located.

The lack of tact generally exhibited by the men who are running this government has hardly yet been so well illustrated as by the sending of certain property belonging to the monarchical government as well as "secured," (we will be charitable) from the personal property of the Queen. That this action of Mr. Thurston and his conferees in the government has caused severe, but deserved criticism from the decent people and independent press in California can be seen from the following editorial which appears in the San Francisco News Letter:

"Vandalism has a magnificent object lesson in a corner of the Hawaiian village at the Midwinter Fair, where the stately emblems of the overturned monarchy in the Island kingdom are exhibited as a side show. A better exhibition of the peculiar taste of the revolutionists could not easily be conceived. A monarchy is temporarily replaced by a republic through a successful revolution. The question of government is still undecided, and the nation is divided upon the issue. Representatives of the dominant party quietly abstract the throne, the crown and all of the royal furniture upon which they can lay their hands, ship these articles to a foreign country, and show them to all the curious, at so much a peep. Is the Provisional Government guiltless in the matter? The head and front of the revolutionary movement, the man who planned the campaign and directed the overthrow of the government, is Lorrin A. Thurston. For his services he received the post of Hawaiian Minister to Washington. He is turning an honest penny as a concessionaire at the Midwinter Fair, owning a half interest in the Hawaiian cyclorama and village. Through the medium of his allies, members of the Provisional Government, Thurston, the Government official, gives to Thurston, the showman, part of the property of this nation. The act receives small consideration from the fact that Thurston is himself a native of the Hawaiian Islands, and might be presumed to have a streak of patriotism mingled with his desire for gain. Naturally the royal curios were abstracted secretly. To have removed them openly would have aroused a storm of indignation, not only on the part of the Royalists, but also among many of the adherents of the present administration. When the news of this matter reaches Honolulu, a tempest may be expected which may make that town resemble the fiery volcano of Kilauea which Thurston's cyclorama is designed to illustrate"

It seems that the ladies are getting into politics—and very much into print.

ACCORDING to the political ethics of some Honolulu lady a man should not do what he considers conscientiously right if he thereby steps on the toes or interferes with the games of persons whose home-made bread (!) and do-butter (!) his wife has accepted.

It is painful to see in the New York Observer that William's College which is described as the birth place of American missions was built on money of which a goodly sum was raised by means of a lottery (!) sanctioned by the Legislature of the States. And yet they were the elect and candidates for Heaven.

It must have been a lovely sight to see Thurston knocking at the door of the foreign affairs committee in the Senate, and asking to be allowed to prompt Mr. McCandless. It is to be feared that the ex-what was it he was, will get muddled and contradict some of Stevens' and Thurston's "truthful" reports.

JUDGE COOLEY has written a very interesting article against the annexation of Hawaii and which shows that such a policy has been objected to by all statesmen since the day of Washington, and in which he further claims that it is an outrage that the attention and time of Congress are being diverted from the domestic affairs of the greatest moment to the United States, and concentrated on the far-off islands which ought to give them no concern whatever. Mr. C. L. Carter ought now to answer and correct Mr. Cooley.

ROBINSON CRUSOE of the BULLETIN has caught on to a "man Friday."

Mr. Dole's Blunder.

It is a pitiful sight to see the government organs attempting to defend, excuse and explain the highly undiplomatic letter which Mr. Dole has seen fit to send to Minister Willis, and which may cost our country much annoyance if nothing worse. The letter was uncalled for in the highest degree, and the statements and insinuations made in it are to say the least incorrect. Minister Willis asked for specifications of the charges against him and it would be of interest if he will furnish some proofs for the statements which he unblushingly makes. When has this city been in a state of terror and when have the loyalists conspired? If alarming rumors were spread, will Mr. Dole deny that they were originated, and manufactured by the hired spies of his own government? What unprotected women have asked the Japanese minister for protection and who have been living in constant anxiety and making (Great Scott!) bandages? If rumors ever took the shape of truth, or rather possibilities were they not of the kind which were started say when Spreckels' gate was placarded and dynamite found next to the Queen's premises? And who perpetrated these acts Mr. Dole? Where it not done by men in the service—and yet employed by Mr. Dole's worthy marshal Mr. Hitchcock? Indeed it would be of interest to see if Mr. Dole will retract his letter and apologize.

The Advertiser considers a demand for a retraction of the impudent letter an extreme measure, but it can rest assured that Mr. Cleveland will make it, and that he will be backed in so doing by the whole American people. The indignation felt against him for his "appeal from the American President to the American people" is well expressed in the following extract from that powerful journal Harper's Weekly which says:

"President Cleveland has rendered the country the inestimable service of killing the annexation project, at least, for the period of his Presidential term. But while we are disposed to let the Hawaiians, and their government alone, their minister of foreign affairs, in a diplomatic document addressed to the Minister of the United States, gives us notice that his government does not mean to let us alone. He says: While we, the Hawaiian provisional government accept the decision of the President of the United States declining further to consider the annexation proposition as the final conclusion of the present administration, we do not feel inclined to regard it as the last word of the American Government upon this subject. In other words, the Provisional Government of Hawaii enters an appeal from the President to the American people. The cool impudence of the announcement is characteristic of the notions which those men have cultivated among themselves, and which they seek to cultivate among the people of this country. They seem to have actually made themselves believe that since American missionaries have civilized the natives of the Hawaiian Islands until only a small fraction of their population is left, and until the bulk of the valuable real estate has passed into the possession of the missionaries' sons and their friends, the American people are induty bound to make that real estate still more valuable by annexing the islands to the United States and that no duty we think we owe to our own country should prevail against the duty we owe to them. As they express it, the American people cannot "go back" on them without disgrace. This is a most preposterous notion, but if it should gain ground among our people, it would be a very dangerous one for our future. And it seems to be assiduously fostered by many of the Hawaiian missionaries' friends among our clergy. If we are foolish enough to give any weight to such an appeal and to treat such a claim as valid, there would be no end of similar pretensions. They would be put forth by all sorts of American adventurers, who had acquired interests in other quarters of the globe and then wish this republic to take those interests under its protection and enhance their value, and we shall never cease to be troubled by the agitation of the wildest annexation schemes. This is the most dangerous kind of incitement to reckless territorial aggrandizement, and when once started on such a career we shall find it difficult to stop. Such pretensions should therefore be repelled at once with the utmost decision and firmness, and the impudent Hawaiian appellant from the American President to the American people should be made to understand that if the missionaries' sons and their friends have succeeded in feathering their nests on the Hawaiian Islands, they have done so at their own risk; that we do not grudge them, their good fortune, but that we are not willing to expose this republic with a policy obliging it to build and maintain a navy as large as any navy in the world for the purpose of protecting those nests."

DOUBLY DOOMED.

The verdict of Stanford's Students Supported.

"The annexation of the Hawaiian islands to the United States is not a commendable proposition," is the text of a decision rendered at the Grand Opera House Jan. 26th by Supreme Justice Beatty, United States District Judge Morrow and Superior Judge Slack. This opinion was not based upon the merits of the case, seriously and carefully considered, but upon the preponderance of oratorical weight in a two-hours' debate on the question: "Resolved, That the Hawaiian islands should be annexed to the United States."

Irvin M. Scott was to have assisted General W. H. L. Barnes in presenting the affirmative portion of the argument, but a sudden and serious illness prevented his attendance and the General's duty was consequently doubled. Rev. Horatio Stebbins and John P. Irish sustained the negative in a successful way, as evidenced by the verdict of the judges.

There were upward of 1,000 persons present, and the most absorbing attention was manifested in the masterly manner in which the pertinent question was handled by its friends and opponents.

President James D. Phelan, in introducing the orators, said the debate was designed to precede the Congress of debates of the Midwinter Fair, and that its results would be devoted to the entertainment of the distinguished guests who would soon visit this city in the interests of art and of science. Mr. Phelan referred pleasantly to the gentlemen who had been chosen as referees, and then briefly explained the topic of discussion. He then introduced General W. H. L. Barnes to the audience. A warm applause greeted the popular speaker as he began a little legal retrospection bearing upon the primary motive of the discussion.

AN ANNEXATION ARGUMENT.

"We are prepared, in some degree I hope," he said, "to dismiss fully the merits of the question, though I cannot assure you of my own readiness. I recall a remark of James G. Blaine, when he said he considered the Hawaiian islands of so much importance to the United States that "he could not conceive how such a gift could be refused." The speaker painted a beautiful word picture of the summer islands, showing vividly their wondrous clime and surpassing fertility.

"Modern invention has made it possible for a first-class vessel to go to Honolulu from San Francisco in five days and some hours—less time than it requires to reach the Atlantic coast and with the construction of a cable the distance could well be annihilated."

General Barnes then turned his attention to the Alaskan purchase, instancing the policy that induced its purchase and the opposition that met the plans of Secretary Seward.

"The only thing that fails to give Great Britain complete control of the Pacific ocean is the possession of the Hawaiian Islands," exclaimed the General, and then he cited the geographical features that are calculated to render the islands imperatively necessary to the marine supremacy of the United States. "We should have not only possession, but also a flag with no Blount to pull it down," he thundered, and the great theatre rang with approval of the sentiment.

"France and Great Britain have repeatedly attempted to take possession of these islands," he continued, "but words of warning came from Washington, and hands were off."

The frequent treaties and propositions of annexation were reviewed from the time of King Kamehameha down to the arrival of the Claudine in the harbor of San Francisco at the time the Provisional Government took possession of the island of Oahu. The patriotism of the islanders and their reverence for America and its institutions were celebrated, and then the recommendations of navy and army officers were cited to confirm the argument that the Hawaiian islands were necessary to the supremacy of the American people. "They tell us we don't want the islands because they have a debt," he insisted. "So they have, but they have assets so great, that two years of American administration would make them independently rich. The people to be considered are not the natives, they are the people of our own flesh and blood who have gone their to live."

THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT CENSURED.

Colonel John P. Irish opened for the negative by reviewing the present status of public opinion and the arguments of sentiment and fellowship. He castigated General Barnes' reference to the Americanizing of the islands and cited the low ratio of native born and American voters. Under the $3,000 property qualifications, he said, only 637 Americans were registered, while 9,000 natives had by thrift and industry gained the requisite competency. "The 8,000 domesticated Portuguese have 2,000 qualified voters, while the Germans are nearly as great in numbers as the Americans," he proceeded, "yet my friend says that we should consider the claims of none but American citizens. The last policy I hope to see adopted by the Government of my country is approval when a handful of expatriated and denationalized Americans rise up in revolt against the Government under which they have sought to live."

The Committee of Safety and Provisional Government were verbally dissected and held up to oratorical ridicule. The speaker classed the present Hawaiian Government as a hybrid growth and not containing the essentials of any recognized form of rule.

"The virtue of the ruler of Hawaii has been assailed," he said. "What matter her morals to us? We cannot enter upon a crusade and, with the white cross in our lapels, start out to fight for the enforcement of all commandments. We must lay aside all maudlin sentiment in consistently reasoning upon the annexation of Hawaii. Let us deal principally with the business portion of the proposition. They say we want it to defend, for to protect it would cost more than all the sea coast of America. If we take Hawaii as an essential to our naval supremacy we will in future be compelled to seek advantageous isles and continents on the remainder of the earth. If we take Hawaii in the Pacific, who will take Haiti and San Domingo in the Atlantic? Our safety is in preserving our power against the robber nation and not in weakening our strength by unnatural growth. Let us lend our moral power to aid in the establishment of a great neutrality on Hawaii. No nation can then touch her. There is no danger of a return to savagery and the worship of Pele. The Anglo-Saxon race does not flourish in Hawaii, and that is why American rule will never be worthy or possible. Nature has interposed an insuperable objection to the transportation of this race on Hawaii's soil, and for physical reasons alone a sturdy maturity cannot exist when nature and nature's God have decreed to the contrary."

At the conclusion of Colonel Irish's argument, President Phelan stated that, owing to the sudden illness of Irving M. Scott, he would not be able to appear, and that General Barnes would be compelled to do double duty. Resuming his argument, General Barnes said: "I want to take up my discussion where Col. Irish interrupted me. He referred to his ancestors as Druids and speaks of his reverence for the oak. After listening to his entire speech I feel that it would be wholly proper to take the topmost bough of his ideal worship and apply it where it would do the most good." The General then reviewed that part of his predecessor's speech which he termed fallacious and vague. "Colonel Irish says he isn't afraid and that I am afraid. Well, there's a certain class of people that rush in where angels fear to tread. He isn't afraid—not this administration," he argued.

"Does he know that men-of-war of any European nation can get here, but can't get back with the coal they can carry? Does he see the advantage of Honolulu as a coaling station—that the commerce of the world passes by the door of Honolulu? Does he know that the natives own only one sixteenth of the island acreage and that they furnish but 9 per cent of the labor? Who says the Hawaiian is to be deprived of his moral right, or that Queen Liliuokalani is not as good as she might be? She is out of the question altogether and will never sit on her throne unless she comes to the Midwinter Fair. She struck at the liberty of the Americans who made her country what it is. She sought to disfranchise them and usurp their possessions. The people of Hawaii are seeking a safe and stable form of government, and for more than fifty years America has been protecting that island group like a mother watching her children. The time has come for adoption, and all parties are willing for the union. God detached that island from the continent, but we will bring it home again."

NOT WANTED.

Rev. Horatio Stebbins closed for the negative, and incidentally reviewed many of the salient points brought out by the other speakers. He took up point of international law, saying that it was not a law, but a confession that there was degree of acknowledged justice between state and state.

"The people who have put a $3,000 tax on a civilian's vote are not fit to cast a ballot for freedom," he said. "If, unlike England, the sun does set on our dominion, I thank God that we can be trusted in the dark. To submit the question of annexation to the voters of Hawaii would be the acme of absurdity, and had better be submitted to the colored voters of Louisiana. We have enough domain on our hands. Our history has been, come to us. We have said it too long, and we must now be careful. We do not want Hawaii at any price; we do not want her in the family; we will maintain the status quo, and some day it may be necessary to tell some one to keep away, but Hawaii is not needed in the family."

This concluded the argument and the question was given into the hands of the Judges for a decision. In a few minutes Chief Justice Beatty approached the foot-lights and said:

"We decide, not the merits of the question, but the merits of the argument. We do not altogether agree on all points, but we do agree on one point, and that is that the weight of the argument to-night is in favor of the negative."

An uncertain approval greeted the verdict, apparently an evidence of the fact that the friends of annexation comprised the majority of the audience.

The Annexation meeting at Paia was attended by about 100 Portuguese laborers ordered there by H. P. Baldwin. The meeting should have taken place in Wailuku, but there are no annexationists there any longer so "President" Kalua had to be carted up to Paia.

The following gentlemen are the officers of the Oceanic Steamship Company elected to serve for the year 1894: John D. Spreckels, President; Captain Charles Goodall, Vice President; E. H. Sheldon, Secretary; J. D. Spreckels Brothers, Treasurers; Claus Spreckels, A. B. Spreckels, A. L. Tubbs, A. C. Tubbs and Charles L. Wheeler, Directors.

The statement said to have been made by the Rev. Tumbler at the Fort Street Church on last Sunday to the effect that Chinese New Year's interfered with their Sunday School business, was, to say the least, a hint that the Hawaiian heathen was not "in it" with his Celestial brothers.

A FULL HOUSE.

So Were the Best Speakers with the Subjects.

The so-called American League, sent an invitation to the HOLOMUA to have a representative of the paper at a political talk held at its rooms last evening. In response a HOLOMUA man was present and reports that: The meeting was a large respectable and very orderly one. On the platform the visages of men who were not in accord with the people was most noticeable. The Thurstonian plan of patting the uncivilized on the back was put in force by Sam Damon, who mali malied with the "kids" by saying that they should have representation in the Councils. Sam neither treated nor drank. Other people followed in him, better men than Sam (except Smith) who also voiced their "love for the dear people." Mr. Macoon, who has lately obtained a reputation, came to the fore as a fighter for the lost cause but his remarks were overshadowed with the mist of doubt and looked very much like special pleading to evade a fine. Mr. T. B. Murray, the proprietor of the League, and his assistants did all in their power to make the show a success and as there was no entrance fee they can be credited with being "in it" with both feet. N.B. A man named Armstrong, who used to be a Commissioner of Immigration under King Kalakaua spoke about something or other.

The Truth Must Out.

The President's Hawaiian message, a strong State paper, evidently troubles or annoys his bitterest opponents, as the quotations from the press, well show. Bitterness, vinegar and gill characterize the anti-Cleveland utterances mostly. The New York Tribune speaks of the unpleasant revelations concerning ex-Minister Stevens, as being "what (the President) chose to regard as the facts in the case" on the day that the President assumed his office. The reason that message hurts Mr. Cleveland's enemies so badly is that "what he chose to regard as the facts in the case" were the actual and undeniable facts. Mr. Stevens was rushing things at a pace a little too rapid. The best men and most of the real civilization of the islands are on the side of the provisional government. Also it is true that the people of the United States would like to see some form of a protectorate over those islands so important to American commercial and naval interests. But Americans are just, and it is proper for the President to bring out the real situation that existed at Honolulu as it actually existed, last January, when Mr. Stevens, then United States Minister at Honolulu, was so actively engaged in forwarding the overthrow which he had so singularly foreshadowed, in his letter to Mr. Blaine. The guonon on the world's dial does not move backward. The United States will not permit any foreign power to control those islands. American interests and ideas must, from the situation of things, predominate there. All the same, it is right that the truth about ex-Minister Stevens' course at Honolulu one year ago should be seen and understood, and Mr. Cleveland brings it out in its strongest lights and shades, and to great effect. —Hartford, (Ct.) Times.

DISCLOSED.

A Haor's Brains Used.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 19—Mr. Lorin Thurston, the envoy of the provisional government of Hawaii to this country, is expected to reach Washington to-morrow morning. There is some curiosity as to how Mr. Thurston will be received by our government. There are some hints that he may be handed his passports after his arrival here and invited to take his departure without much ceremony. This would be the proper thing to do, in all likelihood, but members of the administration fear that that might have the effect of making a heroic character out of Thurston, and thus adding vastly to his importance.

Thurston made a flying visit to Honolulu, his purpose being to carry in person some campaign documents prepared for him here by Hoar, Chandler & Co., and approved by the Republican managers in Congress. Thurston has been openly and notoriously training with the Republicans, and just as openly abusing the Democratic party in general and the administration in particular. His conduct here has been entirely undiplomatic, as he has thrown himself into the arms completely of a political party and done everything possible to assail the American Government and its policy.

The letter that was signed by Dole in answer to Mr. Willis was the joint work of Senators Hoar, Chandler and Fry. It was taken by Thurston, Dole's name attached to it, and then promulgated as the reply of the Provisional Government. This is well known here as copies of it were preserved and were read by a few people long before it was given to the public by the Hawaiian route.

Thurston will begin to cavort around the real estate ring and his chief interest in the annexation enterprise is to enable himself to get an American title to the goods and chattels and lands that he has gobbled up from the Hawaiian natives, and that he fears may be taken away from him some time or another by an honest representative Government backed by a majority of the Hawaiian people who come into power at Honolulu.
